The .i. Chapter.

The battell of Saul agaynst the Philistines: in whiche he dyeth and hys sonnes also.

And the Philistynes fought agaynst Israel. And the men of Israel fled before p Philistines, & were ouerthrowen and slayne in mounte Gelboe. And the Philistynes folowed Saul and hys sonnes, and slue Jehonathan, Abinadab, and Melchisua, p sones of Saul. And the battell wente soore agaynst Saul, in so much that the Goters met hym, and he was wounded of the Goters. Then sayde Saul to hys wepon bearer: Draue thy swerde, & thrust me thorow therewith, that these vncircumcised come not & do me shame. And hys wepon bearer woulde not, but feared exceedinglye. Whereupon Saul caught a swerde and fell vpon it. And when hys harnes bearer sawe p Saul was dead, he fell on a swerde also and dyed.

And thus Saul and hys thre sonnes, and all hys house dyed together. And whē al p men of Israel that dwelt in the valeys, saw howe they fled, and that Saul and hys sonnes were dead, they forsaue their cyties, and ranne awaye, and the Philistynes came and dwelte in them.

And on the morowe when p Philistines came (to strype the dead bodys) they founde Saul & hys sonnes ouerthrowen in mounte Gelboe. And when they had strypte hym, they tooke hys heade and hys harnesse, & sente them into the lande of the Philistines rounde aboute to shew tidinges vnto their gods, and to the people. And they put hys harnes in p houses of their goddes. But hys skul they hanged in p house of Dagō.

And when al they of Jabes in Gilead hearde all that the Philistines had done to Saul, all p men of warre arose and fet a waye the bodie of Saul, and the bodys of his sonnes and brought them them to Jabes, and buried the bones of them vnder an ocke in Jabes, and fasted seuen dayes.

And so Saul dyed for his trespase, that he trespassed agaynst the Lorde, in that he kept not the worde of the Lord, and in that he asked counsell of a woman that wrought with a spylte, and asked not of the Lord. And therfore the Lord killed him, and turned the kyngdome vnto Dauid the sonne of Isai.

¶ The .xi. Chapter.

After the death of Saul is Dauid anointed in Hebron. The Jebusites rebell agaynst Dauid, from which he taketh the Towre of Sion. His men are nombred.

SThen all Israel gathered the selues to Dauid vnto Hebron * and sayde: se, we be thy bones and thy fleyshe. And mozeouer in tyme past, euen when Saul was kyng, thou leddest Israel out and in. And the Lord thy god sayde vnto the: thou shalt fede my people Israel, and thou shalt be captayne ouer my people Israel. And when all the elders of Israel were come to the kyng to Hebron, Dauid made a couenaunt with them there befoze the Lord. And they anointed Dauid kyng ouer Israel, * accordynge to the woorde of the Lord by the hand of Samuel.

B And Dauid and all Israel went to Jerusalem, whiche is Jebus: for there dwelt the Jebusytes, the inhabitants of the lande. And the inhabitants of Jebus sayde to Dauid: thou comest not here. Neuerthelater Dauid wanne the castell of Sion, whiche is called the cite of Dauid. Then sayde Dauid: * who soeuer smyte þe Jebusytes first, shalbe the principall capitayne, and a Lorde. And Joab the sonne of Zeruiah went first vp, and was therfore the chiefe capitayne. And because Dauid dwelt in the castell Sion, therfore it was called the cite of Dauid. And he buylt the cite on euery syde, euen fro Milo rounde aboute. But Joab repared the rest of the cite. And Dauid prospered, and waxed great, and the Lorde of hostes was with him.

C * These are the principall men of power that clane to Dauid in his kyngdome with al Israel, to make him kyng vpon Israel, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde. And this is the numbze of the myghtye men whiche Dauid had: Isabeam the sonne of Nachamoni the chiefe of. xxx. he lyfte vp his speare agaynst the hundred and slue them at one tyme.

And after him Eleazar the sonne of Dodai an Ithothite whiche was one of the the myghtiest. He was with Dauid at Phasodamin where the philistines were gathered to battell. And there was there a parcell of grounde full of barlepe, and the people fled for feare of the philistines. And they (the afore sayde) stepte forth into the myddes of the furclonge, and saued it fro burnyng, and slue the philistines. And the Lord gaue a great victorie.

And the the of the. xxx. chiefe went to a tocke to Dauid, at the caue Doelaim. And the hoste of the philistines had pyched in the vale of Raphaim. And Dauid was in an holde. And there was a garison of the philistines at Bethleh hem that same tyme. And Dauid longed, & sayde: * Oh, that one wolde geue me of the water of the well of Bethleh that is in the gate, for to dryncke. And the the brake thozow the hoste of the philistines, and dreyue of the water of the well of Bethlehem that was in the gate, & toke it & brought it to Dauid. Neuerthelasse Dauid wold not dryncke of it, but offered it to the Lord, & sayde: God forbyd it me, that I shoulde do this thinge, that I shoulde dryncke the bloude of these me, that haue put thei lyues in Jeopardye, for with the Jeopardye of thei lyues they brought it, & therfore he wolde not dryncke it. This dyd the the myghtiest.

And Abisai the brother of Joab was capitayne of the the, and he lyfte vp his spere agaynst. iii. hundred and slue them, and had a name amonge the the. And he was muche more nobler then any of the the, and was their captayne. But was not lyke to any of þe first the in actes.

Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada the sonne of a stronge man that had done great deades, and was of Gabzeel: he slue two stronge lyons of Moab, & wex downe and slue a Lyon in a pyt in tyme of snowe. And he slue an Egypcia, which was a man of a size, even foue cubytes longe, and in his hand had a speare lyke a weuers beame. And the other went to him with a waster, & plucked the speare out of the Egyptians hande, & slue him with his speare. Suche thynges dyd Banaiah the sonne of Jehoiada, & had a name with the thre myghtyest, & was the gloryouslest of chrytie: but attayned not vnto the fyrste thre. And David made hym of his secret counsell.

And these were the best men of warre of the hoste: Alahel & brother of Joab, and Elhanan the sonne of Dodo out of Bethlehem. Samoth the Harozite, Helez the Phalonite: Ira the sonne of Akas the Chekuite, Abieser the Anathothite: Sobacar & Husathite, Ilat & Ahohite: Maharat the Pethophathite: and Heled the sonne of Baanah the Pethophathite: Ithai the sonne of Rebat of Gibeah that pertayneth to the chyldren of Benjamin: Banaiah the Phasrathonite: Haurai of & ryuer of Gaas, and Abiel the Arbathite: Azmoth the Baharumite, Elahaba the Saalbonite. The sonnes of Hassem the Gezomite, Jonathan the sonne of Sagah, an Haratite: Ahiam the sonne of Sacar the Haratite, Eliphal the sonne of Uz. Hephher the Metharathite, Ahiah the Phalonite: Hetro the Carmelite, and Naari the sonne of Abai: Joel the brother of Nathan: Obabai the sonne of Gari: zeleu an Ammonite, and Naharai a Berothite, the bearer of the Harneisse of Joab the sonne of Zaruiah: Ira the Jethite: and Gareb a Jethite: Uziah the Bethite, Zabadi the sonne of Oholui: Adina the sonne of Siza a Rubenite, and an heed among the Rubenites and. xxx. aboute hym: Hanan the sonne of Maacah, and Josaphat a Machanite: Ozeah an Asharoathite: Sama and Jaiel the sonnes of Hothan an Aroerite: Jedial the sonne of Zamet, and Joha his brother Thozites: Eliel a Mahumite. And Jeribai and Josafah the sonnes of Elnaem, and Jethmah a Moabite. Eliel and Obed, and Jaiel of Mahobaiiah.

The .xii. Chapter.

What they were that went with David when he fledde from Saul.

And these folowynge came to David to Achish, whyle he yet kept hym selfe close, for feare of Saul the sonne of Eisa: they were of the men that socoured & battell, wepended in bowes, & coulde handle stones, & throwe a bowe as well with the lefte hand as with the ryght, & were of Sauls brethren, eue of the trybe of Betamin. The cheffest were Ahiezer & Joas, the sonnes of Saimaah a Gibeonite, & Jaziel and Phalite, the sonnes of Azmoth. Baracah & Jehu of Anathoth. And Hamatah a Gibeonite as myghtye as any of chrytie, & more myghtye to. And Jeremiah, Jehaziel, Johana & Josabad of Gedar. Eleusai, Jerimoth, Baaliah, Samariah, and Saphatiah: Paraphites Elcanah, Jeshiah, Azrael, Joazer, Joseboas of Karehim. And Joelah and Zabadiah, & sonnes of Jeroham of Gedor.

And of the Gadites there separated & the selues vnto David whē he kept an holde in the wilderness, men of myghte, & men apte for warre and coulde handle shylde and speare, whose faces were lyke the faces of Lyons, and they were therto as swifte as the Rooses of the mountaynes: Ezer the fyrst, Obdiah the seconde, Eliab the thirde, Mashmahan the fourthe, Jeremiah the fyfte, Echi the syxte, Eliel the seuenthe, Johananam the eyght, Elisabad the. ix. Jeremiah the tenth, and Barabhanai the xi. These were of the sonnes of Gad, and were capitaynes ouer the men of warre, the small ouer an hundred, and the greate ouer a thousande. These are they that wēt ouer Jordan in the fyrst monethe, when he had fylled ouer all his banckes. And they put to flight the of & valeye, bothe of the East syde and also the Weste.

And there came of the chyldren of C Benjamin and Juda to & holde of David. And David went out to them and answered and sayde to them: If ye be come peasablie vnto me, to helpe me, myne hert shalbe together with you. But and if you come to begyle me and to be myne aduersarye, (seynge ther is no wyckednes in myne handes,) the God of oure fathers loke thereon, and rebuke.

rebuke it. And the spirit came upon Amasai, a captain over xxx. & he said: thyne are we David, & on thy syde thou sonne of Iesai: * peace be with the, and peace be with thine helpers, for thy god helpeth the. The David receaued the, and made them heedes of companies of the men of warre.

And there selle of Manasseh to David when he went with the Philistines agaynst Saul to battell. * but holpe the not. For the Lordes of the Philistines toke counsell, & sent him away, saying: he will fall to his master Saul to the Jeopardye of oure heedes. And as he went to * zikelag there fell to hym of Manasseh: Ednah, Jozabad, Jediel, Michael, of Jozabad, Elihu & zalthai, heedes of the thousandes of Manasseh. And they holpe David agaynst those rousers. For they were all myghtie men and Capitaynes in warre. And there came one or other to David, daye by daye to helpe him: vntyll it was a great hoste, lyke the hoste of God.

And this is the nobre of the heedes prepared to battell, that came to David to Hebron, to turne the kyngdome of Saul to him, according to þe mouth of the Lorde.

The children of Juda þe bare shylde and speare were syxe thousande & eyght hundred trymmed to warre. Of the children of Simeon, me of might to warre, seuen thousande and one hundred. And of the chyldre of Leui were foure thousand and sixe hundred. And Jehoiada was the chefe of them of Aaron & with him thre thousande and seuen hundred. And zadoch a younge mā of great power had his fathers housholde wyth Capitaynes. xxii. And of the children of Benjamin the brethren of Saul, were thre thousand. And a great parte of the dyd yet folowe the house of Saul.

And of the chyldren of Ephraim, were. xx. thousande and eyght hundred, men of myghte and named men in the householdes of their fathers. And of the halfe trybe of Manasseh. xviii. thousande, whiche were appoynted by name to go to make David kyng. And of the chyldren of Issacar, whiche were men that had vnderstandynge in the ryght tyme to knowe what Israel ought to do: The heedes of them were two hundred, and all their brethren were at their wyll. And of Zabulon that went out with the hoste and proceeded in the araye to battell wyth all maner of wepons of warre, syfthe thousande that kepte in order wyth one accorde. And of Nephthali a thousand Capitaynes, and with them with shylde & speare. xxviii. thousand. And of Dan, prepared to battell, were. xxviii. thousande and. vi. hundred. And of Aser that went out with the hoste to make battell, fourtie thousand. And of the other syde Jordan, of the Rubenites, Gadites, & of the halfe trybe of Manasseh with all maner of instrumentes of warre an hundred and twentie thousande.

* All these beyng men of warre able to ordre the araye, came to Hebron with pure herte, to make David kyng upon all Israel. And therto all the rest of Israel was of one accorde to make David kyng. And there they were with David thre dayes eatynge & drynckynge: for their brethren prepared for them. Moreover, they that were nye to the, as Issacar, Zabulon & Nephthali brought bredde on asses, Camels, mules and open, & meate: flour, figges, reasyns, wyne, oyle, open, and shepe abundant: lyke. For there was mythe in Israel.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The Arche is brought agayne from Baniath Jarim to Ierusalem. Dns dyeth.

And David counceled with the Capitaynes of thousandes and hundredes, and with all the Lordes, & sayde vnto all the congregacyon of Israel: It is seme you good, & also to be of the Lord oure God: Let vs take and sende vnto the remnant of oure brethren thorow out all the land of Israel, & to the preastes and Levites with them, in their cities and suburbs, and gather the together to vs. And let vs bying agayne the Arche of the Lorde to vs: for we regarded it not in the dayes of Saul. And all the congregacyon was content so to do, for the thyng seemed good in þe eyes of all the people.

to bringe the Arcke of the Lorde from Kariath Jarim. And David went by all Israel to Baalah, and so to Kariath Jarim that is in Iuda, to fet thence the Arcke of the God and Lorde that sitteth on the Cherubes. Where his name is called on. * And they carped the Arcke of God in a newe carre out of the house of Aminadab. And Oza & his brother bare the carre. And David & all Israel played before the Arcke of God with all their myght, wth syngynge, harpes, psalteries, tymbrells, and trompettes. And whē they came vnto þ<sup>e</sup> thersyng flowre of Chidon, Oza put forth his hande to holde the Arcke, for the oxen stombled. And the Lorde was wroth with Oza, & smote him, because he put his hande to þ<sup>e</sup> Arcke. And there he dyed before god. And David was displeased, because þ<sup>e</sup> Lorde had rent a rent in Oza, and called the sayde place * Perez Oza vnto this daye. And David was so afrayed of God that daye, that he sayd, how shal I bringe the Arcke of God home to me? And so David brought not the Arcke home to him to the cytie of David: But turned it in to the house of Obed Edom a Gethite. And the Arcke of God was wth Obed Edom in his house, thre monethes. And the Lorde blessed the house of Obed Edom, and all that he had.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Chym sendeth word: and worketh to David, w<sup>ch</sup> and begetteth chyldren after he had taken hym wyues. He hath ii. victories of the Philistines.

After that Hiram kyng of Tyre sent messengers to David, and tymbrells of Cedar trees wth masons and Carpenters, to buylde hym an house. Whereby David perceaued that þ<sup>e</sup> Lorde had prepared him to be kyng vpon Israel, in that his kyngdome was liue vpon hye, because of his people Israel. And David toke yet moo wyues at Jerusalem, and begat mo sonnes & daughters. And these are the names of his chyldren which he had bozne him at Jerusalem: Samua, Sobab, Patha, and Salomo: Jebhar, Elisua and Eliphalet: Aoga, Nepheg and Japhiah. Elisama, Baliaada and Eliphelet.

And when it was knowne among the Philistines that David was anointed kyng vpon all Israel, all the Philistines wet vp to seke David. And David heard of it, and went oute agaynste the. And the Philistines came and prauced in the valeye of Raphaim. And David asked God, sayinge: Shall I go agaynste the Philistines and wylt thou deliuer them into myne handes? And the Lorde sayde to him: go, for I wyl deliuer the into thyne hande. And when they were come as ferre as Baal Pharazin, David bet them there. And David sayde: God hath deuyded myne enemies with myne hande, as a man wolde deuyde water. And therfore they called the name of the sayde place Baal Pharazin. And they lefte their Gods there, which David hadde to be burnt with fyre.

* And the Philistines came agayne and ranne abroade in the valeye. Then David asked God: And God sayde to him: go not after the, but turne awaye from them, and come vpon the straght fro the peere trees. And when thou hearest a soude go in þ<sup>e</sup> toppes of the peere trees, then go out to battell: for God wyl go out before the to smyte the hoste of the Philistines. And David dyd as God commaunded him. And they smote the hoste of the Philistines at the waye from Gibeon to Gazer. And the fame of David went out into all lades, and the Lorde made all nacyons feare hym.

And of the sonnes of Gerson Joel the chefe, and of his brethren an hundred & thirtie. And of the childre of Elizaphan: Semeiah the chefe: and of his brethren two hundred. And of the sonnes of Hebron Eliel the chefe, and of his brethren lxx. And of the sonnes of Oziel, Aminadab the chefe, and of his brethren an hundred and xii.

B And David called to Zadoch & Abiathar & the priests, & to the Levites, Uriel, Asai, Joel, Semeiah, Eliel & Aminadab: & sayde unto them: ye are the principall heedes of the Levites, sanctifie therfore youre selues & youre brethren, and bringe the Arcke of the Lord God of Israel, unto the place that I haue prepared for it. * for because ye were not there at the first tyme, the Lord our God made a rent amonge vs, for that we sought him not as the sayde ought to be. And the priests and the Levites sanctified them selues, to set the Arcke of the Lord God of Israel. And the childre of the Levites bare the Arcke of God vpon their shouldeers with staves theron, as Moyses commaunded * accordyng to the worde of the Lord.

And David spake to the chefe heedes of the Levites, & they shoulde appoynte of their brethren to synge with instrumentes of musike, psalteries, harpes andymbales that sounded, and to synge on hye with Joyfulness. And the Levites appoynted Heman the sonne of Joel: and of his brethren, Asaph the sonne of Barachiah. And of the sonnes of Merari their brethren: Ethan the sonne of Cusaihu. And with the their brethren of the seconde degree: zachariah, Ben Jaaziel, Semiramoth, Jahl, Ani, Eliab, Banai, Maasiah, Mathathiah, Eliphehu, Makaniah, Obed EDOM and Jatel, porters. Heman, Asaph and Ethan sange withymbales of brasse to make a sound. And zachariah, Oziel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Ani, Eliab, Maasiah and Banai sang with psalteries on an * Almoth. And Mathathiah, Eliphehu, Makaniah, Obed EDOM, Jael, & Ozai sange with herpes an eyght above, to courage with all. And Conaniah the chefe of the Levites was master of the song, and taught other to sing, for he was a man of vnderstanding.

And Barachiah and Elcanah kepte the doore of the Arcke. And Saranah, Jehosaphat, Nathanael, Amasai, zachariah, Banai and Eliezer prestes were blowers with trompettes before the Arcke of God. And Obed EDOM and Jahiah were keepers of the doore of the Arcke.

* And David and the elders of Israel and the Captaynes ouer thousandes, went to set the Arcke of the appoyntement of the Lord out of the house of Obed EDOM, with gladnesse. And when God had holpe the Levites that bare the Arcke of the appoyntement of the Lord, they offered. vii. oxen and. vii. rammes. And David had on hym an albe of bysse, & so had the Levites that bare the Arcke, and so had the syngers, and Conaniah the ruler of the song & of the syngers. And David had moresouer vpon him an Ephod of linnen. And all Israel brought the Arcke of the Lordes couenaunt with shewtyng & blowing of hornes, and with trompettes &ymbales that sounded, and with psalteries and harpes.

And as the Arcke of the appoyntment of the Lord came into the cite of David, Michol the daughter of Saul looked oute at a wyndowe: & when she saw kynge David dauncyng and playyng, she despyed him in her herte.

The. xvi. Chapter.

After the Arcke was brought with great sollemnitye & melodye, David ordeyneth ministers, that is to wete, Asaph & his brethren to minister before the Lord. He him selfe loueth and prayseth the Lord God of Israel.

When they had brought in the Arcke of God, they set it in the tete that David had pitched for it. And they brought burnt sacrifice and peaceofferings before God. And when David had made an ende of offering of burntofferings and of peaceofferings, he blessed the people with the name of the Lord. And he dealt all Israel, bothe man and woman, a crackenell of bredde, a pece of fleshe & a messe of coppes.

And he appoynted certen of the Levites to minstre before the Lord, and to repete, and to thanke and prayse the Lord God of Israel: euen Asaph the chefe, and next to him zachariah, then Jatel,

Iehiel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Pathaiah, Eliah, Banaiab, Obed, Edom, & Iehiel with psalteries and harpes. But Maph with soundyng symbales and Banatah and Jahaziel pteasses with tröpettes continuallye before the Arcke of the couenaunt of God. And that same tyme Dauid dyd appoynte cheselye to thanke the Lord by Maph and his brethzen. * Thanke the Lord, calle on his name, make his Actes known among the people, Synge vnto him, and playe vnto him: and recorde all his wonder-full dedes. Praise his holy name, and let the hertes of the that seke the Lord reioyse. Seke the Lord & his strength: Seke his presence allwayne.

Remembre his maruelles which he dyd, and his wonders, & the iudgemētes of his mouthe: The seed of Israell are his seruauntes: the chyldren of Jacob are his chosen. He is the Lord oure God: and in all landes are his iudgesmentes. Thynke on his appoyntement for euer, and on the worde he comaunded to a thousande generacions. * Of his couenaunt to Abraham, and of * his othe to Isaac: which he set before * Jacob for a decree, & to Israel for an euer-lastyng couenaunt, sayinge: to the I wyll gyue the land of Canaan, to be the porcion of your inheritance. When you were a smalle cōpanye in numbre, euen but a few, and therto straungers therin. And they went from people to people, and from one kyngdome to another nacion. He suffered no man to do them wronge: But rebuked kynges for theyr sake. * Touche not myne anoynted, nor do my prophetes any harme.
* Synge vnto the Lord all the erthe: and shewe from daye to daye his victories.

Tell amonge the hethen of his glorie: and among all nacyns of his won-derfull dedes.

For greate is the Lord, and worthy to be prayfed exceedyngly: & terrible is he aboue all Gods.

For all the Gods of the hethen are Idoles: * But the Lord made heauen.
Praise and honoure are in his presence: strength and gladnes are in his place. Ascrib to the Lord ye kynredes of people, Ascrib to the Lord, Gloype and strength. Geue honoure vnto the Lordes name: byngge presentes, and come before him, and bowe to the Lord in holy apparcell.

* All the erthe feare him, he stably-shed the erthe that it cannot moue. The heauen reioyse, and the erthe be glade, and let men tell amonge the nacyns that the Lord is a kyng.

Let the sea thunder, and his fulnesse, and let the felde reioyse, and all that is therein.

Howeouer let the trees of the wood ringe at the presence of the Lord: for he cometh to iudge the erthe.

Thanke the Lord for he is good, and his mercye lasteth euer: and saye: saue vs (o God oure saupoute) & gather vs together & delyuer vs from among the hethen, to thanke thy holy name, and to praise the with þ praise that becometh the. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for euer and euer, and all nacyns saye * Amen, so praysynge the Lord.

And he left there before the arcke of the Lordes couenaunt, Maph and his brethzen, to mynstre before the Arcke euermore daye by daye. And Obed Edō with his brethze, thze skore and eght, and Obed Edom the sonne of Iouthun and Ozah to be porters. And zadock the preaste with his brethzen the preastes set he before the tabernacle of the Lord at the hyllaulter of Gibeon, to offer burntofferings vnto the Lord vps the burntofferinge aulter perpetuallye, at moynynge and euenynge: accor-dyng to all that is wrytten in the law of the Lord, whiche he commaunded Israell. And wyth them Heman and Iouthun, and other that were chosen & named by name, to thanke the Lord, that his mercye lasteth euer. And with the sayde Heman & Iouthun were trö-pettes and soundyng symbales, and in-strumetes of the melodye of God. And the sonnes of Iouthun were porters.
And then all the people departed, euery man to his house: and Dauid returned to salute his housholde.

The.xviii. Chapter.

Dauid is fordydd to bylde an house vnto the Lord, because of the bloude sheddyng that he had shed. Christ

AD as David dwelt in his house, he said to Bathā his prophete: loo, I dwell in an house of Cedar tree: and his Arcke of the Lordes couenaunt dwellyth vnder curtaynes. And Nathan sayde to David: do all that is in thyne herte, for God is with the.

But his same nyght, the worde of god came to Nathan, saying: go, & tell David my seruaunte, thus sayth the Lord: thou shalt not buyde me an house to dwell in. for I haue dwelt in no house, sence I brought out the children of Israel vnto this day: But haue gone fro tent to tent, and from one tabernacle to another. Neither in anye place whersoer I haue walked thorow out all Israel, spake I euer one worde to anye of the iudges of Israel (which I commaunded to tede my people) sayig: why buyde ye me not an house of Cedar tree? Now therfore thus saye vnto my seruaunt David: thus sayth the Lord of hostes: I toke the out of the pasture from asster shepe, that thou shouldest be captayne ouer my people Israel. And I haue bene with the, in all thou tokest in hande, and haue weded out all thyne enemyes out of thy syght, & haue made the a name, lyke the name of the greatest men of the erthe. And I wyll ordeyne a place for my people Israel, and wyll make it faste, and they shall dwell vnder it, and shall moue no more. Neither shall his chyldre of wickednesse vex them any more, as at the begynnyng, and sence the tyme I commaunded iudges to be ouer my people Israel, and wyll bringe vnder all thyne enemyes: (for I tolde the, that the Lord wolde buyde the an house.)

C *But whē thy dayes be expired, that thou must go after thy fathers, I wyll let by thy seed after the, whiche shall be of thy sonnes, and wyll settle his kyngdome. *He shall buyde me an house, and I wyll stablyshe his seate for euer. I wyll be his father, & he shall be my sonne, and I wyll not put my mercye awaye from him, as *I dyd fro him that was before the. But I wyll set him in myne house and in my kyngdom for euer: and his seate shall be sure for euer.

Whē Bathā had tolde David accordyng to all these wordes, and to all this vision, king David went & sate him before the Lord, and sayd: what am I (O Lord God) & what is myne houshold, that thou hast promoted me thus farre. And yet this seemed lyttel in thine eyes, O God: But that thou shouldest speake of thy seruautes house for a great whylle to come: and hast looked vpon me as vpo a man of hye degree (O Lord God.) What can David desyre more of the, wherin he shouldest make thy seruaunt more gloriouser? Thou knowest thy seruaunt: And Lorde for thy seruautes sake, eue accordyng to thyne owne herte thou hast done all this magnificence, to shew all bounteousnesse Lord, * there is none lyke the, nor anye God saue he, accordyng to all that we haue hearde with oure eares. Moreover * what nacion on the erth is lyke thy people Israel, whiche God went and redemed to be his owne people, and to make the a name of excellencie and terriblenesse, with castyng out nacions from before thy people, whome thou hast deliuered out of Egypt. Thy people of Israel dydest he make thine owne people for euer, and thou Lord art become their God.

And now Lord, the thyng thou hast spoken concernyng thy seruaute and his house, be true for euer, & do as thou hast sayd: And thy name continue and waxe great for euer, that it be sayd: the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel is God in Israel, and the house of David thy seruaute be stable before the. for thou Lord, hast tolde thy seruaute, that thou wylt buyde him an house. And therfore thy seruaunt hath founde in his herte to praye before the. And nowe Lord thou arte the very God, & hast promysed this goodnesse vnto thy seruaute. Nowe therfore go to and blesse his house of thy seruaute, that it maye continue before the for euer. for what thou blessest, O Lord, that is blessed for euer.

bet the Moabites, and the Moabites became Davids seruautes, and payde him tribute. And David bet Hadadezer kynge of zobah vnto Hemath; as he went to hyngge his dominyon vnto the ryuer Euphrates. And David toke fro him a thousand charettes, and seven thousande horsemen, and twentie thousande footemen, and brake all the charettes, saue that he reserued of the an hundred. The came the Siries of Damascus to helpe Hadadezer kyng of zobah. And David slue of the Syriens. xii. thousand, and put garisons in Siria Damasco: And the Sirias became Davids seruautes, and brought hym trybute. for the Lorde holpe David in all that he went to.

And David toke the chyldes of gold that were on the seruautes of Hadadezer and brought them to Ierusalem. And from Thebahath and Chun, cyties of Hadadezer, brought David exceeding muche brasle. * wherewith Salomon made the brasen see, and pylers and the vesselles of brasle.

And when * Tou kynge of Hemath, heard how David had beat all þ hoste of Hadadezer kynge of zobah, he sent Haduram his sonne to kyng David, to salute him and to blesse him, because he had fought with Hadadezer and beat hym (for Tou had warre with Hadadezer) and sent all maner of Jewelles of golde, syluer and brasle with him. And kynge David dedycated the also vnto the Lorde, with the syluer & golde that he brought from all nacjons, from the Edomites, fro the Moabites, from the chyldren of Ammon, from the Philistines, & fro the Amaleckites. And Absai the sonne of Israhiah slue of the Edomites in the salte valeye. xliii. thousand, and put Soudiars in Edom, and all Edom became Davids seruautes: for the Lorde kepte David in all þ he toke in hand. And David raygned ouer all Israel, and dyd ryght and equyte vnto all his people. And Joab the sonne of Israhiah was ouer the hoste, and Jehoshaphat the sonne of Ahitub recorder, and Zadock the sonne of Ahitub, and Ahimelech the sonne of Abiathar were þ preasles, and Busa was scrýbe, and Banaiab the sonne of Jehoiada was ouer the Crethites and the Phelethites, and the eldest sonnes of David wayted at the kynges hande.

The. xix. Chapter.

Hanon kynge of the sonnes of Ammon doth grente inlurye to the seruautes of David.

After this it chaunced that Nahas kynge of the chyldren of Ammon dyed, and his sonne made kynge in his steade. Then sayde David, I will shewe kyndnesse vnto Hanon the sonne of Nahas, because his father dealt kindlye wyth me: And therupon David sent messengers to comforte hym ouer the death of his father. And when the seruautes of David were come into the lande of the chyldren of Ammon to Hanon, to comforte him, the Lordes of the chyldren of Ammon sayde to Hanon: thynkest thou þ David dothe honour thy father i thy syght, that he hath sent comforters vnto the? Naye, but it is to searche and ouerthrowe and to spee out the lād, that his seruautes be come vnto the.

Wherupon Hanon toke David & seruautes & shaued the, and cut of their cootes harde by their bottokes, & sent them awaye. And there went that tolde David how the men were serued. And the kyng sent to mete them (for the men were exceedinglye ashamed) and sayde: tarpe at Jericho vntyll youre beerdes be growen, and then retorne.

And when the chyldre of Ammon saw that they stanke in the nose of David, Hanon, & the chyldren of Ammon sent a thousand talentes of syluer to hyre the charettes and horsemen out of * Mesopotamia & out of Siria Paacah, & out of zobah. And they hyred. xxxii. thousande charettes, and the kynge of Paacah and his people, whiche came and pyched before Midba. And the chyldren of Ammon gathered them selues together from their cyties, & wet out to battell. And as sone as David heard of it, he sent Joab with all the hoste of stronge men. And the chyldre of Ammon came out and put them in aray to battell before the gate of the cytie. And the kynges that were come, kepte them by them selues in the felde.

When Joab sawe that the fronte of þ battell was before him and after, he chose chose oute of all the yowthe of Israell, and put them in arape againste the Sirians. And the rest of the people he deliuered vnto Abisai his brother, that they should put them selues in arape againste the chyldren of Ammon, and sayde: If the Sirians bee to stronge for me, succoure me, and yf the chyldren of Ammon be to good for the, I will helpe thee. plucke by thynne herte, and let vs play the men, for oure peoples sake, and for the cyties of oure God, and the Lord do what semeth hym beste. And Joab and the people that were with him, droue nye to the Sirians to fyghte, and they fled before hym. And when the chyldren of Ammon sawe that the Sirians were fled, they ranne awaye lykewyse from Abisai hys brother, and gatte them into the cypse. And Joab came to Ierusalem.

And when the Sirians sawe that they were put to the worse of Israell, they sente messengers and set oute the Sirians that are beyond the riuer with Sophach the Capitayne of the hoste of Hadadezer before them. which when it was tolde Dauid, he gathered al Israell. And wente ouer Jordan, and wente and set vpon them. And Dauid put him selfe in arape againste the Sirians, and they fought with him. But the Sirians fled before Israell, and Dauid destroyed of the Sirians. vii. thousande charettes, and slue. xl. thousande fote me and kyled Sophach the Capitayne of the hoste. And when the seruauntes of Hadadezer, sawe that they were put to the worse of Israell, they made peace with Dauid, and serued hym. Aether would the Sirians helpe the chyldren of Ammon any more.

The. xx. Chapter.

C The thre moste victorionsse battelles of Dauid.

Ad the yere folowing (a bouthe the time that kyniges go out a warrefare) Joab carped out the army of the hoste, and destroyed the contrey of the chyldren of Ammon, and wente and beseged Rabah & destroyed it: But Dauid bode at Ierusalem whyle Joab smot Rabah and destroyed it: And Dauid toke & crowne of therr king of hys head, and founde therein the wayghte of a tallent of golde, and there were precious stones in it, & it was set on Dauids head. And he broughte out also the spoyle of the cypse which was excedinge much. And he brought out the people that wer in it, and tormented them with sawes & harowes of yron, and with brakes, and so dealte Dauid with all the cyties of the chyldren of Ammon. And then Dauid, and all the people came agayne to Ierusalem. After that ther arose war at Gazer with the Philistines. At whiche tyme, Sobocai the Gushathite slue Saphat that was of the chyldren of Raphaim, and they were subdued. And there was battell agayne with the Philistines, and Ehanan the sonne of Jaiz slue Labemi, the brother of Goliath the Gethite, whose speare was lyke the beaine of a weuer. And there chaunced yet agayne warre at Geth, wher was a man of a greate syze with. xliii. fyngers and toes. vi. on euery hande, and vi. on euery fote: and was the sonne of Haraphah, and defied Israell. And Jehonathan the sonne of Samaa Dauids brother slue hym. These were borne of Haraphah at Geth, and wer ouerthrowen by the hande of Dauid and of hys seruauntes.

The. xxi. Chapter.

C The people are punished with pestilence, because Dauid caused them to be numbered: so that there died. lxv. thousand men.

Ad Satan stode by agaynste Israel, and persuaded Dauid to numbre Israel. And Dauid sayd to Joab, and yf rulers of the people, go ye and numbre Israel frome Bersabe to Dan, and bringe it to me that I maye knowe the numbre of them. And Joab answered: the Lorde make thy people an hundred times so many mo as they be. But my Lorde & kynge, are they not all my Lordes seruauntes? why then doth my Lord requite thys thyng, why shoulde my Lord be a cause of trespase to Israell.

Neuerthelater the kynges wordes preuailed agaynste Joab. And Joab toke his waye and wente throughte oute all Israell, and came to Ierusalem againe.

n. b. gayne

gaine and gaue the numbze of the couste of the people vnto Dauid. And all Israel were in numbze a thousande thousande, and an hundred thousande men that due swerde: and Iuda was. cccc. lxx. thousande menne that due swerde. But the Leuites and Benjamin he counted not amonge them. For the kynges dede seemed abomynable to Joab. And the Lorde was displeased with thys thyng, and smote Israel. Then sayde Dauid to God: I haue synned exceedingly in doyng this thyng. Neuer thelesse yet do away the wickednesse of thy seruante, for I haue done aboue measure folyshlye.

B And the Lorde spake vnto Gad Dauids sear of byssons, sayinge: go and tell Dauid, sayinge: Thus saythe the Lorde: I geue thee the choise of thre thynges: chose the one of them, that I maye do vnto thee. And Gad came to Dauid, & sayd vnto him: Thus sayth the Lorde: Chose the ether thre yeres famishment, or thre monethes to bee consumed of thyn aduersaries, and that the swerde of thy enemyes ouertakinge thee: or else the swerde of the Lorde, and thre dayes pestilence in the lande, the Angell of the Lorde destroyinge thowowe oute all the costes of Israel. And nowe aduise thy selfe what worde I shal byngge agayne to him that sent me. And Dauid sayde to Gad. * I am in an exceeding strait. But let me fall in to the handes of the Lorde, for passyng greate is hys mercy, & let me not fall into the handes of men.

And the Lorde sente pestilence vpon all Israel, so that there wer ouerthrowen of Israel. lxx. thousande men. And God sente the Angell to Ierusalem to destroye it. And as he was aboute to destroye, the Lorde behelde and had compassion on the wretchednesse, and sayde to the aungell that destroyed, it is ynough nowe cease thyn hande. And the Angell of the Lorde stood by the threshyng floure of Ornan the Jebusite. And Dauid lyfte vp his eyes and saw the Angell of the Lorde stande betwene the earthe and heauen, with a drawen swerde in hys hande, stretched out toward Ierusalem. Then fell Dauid & the elders of Israel (clothed in sacke) vpon theyr faces. And Dauid sayd vnto to God: Is it not I that commaunded to numbze the people? And I am he that haue synned and done euell in dede. But what haue these shepe done? let thyn hande therefore O Lord God, be on me, and on my fathers house, & not on thy people to destroye them.

And the Angell commaunded Gad to saye to Dauid, that Dauid shoulde go, and retyr by an aulter vnto the lord, in the threshyng floure of Ornan the Jebusite. And Dauid went at the sayinge of Gad, whiche spake in the name of the Lorde. And Ornan turned aboute, and sawe the Angell: and hys foure sonnes with him, and byd them selues: for Ornan was threshyng wheate. And Dauid came to Ornan. And when Ornan looked and sawe Dauid, he went out of the threshyng floure, and bowed hym selfe to Dauid wth hys face to the grounde.

And Dauid sayd to Ornan: geue me the place of the threshyng floure, that I maye buylde an aulter therein vnto the Lorde. Let me haue it for as much money as it is worthe, that the plage may cease from the people. And Ornan sayde to Dauid: take it to the, and let my Lorde the kyng do that semethe good in hys eyes. Se, I geue thee the oxen for a burnt sacrifice, and the threshyng sledges for woode, & wheate for meate, offeringe: I geue it all. But kyng Dauid sayde to Ornan: not so, but I wyll bye it for as much money as it is worth. I wyll not take that which is thine, for the Lorde, & offer burnt offerings without cosse.

And so Dauid gaue to Ornan for the place cycles of golde. vi. hundred by waighte. And Dauid buylt there an aulter vnto the LORDE, and offered burnt offerings, and peace offerings, and called vnto the Lorde, and he hearde hym from heauen in fyre vpon the aulter of burnt offerings. And he commaunded the Angell to put by hys swerde agayne into the sheathe of it. At that tyme when Dauid sawe, that the Lorde had hearde him in the threshyng floure of Ornan the Jebusite: he bled to offer there. For the tabernacle of the Lorde, whiche Moses made in the wilderness, and the aulter of burnt offerings, were at that season in the byll at Gibeon.

on. And David coulde not go before it to seke God, because he was aferde of þe swerde of the aungel of the Lorde. And David sayde: *this is the house of the Lorde God, and thys is the burntoffe, ryng aulter for Israell.

¶ The. xxii. Chapter.

AND David commaunded to gather the straungers that were in the lād of Israell, & set hewers to hew stone, to builde þe house of God. And David prepared plenty of yron for nayles, to the dozes of the gates and to ioyne with al, and aboundaunce of brasle withoute wayghte, and of Cedar trees withoute numbze. For the zidons and they of Tere broughte muche Cedar woode to David. For David thus thoughte, Salomon my sonne is younge and tender, and the house that is to be buylt for the Lorde, muste excede in greatnesse, that it maye bee spoken of, and praysed in all landes. I wyl therfore make ordinaunce for it. And so David prepared aboundaunce before his deathe.

And he called Salomon hys sonne, and charged hym to bylde an house for the Lorde God of Israell: And David said to Salomon: *my sonne, I had in myne hert to buylde an house vnto the name of the Lorde my God. But the worde of the Lorde came to me, saying: thou haste shed muche bloude, and hast made many battelles. Thou shalt not bylde an house for my name, for thou haste shed muche bloude to the earthe in my syghte. Beholde, a sonne shalt bee bozne the whiche shalt be a man of reste, for I wyl geue hym reste from all hys enemyes rounde aboute. And his name shalt be Salomon: for I wyl sende rest and peace vpon Israell in hys dayes. He shall buylde an house for my name, and he shalt be my sonne, & I wyl bee his father, and wil stablysh the seate of his kingdome vpon Israell for euer. Now my sonne, the Lorde bee with thee, that thou mayste prospere, and buylde the house of the Lorde thy God, as he hath sayde of thee: *And the Lorde geue thee wysedome and vnderstandinge, & make the gouernier of Israell, and to kepe the law of the Lorde thy god. For then thou shalt prosper: If thou shalt be dyspente to do þe ordinaunces and lawes which the Lorde charged Moyses with, to deliuer to Israell. Blucke vp thyne herte and be stronge, drede not, nor be discouraged. Beholde, in myne aduersite I haue prepared for the house of Lorde, an hundred thousande talentes of gold, & a thousand thousand talentes of syluer, and as for brasle and yron it cannot be numbzed, it is so muche. And I haue prepared timbre and stone, and thou shalt prouyde more thereto. Moreouer, thou haste workemen ynowe, and masons, & carpenters to worke in stone and timber, & al maner of wyse men for whatsoeuer worke it be. And of golde, syluer, brasle and yron, there is no numbze. Up therfore and set vpon it, & the Lorde shalt be with thee.

And David commaunded al the Lordes of Israell, to helpe Salomon hys sonne, sayinge: Is not the Lorde your God with you, and hath he not geuen you rest on euery syde, for he hath geue the enhabytours of the land into mine hande, and the land is subdued before the Lorde, and before hys people. Now therfore set your hertes & your soules, to seke the Lorde your God. And by and buylde ye þe temple of the Lorde God, to bring þe Arcke of the couenaut of the Lorde, & the holy vesselles of God into þe house, so buylt for the name of þe Lorde.

¶ The. xxiii. Chapter.

¶ David beinge olde, ordeyneth Salomon kynge. He causeth the Levites to be nombzed, and assigneth them to thre officers.

AND when David was olde & stricken in yeres, he made Salomon hys sonne kynge ouer Israell. And then he gathered together all the lordes of Israell with the preestes and the Levites. And the Levites were numbzed from. xxx. yere and aboue, and the tale of them in men polle by polle was. xxxviii. thousand. Of whiche. xxiii. thousande were set to surther the worcke of þe house of the Lorde. And syxe thousande were officers and Judges. foure thousand wet porters, and foure thousande praysed the Lorde with suche instrumetes as David had made to prayse with all.

And

And David put an ordre among the children of Leui: Gersō, Cahath & Merari: Of the Gersonites was Laadan and Semei. The sonnes of Laadan: the chiefe was Jethiell, and then zethan and Joel, thre. The sonnes of Semei, Salomith, haziel, and Haram, thre. These were the auncient heades of Laadan.

B And the sonnes of Semei were also Jahath zinah, Jaus & Bariah: these foure were the sones of Semei. And Jahath was the chiefe, zinah the seconde. But Jaus and Bariah had not manye sonnes, and therfore they were rekened for one auncient houthold.

The sonnes of Cahath: Amram, Jzabhar, Hebron and Uzziel, foure. * The sonnes of Amram: Aaron and Moses. And Aaron was appointed to consecrat in the place moste holpe, with hys sonnes for euer: and to burne the offerings befoze the Lorde, and to mynstre, and to blesse in hys name for euer. And as for Moses the man of God, hys chyldren were named in the trybe of Leui. * The sonnes of Moses: Gerson and Eliezer. And of the sonnes of Gerson: Sabaell was the chiefe. The sonnes of Eliezer: Rohabiah the chiefe. And Eliezer had no nother sonnes: But the sonnes of Rohabiah were verpe manye. And of the sonnes of Jzabhar: Salomi, the chiefe.

C The sonnes of Hebron: Jertahu the fyrste, Amariah the seconde, Jahaziell the thyrde, and Jecmaam the fourthe. The sonnes of Uzziel: Micah the fyrst, and Jettah the seconde. The sonnes of Merari: Mahali: and Musi, the sonnes of Mahali: Eleazar and Cis. And Eleazar dyed, and had no sonnes, but doughters onlye, which they brethren the sonnes of Cis toke. The sonnes of Musi: Mahali, Eder, and Jerimuth, thre. These are the chyldren of Leui in the houtholdes of they fathers, the auncient heades, belued and numbred by name and polle by polle from xx. pere and aboue, to worcke in the seruice of the house of the Lord. for David said: the Lorde God of Israell hath geuen reste vnto hys people, and they shall dwel in Jerusalem for euer.

Moreover the Leuites should now no more beare the tabernacle and al the vesselles that pertayned to the seruice therof. But as the laste commandement of David, the Leuites were numbred from thientie pere and aboue, to wayte at the handes of the sonnes of Aaron in the seruice of the house of the Lorde, and to haue the ouersight of the courtes and of the store houses, and of the purifying of al the holy thynges, and of the worcke of the thynges that serued for the house of god, as the shew bread, the fyne floure, y meat offerings, the flawnes of swete breade, and of the thynges baken in the fryng panne, or bropled on the grydiron, and on all maner measures and rise, and to wayte euery moynynge to thanke and prayse the Lorde, and lykewyse at euen. And to wayte on euery moynynge to thanke and prayse the Lorde, and lykewyse at euen. And to wayte on euery offering of burnt sacrifices vnto the Lorde, the Sabbothes, and fyrst dayes of the moneths, and other festefull dayes by nūbre and custome, was they offyce euer befoze the Lorde. And that they should waite on the tabernacle of witnesse, and on the holy place, and on the sonnes of Aaron they brethren, in the seruice of the house of the Lorde.

The notes.

a. Do wayte at the handes of the sonnes of Aaron, to do after theyr commaundement, as beueth the iurpe. ffv.

David assigneth theyr offyce to the sonne of Aaron.

The deuision of the sonnes of Aaron. * Aaron Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar & Jthamar. * But Nadab and Abihu dyed befoze they father and had no chyldren. And Eleazar and Jthamar wer the preeftes. And David ordered them on thys manner: Zadock of the sonnes of Eleazar & Ahimelek of the sonnes of Jthamar to be in offyce by course. And there were mo mightie heades founde of the sonnes of Eleazar then of the sonnes of Jthamar. And they deuyled them into xvi. heades of auncyente houtholdes of the sonnes of Eleazar, and eyght of the sonnes of Jthamar. And they put them in order by lotte, one with another that there shoulde bee rulers in the sanctuarpe and Lordes befoze God as well of the sonnes of Jthamar as of the sonnes

The. xxvi. Chapter.

The porters of the temple are ordeyned euery man to the gate which he should kepe.

The deupson of the porters among the Cozehites: Melchiam the sonne of Bozeh of the chyldren of Raph. And the sonnes of Seselemiah wer these: zachariah the eldest, Jadiell the seconde, zabadiah the thyrde, Jathaniel the fourth, Elam the fyfte, Jehohanan the syxt, Elioenai the seuenth. And Obed EDOM had sonnes: Semetah the eldest, Jehosabab the seconde, Joah the thyrde, Saccar the fourth, Athanaell the fyfte, Amiell the syxt, Isacar the seuenth and Bolathat the. viii. for God hadde blessed hym.

And vnto Semeiah his sonne were sonnes borne that ruled in the house of theyr father, for they wer men of might. The sonnes of Semetah: Othni, Raphaell, Obed and Ehsabad and hys brethren men of actiuite, Elihu & Samachiah. All these were of the chyldren of Obed EDOM, whiche with theyr brethren and their chyldren, actiue men of strengthe to do seruike, were. lxi. of Obed EDOM. And Seselemiah had sonnes and brethren, actiue men. xvi. And Josah of the chyldren of Merari, had sonnes: Semir the chiefe, yet he was not the eldest, but hys father made him the chiefe. Melchiah the seconde, Tabelliah the thyrde and zacariah the fourth: so that all the sonnes and brethren of Josah were. xlii.

Vnto these was deuided the offyce of the portership as vnto heades ouer the menne that waped with theyr brethren and mynistred in the house of the Lorde. And they caste lottes, the smalle as wel as the greate in the holdes of theyr fathers, frome gate to gate. And the Gest lot fell to Semeiah. And for zacariah his sonne a wyse counseller, they caste lottes, and hys lot came oute towarde the North. And Obed EDOMs lot fell to the South. And to hys sonnes fell the counsell houses, to Suphim and Josah fell the weste with the gate Salecheth, wher the way assendeth vpward, the one way beinge fast by the other.

In the Gest kepte syxe Leuites: in the North. iiii. a daye, & in the South. iiii. a daye, and in euery counsell house two, and in the watchhouses, on the hye way westward foure: two in a house. These are the deupsons of the porters amonge the sonnes of Bozeh and the sonnes of Merari. And of the Leuites: Abiah had the ouersight of the treasure of the house of God, and of the treasure of the dedicat thinges.

As concernynge the sonnes of Laadan whiche were Gersonites. Laadan had auncient fathers. Laadan the Gersonite had Jehieli. The sonnes of Jehieli: elizethan and Joel his brother, whiche were ouer the treasures of the house of the Lorde. Amonge the Amramites, Jazaharites, Hebronites and Gzielites, was Subuell the sonne of Gerson the sonne sonne of Moses a ruler ouer the treasure. And of hys brethren the sonnes of Eliezer, was Rahabiah, whose sonne was Isaiah, & his sonne was Jorā, & his son Jechi, & his son was Selomith, which Selomith & his brethren were ouer al p treasures of p dedicate gites whiche Dauid the kyng, and the auncient heades, of the capitaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes, and the capitaynes of the hoste had dedicated of the spoyle won in battell, to maynteyne the house of the Lord: and ouer al that Samuell the sear and Saul the sonne of Cis, and Abner the sonne of Ner, and Joab the sonne of Zairiah had dedicated. All that was dedicated, was vnder the hande of Selomith and of hys brethren.

Of the Izrahaites Conaniah and hys sonnes were in busineses without forthe made offycers and iudges ouer Israell. And of the Hebronites Basabiah and hys brethren men of actiuite a thousand and .lii. hundred wet officers in Israell on this side Jorā westward, in al busineses of the Lord a seruaice of the king. And Jediah was the cheefeste among the kirkeddes and fathers of the Hebronites. And in p fourtie pere of the kingdome of Dauid they were sought for. And ther wet found of them men of actiuite at Jezr in Gilead. And hys brethren were in menie of actiuite, two thousande and seuen hundred auncient heades, which king Dauid made rulers ouer the Rubenites, Gadites and the half tribe of Manasseh in al maters pertaining to God & busineses of p king.

hassah in Gilead: Jabo the sonne of Zachariah. In Benjamin: Jaasiel the son of Abner. In Dan: Azriel the sonne of Jeroham. These are the Lordes in the tribes of Israel.

But David toke not the numbze of them vnder .xx. yeres: for the Lord said he woulde encrease Israel like vnto the starres of the sky. And Joab the sonne of Zaruiah begonne to numbze. And thoughte he synished it not, yet there fell wrath for that vpon Israel. And therefore the numbze was not put in the Chronicles of kyng David.

¶ Over the kynges treasure was Azmoe the sonne of Abiel. And ouer the treasure of the felde, in the cyties, by lages and castelles, was Jehonathan, the sonne of Oziah. And ouer the workmen in the felde that tilled the ground, was Ezi the sonne of Chelub. And the ouersight of the vineyardes had Semiaiah the Ramathite. Over the wyne cellers & treasure of wyne was Sabdi the Saphonite. And ouer the olyuetrees and mulbertrees that were in the valeys was Baalhanan the Gadarit. And ouer the treasure of oyle was Joas. And ouer the oxen that fed in Sarō was Setari the Saronite. And ouer the oxen in the valeys was Saphate the sonne of Adai. And ouer the camelles vntil the Ismaelyte. And ouer the Asses was Johadiah the Merothite. And ouer the shepe was Jazis the Hagarit.

All these were the rulers of the substance of David. And Jehonathan Davids brothers sonne, a man of counsell, a man that taught wisdom, and a wyter he and Jehiel the sonne of Hachamoni wayted on the kynges sonnes. And Ahitophel was of the kynges counsell. And Husai the Gachite was the kynges companion. And nexte to Ahitophel was Jehosada the sonne of Banai and Abiathar. And the capitayne of the kynges warre was Joab.

¶ The .xxiii. Chapter.

¶ Because David was fast yoven to buyde the temple, he exhorteth Salomon and the people to performe it.

¶ And David gathered togeather all the Lordes of Israel: the Lordes of the tribes, & Lordes of the companies that mynnistred to the kyng by course, the Lordes ouer the thousandes and ouer the hundredes, and the Lordes ouer all the goodes and cattell of the kyng and of his sonnes, with the chambelaines, warpoures and all actiue men vnto Jerusalem. And kyng David stode by on his fete, and sayde.

Hear me my bryethen and my people:

* I had in myne herte to buyde an house of reste for the Arcke of the couenaunte of the Lord, and a fote stole for oure God, and had made redy to builde. But God sayde to me: * thou shalt not buyde an house for my name, because thou art a man of warre and hast shedde bloude. Moreover the Lord God of Israel chose me of all the house of my father, to bee kyng ouer Israel for euer, for he chose * Juda to bee a capitayne: and in the house of Juda the house of my father, and of the sonnes of my father he had a lust to me, to make me kyng ouer all Israel. And of all my sonnes (for the Lord hath geuen me manie sonnes) he hath chosen Salomon my sonne, to sit in the seat of the kyngdome of the Lord ouer Israel. And he sayd vnto me: Salomon thy sonne, he shall buyde my house and my courtes, * for I haue chosen hym to be my sonne, and I wyll bee his father, and wyll stablyshe his kyngdome for euer. If he wyll harden hym selfe to do my commaundementes, and my lawes, as it goeth thys daye.

And nowe I saye vnto you before all Israel the congregacion of the Lord, and in the audience of oure God: kepe a seke for al my commaundementes of the Lord your God, that ye may enioye a good land, & inherit your chyldren after you for euer. And thou Salomon my sonne: know thou the God thy father, & serue him with a pure herte, and lust of soule. * For the Lord seercheth all hertes, & vnderstandeth all the Imaginacions of thoughtes. If thou shalt seke hym, he wyll be founde of thee: But and if thou forsake him, he wyll cast thee off for euer. Take hede now, for the Lord hath chosen the, to buyde an house of thy sanctuarie. Be stronge and do it.

And David gaue Salomon his sonne the paterne of the porch, and of the houses & longed therto, and of the houses, vpper chaumbres, ynnere parlours, houses, & of the house of the mercifolde:

and the example of all that was in his mynde, bothe of the courtes of the house of the Lorde, and of the treasure houses rounde aboute, for the treasures of the house of god, and for the treasure of the dedicate gyftes, and of the companyes of the priestes and Leuites that waited by course, and of all workemanshypp, that shoulde serue for the house of the Lorde, and for all vessels that shoulde serue in the house of the Lorde. And appointed hym what wayghte of golde shoulde serue, for thynges of golde tho-rowe out all vessels, for whatsoever use it serued: and what wayghte of syluer shoulde suffice for all maner of vessels of syluer, for whatsoever purpose they serued.

And the wayghte of the golden candelsticks, and of their lampes of golde, the wayghte for euery candelstyeke and for theyr lāpes. And for the candelsticks of syluer by wayght, bothe for the can-delsticke and also for her lampes, accord-yng to the offyce of euery candelsticke.
And the wayght of golde for the tables of shew breadye, table by table: and likewise syluer for the tables of syluer. And for fleshehookes, basens and drinckynge pottes of pure golde. And for cuppes of golde of wayghte, cuppe by cuppe.
And for cuppes of syluer by wayghte, cuppe by cuppe. And for the aulter of incense of tryed golde by wayghte.
And the sympletyude of the seate of the Cherubes that stretched oute theyr wynges, and couered the Arcke of the couenaunte of the Lord. All was geuen me by wyrtynge of the hande of the Lord, whiche made me vnderstande all the workemanshypp of the paterne.

And David sayde to Salomon his sonne: harden thy selfe, and be stronge and do it feare not, nor let thyne herte discourage the. For the Lord god, euen my God is with the, and shall not leaue the, nor forsake the, vntyll thou hast synished all the worke that muste serue for the house of the Lorde. Beholde the priestes and Leuites are deuyded in companyes, for to do all maner of seruice that pertaineth to the house of God:
and besyde that, thou haste with the
for all maner of workemanshypp, all that are wyllynge and wyse for anye maner of seruyce. And the Lordes and all the people are at thy commaundemente in all thynges.

The. xxix. Chapter.

The offeringes of David and of the pyntes for the byldynge of the temple. David myght and Salomon his sonne sayneth in his prayere.

And David the kynge sayde vnto all the congregation: * God hath speciallye cholen Salomon my sonne whiche is yet younge and tender, and the worke is greate, for the house is not for man, but for the LORD God. Moreover, I haue prepared with all my myghte for the house of GOD:
golde for thynges of golde, and syluer for thynges of syluer, brasse for thynges of brasse, yron for thynges of yron, and wood for thynges of wood: and onykes stones, * set stones, and of other gape stones, and all maner of precious stones, and of marbre great aboundance.
And yet because I haue luste to the house of my God: I haue seuerall golde and syluer whiche I geue to the house of my God aboue all I haue prepared for the holy house: euen thye thousande ta-lentes of golde of Ophir, and seuen thousande talentes of syluer tryed: to syle the walles of the house with golde where it becommeth, and with syluer where syluer is mete, and for all maner of worke by the handes of Artifycers.
And let me se who is wyllynge also,

so wyllynge: for with a pure herte they were wyllynge vnto the LORD. And therto David the kynge reioyced with great gladnesse. And David blessed the Lorde before all the congregacion, and sayde: Blessed arte thou Lorde GOD of Israel oure father, from euer and for euer. Thyne (O Lorde) is greatnesse, power, glorie, byctorye and praise: for all that is in heauen & in erth is thyne, and thyne is the kyngedome (O Lorde) and þe arte lyfte vp on heade aboue all.

And richesse and honoure come of the, and thou raggest ouer all, and in thine hande is power and strengthe, and in thyne hande it is to make great, and to geue strengthe vnto all.

And nowe oure God, we thanke the, and prayse thy gloriouse name. For what am I, and what is my people: that we shoulde obtayne strengthe to be so wyllynge? But all is of the, and of that we receaued of thyne hande we haue geuen the. * For we be but straungers before the, and tennantes, as were all oure fathers. * Oure daies on the erthe is but a shadowe, and there is none abidinge. O Lord oure God, al this stuffe that we haue prepared to builde the an house for thy holpe name, commeth of thyne hande, and is all thyne. I wote also my God, that thou prouest the hertes and hast pleasure in playnesse. And in playnesse of my herte, I haue wyllynge geuen all this. And nowe I se þe people which are here in gladnesse, to offer wyllynge to the. O Lorde God of Abraham, Isaac and of Israel, oure fathers, kepe this for euer in the imagination of the thoughtes of the herte of thy people, and prepare their hertes vnto the. And geue vnto Salomon my sonne, a pure herte to kepe thy commaundementes, thy testimonyes, and thyne ordynaunces, and to do all, & to buylde the house whiche I entended.

And David said to al the congregacion: blesse the Lorde youre God. And all the congregacion blessed the LORD god of their fathers, & stowped & bowed them selues vnto the Lorde and to the kynge. And they offered offerynges vnto the Lorde. And on the morowe after the sayde daye, they offered in burnt offerynges vnto the Lorde a thousande oren, a thousande rammes, a thousande lambes, with their byctoryes. And they gae plenteouslye thyme out all Israel, and did eate & drinke before the Lorde the same daye, to great gladnesse. And they made Salomon the sonne of David kynge the seconde tyme, & appointed him vnto the Lord to be ruler, and Zadock to be the hie priest. * And so Salomon sat on the seate of the Lord, and was kynge for David his father, & prospered, and al Israel obeyed hym. And all the Lordes and men of power, and therto all the sonnes of kynge David submytted them selues vnder king Salomon. * And the Lorde magnified Salomon on hye, in the sight of all Israel, and gaue him so gloriouse a kyngedome, as none of all that were kynges before in Israel had.

Now David the sonne of Isai was kynge ouer all Israel. And the space he ragged ouer Israel was fourtie yere: seven yere in Hebron, and xxiii. yere in Ierusalem. And he dyed in a good age: olde, ryche and gloriouse: And Salomon his sonne ragged in his seade. The offerynges of Salomon in the bylanse of Hebron, where he receaueth an answer of God what he shoulde be geuen hym, with the number of the chaertes and doctes men.

And Salomon the sonne * of David waxed strong in his kyngdome, and the Lord his god was with him, & magnified him on hye.

And Salomon communed with all Israel, the capitaynes ouer thousandes and hundredes, & iudges, and all other Lordes and auncient heades thorowout all Israel. And so Salomon and al the congregacion with him, * wēt to the hylaulter of Gibeon: for there was þe tabernacle of the witnessse of God, * whiche Moses þe seruant of the Lorde made in the wyldernes. But the Arcke of GOD had David broughte fro Batiath Jarim, in to the place which David had prepared therfore, for he had pitched a tente for it at Jerusalem. Moreover þe brassen aulter that * Bezaleel þe sonne of Uri, þe sonne of Ozi had made, was at Gibeon also, before þe tabernacle of þe Lord. And Salomon & the congregacion wēt to viset it. And Salomon offered there before the lord vpo the brassen aulter that was by the tabernacle of witnessse, a thousande * burnte sacrifices. And the same night God appered vnto Salomon, & sayd to him: alke, what I shall geue the. And Salomon said vnto God: þe hast shewed greute mercye vnto David my father, and * hast made me kyng in his steade. And now o Lorde god, let thy proumyse vnto David my father be true. For thou hast made me kyng ouer a people lyke the dust of the erthe in multytude. wherfore geue me wisdom and knowledge how to behaue my selfe vnto this people: for who is able to iudge this people that is so greute.

* Then God said to Salomon, because thou haddest this in thyne herte, & dydest not aske treasure & riches, honour and þe liues of thine enemies, nether yet long lyfe: But hast asked wysdō & knowledge, to iudge my people, ouer which I haue made þe kyng: wysdō & knowledge shall be geue the, & I wil geue þe treasure, riches, & glorie also, þe amōg þe kynges before þe, or after the, none was or shall be lyke the. And so Salomon came fro the hylaulter þe was at Gibeon, to Jerusalem from the tabernacle of witnessse, & raig: D ned at Jerusalem. * And Salomon gathered charettz and horsemen: þe he had a thousande & foure hundred charettz, & xii. thousande horsemen, which he bestowed in þe charet cities, & about þe kyng at Jerusalem. * And þe kyng made spluer and golde at Jerusalem as plenteous as stones, and Cedar trees as plēte as the mulberie trees þe growe in the valeys. And þe horses which Salomon had, were brought him out of Egypt from Beua. The kyngs marchauntes set the oute at Beua at a pryce. They came & brought out of Egypt a charet for syxe hundred sicles, & an horse for an hundred & syfte. And so broughte they to all the kynges of the Hethites & to the kynges of Siria thorowe the handes of the sayde marchauntes.

the seconde daye of the seconde month the fourthe yere of his raygne. And this is the foundation of Salomon in buyldynge the house of god. The length was thye skore cubytes after the olde cubyt, and & bredeth. xx. And the porch at the ende was as large as the house bredeth. xx. cubytes: and & height was an hundred and. xx. cubytes. And he ouerlaid it on the pmer syde with pure golde.

And the greater house he cyled hys fyre tree, & ouerlayde it wth good golde, and graued therto paulmetrees & cherines. And he paved the house wth pper pharuaim. And he ouerlaid the house both beames, postes, walles and doores with golde, and graued Cherubes by on the walles.

And he made the house moost holy whose lengthe was. xx. cubytes & was the breadeth of the house: & & bredeth therof was also. xx. cubytes. And he ouerlayde it wth & best golde, & was the summe of. vi. hundred talents. And the waight of the naples of golde was thereto fyftie sicles. And he ouerlayde & hypper chambres wth golde.

And he made in & house moost holy two * Cherub of Image worke, & ouerlayde the wth golde. And the wynges of the Cherubes were. xx. cubytes longe.
The one wyng was tyed cubytes and touched the walle of the house, and the other wyng was lyke wyse tyed cuby-tes, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub. And the one wyng of & other Cherub was fyre cubytes, and touched the walle of the house: & the other wyng was fyre cubytes also, & caught to the wyng of & other Cherub. So & & wyng of & said Cherub caught. xx. cubytes.

And they stood on their feet and looked inwardes. And he made a face hanging of facincte coloure, of scarlet, cremo- lyne and byffe: and caused Cherubes to be brodered thereon. And he made before the house two pylers of xxv cubytes longe. And the heade that was about on the top of every one of the was fyue cubytes. And he made such chains as was in the quere, and put them on the heades of the pylers, and made an hundred pomegranates and put the on the chains. And he retyd by the pylers before the temple: one on the right hande, and another on the left, and called the right Jacobin, and the left Boaz.

The.iii. Chapter.

The antler of brasse, the sea, and vessels of brasse.

And he made an antler of brasse. xx. cubytes longe and xx. cubytes broade, & ten cubytes hie. * And he cast a brasse sea of ten cubytes from brim to brim, and rounde in compasse, and fyue cubytes hie: a lyne of xxx. cubytes myght haue compassed it rounde aboute. And the faction of oren dyd compasse it rounde about vnder it: it is to were, two rowes of oren cast, when it was caste dyd compasse the sea, whiche was ten cubytes wyde, rounde aboute. And it stood also upon twelue oren: of whiche thre looked North, thre West, thre South, and thre East, and the sea vpon the a bone an hie, and the hynder partes of the inwardes. And the thickest of it was an hande- breade, and the dymme lyke the brim of a cuppe, with floures of lylles. And it receaued & helde thre thousande bathes.

* And he made ten lauers: and put fyue on the right hande, and fyue on the left, to washe with all. And in the they thrust the fleshe of the burnt offeringes. But the sea was for the priests to washe in. And he made ten candelstyc- kes of golde in their factions, and put them in the temple: fyue on the right hande, and fyue on the left. And he made also ten tables and put them in the temple: fyue on the right hande and fyue on the left. And he made an hundred bases of golde. And he made the caruers of the pillars, and the great court and doore- way: and overlaid the doores of the with brasse. And he set the sea in the right syde of the temple, and toward the south. And Hiram made pottes, chowles, and basens.

And Hiram finished & wrought that he was appointed to make for king Salomon, vnto the temple of God: the two pylers in their scalpes of & two heades that were on & toppes of & pylers, and the two wrethes to cover the two scal- pes of the heades that were on & toppes of the pylers: and four hundred pome- granates for & two wrethes, two rowes of pomegranates for every wrethe, to couer the two scalpes of & heades that were on the pylers. And he made two bottomes, and lauers, vpon the botto- mes: & the sea with twelue oren vnder it. And therto pottes, chowles, beses, & al these vessels did Hiram Abi make for king Salomon, for & house of the Lorde, of bright brasse. In the playne of Jordan did the kyng cast the, in the thicke earth, betwene Succoth and Zaredatha. And made of all these vessels so myghty greate aboundaunce, that the weyghte of brasse could not be rekened.

And Salomon made all the vessels that pertayned to the house of God: the golden antler and the tables with the them breade vpon them, the candelstic- kes with their lampes to burne after the maner before the quere, and that of pure golde, and the floures, and & lam- pes, and the snuffers were golde, & that perfecte golde: and the dressinge kny- ues, basens, spones and censers of pure golde. And the ynnere doores of the place most holy, and the inner doores of & tem- ple to were golde. And so was all the worke that Salomon made for & house of the Lorde finished.

And when the worke that Salomon made in the house of the Lorde was finished: then Salomon brought in & gif- tes dedicate by Dauid his father, & sil- uer and the golde, and all the Jewelles, and put them amonge the treasures of the house of God.

And Salomon gathered the elders of Israel together, and all the heades of the tribes, and ancient Lordes among the children of Israel, unto Jerusalem: to bring the Arke of the covenante of the Lord out of the city of David which is Zion. And all the men of Israel resorted unto the king in the feast of the seventh moneth. And when all the tribes of Israel were come, the Levites toke up the Arke. And the priests and the Levites brought away the Arke and the tabernacle of witnesse, and all the holy vessels that were in the tabernacle. And King Salomon and all the congregation of Israel that were assembled unto him before the Arke, offered shepe and oxen, so many, that they coulde not be tolde or numbered for multitude.

And the priests brought the Arke of the appoyntment of the Lord unto his place, in the quere of the temple, and place most holpe: even under the winges of the Cherubes, that the Cherubes stretched out their winges over the place of the Arke, and the Cherubs covered the Arke & her staves above on hye. And the staves of the Arke, were so longe, that they were sene a litle before the quere, but not farre without. And there it remaineth unto this daie.

But the Levites every one of the that were under Asaph, Heman and Jeduthun, and among their childre & brethren, were arrayed in bysse & sang with synbales, psalteries & harpes, & sangynge Cens for the altar, & with the hundred & xx. priests blowing reompettes. And the trumpet blowers & the syngers so agreed, & it seemed but one voice, in praylinge and thankynge the Lord. And as the voyce of the reompettes, synbales, and instrumentes of me-

The vi. Chapter
The moneth of Salomon to the people and how he made to God.

And Salomon sayde: the Lord hath spoken it, that he wyl dwell in darkness. And I have buyt an habitation for the, and a place to dwell in for ever. And the king turned his face, and blessed the congregation of Israel, and all the congregation of Israel stode. And he said: blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which spake in his mouth to my father David, and hath fulfilled it with his handes, for God sayde: * Since the tyme I broughte my people out of the lande of Egypt, I chose no cytye amonge all the tribes of Israel to buyde an house in, that my name might be there, neither chose I any man to be a ruler over my people Israel. * But now I have chose Jerusalem, to have my name there, and have chosen David to be over my people Israel.

* And when it was in the herte of David my father to buyde an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel: But the Lord sayde to David my father: for as muche as it was in thyne herte, to buyde an house for my name, thou dydest well that thou haddest it in thyne herte. Notwithstandinge, thou shalt not buyde the house, but thy sonne whiche shall I sue oute of thy loynes, he shall buyde an house for my name. And the Lord hath made good his sayinge that he hath spoken. For I arose in the rowme of David my father, and am sette on the seate of Israel, as the Lord promysed, and have built an house for the name of the Lord God of Israel. And therein I have put the Arke, wherin the covenant of the Lord made with the childre of Israel, is. And he kepte forthe before the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, & stretched out his handes. And Salomon had made a Brasen a brassen pulpyt of fyue cubytes longe, & fyue cubytes broad, & thre of height, and had set it in the myddes of þe great court, vpon that he slepte and kneled downe vpon his knees before all þe congregation of Israel, and stretched oute

The. vii. Chapter.

The fyre consumeth the sacrifice. The Lord appeared to Salomon the seconde tyme.

As whē Salomō had made an ende of prayinge, & there came downe fyre from heauen and consumed the burnt offerynge and the sacrifices. And the glorie of the Lord fylled the house: that the priestes coulde not go into the house of the Lord, because the glorie of the Lord had fulfilled the house of the lord. And when all the chyldre of Israel saw howe the fyre came downe & the glorie of the Lord vpon the house, & bowed with theyr faces to the erthe, vpon the pavement, and bowed them selues and confessed vnto the Lord, that he was good, and that his mercy lasted euer.

And the kynge & al the people offered offerynges before the Lord. So that kynge Salomon offered, xxi. thousand oxen, and an hundred and twenty thousand shepe. And so the kynge and al the people halowed the house of God. And the priestes waited on their offices, and the Leuites with instrumentes of musycke of the Lord whiche kynge Dauid made to confesse vnto the Lord & bys mercy lasteth euer, when Dauid gaue prayle thoroowe theyr handes. And the priestes blew trompettes fast by them: and all Israel stode. Moreover, Salomon halowed the myddle of the court that was before the Lord: for there he offered burnt offerynges, and the fat of the peace offerynges, because the brassen altier whiche Salomon had made, was not able to receaue the burnt offerynges, & the meate offerynges, & the fat.

And Salomon kept a feast the same reason of seven dayes, & all Israel with him, an exceedyng great congregacion, euen from Hemath vnto the riuier of Egypte. And the eyght daye they made a gatheryng. For they kepte the halowyng of the altier seven dayes, and the feast seven dayes. And the xxiii. day of the seuenth moneth, he let the people departe into their tentes, glad and merry in hert, for the goodnesse that the Lord had shewed to Dauid, to Salomō, and to Israel his people. And so Salomō synned the house of the Lord, and the kynges house, and all that came in bys herte to make in the house of the Lord, and in his owne house, wente prouidously forwarde.

And the Lord appered to Salomō by nyght & said to him: I haue hearde thy petition & haue chosen this place for my selfe to be an house of sacrifice. Moreover yf I shut by heauen & there be no rayne: or yf I commaunde the locustes to deuoure the lāde, or yf I sende pestilence amonge my people: yet yf my people that are named after my name, shall humble themselves and make in-Therto mine eyes shalbe open & mine eares attē vnto þ prayers made in thys place. And finally I haue chosen and sanctified thys house, that my name bee there for euer: and mine eyes and mine heart shalbe there perpetuallye.

And yf thou shalt walke before me, as Dauid thy father walked, to do accordynge to all þ I haue comaunded the, & shalt obserue myne ordinaunces and my lawes: then I wyl stablish the seat of thy kyngdome, accordynge to the couenaunte I made wyth Dauid thy father, sayinge: *thou shalt haue euer one or other that shall rule in Israel. But and yf ye turne away & forsake myne ordinaunces, & my comaundements which I haue set before you, and shal go & serue other gods, & bowe your selues to them: then wil I plucke them by by the rotes oute of my lande which I haue geuen them, & wyl cast thys house whiche I haue sanctified for my name out of my syght, and wyl make a prouerbe & a tale of it amōg al nations. And thys house that is so hie, shalbe a wonder to all þ passeth therby that they shal saye: *why hath þ Lord dealt on thys facyon wyth thys lande and with this house? And it shalbe answered them, bycause they forsoke the Lorde God of their fathers whiche brought the out of þ lande of Egypt, & caught holde on other Gods, & bowed to them and serued the: euen therfore brought he on them al thys euil.

The citing that Salomon bydded after the house of God was synned.

And after twentye yere when Salomon hadde buylte the house of the Lorde, and hys owne house: he buylte the cytyes that Hyram gaue hym, and putte of the Chyldren of Israel in them. And Salomon went to Hemiath zobah and strengthened it. And he built Thadmor in the wilbernesse, and repayreth al the stozz cyties whiche he buylt in Hemiath. And he built Bethhorz the vpper & Bethhorz the nether, and made the stozz cyties with walles, gates & barres. And Baalath, & all the stozz cyties þ Salomon had, and al the charret cytyes, & the cyties of horsmen, and al þ Salomon had last to buylde in Ierusalē, and Libanon, and thozow out al the lande of hys dominion.

And al the people þ were left of the Hethites, Amozites, Pherezites, Hivites, & Jebusites, whiche were not of the chylzen of Israel: euen the chylzen of the, & which were left after the in þ lande, & were not consumed of the chylze of Israel, them dyd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye. But of þ chylzen of Israel dyd Salomon make no bonde men in hys worke: but they were men of war, & rulers, & great Lordz with him, & captaynes ouer hys charettes & horsmen. And kyng Salomons offycers þ ouersawe, & ruled the people, were two hundred & fyfye.

And Salomon brought the doughter of Pharaon out of þ cite of Dauid in to the house þ he had made for her. For he sayde: my wyfe shal not dwel in the house of Dauid kyng of Israel, for it is holpe, bycause the arcke of the Lorde came in to it.

And frome thenceforth Salomon offered burnt offerings vnto þ Lord, on þ autler of þ Lorde which he hadde buylt before the porch to offer daye by day accordynge to the comaundement of Moyses, & in the sabothes & newmones, and the thze solempne feastes of the yere, the feast of swete bread, þ feast of wekes, and the feast of bothes.

And Salomon putte the Lortez of prestes in companies as * Dauid his father had ordered the, vnto þ offyces, and þ Leuites vnto their wayte, for to prayse and mynstrel before þ prestes day by day, and þ porters by cōtse at euery gate, for so had Dauid the man of God comaunded. And the quene of Saba hearde of the fame of Salomon & came to proue hym w ryddelles at Ierusalē, wyth a berye great compagne and with camelles that bare swete odoures and plentie of gold & precious stones. And whē she was come to Salomon, she cōmuned with hym of al that was in her herte. And Salomon soyled her all her questions, that there was nothyng hydde from Salomon whiche he tolde her not.

And when the quene of Saba had sene the wisdom of Salomon, and the house p he had buylte, and the meate of hys table and the sypptynge of hys seruantes, and the standyng of his wayters, and their apparel, and his buttelars with their apparel, & his parlour out of whiche he went into the house of p Lord, there was no more heart in her.

And then she sayde to the kynge: the sayng whiche I hearde in myne owne lande, of thyne actes, and of thy wysedom, is trueth. But I beleued not the wordes of thē vntil I came, & myne eyes had sene it. And see, the one halfe of thy wisdom was not tolde me: thou ex- readest the same that I hearde, happye are thy men, & happy are these thy seruantes, whiche stande before the al- waye and heare thy wysdome. Blessed be p Lorde thy God, which had lust to the, to make the kyng on hys seate, vnto the Lord thy God. Because thy God loued Israel, to make them contyng euer, therefore made he the kynge ouer them, to do right and equite.

And she gaue the kinge an hundred and .xx. talentes of golde, and of swete odoures exceedinge grete haboundaunce, wyth precyouse stones, p there was no such swete odoures as p quene of Saba gaue kynge Salomon. And thereto the seruantes of Hiram, and the seruantes of Salomon, whiche brought golde from Ophir, brought also Alguine woode and precious stones. And the kynge made of the Alguine wood steyres in p house of p Lord, and in the kynges palace, and harpes, and psalteries for syngers. And there was no suche woode sene before in the lande of Iuda. And kynge Salomon gaue to p quene of Saba al her desyre that she asked aboue p she brought vnto p kynge. And so she turned & went a way to her owne land w her seruants.

The sūme of p golde p came to Salomon in one yere, was sixe hundred & lxvi. talentes of golde, besydes that whiche chapmen and marchauntes brought, & all the kynges of Arabia & dukes of p contreyes broughte golde and siluer to Salomō. And kyng Salomon made two hundred bockelars of golde, vi. hundred sicles of beten gold to a bokelar: and thye hundred shylles of beten golde, thye hundred sicles of golde to a shilde, and he put them in the house of the forest of Libanon.

And p kyng made a great seate of Iuoze, & ouerlayde it with pure golde. And there were syxe steppes to p seate, w a fote stole of gold fastened to p seate: and pomelles on eche syde of p sypptyng place, & two lyons standyng by the pomelles. And .xii. lyons stode on p one syde & on the other, vpon sixe steppes, p there was no suche worke made in any kyngedome.

And all the dynckynge vesselles of king Salomō were golde, & al p vesselles of the house of the forest of Libanō, were pure golde. And as for siluer, it was counted nothing worth in p dayes of Salomon. For the kynges thypyes went * to Thariss wyth the seruantes of Hiram euer p thye yere once. And

* And kynge Salomon passed all the kynges of the earth in richesse and wisdom. And all the kynges of the earth sought the presence of Salomon, to heare the wisdom that God had put in his heart. And they broughte euery man his present in vessels of silver & vessels of golde, and raymente, harness, sweete odoures, horses, and mules yere by yere.

And Salomon had foure thousande mangers of horses, & charrettes for the, and twelue thousande horse men. And he bestowed the in charrettes & in the kyng at Ierusalem. And he raygned ouer all the kynges fro Euphrates vnto the land of the Philistines, & so to the borders of Egypte. * And the kyng made silver in Ierusalem as plenteous as stones, & Cedar trees as plenteous as mulberry trees that grow in the valeys. And Salomon had horses brought him out of Egypte and out of all landes.

* And the reste of the actes of kynge Salomon both first and last are written in the booke of Nathan the prophet and in the prophesye of Ahiah the Silonite, and in the visions of Iadi the seer of visions agaynst Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat. And when Salomon had raygned in Ierusalem vpon all Israel fourtie yeres, he layde him to rest with his fathers, and was buried in the cite of Dauid his father, & Rehoboam his sonne raygned in his steade.

The .i. Chapter.

The folowynge of Rehoboam, and the destruction of his reialme.

And Rehoboam wente to Sichem: for to Sichem were all Israel come to make hym kynge. And when Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, beinge in Egypt heard it (for he was fled for feare of Salomon the kynge) he returned out of Egypt. And they sent & called him. And so Jeroboam & all Israel came & communed with Rehoboam, & sayde: Thy father made vs a greuous poucke: But remitte thou somewhat of the greuous scrupce of thy father, and of his heuie poucke that he putte vpon vs, and we will serue thee. And he sayde to them: come agayne after .iii. dayes to me, and the people departed.

And kynge Rehoboam conueiled the elders that stode before Salomon his father, whyle he yet liued, & sayde: what counsell geue ye me, to answer this people agayne. And they tolde him, saynge: yf thou shalt be kinde to this people, & please them, shalt speake lowngge wordes to them, they will be thy seruantes for euer. But he left the counsel whiche the elders gave hym, and toke counsel with the younge men that were nucted by with hym, & had stand in his presence, and sayde to them: what aduise geue ye, that I may answer this people, which haue comuned with me, sayinge: Abate somewhat of the poucke whiche thy father dyd put vpon vs.

And the yonge men that were nucted by with him, talked with him, sayinge: thus answer the people & speake to the, sayinge: Thy father made oure poucke heuie: But make ye our poucke somewhat lyghter. Thus wyse answered them: My lytle finger shall be heuier then my fathers loynes. * For where my father putte a heuie poucke vpon you, I will put more therto, and where my father chastised you with whippes, I will chastise you with scorpions.

And when Jeroboam and all Israel were come the thirde day, as the kynge had, sayinge: Come agayne to me the thirde day. The kynge answered them cruelly, for kynge Rehoboam left the counsel of the aged men, & answered the after the aduise of the yonge men, sayinge: If my father made poure poucke greuous, I will adde therto, & where my father chastised you with whippes, I will chastise you with scorpions. And so the kynge hearkened not vnto the people, for the turninge awaye was of God, & the Lorde myghte make good his sayinge, whiche he spake by the hande of Ahiah the Silonite to Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat.

And when all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not heare them, the people answered the kynge, sayinge: what parte haue we with Dauid, or wherfore

And therupon all Israel gat them to their tentes, so þe Rehoboam raygned ouer no moo of the chyldren of Israel then twelue in the cities of Iuda. The kynge Rehoboam sent to the Hadurā that was ouer þe tribute, & the chyldre of Israel stoned hym with stones that he dyed. But kynge Rehoboam made speche and gate him vp to hys charret, to fle to Ierusalem. And so Israel departed from the house of David vnto thys daye.

The. xi. Chapter.

Rehoboam is forbidden to fight agaynst Jeroboam, he hath xviij. wyues and thye scoe concubynes: and by them xxviii. sonnes, and thye scoe daughters.

AD when Rehoboam was come to Ierusalē, he gathered of the house of David & Benjamin, to the numbze of nine scoe thousand chosen men of war to fyghte wth Israel, for to bynge the kyngdome agayne to Rehoboam. But the worde of þe Lorde came to Semelāh the man of God, sayinge: speake vn to Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon kynge of Iuda, & to al Israel that are in Iuda, and to Benjamin & say: thus sayeth þe Lorde. Goe not vp nor fyght wth your brethze: But retorne euery mā to hys house, for thys thyng is done of me. And they obeyed the woordes of the Lorde, and returned from goynge agaynst Jeroboam.

And Rehoboam dwelt in Ierusalē, and buylte stronge cytyes in Iuda: as Bethlehē, Etam, & Chekua, Bethzur, Socho, and Obollā: Geth, Marelah, Ziph: Durahim, Lachis and Asrah, Gath, Alalon and Hebron. Whiche were the stronge cyties of Iuda & Benjamin. And whē he had repayred suche stronge cytyes, he put capaynes in them, and scoe of vitayle, & of oyle and wyne. And he ordered in all cytyes shildes and speares, & made them excedynge stronge. And so Iuda and Benjamin were vnder hym.

And the priestes & the Leuites that were in all Israel, resorted to hym, out of all their costes. In so much that the Leuites left their Suburbes & possel-sions, and came to Iuda & Ierusalem. * For Jeroboam & his sonnes had call them oute frome ministringe vnto the Lorde. * And he ordeyned hym priestes of hysaulters, bothe to selde deuilles and also to the calves whiche he hadde made. And after there came of al þe tribes of Israel (suche as their heartes moued the to seke the Lord God of Israel) to Ierusalē to offer vnto þe Lord God of their fathers. And so they strenghted þe kyngdom of Iuda, & made Rehoboam the sonne of Salomon myghtye thye yere longe, for thye yere they walcked in the waye of David and Salomon.

And Rehoboam tooke hym Maabath the doughter of Jerimoth þe sonne of David to wyfe, and Abihail the doughter of Eliab the sonne of Isai, whiche bare hym childzen: Jeus, Samariah & Iaham. And after her he toke * Maarah the doughter of Absalom, whiche bare hym Abiah, Ethai, Ziza, & Salumith. But Rehoboam loued Maarah the doughter of Absalom aboue all hys other wyues and concubynes, for he toke. xviij. wyues, and thye scoe concubynes, and begat thye scoe doughters &. xxviii. sonnes. And Rehoboam made Abiah the sonne of Maarah the chiefe ruler amonge his brethzen, for to make hym kyng. And he played wisely, and scatered of al hys childzen thorow out all the countreyes of Iuda & Benjamin in euery stronge cytye. And he gaue them haboundaunce of vitayle, and asked many wyues.

AD when Rehoboam had stablished the kyngdome, and made it stronge, he forsoke the lawe of the Lorde, & al Israel with hym. * wherefore the fylte yere of kyng Rehoboam, Sesac the kynge of Egypte came vp agaynst Ierusalem, because they had transgressed agaynst the Lorde, with twelue hundred charrettes and thye scoe thousande horsemen. toke the strong cities that were in Juda, and came to Jerusalem.

Then came Semetiah the prophete, to Rehoboam & to the Lordes of Juda, & were gathered to Jerusalem for feare of Sefac, and sayde to the: thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue lette me, and therfore wyll I leue you also in y<sup>e</sup> handes of Sefac. wherupon the lordes of Israel, & the kynge humbled the selues, and sayd: the Lorde is righteous. And when y<sup>e</sup> Lord saw y<sup>e</sup> they submitted the selues, y<sup>e</sup> worde of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde came to Semetiah, sayinge: They meke the selues, and therefore I wyll not destroye them. But I wyll deliuer them somewhat, and my wrath shal not falle vpon Jerusalem by the hande of Sefac. Neuerthelater, they shal be hys seruautes, to knowe what difference is betwene my scrupce, and the seruice of the kyngedomes of other landes.

And Sefac kynge of Egypte came to Jerusalem, and toke awaye y<sup>e</sup> treasures of the house of the Lorde, & the treasures of the kynges house, & shortlye he tooke all. And he toke also the shildes of gold, which Salomō made. In steade of whiche, kynge Rehoboam made shylde of brasse, and put them in the keepynge of the captaynes of his garde, whiche wayted in the gates of the kynges house. And as ofte as the kyng wēt to y<sup>e</sup> house of y<sup>e</sup> Lord, y<sup>e</sup> garde wēt & fet the, & brought the agayne vn to y<sup>e</sup> garde chābre. And so because he humbled him selfe, y<sup>e</sup> wrath of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde turned fro hym, & destroyed not all together. And thereto there were manye good thynges yet in Juda.

And kynge Rehoboam waxed mighty in Jerusalem & raygned. And Rehoboam was. xli. yere olde when he was kynge, and he raygned. xlii. yeres in Jerusalem, the cytye whych the Lorde had chosen out of all y<sup>e</sup> tribes of Israel to putte hys name there. And hys mothers name was Naamah an Ammonite. And byd euell: for he prepared not hys heartte to seke the Lorde.

The actes of Rehoboam, fyrst and last, are written in the sayinges of Semetiah the prophete, & of Aho the seat of blyssons, so much as hys genealogy, and y<sup>e</sup> perpetual warre y<sup>e</sup> was betwene Rehoboam & Jeroboam duringe thesē life. And Rehoboam layde hym to Repe wyth hys father, and was buryed in the cite of Dauid, and Abiah his sone raygned in hys steade.

In the. xlii. yere of kynge Jeroboam beganne Abiah to raygne ouer Juda, and he raygned thre yere in Jerusalem. Hys mothers name was Michasah the doughter of Uriel of Gibeah. And there was war betwene Abiah & Jeroboam. And Abiah made a battell w an host of fyghtynge men, offour hundred thousande chosen men. And Jeroboam put him selfe in aray to fyghte agaynst hym, with. viii. hundred thousande picte men and stronge.

And Abiah stode vp vpon temple in an hyll in mouē Ephraim, & sayde: heare me thou Jeroboam & al Israel. Becometh it not you to know how that the Lorde God of Israel gaue y<sup>e</sup> kyngdome of Israel, to Dauid for euer, eue to him & to his sonnes, wyth a salted couenaunte. But Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat the seruaunt of Salomō the sonne of Dauid, rebelled agaynst hys Lorde. And there gathered to hym lewd men and vnythpytles, and preuailed agaynst Rehoboam the sonne of Salomō: for Rehoboam was yonge and tender hearted, and not stronge ynoughe for them.

And nowē ye thynke to preuaile agaynst y<sup>e</sup> kyngdome of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde which is in y<sup>e</sup> hand of y<sup>e</sup> sonnes of Dauid, because ye be a greate multitude, & haue with you the golde calues, which Jeroboam made you for gods. commaundement. And he putte awaye out of al the cities of Juda, the hylalters and the ydolles: for the kingdome was quyet before hym. And he buylte stronge cities in Juda: because þe lande was in rest, & he had no warre in those yeres. for the Lorde had geue him rest.

And therfore he sayd to Juda: let vs bulde these cities & copasse them with walles and towres, gates and barres, while we haue the lande in quiet. for we haue sought the Lorde our God: & because we haue sought hym, he hathe geue vs rest on euery syde: and so they bulde and prospered. And Ala had an armie of men þe bare shyld & speare, out of Juda, thre hundred thousande, & out of Benjamin that bare shyld, & drew bowes, two hundred & lxxx. thousande, and were all stronge men.

And there came out agaynst the zarah the black Moorian with an host of ten hundred thousand, & thre hundred cha-rettes, and came as ferre of Marasa.
And Ala wet out to him, & they put the in aray to battel in þe valepe of zepha-tah beside Marasa. And Ala cryed vnto the Lorde his God, and sayd: Lorde, it is al one wþ the to helpe them that haue no power, with fewe or with many: helpe o Lorde our God, for we truste to thee, and in thy name be we come agaynst theys multitude. Thou art the Lorde our God, lette not man preuayle agaynst the.

And þe Lorde smote the blacke Mores before Ala & Juda, & they fled. And Ala and the people þe was wþ hym, folowed after them as ferre as Gerar.
And the blacke Mores were ouerthrawen, & there abode none alyue of them, but were destroyed of the Lorde & of his hoste. And they carped awaye a myghtye great praye. And they smote al the cities rounde about Gerar. for þe feare of the Lorde came vpon them. And they robbed all the cytyes, for there was exceedynge

exceedynge muche to be robbed in the. And therto they smote þe tetes of catel, and caried awaye plente of shepe and camelles, and returned to Ierusalem.

The. xv. Chapter.

Þeinge Ala by the monicion of the Prophet Azariah after he had put downe the Idoles. laterspeeth to the Lorde. He depyrueth hys mother of her dominion.

AD þe spirit of God came on Azariah, the sonne of Obed. And he went out agaynst Ala, and sayde to him: hear me Ala, & all Juda, and Benjamin. The Lorde is wth you, whyle ye be wth him, and yf ye shal seke him, he wyl be founde of you: but yf ye shal forsake hym, he wyl forsake you. There wyl come manye dayes in Israel, in whiche there shal be no true God, nor priest þe teacheth, nor anye lawe. And in their tribulation they shal turne vnto the Lorde God of Israel & shal seke hym, and he shal be founde of them. And in those dayes there shal be no peace to them þe goe out & in. But greate vexacion bpon the enhabitors of al landes. for one nacion shal destroye another, & one cutte another: for God wyl trouble them with all aduersitye. But plucke you by youte heartes, and let nat your handes saynte, for youre worckes shal be rewarded.

When Ala heard those wordes, and the prophesye of Azariah the sonne of Obed the prophete, he toke courage, & put awaye the abhominacions oute of al the lande of Juda & Benjamin & out of the cittes which he wane in mounte Ephraim, and renued the aulter of the Lorde, that was befoze the porch of the Lorde. And he gathered all Juda and Benjamin, & the straigers with them out of Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon. for there fell manye to hym out of Israel, when they sawe that God was wth hym. And they assembled at Ierusalem the thyrde monethe of the xviij. yere of the raygne of Ala. And they offered vnto the Lorde that same tyme of the spole whyche they hadde broughte. vii. hundred oxen, and. vii. thousande shepe.

And they made a couenant to seke the Lorde God of their fathers, wth all their heartes, & all their soules: so that all that sought not the Lorde God of Israel, shulde dye for it, whether he were smale or greate, man or woman. And they a swate vnto þe Lorde with a loude voyce, and howtyng, and with trompettes and hornes. And all Juda reioyced in the oth, for they had sworne vnto the Lorde with all their heartes, and soughte hym wth all their lust, & he was founde of them. And the Lorde gaue the rest round about on euery side.

And therto kynge Ala put Maacah hys mother oute of auctorite, because she had made an Idole in a groue: and brake downe her Idole & stampit it, and burnt it by the broke Cedron. But they put not the hylauiters oute of Israel: neuerthelesse the hearte of Ala was pure all hys lyfe. And he brought into the house of God the dedicate gyftes which he & hys father had dedicate, in golde, syluer, and other Jewelles. And there was no moze warre vnto the *xxv. yere of the raygne of Ala.

The Notes.

a. To swate vnto þe Lorde, is to geue the selfe wholly to hym w a pure heart: which thing true worshippers do, as is sayde of Dauid. psalme. cxxi. a. But to swate by the Lorde, is to call on the name of the Lorde as a witnes and iudge, as it is sayde. Iosua. ii. c.

The. xvi. Chapter.

Ala for feare of Baasa kynge of Israel, maketh a couenant wth Benhadad kynge of Siria.

In the. xxvi. yere of þe raygne of Ala, came Baasa king of Israel by agaynst Juda and buylt Ramah, to the entent þe he wolde let none þe pertained to Ala king of Juda to haue passage in & out. wherupon Ala set out syluer and golde out of the treasures of þe house of the Lorde, and of the kynges house, and sent it to Benhadad kynge of Siria that dwelt at Damasco, and sayde: There is a confederacion betwene me and the, and so was betwene my father & thine, wherfore I haue sent þe syluer and golde, that thou goe and breake thyne appoyntment with Baasa king of Israel, þe he maye depart from me. And Benhadad graunted vnto kynge Ala, & sent the captayn of his armie agaynst the cittes of Israel. And they bet Aion, Dan, Abelmain, & al þe strong cittes of Nephtali. And when Baasa hearde that he lefte buyldynge of Ramah maah and let his worke cease. And the Asa the kynge toke all Juda, & carped awaye the stones & tymbre of Ramah wherewith Baasa was a building: & he builde therewith Gibea and Haz-phah.

At that same time Hanani the sear, came to Asa kynge of Juda, & sayde to him: because thou trustest in the kynge of Siria, & trustest not in y<sup>e</sup> Lorde thy God, therefore is the host of the kynge of Siria escaped oute of thyne hande.

ii. pa. xlii. c. * Were not y<sup>e</sup> blacke Moyses & they of Libya a greate hoste with exceedynge many charettes and horsmen? And yet because thou trusteddest in the Lorde, he deliuered them into thyne handes. For the eyes of the Lorde beholde all the earth, to strengthe y<sup>e</sup> heartes of the that are hole wth him. * Herin thou hast done foolishly, and therefore from hence forth thou shalt haue warre. Whereupon Asa was wrothe with the sear, and put him in the prison house, for he was displeased with hym bycause of that. Moreover Asa oppressed certayne of the people the same season.

Gen. xxi. d. 4. Re. xli. c. The dedes of Asa both first and last, are written in the booke of the kynges of Juda and Israel. And in the. xxxix. yere of hys reygne, Asa fel sicke of his fete, & that his disease exceedyd. * And therto in his sickenes he asked no counsell of the Lorde but of Phylitions. And at the laste Asa fell on slepe with his fathers & dyed when he had reygned. xli. yere. And they buried hym in his own sepulchre, which he had made in the cypre of Dauid, and layed hym in the bedde whiche he had fylled with swete odoures of diuerse kindes, made by the crafte of the Potticaries. And they dyd exceedynge great cost aboute the buryng of hym.

Gen. xxi. d. 4. Re. xli. c. Jehosaphat surrendeth after Asa, whiche causeth the feare of the Lorde to be renewed amonge the people.

Gen. xxi. d. 4. Re. xli. c. AS* Jehosaphat hys sonne reigned in his steade, & was myghtyer then Israel. And he putte souldyers in all the stronge cittes of Juda, and set ruelers bothe in the lande of Juda, and also in the cittes of Ephraim, whiche Asa his father had wonne. And the Lorde was with Jehosaphat, because he walked in the old wayes of hys father Dauid, and sought not Baals. But sought the Lorde God of hys father, and walked in his commaundementes: & not after the doyngs of Israel. Therefore y<sup>e</sup> Lorde stablished the kyngdome in his hande, and all Juda brought hym presentes, so y<sup>e</sup> he became exceedynge ryche and gloriouse. And hys hearte was courageous in the wayes of the Lorde, & he put downe yet moze of the highalters and groues out of Juda.

And the thirde yere of hys reygne, he sent of his lordes: Benhai, Abdiash, zachariah, Nathanaell & Michaah to teache in the cittes of Juda: and with them, Semetah, Nathaniah, zababiah, Alahel, Semiramoth, Jehonathah, Adoniah, Chobiah, and Chobodoniah Leuites: and with the Elisama a Samaritan priestes. And they taught in Juda, & had the booke of y<sup>e</sup> lawe of God wth them, & went aboute thorow out al the cittes of Juda & taught the people.

And the feare of the Lorde fel upon all the kyngdomes of the landes that were rounde aboute Juda, that they durst not warre with Jehosaphat. And the Philistines broughte Jehosaphat gistes & tribute siluer. And thereto the Arabians brought him of shepe, seven thousande & seven hundred rammes, & seven thousande and seven hundred he goates. And so Jehosaphat prospered and grewe by an hye. And he built in Juda, castels & store cittes. And he had great substance in y<sup>e</sup> cittes of Juda, & fightig me & me of might in Ierusalem.

And this is the order in y<sup>e</sup> houses of their fathers, of the capitaynes ouer thousandes in Juda: Ednah the capitayne and with hym of fyghtynge men thre hundred thousande. And nexte to hym Jehohanan a capitayne, and with him. ii. hundred & lxxx. thousand. And by his syde Amasiah the sonne of Azbhai, willynge vnto y<sup>e</sup> Lorde, and with him two hundred thousand mightie me. And of the chyldren of Benjamin, Elisada was a man of myghte, & had with him armed with bowes & chyldes two hundred thousande. And by his syde Jehosabad with whome were an hundred and lxxx. thousande trimmed for war.

These waited on the kynge, besydes those which the kynge had put in stronge cyties thorowout all Iuda.

After that he had asked counsell of the four hundred prophetes, he put Mischeah in prison. He dyeth with the hoste of an Arrow.

And Jehosaphat became he a tyche and gloriose, a joyned affinite with Ahab. And after certayne yeres he went downe to Ahab to Samaria. And Ahab gave shewe & open plenteousye for him & for the people that came with him, and entreated him to go by vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And Ahab kynge of Israel sayde to Jehosaphat kynge of Iuda: wylt thou go with me to Ramoth in Gilead? And he answered him: I wylbe as thou, and my people shalbe as thyne, & we wyl go with the in the warre.

But Jehosaphat sayd vnto the king of Israel: aske I praye the, at the worde of the Lorde. And the kynge of Israel gathered together of the prophetes, four hundred men, and sayde vnto the: Shall we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fight, or shall I cease? And they sayde, go by: the Lorde shal deliuer it into the kynges hande. And Jehosaphat sayde, is there yet here neuer a prophet more of the Lordes, that we myght aske of him? And the kynge of Israel sayde to Jehosaphat: there is yet one, to aske the Lorde by him: But I hate hym, for he neuer propheseth me good, but all waie euell, one Mischeah the sonne of Iemla. And Jehosaphat sayde: let not the kynge saye so.

Then the kynge of Israel called one of his chambrelaynes, and sayd: fetch the hether quickly Mischeah the sonne of Iemla. And the kynge of Israel, & Jehosaphat kynge of Iuda, sate ether of them on his seate in their apparell, in a thersynge howse besyde the gate of Samaria, and all the prophetes prophesyng before the. And one Zedekiah the sonne of Chananiah had made hym hornes of yron, and sayd: thus sayth the Lorde: with these thou shalt wynn Syria vntyll thou hast brought the to nought. And all the prophetes prophesed thus so, saying: Go by to Ramoth in Gilead & prosper, for the Lorde shall

And the messenger that went to call Mischeah, spake to him, saying: behold, the wordes of the prophetes are pleased vnto the kynge with one assent, let thy wordes I praye the, be lyke one of theis, & speake that which is pleasaut. And Mischeah sayde: as truly as the Lorde lyueth, eue what my God sayeth, that wyl I speake. And when he was come to the kynge, the kynge sayde to hym: Mischeah, shall we go to Ramoth in Gilead to fight, or shall I be in trespasse? And he answered: go ye and prosper, for the Lorde shall deliuer it into your handes. But the kynge sayde to him: how oft tymes shall I aduise the, that thou saye nothinge but truthe to me, in the name of the Lorde.

Then he sayd: I see all Israel shattered in the mountaynes, as shepe that haue no shepard. And the Lorde sayd: these haue no master, let the returne euery man to his house in peace. Then sayd the king of Israel to Jehosaphat, byd I not tell the, that he wolde not prophesye good vnto me, but euell? And he answered: therefore heate ye the worde of the lord.

¶ I saw the Lorde sate vpon his seat, and all the company of heauen standynge on his right hande, & on his lefte. And the Lorde sayde: who shall deceaue Ahab, kynge of Israel, that he maye go and be slayn at Ramoth in Gilead. And whyle one sayd thus, and another that, there came out a spirite & stode before the Lorde, & saide: I wyl deceaue him. And the Lorde sayd to him, how? And he sayd: I wyl go out, and wylbe a lyinge spirite in the mouthes of all his prophetes. And the Lorde sayde, thou shalt deceaue him: and shalt preuaile, go out & do euill so. And now behold, the Lorde hath put a lyinge spirite in the mouthes of all these thy prophetes, and yet the Lorde hath spoken euell agaynst the. And Zedekiah the sonne of Chananiah, wet to & smote Mischeah vpon the cheke, and sayd: by what waie wet the spirite of the Lorde from me, to speake in the? And Mischeah sayde: thou shalt see the daye when thou shalt cume from chabze to chabze, for to hyde thy selfe. Then said the king of Israel, take ye Mischeah, and deliuer him to Amos the gouernour of the citie, & to Joas the kinges sone, & saue, thus sayth the king: put this fellow in prison, & fede him with breade of affliction, & water of tribulacion, vntill I come agayne in peace. And Michiah sayd: yf thou come agayne in peace, the hath not the lord spoke in me. And Michiah sayde moreouer, herke to ye people euery one of you. And so the king of Israel & Jehosaphat the king of Iudā, went vp to Ramoth in Gilead. The sayd the king of Israel to Jehosaphat: charge the & get þ to battell, but se that thou haue thine owne apparel vpon the.

¶ And the king of Israel chaunged him self, & they went to battell. But the king of Siria commaunded the capitaynes of his charrettes, saying: se that ye fight not against small or great, saue against the kyng of Israel onely.

And when the capitaynes of the charrettes saw Jehosaphat, they had wete he had bene the kyng of Israel, & therefore compassed aboute him, to fighte. But Jehosaphat cryed out, & the Lorde holpe him, & God tyled the arrowe from him. For whē þ capitaynes of the charrettes perceaued that it was not the kyng of Israel, they turned backe agayne from him. And a certen man drew his bowe ignorantly, & smote the kyng of Israel betwene the Joyntes of his habergyne. And he sayde to the charret man, turne thine hand, & carpe me out of the hoste, for I am hurte. And the battell arose þ daye. Now be it the kyng of Israel continued standynge in his charret agaynst the Syrians vntill eue. And about the sonne goynge downe he dyed.

The. xix. Chapter.

¶ After Jehosaphat was rebuked by the prophet Iddo, he called agayne the people to the honouring of the Lorde God.

¶ AD Jehosaphat kyng of Iudā returned to his house safe and sounde to Ierusalem. And Jehu þ sone of Hanani the sear, went out agaynst him, and sayd to kyng Jehosaphat: oughtest thou to helpe þ wycked, & to loue the that hate the Lorde. In this verely is the wrath of the Lorde vpon the. Neuertheless, there are good thynges founde in þ, that thou hast put a waie goodes out of the lade, & hast prepared thine herte to see God. And as Jehosaphat dwelt at Ierusalem, he wet to agayne & wet among the people fro Bersabe to mounte Ephraim, & brought the agayne vnto þ lord God of their fathers. And he set Iudges in þ lande, thorowout all the stronge cities of Iuda, cytie by cytie, and sayde to the Iudges: take hede what ye do, for ye be not Iudges in þ law of mā, but of god, whiche is with you in the wordes of the law. Wherefore let the feare of the Lorde be with you, & take hede and do it. For there is no vntyrghewisnesse in the lord oure God: nor regarding of persones, nor takinge of rewarbes.

Moreover in Ierusalem vpon Jehosaphat set of the Leuites, & of the prestes, & of the auncient heades of Israel, ouer the customes of the lord & causes of Iustice. And the they returned agayne to Ierusalem. And he charged the, saying: be ye so in the feare of the Lorde, wth trithe & pure herte. And whatsoeuer come to you of your brethren þ dwell in their citis, betwene bloud & bloude, law, commaundment, ordinaunces & customes: se that ye warne the, þ they trespass not agaynst the Lorde, lest wrath come vpon you & on your brethren. Thus do, and ye shal not offende. And se here Amariah the hye preste which is heed ouer you in all matters of the Lorde, and zababiah the sone of Imael a ruler in the house of Iuda, he is ouer all causes concerninge the kyng, with officers of the Leuites before you. Take courage to you, and go vpon it, and the Lorde shal be with the good.

The. xx. Chapter.

¶ After that came the children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them of the Ammonites came agaynst Jehosaphat to battell. And there came some that tolde Jehosaphat, sayinge: there cometh a great multitude agaynst the from the other syde the sea, oute of Siria. And so they bein in Basan Chamar, whiche is Engad. And Jehosaphat feared & set him selfe to seke the lord, & proclaymed fastynge thozowoute all Juda. And Juda gathered the selues together for to aske counsell of the Lorde. And therto there came oute of all the cyties of Juda to seke the Lord. And * Jehosaphat stode in the cōgregaciō of Juda & Ierusalē in the house of the Lord before the new courte, & sayde: Lord God of oure fathers, act not thou God in heauen, & rapgneest not thou on all þe kingedomes of þe hethen: And in thine hand is power & might, that no man can stande before the. Act not thou oure God, whiche dydest cast out the enhabitors of this lāde before thy people Israell, a gauest it to the seed of Abraham thy louer for euer. And they dwelt thetin, a haue built the a temple thetin vnto thy name, & sayd: * when euell cometh vpon vs, as the iwerde of iudgement, pestilence or hongre: the þe if we stande before this house and before the (for thy name is in this house) a shall crye vnto the in oure tribulacion, thou shalt heare and helpe.

And now beholde, the children of Ammon and Moab, and mount Seir, by which * thou woldest not let Israell go, when they came out of Egypte: but they departed from the, and destroyed them not. And se, how they rewarde vs, to come for to cast vs out of thy possession which thou hast possessed vs wyth all. O oure God, wylt thou not iudge them: for we haue no myght agaynst this great cōpanye that cometh agayst vs. Nether wot we what to do: but oure eyes be vnto the.

And as all Juda stode before þe lord with their younge ones, their wyues, & their childre: the spirite of þe Lord came vpon Jahauiel þe sonne of zachariah the sonne of Banaiab, the sōne of Jeiel, the sonne of Mathaniab a Leuite of the sonnes of Alaph, euen as he was in the middes of the cōgregaciō. And he sayd: herke all Juda, & the enhabitors of Ierusalē, & also kyng Jehosaphat. Thus sayth the Lord vnto you: be not aferde, or faynte hearted by reaso of this great multitude: for the warre is not yours, but Gods. And to morowe ye shall go downe to the: se, they come vp at ziz, & ye shall mete them in the flaggies of the broke before the wildernesse of Ieruel.

Moreouer it belongeth not to you for to fight in this quarell: but stepe forth and stande and beholde the helpe of the Lord which is with you: feare not, nor let youre hertes fayle you, O ye of Juda, and of Ierusalē. To morow go out to them: for the Lord is with you.

And Jehosaphat bowed hym selfe with his face to the cytie, and all Juda and the enhabitors of Ierusalē fell before the Lord, to bowe them selues vnto the Lord. And the Leuites and the children of the Cahathites, and of the Cozabites stode vp, to prayse the Lord God of Israell with a loude voyce on hye. And so they arose erlye in the mornynge, and get the out vnto the wyldernesse of Chekua. And as they wet out, Jehosaphat stode & sayde: heare me Juda, & ye enhabitors of Ierusalē. Beleue in the Lord youre God, & so shall ye continue: a beleue his prophetes, & so shall ye prosper. And he gaue the people counsell, & set the singers of the Lorde & the that praysed i holy apparell, to go out before the armie, & to saye: prayse the Lord for his mercie lasteth euer. And what tyme they beganne to laude & prayse, the the Lord set layers awayte agaynst þe children of Ammon & Moab, whiche layde wayte for the that were of mount Seir, which were come agaynst Juda, to destroye them vtterlye and to wyppen them out. And whē they had made an ende of the enhabitors of Seir, then they holpe to destroye eche other.

And when Juda came to Bazphah in the wyldernesse, they looked vnto the multitude. And beholde, they were deed carcases fallen to the erthe, and none escaped. And Jehosaphat and his people went to robbe awayte the spoyle of them, and founde amonge them abundance of goodes, & rayment and of pleasaunt Jewelles, & caught fro the more the they could carpy awayte: so that they were thre dayes in gatherynge of the spoyle, it was so muche. And þe fourth daye they assembled in þe valeye of blessinge, for there they blessed the Lorde. And therfore they called þe name of the sayd place the valeye of blessinge, vnto this daye. And so all the men of Juda & Ierusalē returned & Jehosaphat among the thyckest of them, for to go agayne

Jehosaphat ii. Paralipomenon.

Jehozab to Jerusalem with gladness: for the lord had made them to retopse of their enemies. And they came to Jerusalem with psalteries, and harpes, and trumpettes, eue unto the house of the Lorde. And the feare of God fell in the kyngdomes of all landes, when they had hearde that the Lorde fought agaynst the enemies of Israel. And so the realme of Jehosaphat was in tranquillite: for his God had geuen hym rest on euery syde.

3. Re. xlii. r. * And Jehosaphat reigned bpō Juda, and was. xxxv. yere olde whē he begāne to rapgne, and reigned. xxb. yere in Jerusalem. And his mothers name was Asuba the daughter of Shilhi. And he walked in the waye of Ala his father and bowed not therfro, to do that was pleasaunt in the syght of the Lorde. Howe be it, they put not downe the hillaulters, nether dyd the people yet prepare their hertes vnto the God of their fathers. The rest of the actes of Jehosaphat. fyrst and last, are wrytten in the workes of Jehu the sonne of Hanani, whiche noted them in the boke of the kynges of Israel.

After this, Jehosaphat kinge of Juda toynded him self with Ohoziah king of Israel, whiche was a wycked doer. And he coupled him selfe with him, to make shippes to go to Charis. And they made the shippes in Azion Gaber. And Eliezer the sonne of Dodanah of Mareta, prophesied agaynst Jehosaphat, saying: because thou hast toynded thy selfe with Ohoziah the Lorde hath broken thy workes. And the shippes were broken that they were not able to go to Charis.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Jehosaphat dyeth and Jehozab succedeth him which putteth to death his brethren, and is opprest of the Philistines, and dyeth of the dyr.

3. Re. xlii. g. Jehosaphat layde hym to rest with his fathers, and was buryed with his fathers in the cytie of David, and Jehozab his sonne reigned in his roume: whiche Jehozab had other brethren, sonnes of Jehosaphat: Asariah, Jehiel, zachariah, Asariah, Michael, and Sephattah. All these were p sonnes of Jehosaphat kinge of Juda. And theire father gaue the manye great giftes in siluer, golde and other precious thinges, with stronge cities in Juda: but p kinge, donē he gaue to Jehozab, because he was the eldest. And when Jehozab was bp vpon the kingdome of his father and setelde he * sue all his other brethren in the swerde, and diuerse of the lordes of Israel thereto. * Jehozab was. xxxii. yere olde whē he begāne to rapgne, and he reigned. viii. yere in Jerusalem. And he walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, like as dyd the house of Ahab (for a daughter of Ahab was his wife) and he wrought euell in the eyes of the Lorde. Howe be it, the Lorde wolde not destroye the house of David, because of the * covenānt that he had made with David, and as he promised to geue a lyght to him, and to his sonnes for euer.

* In his dayes the Edomites departed fro vnder the hāde of Juda, and made the a king. And Jehozab wēt forth with his lordes, and all his charettes to him, and rose by nyghte and layde on the Edomites. Which cōpassed him in, and p captaynes of his charettes. And so Edom departed fro vnder p hāde of Juda vnto this daye. That same time also did Lobnah departe from vnder his power, because he lefte the Lorde God of his fathers. Howeouer he made hillaulters in the mountaynes of Juda, and caused p inhabiteurs of Jerusalem to comit adultery, and he * thrust Juda out of the waye.

And ther came a wrytting to him fro Eliah p prophet of this tenoure. Thus sayth the lord God of David thy father: because thou walkest not in p wayes of Jehosaphat thy father, and in p wayes of Ala kyng of Juda, but walkedst in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, and hast made Juda and the dwellers of Jerusalem go a whozinge, like to the whozinge of p house of Ahab, and hast thereto slayne thy brethren, that were thy fathers house, which were better then thou: Therefore beholde, the Lorde wpll smyte the with a mightie plage in thy folke, in thy childre, in thy wyues, and in thy goodes. Jehoziah raygneth in the rowme of Jehoram, Jehu kyng of Israel killeth Ohoziah. Athaliah putteth to deeth all the kynges kynge, onely Joas escapeth.

And the * inhabiteurs of Ierusalem made Ohoziah his youngest sonne kyng in his stede. for the men of warre * that came with the Arabians in the hoste, had slayne all his elder sonnes. And so Ohoziah þ sonne of Jehozā kyng of Iuda, was made kyng. Two & fourtie yere olde was he when he begane to raigne, and raigned one yere in Ierusalem. His mothers name was Athaliah the daughter of Amri. And he walked also in the wayes of the house of Ahab, for his mother was his counseller for to do euell. Wherefore he dyd þ displeaseth þ Lorde, like to the house of Ahab: for they were his counselors after the deeth of his father, to his destruction. And he also walked after their counsell. And Jehozā sone of Ahab kyng of Israel wēt to fight with Hazael kyng of Siria at Ramoth i Gilead: & they of Ramoth wounded him. Wherefore he returned to be healed in Jezrael of the woundes which were geue him at Ramoth, whē he fought with Hazael kyng of Siria. And Ohoziah the sone of Jehoram kyng of Iuda went downe to se Jehoram the sonne of Ahab at Jezrael, because he was diseased. * for it was thrust in to Ohoziah of god to go to Jezoram, and that when he was come, he shoulde go out with Jehoram agaynst Jehu the sonne of Haini: whome the Lorde had annoynted to destrope the house of Ahab.

And as Jehu was executyng iustice

And he sought * Ohoziah, & they caught hym where he was hyd in Samaria, and brought hym to Jehu. And when they had slayne hi they buryed him: because (sayd they) he was the sonne of Jehosaphat, which sought the Lorde with all his hert. And there was none of the house of Ohoziah, that coulde obtayne to be kyng.

* For Athaliah þ mother of Ohoziah, whē she saw her sonne was deed, arose & destroyed all the seed of the kyngedome of the house of Iuda. But Jehosabeath the daughter of the kyng toke * Jehoas the sonne of Ohoziah and stalle hym fro amonge the kynges sonnes that were slayne, & put hym & his nource in a sleeping chābre. And so Jehosabeath the daughter of kyng Jehoram & wife of Jehoiada þ preste (because she was the wster of Ohoziah) hyd him from Athaliah, that she slue him not. And the Levites shall compass the kyng rounde aboute, and every man his wepon in his hande: and whatsoever other mā come into the house of the Lord, he shall dye for it: and they shall be with the kyng, as he cometh in and as he goeth out.

And the Levites & all Juda dyd in all thynges as Jehoiada the preste commaunded, & toke every mā his mē: bothe the that came in and the that went out the Saboth daye: for Jehoiada & preste dyd let none of the companies departe. And Jehoiada the preste delivred to the capitaynes of hundredes, speares & shildes, & bouclers that pertayned to kyng David, and were in the house of God. And Jehoiada the preste went out with the capitaynes of hundredes that were appoynted to governe the hoste, and sayde to them: haue her out without & arayes, & whatsoever foloweth her, let hym be slayne with the swerde. For the preste sayde: slep her not in the house of the Lord. And they layde handes on her, and when she was come out to the entreynge of the house, they slew her there.

him and all the people, and the kyng to be the Lordes people. And all the people went to the house of Baal, and destroyed it, and brake his alters & his ymages, and slew Athaliah the prest of Baal, before the alters. Jehoiada of the Levites to brynge in, out of Juda and Jerusalem, the summe apoynted by Moyses the servant of the Lord, and by the congregacion of Israel, for the tabernacle of witness. For wicked Achaziah and her chyldren had broken the house of God, & had thereto bestowed all the dedicat gyftes of y<sup>e</sup> house of the Lord, aboute Baals.

Wherfore at the kynges commaundement, they made a cofer, and set it at the gate of the house of the Lord: and made proclamacyon thorow Juda, and Jerusalem, to brynge in to the Lord the taxacyon of money that Moyses the servant of God, which he set vpon Israel in the wyldernes. And the Lordes and all the people reioyced, & brought in and cast in to y<sup>e</sup> cofer untill it was full. And whē the tyme came y<sup>e</sup> the chesse shoulde be brought in by the handes of the Levites at the apoyntement of the kyng, when they sawe that there was muche moneye: then came the kynges scrjbe, and one apoynted by the hye preste, and powred out that was in the cofer, and then toke it and carped it to his place agayne, & thus they dyd daye by daye, and gathered muche moneye.

And the kyng and Jehoiada gave it to workemen that wrought vpon the house of the Lord, and hyred Masons and carpenters to redresse the house of the Lord, and so dyd they artificers in yron and brasle, to repaire the house of the Lord. And the workemen wrought, and the worke mended thorow their handes: they made the house of God as it ought to be, and strengthened it. And whē they had fynished it, they brought the rest of the moneye to the kyng and Jehoiada, and therewith were made vessels for the house of the Lord: even vessels to minstre with all and to serve for burnsofferinges as labelles and vessels of golde and sylver. And they offered burnsofferinges in the house of the Lord continuallye, all the dayes of Jehoiada. And Jehoiada waxed olde, and full of yeres and dyed. An hundred and thirtie yere olde was he when he dyed. And they buryed him in the cite of David, among the kynges, because he had done good in Israel, and on God and on his house. And alter the deeth of Jehoiada, came the Lordes of Juda, and made obeyssaunce to the kyng. And then he hearkened vnto them. And so they lette the house of the Lord God of their fathers, and secured groves and Images. And then came there wrath vpon Juda and Jerusalem, for this their trespasses sake. Notwithstandynge yet God sent prophetes to them, to brynge them agayne vnto the Lord. And they testified vnto them. But they wolde not heare.

And the spirite of God came vpon zachariah, the sonne of Jehoiada the preste, and he stode vp above the people and sayde to the: Thus sayth God, why transgresse ye the commaundementes of the Lord: ye shall therfore not prosper, but as ye have forsaken him, so shall he forsake you. Wherupon they conspired agaynst him, and stoned him with stones, at the commaundement of the kyng: euē in the court of the house of the Lord. And so Jehoas the kyng remēbred not the kyndenes whiche Jehoiada his father had done to him, but slue his sone. And whē he dyed, he sayd: the Lord se and requyre a recompense.

And when the yere was out, the host of the Siries came agaynst him: they came to Juda and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the Lordes of the people fro amonge the people, & sent all the spoyle of them vnto the kyng to Damasco. And though the armpe of Siria came with a sinalle compaigne of men, yet the Lord delivered a very great hoste into their handes, because they had forsake the Lord God of their fathers. And thereto they setued Jehoas accordynge to his dedes.

And as sone as they were departed fro him, though they left him in great diseases: yet his owne & seruantes conspired agaynst him, for the bloude of the chyldre of Jehoiada the preste, and slue him on his heed. And when he was deed, they buryed him in the cite of David: but not in the sepulchres of the kynges. But there came a me of God to him, and sayde: O kyng, let not the armye of Israel go with the: for the Lord is not with Israel, nether with any of his house of Ephraim. Or elles yf thou needest wylt, then go and do it, and make thy selfe stronge to battell: & thou shalt see, & God shall make his fall before thine enemyes. for God hath power to helpe, or to cast downe. And Amaziah sayde agayne to the man of God, what shall we do then for the hundred talentes which I haue geue unto the hoche of Israel? And the man of God sayde: the Lord is able to geue the muche more then that.

And then Amaziah leuered the armye that was come to him out of Ephraim, to go haine agayn. Wherfore they were exceedinge wrothe with Iuda, and returned to their owne home in great angre.

And Amaziah toke herte & rayed out his host & went to saltedale: & with him slue of his chyldren of Seir ten thousand. And other ten thousande the chyldren of Iuda toke alyue, & carryed the vnto the toppe of a rocke, & cast the downe from the toppe of the rocke, & they al to burie: but the men of the armie whiche Amaziah had turned backe & wolde not let go with his people to battell, cane vnto the cities of Iuda from Samaria vnto Bethhoron and slue thre thousande of them and wanne muche spoyle.

And it chaunced, after that Amaziah was come fro the slaughter of his Edomites, & had brought the Gods of the chyldren of Seir, he set the vp to be his Gods, & bowed him selfe before them: & burned cense vnto the. Wherfore his lord was wroth with Amaziah, & sent to him a prophete, and sayde to him: why sekest thou his Gods of the people, which were not able to delpyer their owne people out of thynne handes? And as the prophete spake to him, he sayde to the prophete: haue men made the of the kynges counsell, cease, lest thou be beate. And the prophete ceased & sayde: I am sure that God hath taken counsell to destroye thee, because thou hast done this, & obeyest not my counsell.

Then Amaziah kyng of Iuda toke aduise & sent to Joas the sonne of Jehoahaz the sonne of Jehu kyng of Israel, & said: come, & let vs see ether other. And Joas kyng of Israel sent agayne to Amaziah kyng of Iuda, saying: a thyrell in Libanon sent to a Cedar tre in Libanon, saying: geue thy daughter to my sonne to wife. Now byde at home: what needeth the to prouoke to euell, that thou perishe and Iuda with the.

But Amaziah rested not: for it came of God, euen to delpyer the into the handes of their enemyes: and that because they had fought the Gods of the Edomites. And Joas kyng of Israel came vp: & they saw ether other, both he and Amaziah kyng of Iuda at Bethsamer in Iuda.

And there arose certayne appoynted therto by name, and toke the prisoners and clothed all that were naked among them, of the spoyle, and rayed them & showed them, and gaue them to eat and to drynke, and anoynted them, and caried all that were feble of them by on asses and brought them to Jericho, the ctye of palknetrees, fast by the brethzen: and then returned to Samaria agayne.

And at that same tyme kyng Ahaz sente vnto the kynges of Assur to haue helpe. And the Edomites came yet agayne and sue of Juda and caried awaye some captives. And the Philistines invaded the ctyes in the low coultre, and the southe of Juda: and toke Bethsames, Alalon, Gaderoth and Socoh with the towne longynge thereto, and Chinnah with the towne of the same, and Ganso with the towne, & dwelte therein. For the Lorde brought Juda lowe, because of Ahaz kyng of Juda, whiche made Juda naked, and traungreded agaynst the Lorde. And Pulgath palmer kyng of Assur came by on him & beseged hym, but preuailed not agaynst hym. For Ahaz toke away a porcion out of the house of the Lorde & out of the kynges house and out of the Lordes houses, & gaue vnto the kyng of Assur, though it holpe him not. And therto in the very tyme of his tribulacion byd kyng Ahaz trespase yet more agaynst the Lorde, for he offered vnto the Gods of them of Damasco which bette hym and sayde, because the Gods of Syria healpe them, therefore wyl I offer to the, that they may helpe me also. But they were bys destruction, & the destruction of all Israel. And Ahaz gathered together the vessels of the house of God, and brake them, and shute by the doores of the house of the Lorde, and made him aulter in all cornets of Jerusalem. And in all the ctyes of Juda, ctye by ctye he made hylaulter to burne incense vnto other gods, and augmented the Lorde God of his fathers. The reste of his actes & all his wayes bothe fyrst and laste: are wyrtten in the booke of the kynges of Juda and Israel. And when Ahaz was layde to reste with his fathers, they buried hym in the ctye of Jerusalem: but broughte him not vnto the sepulchres of the kynges of Juda. And Hezekiah his sonne raygned in his steade.

The xxix. Chapter.

Hezekiah rejoyced vnto the temple of the Lorde all the thynges that had not bene regarded of his predecessors.

Hezekiah beganne to raygne when he was. xxv. yere olde, and raygned. xxix. yere in Jerusalem. And his mothers name was Abiah, the daughter of Zachariah. And he dyd that was ryghte in the syghte of the Lorde, in all poyntes, as dyd Dauid his father. He opened the doores of the house of the Lorde in the fyrste yere and fyrste moneth of his raygne, and he repayred the altars, and gathered them together in to the Calvary: and sayde vnto them.

Heare me ye Leuites: purifie youre selues and halow the house of the Lord God of your fathers, and byng out the fylthynesse oute of the holpe place. For

oure fathers haue trespassed and done euell fauoured by in the eyes of the Lord oure God: and haue forsaken hym, and turned away theyr faces from the habitation of the Lord & turned to theyr backs. And besyde that they haue shut vp the doores of the porche, and quenched the lampes, and haue neyther burned cense nor offered burnt offerings in the holpe place vnto the God of Israel.

Wherefore the wrath of the Lord fell on Iuda, & Ierusalem: and he skattered them & made them so thynne that men hitte at it, euen as ye se wth your eyes. For se, oure fathers were ouerthrowen wth the swerde, and our sonnes, our daughters, and our wiues were carryed away captiue for the same cause. Nowe haue I in my hearte to styke a couenaunte with the Lord God of Israel: that his wrath maye cease. Nowe therefore my sonnes be not negligent: for the Lord hath chosen you to stande before him, and for to mynistrer and burne offerings to hym.

Then the Levites arose: Mahath the sonne of Amasai and Joel the sonne of Matathai beyng of the chyldren of the Gadathites: and the sonnes of Merari, his the sonne of Abi, and Asariah the sonne of Jehaleleel: and of the Gersonites, Joah the sonne of Simma, and Eden the sonne of Joah and of the sonnes of Elizaphan, Shimri, and Jeiel: and of the sonnes of Asaph, Zachariah and Matthanah: and of the sonnes of Heman, Jehiell and Semel: and of the sonnes of Jeduthun, Sematah and Oziel. And they gathered theyr brethren and purged them selues, and then wente at the commaundemente of the kynge by the worde of the Lord, for to cense the house of the Lord. And the preestes wente in to the house of the Lord to cense it, and brought out al the butlerie that they founde in the temple of the Lord, and in the courte of the house of the Lord. And the Levites toke it and caried it oute in to the broke Cedron. They beganne the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth to purgyn, and came the eyght daye to the porch of the Lord: so that they had purged the house of the Lord in eyght dayes and the xvi. daye of the

And then they wente in to Hezek the kynge, and sayde: we haue censed all the house of the Lord, and the altar of burnt offerings wth al his vessels, and the shewbread table wth al hys apparel: and thereto all the vessels which kynge Ahaz dyd caste a syde when he raygned, and transgressed, the we haue repayed and sanctified: and se, they are before the altar of the Lord. And Hezekiah the kynge rose erly, and gathered the Lordes of the cytye and wente by to the house of the Lord. And there were broughte seven oxen, seven rammes, seven lambs and seven kyddes to be a synne offering for the kinge, doine, for the sanctuarie and for Iuda. And he commaunded the preestes, the sonnes of Aaron to offer them on the altar of the Lord.

And they slue the oxen: and the preestes receaued the bloude and spynkled it on the altar: and they slue the rammes and spynkled the bloud vpon the altar: and they slue the lambs and spynkled the bloude vpon the altar. And then they broughte forth the kyddes of the synne offering before the kynge and the congregation, whiche put theyr handes vpon them. And the preestes slue the, and offered the bloude of them vpon the altar, to make satisfaction for all Israel: for the kynge sayde: that the burnt offering and the synne offering shoulde serue for all Israel. And they set the Levites in the house of the Lord wthymbales, psalteries and harpes: accordyng to the commaundement of Dauid, and of Gad the kynge's sear of visions, and of Asa than the prophete. For so was the commaundemente of the Lord, thow the hande of his prophetes. And to the Levites stode with the instrumentes of Dauid, and the preestes with trumpettes. And Hezekiah commaunded each ser the burnt offering vpon the altar. And when the burnt offering beganne, the sange of the Lord beganne, and the trumpettes with the instrumentes of Dauid kynge of Israel. And all the congregation bowed them selues, and the syngers sange, and the trumpettes blew, and continued buttill the burnt offering

And when they had made an ende of the burnt offeringe, the kynge and all that were with hym kneeled downe and bowed them selues, and gaue prayse & thanckes. And Hezekiah the kynge and the lordes bade the Leuites to prayse the Lord with the wordes of Dauid and of Asaph the sear of byspons. And the Leuites prayled that they reioyced agayne, and the other stowed and bowed them selues.

¶ And Hezekiah answered and sayde: nowe that ye haue fylled youre handes to the Lord, go to and bynge in the sacrifices and thankoffringes into the house of the Lord. And the congregacion broughte in the sacrifices and thankoffringes, and all that were willinge brought burntoffringes. And the numbre of the burntoffringes whiche the congregacion broughte in was. lxx. oxen and an hundred rammes and two hundred lammes: and all for burnt offerings to the Lord. And besyde that they dedprated syxe hundred oxen and thye thousande shepe.

But the preestes wer to few, & were not able to slepe al the burntoffringes. Wherfore they brethren the Leuites holpe them tyll the worke was ended, and hntyll the preestes were sanctified for the Leuites were purer herted to sanctifye them selues then the preestes. And thereto the burntofferings were manye with the fat of the peaceofferings, and the drinkeofferings that belonged to the burntofferings. And so he sekurce pertaynyng to the house of the Lord wente forwarde. And Hezekiah reioyced and all the people, that God had made the folke so ready: for the thyng was sodenly done.

And Hezekiah sent to all Israel & Iuda: therto wrote letters to Ephraim & Manasseh, & they should come to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem, to offer passeouer vnto the Lord God of Israel. And the kynge helde a counsell with his lordes and al the congregacion at Jerusalem to kepe the feaste of passeouer in the seconde moneth. for they coulde not kepe it at that tyme: for there were not preestes ynowe sanctified, nether was the people gathered together to Jerusalem. And the thyng pleased the kynge and all the congregacion. And they decreed that it should be proclaimed thowowe oute all Israel from Bersabe to Dan, that they should come and holde the feaste of passeouer vnto the Lord God of Israel, at Jerusalem: for they had not often done it, as it is wyrtten how they should.

And the messengers wente with letters of the hande of the kynge and of his lordes thowow oute all Israel and Iuda, at the commaundement of the king, whiche sayde: ye chyldren of Israel, turne agayne vnto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel, and so wyll he turne to the remnaunte of you that are escaped oute of the handes of the kynge of Assur. And bee ye not lyke youre fathers and youre brethren whiche trespassed agaynst the Lord of youre fathers, whiche therfore gaue them vp that they are wasted as ye se. Wherfore be not styffnecked lyke vnto youre fathers, but yelde your selues vnto the Lord, and come to hys holpe place whiche he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the Lord your God, that hys wrath maye turne frome you. For yf ye turne vnto the Lord, then youre brethren and youre chyldren shal fynde compassion in the presence of the that holde them captiue, that they may come agayne vnto thys lande: for the * Lord your God is full of mercye and compassion, and wyll not turne his face frome you, yf ye turne agayne to hym.

And the postes wente from cytpe to cytpe thowow out the land of Ephraim and Manasseh, and euen vnto Zabulo. But they laughed them to skorne and mocked them. Neuerthelesse yet diuerse of Asser, Manasseh and of Zabulon mekened them selues and came to Jerusalem. And thereto the hande of God was in Iuda, to make them of one accord to do the commaundement of the kynge and the capitaynes, whiche was accordynge to the worde of the Lord. C And they arose and put a waye the *alters that were in Ierusalem. And thereto all the incense they dyd awaye and caste them into the broke Cedron. And they slue passeouer þe fourtene daye of the seconde monethe. And the pree-ues for shame, and brought in þe burntofferynges into the house of the Lorde.

And they stode in theyr standynge as ter theyr maner accordynge to the lawe of Moyses the manne of God. And the preestes sprynckled the bloude receauyng it of the handes of the Leuites.
And because there were many in the cogregacion that wer not sanctified: and therfore dyd the Leuites sle passeouer for all that were not cleane, to sanctify them to the Lorde.

There was very muche people oute of Ephraim, Manasseh, Issakar and Za-bulon that were not cleane, and yet dyd eate passeouer otherwysse then wytyng specyfeth. But Hezekiah prayed for them, and sayd: the good Lorde be mercyfull to all that set theyr hertes to seke the God that is the Lorde God of their fathers, though they do it not accor-dyng to the clenness of the holy place.

D And the Lorde heard Hezekiah and healed the people. And so the chyldren of Israell that were found at Ierusalem, held the feast of swete breade seven day-es with great gladnesse and the Leui-tes and the preestes praysed the Lorde daye by day with lowde instrumentes.

And Hezekiah spake hartely vnto the Leuites that had good vnderstandyng of the Lorde. And they dyd eate that feaste seven dayes longe and offered peaceofferynges and thanked the Lorde God of theyr fathers. And the hole assemble toke counsell to kepe seuen dayes moore: and they held those seuen dayes with gladnesse. For * Hezeki-heaueofferynges a thousand open & ten thousand shepe. And the preestes sanctified them selues, that they wer ynow.

And all the congregacion of Iuda with the preestes and Leuites, and all the congregacion that came oute of Israell and the straungers, both that came oute of the lande of Israell and that dwelt in Iuda, reioysed: and there was great ioye in Ierusalem. For sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng of Israell, it happened not so in Ierusalem. And the preestes and the Leuites arose, and blessed the people, & theyr voyce was heard of the Lorde, and theyr prayer wente by vnto hys holpe dwellyng place heauen.

The xxxi. Chapter.

C After Hezekiah had called againe the people vnto the way of the Lorde, he ordeyned the preestes, vnto whom he commaunded to geue tythes.

And when they had finished all thys: then al Israel that were founde in the cyties of Iuda, went oute and brake * the images and cut downe
the groues, and al to brake the hylauters and the other alters thorow oute all Iuda and Benjamin, Ephraim and Manasseh, vntill they had made an end of them. And afterwarde al the chyldren of Israell returned euerye man to his possession in theyr owne cyties.

And Hezekiah set the preestes and the Leuites in theyr ordre to waite by course, euery man accordynge to his offyce, whither preeste or Leuite: for the burntofferynges and peaceofferynges, and to mynistr, and to thanke and to praye in the gates of the lodge of the Lorde. And the kynge gaue a porcion of his substance for burntofferynges at moynyng and euen, and for burntofferynges on the Sabothe dayes, and new mones, and other solemne feastes, accordynge * as it is wytten in the law of the Lorde. And he bade the people that dwelte in Ierusalem, to geue the parte of the preestes and Leuites, that they myght be mayntened in the law of the Lorde. And as sone as the word came abroad the chyldren of Israell brought aboundaunce of spise frutes of corne, wyne, oyle and honye, and of all maner of frutes of the feld: and the tythes of al maner of thynges brought they in plenteously. And the chyldren at Iſraell and Iuda that dwelte in the cities of Iuda, they also brought in tythes of oren and ſhepe, and tythes of dedicate thinges which were dedicated to the Lord their god, & put them on heapes. In the thyrd moneth they beganne to laye the heapes, and ſynſhed them the ſeuenth moneth.

And when Hezekiah and the Lordes came and ſaw þ heapes, they bleſſed the Lord and his people Iſraell. And Hezekiah queſtioned with the preeſtes and the Leuites, concernynge the heapes. And Azariah the cheſe preeſt of þ houſe of ſadock answered him and ſayd: ſence they beganne to bring the heaueoffringes into the houſe of the Lord, we haue eaten and had pynoghe, and yet leſte aboundaunce, for the Lord hath bleſſed hys people and therof is thys heape leſte. And Hezekiah hade dreſſe by the ſore houſes aboute the houſe of the Lord. And ſo dyd, and carped in the heaueoffringes and the tythes and the dedycat gyftes euen of Iſdelpte.

ouer whiche Chonaniah the Leuit had the rule with Semei hys brother nexte to hym. And Jehiel, Azariah, Nabath, Maell, Jerimoth, Joſabad, Eliell, Jeſinachiah, Mahath and Bananiah were ouerſeats ordeyned by Chonaniah and Semei hys brother, at the appointiment of Hezekiah the kynge, and Azariah the ruler of the houſe of God. And Choze the ſonne of Iemima the Leuit porter of the Ceſt doze, had the ouerſight of the ſtrewwylofferynges of God, to geue heaueoffringes vnto the Lord, and was ouer thinges moſte holy. And vnder hym were Eden, Gintamin, Jeſua, Semeiah, Amariah and Secheiah in the cyties of the preeſtes of thyr Iſdelpte, to geue to theyr brethre thyr porcions, as well to the ſmall as to the great.

And to the males also that were returned from thyr pere and aboue, (amonge all that wente into the houſe of the Lord) they ſhould geue day by day, to ſubiſtence and wyfte by couſte. And to the preeſtes that were rekened in the bondholders of their fathers from twen ty petyr aboue, to wyfte when thyr countes came. And to them that were returned thowme oute all thyr bythes, wyues, ſonnes and daughters thowme oute all the congregatecion. For to the ſydelytie of them dyd men comynge they ſanctified gyftes. And therto amonge theyr chyldzen of Aaron the preeſtes were men named by name in the ſeldes of the ſuburbes of all theyr cyties, cytie by cytie, (the men whoſe names wer expreſſed afore) for to geue porcions to all the males of the preeſtes, and to all that were rekened amonge the Leuites.

And of thys maner dyd Hezekiah thowme oute all Iuda, and dyd that was good, right and truthe, before the Lord his God. And in all the workes that he began in the ſeruice of the houſe of god, to ſeke his God after the law and commaundement, that dyd he wpth all hys herte, and prospered.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Sennaherib, whiche ſhould haue beſeged Ieruſalem is ſtephen of the ſungell. Hezekiah dyeth after whome ſucceedeth Manaheth.

After theſe dedes and truthe, Sennaherib kynge of Aſſur came and entred * in to Iuda and pyched agaynſte the ſtrong cyties and thought to drawe them to hym. And when Hezekiah ſawe that Sennaherib was come, and that he was purpoſed to fyghte agaynſte Ieruſalem: he toke counsell with hys capitaynes & men of myght, to ſtop the water of the fountaines that were without the ctye: & they were content to helpe hym. And ſo there gathered much people together and ſtopte all the welles, and the broke that ran thowme to the myddes of the lande, entending that the kyges of Aſſur ſhould not finde inuche water when they came. And he went to luſtelye and builde by the walle whete it was broken, and made towres aboue vpon, and yet another walle without, and repayred Belo the ctye of Dauid, and made manye dartes and ſpyloes.

And he ſet Capitaynes of war ouer the people and gathered them to gethes into þ large ſtreete of the gate of þ ctye & ſpake ſentely to them, ſaying. But with vs is the Lorde our God wer at Jerusalem, saying: Thus saythe Sennacherib kynge of Assur: * where in do ye trust, O ye & are beseged in Jeruvpon that offer also.

Moreover haue ye not hearde what I and my fathers haue done vnto the of al the Gods of those nacions (that my fathers destroyed) was it, that could de-liuer his people out of myne hand, that your God should be able to deliuer you out of myne hande: wherfore now let not Hezekiah deceaue you eyther per-swade you of this sayd, nor yet beleue hym. for as no God amonge so manye nacions and kyngdomes, was able to rydde hys people out of mine hand, and the handes of my fathers: euen so much lesse shall your God kepe you oute of myne hande. And yet more dyd hys seruauntes speake agaynst the Lorde God and agaynst hys seruaunt Hezekiah. And therto he wrot a letter to calle on the Lord God of Irael and spake therin, saying: as the Gods of the nac-ions of other landes haue not deliuered theyr people out of myne hand, no more shall the God of Hezekiah deliuer hys people out of myne hande. And they cried wyth a lowde voyce in the Iewes that were on the walles, to feare them, and to dysmaye them, that they myght gainst the god of Ierusalem, as agaynst which are & worke of the handes of me.

But Hezekiah the kynge and the prophet Ilaiah sonne of Amoz prayed con-heauen. And the Lorde sent an angell & destroyed all the men of warre and the Lordes and capitaynes of the hoste of the kynge of Assur, & he turned his face wth shame towarde his owne land. * And when he was come into the house of his God, he was there ouerthrowen wth the hys bowelles. And so the Lorde saued Hezekiah and the enhabytters at Jerusalem out of the hādes of Sennacherib kynge of Assur, and of all other, & main-teyned them on all sides. In so muche that manye brought presentes vnto the Lord to Ierusalem and precious gif-tes to Hezekiah kynge of Iuda: so that he was magnified in the syght of al na-cions from thence forth.

* In those dayes Hezekiah was sicke vnto the death, and besought the Lord:
which answered him, and shewed him a wonderfull myracle: But Hezekiah did not accordyng to the curtel shewd hi, for his herte arose: and therefore came there wrathe vpon hym and vpon Juda and Ierusalem. Not withstandinge Hezekiah mekened him self for the arryng of hys herte, both he and the enhabiters of Ierusalē. Wherfore the wrath of the Lorde fell not vpon them in the dayes of Hezekiah.

And Hezekiah had exceeding much richeffe and honoure. And he gathered him treasure of syluer, golde, precious stones, spices, mylles and of all maner

God had geuen hym substance excea-ped & vpper water springes of Ierou-salem and brought them downe to the citty syde of the citty of Dauid. And Hezekiah prospered in all hys workes. But when the Ambassadors of the Lorde of Babylon wer sente to hym to en-

The rest of the dedes of Hezekiah and his goodnesse: are wyrtten in the vislon of Iſaiah the prophete the sonne of Amos in the boke of the kynges of Iuda and Iſrael. And then Hezekiah laid him to rest with his fathers, and they buryed him in the best sepulchre of the sonnes of Dauid: and all Iuda and the enhabiters of Ierusalem dyd hym worship at his death. And Manasseh his sonne raygned in his steade.

The. xxxiii. Chapter.

And he buylte aulters in the house of the Lorde: Of whiche the Lorde had said: * in Ierusalem shall my name be for euer. And he put the kerued Image of an Idole whiche he made, in the house of God. Of which house God said to Dauid and to Salomon his sonne: in this house here in Ierusalem which I haue chosen oute of all the tribes, * I will put my name for euer, and no more bring the seate of Iſrael frō of the lāde which I haue ordeyned for your fathers: It to be they shal be diligēt to do al I haue commaunded by Moyses in all the lawe ordynaunces and maners. But Manasseh made Iuda and the enhabiters of Ierusalem to erre, and to do worse then the heathen whiche the Lorde destroyed before the chyldren of Iſrael. And when the Lorde spake to Manasseh and to his people, they attended not to hym.

Wherfore the Lorde broughte vpon them the Captraynes of the hoste of the Kyng of Assur, whiche toke Manasseh in an holde, and bounde him with chaynes, and carped him to Babilon. And whē he was in tribulaciō, he besought the Lorde hys God, and humbled hym selfe excedyngly before the God of his fathers, and made intercession to hym: and he was entreated of hym, & hearde hys prayer, and broughte hym agayne to Ierusalem into hys kyngedome. And then Manasseh knewe howe that the Lorde was the very God.

After that he buylte a wall without the cytye of Dauid, on the west syde of Gihon in the broke and so forth to the sythe gate and rounde aboute * Ophel and broughte it vp of a verye greate heygth, and put captaynes of warre in all the stronge cytyes of Iuda. And he toke awaye straunge Gods and the Idoles oute of the house of God, and all * the aulters that he had buylte in the mounte of the house of God, and in Ierusalem, and cast them oute of the citie. And he made an aulter vnto the Lorde, and sacrificed thereon peace offeringes, and thanke offerynges, & charged Iuda to serue the Lorde God of Iſrael. Neuerthelesse, the people dyd offer styll in the hylaulters, howe be it vnto the Lorde they God onely.

The rest of þ actes of Manasseh, and hys prayer vnto his God, and þ wordes of the sears of vislōs that spake to him in the name of the Lord God of Iſrael, are wyrtten amonge the deades of the kynges of Iſrael. And his prayer, and howe that he was hearde, and all hys synne and trespase, and þ places where he made hylaulters, and set vp groues and kerued Images (before he was inkened) are wyrtten amonge the deades of the sears of vislōs. And when Manasseh was layde to rest with hys fathers, they buryed hym in hys owne house: and Amos hys sonne raygned in hys towne. Amos was. xxi. yere olde, when he beganne to raygne, and raygned two yere in Ierusalem.

And he dyd that dyspleased the Lorde, like vnto Manasseh his father, for Amō sacrificed to all the kered Images, whiche Manasseh his father made, and serued them, and mekened not him selfe before the Lorde, as Manasseh hys father had mekened him selfe: But Amō trespassed greatlie. wherfore his owne seruauntes conspired against him, & slue him in his owne house. And þe people of the lande slue all that had conspired against king Amō. And therto the people of the lande made Josiah his sonne kynge in his rowme.

4. re. xiii. a

Josiah* was made kyng when he was. viii. yere olde, and he raygned in Ierusalē. xxi. yere. And he dyd that pleased the Lorde, and walked in the wayes of Dauid his father, bowynge nether to the ryght hande or to the lefte. In so muche that the eyght yere of his raygne, (when he was yet a lad,) he beganne to seke after the God of Dauid his father. And in the twelue yere he beganne to pource Iuda and Ierusalem of hylaulters, groues, kerued ymagēs, and Images of metal: so that they brake downe the aulters of Baals, euē in his presence, and þe ydoles that were vpon them, he caused to be destroyed. And the groues, kerued Images, and Images of metal he brake, and made dust of thē, and strawed it vpon þe graues of thē that had offered to thē. And he burnt the bones of the priestes vpon the aulters, and censed Iuda & Ierusalem. And euen so dyd he in the cytyes of Manasseh, Ephraim, Simeon, & of Asephthali therto. And in the wyldernes of them rounde about he plucked a sondre the aulters & the groues & dyd beate them and stampe them to powdre, and bete downe the ydoles thozowe out all the lande of Israel: & then returned to Ierusalem agayne.

4. re. 22. a

And in the. xvi. yere of his raigne, when he had purged the lande, & the temple, he sent Saphan the sonne of Azariah, and Maasiah þe gouernoure of the cytie, and Joab the sonne of Joabaz the recorder, to repayre the house of þe Lorde his God. And when they came to Helkiah the hye priest, men deliuered the money þe was brought in to þe house of God, which the Leuites þe kept þe enteries, had gathered of þe handys of Manasseh, & Ephraim, & of all þe yet remayned in Israel, & of al Iuda & Benjamin, & of the enhabitors of Ierusalem. And they put it in þe handys of þe worckemen þe had the ouersyght of þe house of þe Lorde, which gaue it to the labourers þe wrought on the house of þe Lorde, to repayre & mede it, and to masons and carpeters to hew hewed stone, & tymbre for to make couples and beames for the houses which the kynges of Iuda had destroyed: And the mē wrought in þe worcke of fidelite.

And the ouer sears of thē to courage them forwarde, were Jahath & Obadiah Leuites, of þe childre of Merari: and Secharia, and Belsulam, of þe children of the Cahathites, and as manye other of þe Leuites: as coude skille of instrumentes of Musick. And ouer þe beacers of burthens, and ouer al that wrought in whatsoeuer worckemanship it were, were there scribes, officers, and porters of the Leuites.

And as they brought out the money that was brought into the house, Helkiah the priest* founde the boke of the lawe of the Lorde geuen by Moles. And Helkiah answered and said to Saphan the scribe: I haue founde the boke of the lawe in the house of the Lorde, and gaue the boke to Saphan. And Saphan caried the boke to the kyng, and broughte the kyng worde agayne, saying: al that was committed to thy seruauntes, chat do they. And they haue poyred oute the money that was founde in the house of the Lorde, and haue deliuered into the handes of the ouer sears of the worckemen. And then Saphan the scribe shewed the kyng, saying: Helkiah þe priest hath geuen me a boke, and he reade it before the kyng.

And when the kyng had hearde the wordes of the lawe, he tare his clothes, and commaunded Helkiah & Ahikah the sonne of Saphan, and Abadō the sonne of Micah, and the sayde Saphan the scribe and Aiaia a seruaunt of þe kynges, sayinge: go & enquire of the Lorde for me and for them that are lefte in Israel and Juda, concernynge the wordes of the boke that is founde. For greate is the wrathe of the Lorde that is fallen vpon vs, because oure fathers kept not the worde of the Lorde, to do after all that is wytten in this boke.

And Helkiah with them that pertayned to the kynge went to Holdah a prophetesse, wyfe of Selum the sonne of Chekiah, the sonne of Hasarah kepet of s wardope (which prophetesse dwelt in Jerusalem in the seconde warde) and they comuned so with her. And she sayd vnto them: thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, tel ye the man that sente you to me. Euen thus sayeth the Lorde: se, I wil bynge euer vpon this place, & vpon the enhabiteres therof, (euē al s cursses that are wytten in the boke which they haue reade before the kynge of Juda) because they haue forsaken me, & haue offered vnto other gods, to angre me w all maner worckes of theyr hād, therefore is my wrathe set on fyre agāst this place, and shall not be quenched.

And as for the kynge of Juda which sent you to enqurye of the Lorde, so shall ye saie vnto him: thus sayeth s Lorde God of Israel, concernynge the wordes whiche thou hast hearde. Because thine hert dyd melt, and thou dydest meke thy selfe before god, whē thou heardest his wordes agāst this place and agāst the enhabiteres therof; and humbledest thy selfe before me, & tarest thy clothes, and wepest before me, s haue I hearde also sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, I wyl take the to thy fathers, and thou shalt be put in thy graue in peace, and thine eyes shall not se all the myscheue that I wyl bynge vpon this place, and vpon the enhabiteres of the same. * And they brought the kyng worde againe. Then the kyng sent and gathered together all the elders of Juda and Jerusalem. And the kyng went by in to the house of the Lorde, & all the men of Juda, & the enhabiteres of Jerusalem, & the priestes and Leuites, and all the people greate and smalle: and reade all the wordes of the boke of the couenaunte that was founde in the house of the Lorde. And the kyng stode at his stādyng, and made a couenaunte before the Lorde, to folowe the Lorde, and to kepe his commaundementes, his wytnesses, & his statutes, with all his herte, and w al his soule, and to fulfyll the wordes of the appoyntment wytten in the said boke.

And he made to come for the all that were founde in Jerusalem, & Bēsamīn, and the enhabiteres of Jerusalem promysed to kepe the couenaunte of s God which was the God of their fathers. And Josiah put away al maner of abominacions out of al landes s pertained to the childrē of Israel, and brought all that were founde in Israel, to serue the Lord their god. And they turned not a syde from after the Lord God of their fathers, as long as he lyued.

The. cxxv. Chapter.

Josiah holdeth passeouer. He syghet agāst the kynge of Egypt, and dyeth. The people bewaile hym.

And Josiah helde the feast of passeouer vnto s Lorde in Jerusalem, and they slue passeouer in the. xliiij. daye of s fyrst moneth. And he set the priestes in theyr offices, and ayded them in the seruice of the house of the Lorde. And he sayde to the Leuites (that taught thorow out al Israel and were sanctified vnto s lord:) put the holy arcke in the house whiche Salomon the sonne of Dauid kyng of Israel dyd buylde, ye shall beate it no more vpon your shoulders. wherfore nowe serue the Lorde your God & bys people Israel. And prepare your selues by your auncient householdes and companyes, accordynge to the wytyng of Dauid kyng of Israel, and the wytyng of Salomon his sonne. And stāde in the holy place accordynge to the deuysions of the auncyente householdes of your brethren the childzen of s people, and after the deuysion of the auncient householdes of s Leuites: and kyll passeouer, sanctifye and prepare your brethren, that they maye do accordynge to the worde of the Lorde by the hands of Moyses.

And Josiah gaue to the comen people in lambes and kiddes, for passeouer offeringes onely, vnto al that were present. xxx. thousand by tale, & thre thousand oxē, euen of the kīnges substance. And his lordes gaue wythynge both

And so the seruice went forwarde: and the priests stode in their places, & the Levites in their copanies, at the hynges commaundemente. And they slue passeouer: & the priests sprynckled the bloude receauynge it of the Levites, and the Levites strypte the beastes. And they set awaye the burne offerpuges, to geue them vnto the comen people as they were deuyned by auncient houses, for to offer vnto the Lorde, lyke as it is wyrtten in the boke of Moyses. And so dyd they wth the oxen to. And they dresed the passeouer with fyre as the maner was. But the other halowed dedycate beastes they sodde in pottes, cauldres, and pannes, and deuyned them quykly amonge all the comen people. And afterwarde they made readye for the selues and for the priests: & for the chyliden of Aaron, which were busied in offeringe of burne offeringes, and the fat vntyll night. And therfore the Levites prepared for them selues, and for the priests the sonnes of Aaron. And the syngers the chyliden of Asaph stode in their stades, accordyng to the commaundement of Dauid, and Asaph, Heman & Jotham the kynges sear of viscons: & the porters wayted at euery gate, and myghte not departe from their seruice: But their brethzen the Levites prepared for the. And so all the seruice of the Lord went forwarde the sayde daye in offerynge passeouer of burne offerpuges vpon the aulter of the Lord, accordyng to the commaundement of kyng Joliah.

And so the chyliden of Israel that coulde be founde, offered passeouer the same tyme, and kepte the feast of swete breade seven dayes. And there was no passeouer lyke to that, kepte in Israell from the tyme of Samuel the prophete: ne,

After all this, when Joliah had syned the temple, Necho kyng of Egypt came vnto fight agaynst Eartanis vpon Euphrates, and Joliah went out agaynst him. And when he was come to fight in the vale of Magado, the shoters shotte agaynst the kyng Joliah. And the kyng sayde to his seruantes: carpe me awaye, for I am soze hurte. And his seruantes had him out of the charret, and put hym in a nother, and broughte him to Jerusalem where he dyed, and was buried in the sepulchre of his fathers. And all Iuda and Jerusalem mourned for Joliah. And Jeremiah lamented Joliah, and all syngynge men & syngynge women speake of Joliah to this daye, and made it an ordynauce in Israel: they be wyrtten in lamentacions. The rest of the actes of Joliah and of his goodnes whiche he dyd in folowynge the wyrtynge of the lawe of the lord, and his deades fyrste and laste are wyrtten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Iuda.

metred the lande in an hundred talentes of silver, and a talent of golde. And the kynge of Egypte made Eliakim hys brother, kyng vpon Juda and Ierusalem, and turned his name vnto Jehoahaz: & Necho toke Jehoahaz his brother and caried him to Egypt. And Jehoahaz was .xxv. yere olde when he beganne to raygne, and he raygned .xi. yere in Ierusalem: and he dyd that displeased the Lord his god. Against him came Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, and bounde him in fetters to carie hym to Babilon. Therto the kyng Nabuchodonosor caried of the vessels of the house of the Lorde to Babilon, and put them in his temple at Babilo. The rest of the actes of Jehoahaz, and hys abominacions, which he dyd and charged, are wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda: & Jehoahaz in his sonne raigned in his steade. Jehoahaz was .xiii. yere olde when he beganne to raygne, and he raygned thre monethes and ten dayes in Ierusalem: and dyd that displeased the Lorde. And when the yere was oute, kyng Nabuchodonosor sent and fet him to Babilo with the goodlye vessels of the house of the Lorde, & made zedekiah his fathers brother kyng ouer Juda & Ierusalem. And zedekiah was .xxi. yere olde when he beganne to raygne, and raygned .xi. yere in Ierusalem. And he dyd & displeased the Lord his God, and humbled not himselfe before Jeremiah the prophete at the mouth of the Lorde. And therto he rebelled against Nabuchodonosor whiche had receaued an othe of hym by God, and was to styfe necked & to harde hearted to turne vnto the Lorde God of Israel. Therto all the rulers of priests, with the people trespassed a pace, after all maner of abominacions of the heethen, and polluted the house of the Lorde whiche he had halowed in Ierusalem.

And the Lord God of the fathers sent to the, by his messengers, sendinge them be tymes: for he had compassio on his people, and on his dwellynge place. But they mocked his messengers of God, and despised their wordes, and sayde vsed his prophetes, vntyll the wrath of the Lord so arose agaynst his people, & it was past remedy. And so he brought vpon them the kynge of Caldey, & theye theye younge me, in the swerde in their holy temple, and nether spared younge man nor mayde, nether olde man, nether so muche as him that stomped for age: But gaue al into his hande.

And al the vessels of the house of god (bothe great & small,) and the treasures of the house of God, & the treasures of the kyng, and his lordes, he caried to Babilon euery whit. And they burnt the house of God, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem, and burnt all the palaces therof with fyre, & al the goodly stooffe therof, and marred it. And he caried awaye them that had escaped the swerde, to Babilo, where they were seruauntes to him and his children, vntill the kyngdome of Persia beganne to rule, to fulfill the worde of the Lorde by the mouth of Jeremiah, vntill the lande had her pleasure of her Sabothes: for as longe as she laye desolate, she kept Saboth, vntill she had fulfilled. lxx. yeres.

And the first yere of Cyrus kyng of Persia to fynishe the worde of the Lorde by the mouth of Jeremiah, the Lorde spured by the spirit of Cyrus kyng of Persia, & he made a proclamacion thoutome out all his kyngdome, and therto set it by in writig, saying: Thus saith Cyrus kyng of Persia: al kyngdomes of the erthe hathe the Lorde God of heauen geuen me, which hath charged me to buylde hym an house in Ierusalem, that is in the lande of Juda. wherfore, whosoever is amonge you of al his people, the Lorde his God be with him, and let him go by.

The children of Malaiash, the children of Tobiah, the children of Aecoda, fyve hundred and two and fyfte. And of the children of the priestes, the children of Hobaiash, the childre of Hakoz, the children of Berzilai, which took one of the daughters of Berzilai the Gileadite to wyfe, and was counted amonge the same names: these soughte the regystrer of their byrthe, and founde none, therfore were they put from the priesthode. And Hathirsatha sayd vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the most holy, til there rose vp a priest with the lyght and perfectnesse.

The whole congregacion as one man, was two and fourty thousande, thre hundred and thre scoze: beside their seruauntes and maydens, of whome there were seven thousande, thre hundred and seven and thirtie. And they had two hundred syngynge men and women, seven hundred and fyve & thirtie horses, two hundred and fyve and fourtie mules, foure hundred and fyve and thirtie Camels, and fyve thousande, seven hundred and twentye asses. And certayne of the chiefe fathers, when they came to the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem, they offered wyllynglye vnto the house of God, that it shoulde be set in his place, and gaue after their abylte vnto the treasure of the worcke, one & thre scoze thousande drammes, and fyve thousande pounde of syluer, and an hundred priestes garments. So the priestes and the Leuites, and certayne of the people and the syngers, and the porters, and the Aethinims dwelte in theyr cyties, and all Israel in their cyties.

AND when the seventh moneth came, and the chyldren of Israel were now in their citles, the people came together euē as one man, vnto Ierusalem. And there stode by Iesua the sonne of Iosedec and his brethren the priestes, and zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel & his brethren, and builded the aultare of the God of Israel, to offre burnt offrynges thereon, as it is wytten in the lawe of Moyses the man of god, and the aultare set they vpon his sockettes (for there was a fearfulness among them because of the nacions and landes) and offered burnt offrynges thereon vnto the Lord * in the mornynge and at euē. And helde the feast of Tabernacles as it is wytten, and offered burnt sacrifices daile in order, accordynge to the custome, daye by daye. Afterwarde the daile burnt offrynges also, and of the newe Moones and of al the feast dayes of the Lord that were halowed, and all maner of frewill offrynges, whiche they dyd of theyr owne fre will vnto the Lorde.

CIn the seconde yere of their comynge vnto the house of God at Ierusalem in the seconde moneth, beganne zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and the remnaunte of theyr brethren the priestes and Leuites, and al they that were come oute of captiuite vnto Ierusalem, and appoynted the Leuites from twentye yere olde and aboue, to se that the worcke of the house of the LORD went forwarde. And Iesua stode with his sonnes and brethren, and Cadmiel with his sonnes, and the chyldren of Iuda, to forther the workemen of the house of God, namely the chyldren of Benhadad with their chyldren and their brethren the Leuites.

And when the buylders layde the foundation of the temple of the Lorde, the priestes stode in their arraye, with trompettes. And the Leuites the chyldren of Asaph with cymbales, to praisse the Lorde * after the maner of Dauid kynge of Israel. And they sange together, geuyng praysle and thankes vnto the Lorde, because he is gracious, and because his mercye endureth for euer vpon Israel. And all the people shouted loude in praynsynge the Lorde, because the foundation of the house of the Lorde was layde. Manye also of the olde priestes and Leuites & auncient fathers, which had sene the first house: when the foundation of this house was layed before theyr eyes, wepte with a loude voyce. And many shouted with tope, so that the noyse gaue a greatesounde, in so muche that the people coulde not knowe the ioyful sounde for the noyse of the wepyng amouge the people: for the people shouted with a loude crye, so that the noyse was herde farre of.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The buyldynge of the temple is hindered, and let.

BUT when the aduersaries of Iuda and Ben Iamin heard, that the chyldren of the captiuite buylded the temple vnto the Lorde God of Israel, they came to zorobabel and to the principal fathers, and said vnto them: We wil builde with you: for we seke the Lorde poure God lyke as ye do. And we haue done sacrifices vnto him, sence the tyme that Assur the kynge of Assur brought vs by hyther. But zorobabel & Iesua and the other auncient fathers of Israel answered them: It belongeth not to you, but to vs to buylde the house vnto our God: for we oure selues will buylde alone vnto the Lord oure God of Israel, * as Cyrus the kynge of Persia hath commaunded vs.

Then the folke of the lande hyndered the people of Iuda, and made them afrayed to buylde, and hyred counsellers agaynste them and hyndered theyr their deuise, as longe as Cyrus þe king of Persia liued, vntyll the raygne of Darius kyng of Persia. But when Darius was kyng, in the begynnyng of hys raygne wrote they vnto hym a complaynte agaynste them of Juda and Ierusalem.

And in the tyme of Artaxerxes, wrote Bisellam, Mithridates, Tabeel and the other of their counsell vnto Artaxerxes the kyng of Persia. But þe scripture of the letter was wrytten in the Syriens speache, and was interpreted in the language of the Syriens. Rehum the chaunceler, and Samasai, the scribe, wrote thys letter agaynste Ierusalem to Artaxerxes the kyng.

Rehum þe chaunceler, & Samasai the scribe, and other of the counsell of Bina, of Arphasath, of Tarplat, of Persia, of Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Becha, and of Elam, and other of the people, whome the greates and noble Menaphar broughte ouer, and sette in cytyes of Samaria, and other on thys syde the water, and in Ceneeth. And thys is the summe of the letter that they sente vnto kyng Artaxerxes.

Thy seruauntes the men on thys syde the water and in Ceneeth. Be it knowne vnto þe kyng, that the Jewes are come vp frome the to vs vnto Ierusalem a citie sedicious & froward, & buylde the same, and laye the foundation of the walles thereof, and repayre them. Be it knowne now thefor to the kyng, that yf this citie be buylded and the walles made vp agayne, then shall not they geue tribute, tolle, and yerely custome, & euen vnto the kynges shal this hurt redownde. But now that we all are thereby whiche destroyed the temple, we wolde not lose þe kynges dishonour. Therefore sent we out, & caused the kyng to be certified therof: that it maye be sought in the Chronicles of thy progenitors and so shalte thou fynde in the same Chronicles, & perceaue, þe thys cytye, is sedicious & noysome vnto kynges & lades, & þe they cause other also to rebel of olde, & for þe same cause was this citie destroyed. Therefore do we certifie the kyng, that yf thys cytye be buyl-ded, and the walles thereof made vp, thou shalte kepe nothyng of thys side the water by the reason of it.

Then sent the kyng an answer vnto Rehum the chaunceler, and Samasai the scribe, and to the other of their counsell þe dwelte in Samaria, & vnto the other beyond the water. Peace and salutacion. The letter whiche ye sente vnto vs, hath bene opelye read before me, & I haue comaunded to make searche: and it is founde, þe this citie of olde hath made insurreccio agaynste kynges, & howe þe bypore & rebellion hath bene committed therein. There haue bene mightie kynges also at Ierusalem which haue raygned ouer al that is beyonde the water, & tolle, tribute and yerely custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commaundement, for byd the same men, that the citie be not buylded, tyll I haue geuen comaundement. Take hede now that ye be not negligent herein, lest the kyng haue harme there thorowe.

And when kyng Artaxerxes letter was read before Rehum þe chaunceler and Samasai the scribe and their counsell, they wente vp in all the hast to Ierusalem vnto the Jewes, and forbade them with violence and power. Then ceased the worke of the house of God at Ierusalem, & continued so vnto the second yere of Darius kyng of Persia.

By the creatacion of Aggeus and zachary is the temple buylded agayne.

The prophetes, Aggeus and zachary the sonne of Addo, prophesied vnto the Jewes, that theye in Juda & Ierusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then gat vp zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Josedec, and beganne to buylde the house of God at Ierusalem, and wryth them the prophetes of God which helped them. At the same tyme came to them Chathanai the captayne on this syde the water, and Starbuzanai, and their councelers, and sayde thus vnto them: who hath comaunded you to buylde this house, and to make vp the walles therof. Then tolde we them the names of the me, þe made this building.

But the eye of the Lord came upon the Elders of the Jews, that they could not cause them to cease, till the matter was brought before Darius, and till they had answered by letters therunto.

This is the copie of the letter that Thathanai the captayne on this syde the water, and Stharbazanai, and their counsellors of Apharsach (whiche were on this syde the water) sent vnto kynge Darius. And this is the entent of the wordes þ they sente vnto hym: Vnto Darius the kynge, all peace.

hab. 5. 10. 11. mar. 6. 11.

Be it known vnto the kynge, that we came in to Jewrye to the house of the greate God, whiche is buylded wth rough stone, & beames are layed in þ walles, & the worcke goeth fast forthe, & prospereth in their hādes. We asked therfore the Elders & sayd vnto them: Who hath commaunded you to buyld thys house, and to make vp the walles therof? We asked their names also, that we might certifie the, and written the names of the men that were their rulers.

But they answered vs with these wordes, & said: We are the seruauntes of the God of heauen & earth, & builde the house þ was buylded manye yeres agoe: whiche a great kynge of Israel buylded and set vp. And after oure fathers had prouoked the God of heauen vnto wrath, he gaue them ouer into the hande of Nabuchodonozor þ kyng of Babilon the Chaldee, whiche brake downe this house, and carped the people awayne vnto Babilon.

i. reg. 11. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

But in the firste yere of Cyrus the kynge of Babilon, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded to buyld this house of God, for þ vesselles of golde & syluer in þ house of God, which Nabuchodonozor toke out of þ temple at Ierusalem, and brought the into þ temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kynge take out of the temple at Babilon, & deuoluered the vnto Salsazar by name, whō he made captayne, & sayd vnto hi: Take these vesselles, goe thy waye and bringe them to the temple at Ierusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in hys place. Then came the same Salsazar and layde the foundation of the house of God at Ierusalem.

hence that tym: hath it bene in buyldinge, and yet it is not finished. This please the king now; let there be search made in þ kynges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kyng Cyrus commaundemet, that the house of God at Ierusalem shoulde be buylded, & sende vs the kynges mynde concernynge the same.

The vi. Chapter.

At the commaundement of Darius kyng of Persia, after the temple was buylded, and dedicated, the kynge of Israel hepe the feast of vnturned bread.

Then commaunded kynge Darius, þ search shuld be made in þ libraye of the kynges treasure house, which lay at Babilō. So at Egbathanis in a cabinet that lyeth in þ land of þ Medes, there was founde a booke, & in it was there an acte wyrtten after thys maner: In the first yere of kyng Cyrus, commaunded the same kynge Cyrus to buyld the house of God at Ierusalem, in the place where þ sacrifice is made, and to laye the foundation to beate thre thousand cubites height, and thre score cubites bredeth, & thre walles of rough stone, & one wall of timbre, & þ expences shalbe geue of the kynges house. And þ golde and syluer vessel of the house of God (which Nabuchodonozor toke oute of the temple at Ierusalem, & broughte vnto Babilon) shalbe restozed agayne, that they maye be broughte vnto the temple at Ierusalem to their place into the house of God.

Get you farre from the therfore, thou Thathanai captayne beyonde the water, & Stharbazanai, & youre counsellors whiche are beyonde the water, get you awayne from them. Let the worcke in þ house of God, that the captayne of the Jewes & their Elders maye builde the house of God in hys place. I haue commaunded also, what shal be done to the Elders of Iuda for the buyldinge of þ house of God, that there shal vpygently be taken of the kynges goodes, euen of the rentes beyonde the water, and geuen vnto the men, & that they be not hyndred. And of the haue nyde of calues, lambs, or goates for the burnt offeringe vnto the God of heauen, wheate, salte, wyne, and oyle, after after the custome of the priestes at Jerusalem, there shalbe given the daye as is accordinge: & so that this be done without faule, that they maye offer sweete sacrifices vnto the God of heauen, and praye for the kinges life, & for his children. Thys commaundement haue I geuen. And what in so euer he be that uttereth these wordes, there shal a beame be taken frome his house, and set vp, & he shalbe hanged thereon, and hys house shalbe pepled for the deade.

But the God that dwelleth in heauen, destroie all kinges & people, that put to their hande to alter & to breake downe the house of God at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that thys be diligentlye done.

Then Chathanai & captayne bespode & water, & Scharbuzanai with their counsellors (to whom kinge Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And the Elders of the Jewes buylded, and they prospered thorow & propheteinge of Aggeus the prophete and zachary the sonne of Ador: & they buylded, & set vp the worke, accordinge to the commaundement of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes kinges of Persia. And they performed & house vnto the thirde daye of the monethe Adar, that was in the fyrte yere of the raygne of kinge Darius.

And the childre of Israel, the priestes, the Levites, & the other children of the captiuite helde the dedicacion of the house of God with ioye, & offered at the dedicacion of the house of God, an hundred calues, two hundred lambs, four hundred goates: & for & spauedofferynge for all Israel twelue he goates, accordinge to the numbre of the trybes of Israel, & set the priestes in their courses, & the Levites in their offices to minister vnto God whiche is at Jerusalem, as it is wyrted in & booke of Moyses.

And the chyldren of the captiuite becom pastouers vpon & fourteenth day of the first moneth: for the priestes and Levites had purged them selues, so that they were all cleane as oye man, & becom pastouers for all the children of the captiuite, and for their brethren the priestes, and for them selues. And the childre of Israel which were come againe out of captiuite, and of such as had separated them selues vnto them frome the falschynges of the heathen in the lande, to seke the Lorde God of Israel, ate and helde the feast of vnleuened bread seuen dayes with ioye, for the Lorde had made them glad, and turned the heart of the kinges of Assur vnto them, so & their handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

The. vii. Chapter.

By the commaundement of Artaxerxes, Ezdras taketh hys companions the chyldren of Israel, and returneth to Jerusalem.

After these actes in & raygne of Artaxerxes king of Persia, there went by fro Babilon, Ezdras the sonne of Sathrah, the sonne of Azariah, the sonne of Helkiah, the sonne of Selum, the sonne of Iadoc, the sonne of Abitob, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Azariah, the sonne of Baraias, the sonne of Iaraias, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Boki, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phinehes, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron & chiefe priest. This Ezdras was a quicke scribe in the lawe of Moyses, whiche the Lorde God of Israel dyd geue. And & kinge gaue hym al & he required, because & hand of the Lord his god was vpon him. And there went by certayne of the children of Israel, & of the priestes, and of the Levites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Bethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seuenth yere of kinge Artaxerxes. And they came to Jerusalem in & fifth monethe that is the seuenth yere of the kinge. For vpon the fyrste daye of the first moneth, deuyled he to goe by from Babilon: and on the fyrste daye of the fifth moneth came he to Jerusalem, because the good hande of God was vpon hym. For Ezdras prepared hys heart to seke the lawe of the Lord, & to do it, and to teache the precepte and iudgement in Israel.

And thys is the coppe of the letter, that king Artaxerxes gaue vnto Ezdras the priest, & scribe, whiche was a reather in the wordes of & Lorde & of hys statuts ouer Israel. And Ezdras the p̄feste and the s̄rybe in the lawe of the God of heauē, peace & salutation. I haue cōmaunded, & al they of & people of Israel, and of thy p̄festes & Leuites in my realme, whiche are mynded of their owne good wyl to go by to Ierusalem, that they goe wyth the, beyng sente of the kyng and of the seuen Lordes of the counceyl, to viset Iuda & Ierusalem, accordyng to the lawe of God, whiche is in thy hande: And that thou shuldest take with the, syluer and golde, whiche the kyng & the lordes of hys counceyl geue of their owne good wyl vnto & God of Israel (whose habitation is at Ierusalem) & al the syluer and golde & thou canst fynde in all the contre of Babilon: with it that & people & p̄fests geue of their good wyl vnto the house of God at Ierusalem.

E Take thou the same, & bye diligently with the same money, calues, lambes, goates, & meateofferynges & drynkeofferynges, to be offered vpon the altar of the house of your God at Ierusalem. And loke what it lyketh the and thy b̄rethren to doe with the remnaunt of the money, & do after the wil of your God. And the vesselles that are geuen the for the ministracion in the house of thy God, those deliuer thou before God at Ierusalem.

And whatsoeuer thyng more shall be nedefull for the house of thy God, whiche is necessarye for the to spende, let the same be geuen out of the kinges chātre. I kyng Arthaxerxes haue cōmaunded al the treasures beyonde the water, & loke whatsoeuer Esdras the p̄feste and scribe in the lawe of & God of heauen requirerth of you, that ye fulfill the same diligently, vntyl an hundred talētes of syluer, vntyl an hundred quarters of wheate, vntyl an hundred batthes of wyne, vntyl an hundred batthes of oyle, and salte withoute measure. Whatsoeuer belongeth to the lawe of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauen, that there come no wrath vpon the kynges realme and hys chyldren.

And knowne be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctorite to requyre taxing and custome, & p̄sely rentes vpon anye of & p̄festes, Leuites, singers, porters, Bethinims & ministers in the house of hys God. But thou Esdras (after the wysdome of the God that is in thy hande) set thou iudges & arbiters, to iudge al the people that is beyonde Iordan, euen al such as knowe the lawe of thy God: and they know it not, those se, & ye teache: & whoeuer wyl not diligently fulfill the lawe of thy God, and the kyng's lawe, shal haue his iudgemente for the deade, whether it be vnto deathe, or to be banished, or to be condemned in goodes, or to be putte in prison.

* Praised be & Lord God of our fathers, whiche so hath inspired the kynges heart to gathyr the house of God at Ierusalem: & hath enclined his mercy vnto me in the p̄sence of & kyng, and his counceylers, & before all & kynges bye estates. And I was comforted (accordyng to the hande of the Lord my God ouer me) & so gathered I the heades of Israel together, that they myght go by with me.

The. viii. Chapter.

The number of them that returned to Ierusalem wyth Esdras.

These are the heades of their fathers that were named, whiche went by with me to Babilō, what tyme as kyng Arthaxerxes raygned. Of the chyldren of Phinehes, Gersom: of & chyldren of Ithamar, Daniell: of the chyldren of David, Hatus: of the chyldren of Zecariah, of the chyldren of Phares, Zachary, and with him were numbred an hundred and fiftie men. Of the chyldren of Phabath, Hoab, Elioenai the sonne of Zarahiah, and with hym two hundred men. Of the chyldren of Zechanah, the sonne of Jahasell, and wyth hym three hundred men. Of the chyldren of Ibed the sonne of Jonathan, and with hym fyfthe men. Of the chyldren of Elam, Isaias the sonne of Athaliah, and with him seuentie men. Of the chyldren of Baphatia, Zabadias & sonne of Michael, and with him foure score men.

Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadias the sonne of Jehiel, and with him two hundred and eyghtene men. Of the chyldren children of Shelomith, the sonne of Josaphat, and wyth hym an hundred and thre men.

Of the children of Bebai, zachary the sonne of Bebai, and wyth hym eyght and twenty men. Of the children of Bigad, Johanan, the sonne of Bakkaran, and wyth him an hundred & ten men. Of the last children of Adonikam, and there were their names: Elphelet, Jehiel and Samaiyah, and wyth the thre score men. Of the children Begui, Uthar, and zabud and wyth them seuen ty me. And I gathered the together by the water that renneth towarde Ahazua, and there abode we thre dayes. And when I looked amonge the people and the prestes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Eliezer, Arfel, Semeiah, Obachan, Jarib, El Nathan, Nathan, zachary, and Hosolam the ruelers, and Jotatib & El Nathan the teachers, and those sente I vnto Edo the chiefe at Chasphia, that they shulde fetch vs ministers for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shuld saye vnto Edo and to hys brethren the Aethiunims at Calphia.

And (because the good hand of our God was vpon vs) they broughte vs a wyle man from amonge the children of Bholi the sonne of Leui the sonne of Israell, euen Satabia wyth hys sonnes and brethren, eyghtene. And Satabia, and wyth hym Iaiyah of the children of Merari, wyth hys brethren and their sonnes, twenty. And of the Aethiunims, whom Dauid and his prynces gaue to minister vnto the Leuites, two hundred and twenty, all named by name.

And euen there at the water besyde Ahazua, caused I a fastynge to bee proclaimed, so we myghte humble oure selues before our God, to seke of hym a ryght waye for vs, and oure children, and all oure substance. For I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, souldiers and horsemen, to helpe vs agaynst the enemye in the waye. For we hadde sayde vnto the kynge: The hand of our God is vpon al them that seke hym in goodnes, and hys vyolence and wyath vpon all them that forsake hym. So we fasted, & soughte thys at our God,

And I toke out twelue of the chiefe prestes, Satabia and Satabia, and ten of their brethren wyth them, & weped them there the syluer and golde and vesselles for the heue offeringe vnto the house of our God, wher the kynge and the Lordes of hys countell and pryues, and all Israell that were at hande, had geuen to the heue offeringe, and there weped I the vnder theyr had syxe hundred & fiftie talentes of syluer, & in syluer vessel an hundred talentes, and in golde an hundred talentes, twenty cuppes of golde of a thousande drammes, and two costlye ornaments of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayd vnto them: Ye are holpe vnto the Lorde, therefore are the vesselles holpe also, and so is the syluer & golde that is geuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers: watche ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye wepe it downe before the chiefe prestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israell at Jerusalem in the chestes of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the prestes & Leuites that weped the syluer & gold and vessel, to bringe it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God. So we brake vp, frome the water of Ahazua on the twelue daye of the first moneth, to goe vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon vs, and deliuered vs from the hande of the enemies, & preyed waytynges by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, & abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessel weped in the house oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Uriah & prest, and wyth hym Eleazar the sonne of Phinehes, and wyth them Josabad the sonne of Iesua, and Naobiah the sonne of Benoi the Leuites, accordynge to the numbze and weyght of euerye one. And the weyghte was all wyrtten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captiuite, which were come out of prisson, offered burnt offeringes vnto the God of Israell: twelue bullockes for all Israell, syxe & nyntye rammes, seuen and seuentye lammes, and twelue goates for a sin offering, al to the burnt offering,

Since the tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in greate trespase vnto thys daye, * and bycause of oure wyckednesses haue we and oure kynges bene deliuered into the hand of the kynges of the nacions, in to the swerde, in to captiuite, in to spoylle, and into confusioh of face, as it is come to passe thys daye. But nowe is there a lytle and sodayne gracionsies come from the Lorde oure God, so that some of vs are escaped, þ he maye geue vs a nayle in hys holy place, that oure God maye lyghte oure eyes, and geue vs a lytle lyght in oure bondage. For we are bondemen, and oure God hath not forsaken vs in oure bondage, and hath enclined mercy vnto vs in the syghte of the kynges of Persia, that he shoulde geue vs life, & promote þ house of oure God, & to set vp the desolacion therof, and geue vs an hedge in Juda and Jerusalem.

And nowe, O our God, what shal we say after this: for we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, which thou hast commaunded by thy seruantes the prophetes, & sayd: The lande vnto whiche ye go to possesse it, is an vncleane lade thozowe the fylthynes of the people of the landes, in their abhomynacions wherwith they haue made it ful of vncleannes on euery syde. * Therefore shal ye not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes, and their daughters shal ye not take vnto your sonnes and seke not their peace and welthe for euer, that ye maye be stronge, and eniope the good in the lande, and that ye and your chyldren maye haue the inheritance of it for euermore.

And after al thys that is come vpon vs (bycause of oure puell deades and greate trespase) thou oure God haste spared oure wickednesses, and hast geuen vs a deliuerance as it is come to passe thys daye.

As for vs, we haue turned backe, & haue let goe thy commaundementes, to make contracte with þ people of these abhomynacions. Wylte thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be utterly consumed, so that nothinge remayne, and tyl there bee no deliuerance? O Lorde God of Israell, thou arte ryghteous, for we remayne yet escaped, as it is thys daye. Beholde in thy presence are we in our trespase, for because of it is there no standyng before thee.

The. x. Chapter.

¶ The people repente them and turne, & put away their strange wyues

And when Esdās prayed after thys maner, & knowledge, wepte, and lape befoze the house of God, there resorted vnto hym out of Israell, a very greate congregacion of men and women & childre: for the people wepte very soze. And Sechaniash the sonne of Iehiel one of the children of Elam, answered, and sayde vnto Esdās: We haue trespassed agaynst the Lorde our God, in þe we haue taken straunge wy-ues of al þe people of þe land. Now there is hope yet in Israell concerning this, therfore let vs make a cōvenant now with our God, that we shall put away all the wyues (and suche as are borne of them) accordyng to the counsell of the Lorde, and of them that feare the commandement of oure God, that we maye doe accordyng to the lawe. Get the vp therfore for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be with the, be of good comforte, and doe it.

* Then arose Esdās, and tooke an oth of þe ruelers, priestes and Leuites, and of al Israell, þe they shuld do accord-yng to thys worde: and they swate.
And Esdās stode vp befoze þe house of God, and went into the chambze of Jo-hanan the sonne of Eliasib. And when he came thither, he ate no breade, nor dranke no water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had bene in captiuite.

And they caused a proclamation to be made thorow the out Juda and Jerusalem, vnto al þe children which had bene in captiuite, that they shoulde gather them selues together vnto Jerusalem:
And that whosoever came not wyth in the dayes accordyng to the dryce of the rulers and Elders, all hys substaunce shuld be forfet, and be put out from the congregacion of the captiue.

Then at the men of Juda and Benjamin gathered them selues together vnto Jerusalem in thre dayes, that is on the thirtieth daye of the nyne month:
and al the people sate in the strete befoze the house of God, and trembled because of the matter, and for þe rayne.

And Esdās the prieste stode vp, and sayde vnto them: * Ye haue transgre-sed, that ye haue taken straunge wy-ues, to make the trespase of Israell yet moze: confesse now therfore vnto the Lorde God of your fathers, and do his pleasure, and separate your sel-ues from the people of the land, & from the straunge wyues. Then answered al the congregacion, & said with a loude voyce. Let it be done as þe haste sayde.

But the people are manye, and it is a raynye wether, & they can not stande here without, neither is this a worke of one daye or two, for we are manye that haue offended in thys transgression. Let vs appoynte our ruelers therfore in all the congregacion, & all they which haue take straunge wyues in our citties, maye come at þe tyme appoynted, & the elders of euery citie and their Iudges with them, tyll the wrath of our God be turned away from vs for thys offence.

Then were appoynted Jonathan & C sone of Afahel and Jahalia & sonne of Chekuah ouer thys matter: And Mosollam and Sabathai the Leuites holpe them. And the chyldren of þe captiuite did euen so. And Esdās þe priest; and the aunciente heades thorow the house of their fathers, & all that were nowe rehearsed by name, separated the selues, and sat them downe on the first daye of the tenth monethe to examen this matter. And of the first day of the first moneth they * made an ende of all the men that had taken straunge wy-ues. And amonge the chyldren of the

These are the actes of Nehemiah the sonne of *Nachalia. It fortuneth in the moneth * Casleus in the twentie yere, that I was in the castell at Susan: and Hanani one of my bretherē came wyth certayne men of Juda, and I asked them how the Jewes dyd that were deliuered and escaped from the captiuite, and how it went at Jerusalem. And they sayde vnto me: The remnant of the captiuite are there in the lande in great misfortune and rebuke. The walles of Jerusalem are broken downe, and the gates thereof are brente wyth fyre.

When I heard these wordes, I sat me downe and wepte, and mouned two dayes, and fasted and prayed before the God of heauen, and sayd: O Lord God of heauen, thou greates terrible God, thou that kepest couenaunt & mercye for them that loue thee and obserue thy commaundementes: Lette thyne eares herken, and thyne eyes be open, & thou mayest heare my prayer of thy seruaunte, whiche I praye nowe before the daye and nyghte for the chyldren of Israel thy seruauntes, and knowledge the synnes of the chyldren of Israel, which we haue committed agaynste thee.

And I & my fathers house haue sinned also. We haue bene corrupte vnto thee, in that we haue not kept the commaundementes, statutes & lawes, whiche thou comaundedest thy seruaunt Moses. Yet call to remembrance the wordes that thou comaundedst thy seruaunte Moses, and saydest: Ye ye transgresse the wil. I scatter you abroad amonge the nations. But ye turne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes and doe the: though ye were cast oute vnto the uttermost parte of heauen yet will I gather you from thence, and will bringe you from thence, euen vnto the place, & I haue chosen for my name to dwell there. They are thy seruauntes, and the people whom thou hast deliuered thorow thy great power & mightie hande. O Lord, let thyne eares herke to the prayer of thy seruaunte, and the prayer of thy seruauntes, whose desire is to feare thy name, & let thy seruaunt prosper this daye, and graunte hym mercye in the sight of thys man: for I was the kynge's buttelar.

In the moneth * Assan in the twentieth yere of kynge Artaxerxes, when the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wyne, and gaue it vnto the kynge & I was heuy in his presence. Then sayd the king vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not the matter, but thou art heuy herted. Neuertheles I was sore affayed & sayd vnto the king: God saue the kynges lyfe for euer, I shoulde I not loke sadly: the citie of my fathers buryall lyeth waste & the gates therof are consumed with fyre. Then sayd the king vnto me: what is the thy request? then made I my prayer to the God of heauē, & sayd vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and yf thy seruaunt be fauoured in thy sighte. I beseeke the sende me in to Iuda vnto the ctyte of my fathers buryall, that I maye buylde it.

B And the kyng sayde vnto me, and so dyd the quene that sat by him: how longe shall thy iourney continue, and whē wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased the kinge to sende me, & I let him a tyme, & sayd vnto the king: yf it please the kyng, let him geue me letters to the capitaynes beyonde the water, that they maye conueye me ouer, tyll I come into Iuda: and letters vnto Asaph the Lord of the kinges wood, that he maye geue me wood for beames to the gates of the palace, whiche are harde on the house, and harde on the walles of the ctyte, & for the house that I shall entre in to. And the kyng gaue me accordyng to the good hande of God vpon me: And whē I came to the captaynes beyonde the water, I gaue them the kinges letters. And the kyng sent capitaynes and horsemen wyth me.

C But when Sanabalat the Horonite & Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites heard that, it greued the sore, that there was come a man whiche soughte the welth of the children of Israel. And whē I came to Ierusalē, and had bene there thre dayes, I gat me vp in the nyght season, & a fewe men wyth me: for I tolde no man what God had geuen me in my hert to do at Ierusalē: & there was not one beast wyth me, save it that I rode vpon. And I rode by nyghte vnto the valley porte before the Dragon well, & to the Dongeporte, and considered the walles of Ierusalē that were broken downe, and the portes therof consumed with the fyre. And I wēt ouer vnto the wellporte, & to the kynges condyte, and there was no rowme for my beast, that it coulde go vnder me. The wēt I on in the nyghte by the wylde wyde, & considered the wall, and turned back & came home agayne to the valley porte.

D And the rulers knewe not whither I wēt or what I dyd: for hetherto had I not tolde the Jewes and the prestes, the councelers & the rulers, & the other that laboured in the worcke. And I sayd vnto the: ye see the miserie that we are in, how Ierusalē lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are bzant with fyre, come let vs buylde vp the walles of Ierusalē, that we be no more a rebuke. And I tolde the of the good hande of my God which was vpon me: & the kynges wordes that he had spoken vnto me. And they sayd: then let vs get vp, & buylde: and theyr handes were strengthened to good.

But when Sanabalat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesein the Arabian herde it, they laughed vs to skorne, and despised vs, & sayde: what is this that ye do? Wyl ye fall awaye agayne fro the king? Then answered I them, and sayde: the God of heauen he it is that causeth vs to prosper: and we be his seruautes. Let vs get vp and buylde. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor right nor remembrance in Ierusalē.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The buylding of Ierusalem is hyndred and let, but the Jewes buylde it beyng ready hartely: let the enemyes should faile them.

But when Sanabalat hearde that we buylde the wall, he was wroth and toke greete indignacion and mocked the Jewes, and said befoze his brethre, and the hoste of Samaria: what do the impotent Jewes & shall they be thus strengthened: shall they offte: shall they persourme it in one daye & shall they make the stones whole agayne that are brought to dust, and brett: And Tobiah the Ammonite beside him sayde: let the buylde on, if a force go vp, he shal breake downe their stony wall. Heare O thou our God, howe we are despised, turne their shame vpo their owne heade, that thou mayest geue them ouer into despisyng in the lād of their captiuite. Couer not their wickednesse, and put not out their sinne from thy presence: for they haue prouoked & buylders. Yet buylde we the wall, and ioynded it whole together, vnto the halfe heyghe. And the people were well mynded to labour.

But when Sanabalat, and Tobiah, and the Arabians, & Ammonites, & Al-bodites hearde that the walles of Ierusalem were made vp, and that they had begonne to stoppe vp the gappes, they were very wroth, & conspired al together to come & fight agaynst Ierusalem, & to make an hinderaunce therin. Neuertheles we made our prayer vnto oure god, and set watchme vpo the wall daye and nyght ouer agaynst them. And Iuda said: the strength of the bearers is to feble, & there is to much dust, we are not able to builde on the wall. And oure aduersaries thought: they shall not know nether se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge the, and slaye them, and hynder the worke. But when the Jewes that dwelt besyde them, came out of all the places where they dwelt aboute vs, & tolde vs as good as ten tymes, then set I the people after their kynteds with their swordes, speares & bowes beneth in the lowe places behynde the wall, & looked, and gat me vp, and sayd vnto the chiefe men and rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afrayed of the & thinke vpon the greate worde whiche ought to be feared: and fyghte for poure brethren, sonnes, boughters, wyues, and houses. Neuertheles when oure enemyes hearde that we had gotten word of it, God broughte their counsell to nought, and we turned all agayne to the wall, euery one vnto his labour. And fro that tyme forth it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the yongemen dyd the labour, & the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: & the rulers stode behynde all the house of Iuda, whiche buylde on the wall, & bare burthens, from those that laded them. With one hande dyd they the worke, and with y other helde they their weapen. And euery one that buylde, had his swerde girded by his syde, and so buylde they. And the trespeters stode besyde me.

And I sayde vnto the principall men, and rulers, and to the other people: the worke is greete and large, and we are separated vpo the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place howe ye heare the noyse of the trompet, resort ye thither vnto vs. * Oure God shall fight for vs, and we will be labouringe in the worke. And the halfe parte of the helde the speares from the moynynge spring, tyll the starres came forth: And at the same tyme sayde I vnto the people: euery one abyde with his seruaunt at Ierusalem, that in the night season we maye geue attendaunce to the watch, and to labour on the daye tyme. As for me and my brethren, and my seruantes, & the men of the watch behynde me, we put neuer of oure clothes, so muche as to washe oure selues.

But whē I hearde their complaynte and such wordes, it displeased me sore, and I aduised so in my mynde, that I rebuked the counceilers, and the rulers, and sayd vnto them: * wyl ye requyre vsurp one of another? And I brought a greate congregacion agaynst the and sayde vnto the: we (after oure abyltye) haue boughte oure brethren the Jewes, whiche were solde vnto the Hethen. And wyl ye sell youre brethren, whome we haue boughte vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, & coulde fynde nothing to answer.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do. Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of y<sup>e</sup> Hethen oure enemyes? I and my brethren, and my seruantes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsurp, let vs leaue it. Therefore this same daye se that ye restore the their lades agayne, their vineyardes, oyle, gardens & houses, & the hundred parte of the money of the corne, wyne and oyle that ye haue wonne of the. Then sayde they: we wyl restore them agayne, and wyl requyre nothyng of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, & toke on oath of them, that they shoulde do so. And I shoke my lappe, and sayd: God shake out euery mā after the same maner fro his house and labour, that mainteyneth not this worde: euē thus be he shake out, and voyde. And all the congregacyon sayd: Amen, and prayled the Lord. And the people dyd so.

* And fro the tyme forth that it was committed vnto me to be a captayne in the lande of Iuda, namely from the twentypeth yere vnto the two and thyrtyeth yere of kyng Achazetles (that is twelue yere) I and my brethren lyued not of such sustenance as was geuen to a captayne: for the olde captaynes that were before me, had bene charitable vnto the people, and had taken of them bread and wyne, and for the ryces of synner: pea and their seruantes had oppressed the people. But I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no lande. And all my seruantes came thither together vnto the worke. Moreover there were at my table an hundred and fiftie of the Jewes and rulers, whiche came vnto me, from among the Hethen, that are aboute vs. And there was prepared me dayly an oxe, and fyve chosen shepe, and bydes, and euery once in ten dayes a greate summe of wyne. Yet requyred not I the lyuynge of a captayne: for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. * Thyncke vpon me my God vnto the best, accordynge to all that I haue done for this people.

The vi. Chapter.

The sayd vnto ye yet agayne vpon the wall and fette.

And whē Sanabalat, Tobiah and Geselem the Arabia, & the other of oure enemyes heard that I had buylded the wall, & that there were no mo gappes therein (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the dozes vpon the gates) Sanabalat & Geselem sent vnto me, sayinge: come and let vs mete together * in the villages vpon the playne of the cypre. And neuertheles they thoughte to do me euell. Notwithstandynge I sent messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue a greate busynes to do, I cannot come downe. The worke shoulde stāde still, yf I were neglygent, and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after y<sup>e</sup> same maner. And I gaue the same answer. The sent Sanabalat his seruante vnto me the fyfth tyme, wth an open letter in his hande, wherin was wyrtten: it is tolde the Hethen, & Geselem hath sayde it, that thou and the Jewes thinke to rebell: for the whiche cause thou buyldest the wall, and wylt be their kyng in these matters, & hast ordeyned the prophetes to preach of the at Jerusalem, and to saye: he is kyng of Iuda.

entes: come nowe therfore, and let vs take our counsell together. Neuertheles I sent vnto him, saying: there is no suche thynge done as thou sayest: thou hast sayned it out of thyne owne hert. for they were all mynded to make vs afrayed sayuge: they shall withdraue their handes frome the worke, that they shal not labour. Howbeit I streng-
Cthed my hande the more. And I came vnto the house of Semiaiah the sonne of Delaiah the sonne of Shehetebeel, & he had shut him selfe within, and saide: let vs come together in to the house of God, euen vnto the myddes of the temple, and shutte the dozes of the temple: for they wyl come to slaye the, yea euen in the night will they come to put the to death. But I sayd: should any such mā as I saye who is that, being as I am, that wyl go in to the temple, to saue his life? I wyl not go in.

for I perceaued, that God had not sent him: Yet spake he propheticie vpon me, neuerthelesse Tobiah and Sanabalat had hired him for money. Therfore toke he the money, that throughte feare I should so do, & synne: that they might haue an euell reporte of me, to blasphem me. My God thinke thou vpon Tobiah and Sanabalat accordynge vnto these their workes, and of the prophet Hoadiah and of the other Prophetes, that wolde haue put me in feare.

And the wall was fynished on the fife and twentye daye of the moneth * Elul, in two and fyfthe dayes. And when all oure enemies hearde therof, all the heis-
Dth that were aboute vs, were afrayed, and their courage sayled them: for they perceaued, & this worke came of God. And at the same tyme were there many of the chese of Juda, whose letters wete vnto Tobiah, and from Tobiah vnto them (for ther were many in Juda that were sworne vnto hym: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechaniah the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Jehohanan had the doughter of Mosolami the sonne of Barachiah and they spake good of hym before me, & tolde hym my wordes) and Tobiah sent letters, to put me in feare.

The. vii. Chapter.

After the wall was buylded in the watch apoynted. They that returned from the captiuitie are nombred.

On when we had buyl-
Nded the wall I hanged on the dozes, & the porters syngers and Leuites were appointed. And I commaunded my brother Hanani, and Hananiah the ruler of the palace at Jerusalem: for he was a saythfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other, and I sayde vnto them: let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened vntyll the sonne be whote. And whyle they are yet stadyng in & watch, the dozes shall be shut and barred. And there were certayne citsens of Jerusalem apoynted to be watchmē euery one in his watch, and aboute his house. As for the cylie, it was large of rowme, & greate, but the people were fewe therein, and the houses were not buylded.

And my God gaue me in my hert, that I gathered together the principall men and the people to nombze them and I founde * a regystr of the nombze of them, whiche came bp afoze out of the captiuite: and founde wyrtten therein: * these are the sonnes of the lande that went bp from the captiuitie of the caryng awaye (whom Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon had brought awaye) and came agayne to Jerusalem & Juda, euery one vnto his cylie, which came with zorobabel: Iesua, Nehemiah, Alariah, Raamiah, Rahamani, Hardochee, Belsan, Hesparrath, Be-worcke, twentie thousande drammes, two thousande and two hundred ponde of syluer. And the other people gaue twenty thousande drammes, and two thousande ponde of syluer, and seuen and thre score prestes garmentes. And the prestes and Leuites, the porters, the syngers, and the other of the people, and the Aethiunims, and all Israell dwelt in theyr cyties.

The. viii. Chapter.

¶ Eshaz gathereth together the people and readeth to them the lawe. They kepe the feast of tabernacles of boches.

Now when the seuen moneth druen nye, and the children of Israell were in their cyties, all the people gathered the selues together as one man vpon the strete before the watergate, and sayde vnto Eshaz the scribe, that he shoulde fetche the boke of the lawe of Moses, which the Lord comaunded to Israell.

¶ And Eshaz the preaste brought the lawe before the congregacion both of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstande it, vpon the fyrst daye of the seuenth moneth, and red therein in the strete that is before the watergate, fro the morning vntyll the noone daye before men and women and such as coulde understande it: and the eares of all the people were inclined vnto the boke of the lawe. And Eshaz the scribe stode vpon an hye pulpit of wod, which they had made for the preachinge, and besyde him stode Mathathiah, Semai, Anamah, Azab, Melchiah, and Maasethah, on his ryghte hande: and on his lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Mel-chiah, Basum, Pasebadanah, zachary and Babilan.

¶ And Eshaz opened the boke before all the people, for he stode aboue all the people. And when he opened it, all the people stode by. And Eshaz praysed the Lord the greate God. And all the people answered Ame, Ame, with their hades by, and bowed them selues, and worshipped the Lorde with their faces to the grounde. And Iesua, Baani, Se-rabbah, Jamin, Acuba, Sebatthai, Hodajah, Maasiah, Celita, Azariah, Jozabed, Hanan, Phalajah, and the Leui-tes, caused the people to geue hede vnto the lawe, and the people stode in their place. And they red in the boke of the lawe of God distinctly and playnly, so that men vnderstode the thinge that was red. And Nehemiah (which is Ma-thirathah) and Eshaz the prest & scribe, be, and þe Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holy vnto the Lorde poure God: be not ye sozpy therfore, and wepe not. For all the people wepte whē they herde the wordes of the lawe.

¶ Therfore sayde he vnto them: * go poure waye, & eate the fat, and dryncke the swete, and sende parte vnto the alfo that haue not prepared them selues: for this daye is holy vnto our Lord, be not ye sozpy therfore: for the ioye of the lord is poure strength. And the Leuites stilled all the people, and sayd: holde poure peace for the daye is holy, here not ye poure selues. And all the people wente their waye to eate and dryncke, and to sende parte vnto other, and to make greate myzth, because they had vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.

¶ And on the nexte daye were gathered together the chiefe fathers amonge all the people and the prestes and Leui-tes, vnto Eshaz the scribe, þe he shoulde teach them the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe * howe that the Lord had comaunded by Moses that the childre of Israell shoulde dwell in boches in the feast of the seuenth mo-neth. And so they caused it be declared & proclaimed in all their cyties, & at Jerusalem, saying: go by vnto the mound & fetch Olyue braunches, Mynebraunches, Myrtbraunches, Palmebraunches, and braunches of thicke trees, to make boches as it is wrytten.

¶ And the people went by, and sette them, and made them boches, euerp one vpon the rofe of his house, and in their courtes,

courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the water gate, & in the strete by porte Ephraim. And all the congregacion of them that were come agayne out of the captiuite, made bothes, & dwelt therein: for sence the tyme of Josua & sonne of Nun vnto this daye, had not the chyldzen of Israel done so, and ther was very greate gladnesse. And euery daye fro the fyrst daye vnto the last, red he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feast, and on y eght daye they gathered together, accordynge vnto the maner.

The. ix. Chapter.

The people repent and forsake theyr straunge wynges. Exodus reuoketh the benedictes: of God and the synnes of the people.

At the foure & twentye daye of this moneth came y chyl dre of Israel together with fastinge & sack clothes, & erth bpō thē, and separated the sede of Israel from all the straunge chyldzen & stode & knowleged their synnes, and the wyckednesses of their fathers, & stode bp in their place, & red in the boke of the lawe of the Lorde their God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, & worshipped y Lord their God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leuites stode on hys, namely Iesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sabanah, Buni. Sarebiah, Bani & Chanani, & cryed loude vnto the Lorde their God. And y Leuites, Iesua Cadmiel Bani Sabanah Serebiah Bodiab Sabamah, Phathahiah, sayd: Stande bp prayse y Lord yourre God for euer: and let thanks be geue vnto the name of thy gloze, which excelleth all thankesgeuinge & prayse. Lord, y alone haste made heauen, & the heauen of al heuens, with al their host, the erth and al y is therein, the sea and al that is therein: thou geuest lyfe vnto al, and the host of heauen bow them selues vnto the. Thou art the Lord God, that hast chosen Abram, and broughtest him out of Chaldea, & calledst hym Abraham and foundest his hert faithfull before the: & madest a couenaunte with him to geue vnto his sede the lande of the Cananites, Hethites, Amorites, Phereites, Jebusites and Geragesites, & hast made good thy wordes: for thou art righteous: and hast considered the mysery of our fathers in Egypte, and heard theyr complaynte by the reed sea, and shewed tokens and wonders vpon Pharao, and on all his seruantes, and on all the people of his lande: for thou knewest that they were presumptuous and cruell againste them, and so madest thou the a name as it is this daye. And the reed sea diddest thou deuide in sun, dre before them, so that they wente thow the middes of the sea dre showed: and theyr persecuters thre west thou in to the depe as a stone, in the mighty waters, and leddest them on the daye tyme in a cloudy piller, and on the nyght sea: son in a piller of fire, to shew them light in the way that they wente.

* Thou camest downe also vpon C mounte Sinai, and spakest vnto them from heauen, & gauest them ryght iudgements, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declaredst vnto them thy holy Saboth, and commaundest them preceptes, ordinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruant: and gauest them bread from heauen when they wer hongry, and broughtest forth water for them oute of the rocke when they were thyrsty: and promisedst the, that they shoulde go in, and take possession of the lande, ouer whiche thou haddest lyfte bp thine hande for to geue them.

But our fathers were proude and hardnecked, so that they folowed not y commaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not mynde full of the wonders that thou dydest for them: but became obstinat and heady in so much that they turned backe to their bondage in theyr dysobedyence. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracious, mercifull, pacient, and of greate goodnesse, and forsokest them not. And though they made a moulted calfe (and sayde: This is thy God, that broughte thee oute of the lande of Egypte) and vpd grete blasphemies, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernes, accordynge to thy great mercy. And the cloudy piller departed not fro the on y day tyme to lead them y way, nether y piller of fire in the nyght season, to shew them lyght in the way.

And thou gauest them the good spirite to enforce them; * and withheldest not thy Hanna from theyr mouthe; * & gauest them water when they wer thir: syte. fortye yeares longe madest thou prouision for them in the wyldernes, so that they lacked nothing: * theyr clothes waxed not olde, and theyr fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngdomes & nations, & partedst the accor: dyng to theyr porcions, so that they possessed the lande of Sehon kyng of Helebon, & the lande of Og the kyng of Basan. * And theyr chyldren multipliedst thou as the starres of heauen, and broughtest the into the land wher of thou haddest spoken vnto theyr fathers, that they shoulde go into it, and haue it in possession.

And the chyldren went in, and possessed the land, and thou subdudest befoze them the inhabytoures of the lande, euen the Cananites, and gauest them in to theyr hande, and theyr kynges and the people of the lande, that they myght do with the what they would. And they wanne theyr stronge cyties, and a fat lande, and toke possession of houses that were full of all maner goodes, welles dygged oute, bynepardes, oylegardens, and many frutfull trees; and they ate and were fylled, and became fat and lyued in welch thorow thy great goodnes. Neuertheles they wer disobedient, and rebelled agaynst the, and caste thy lawe behynde theyr backes, and slewe thy prophetes (whiche exorted them so earnestly, that they shoulde couert vnto thee) and byd great blasphemies. Therefore gauest thou the ouer into the hand of theyr enemyes that vexed them.

And in the tyme of theyr trouble they cryed vnto the, and thou hardest them from heauen and thorow thy great mercy thou gauest them sauoures, which helped them oute of the hande of theyr enemyes. But when they came to rest, they turned backe agayne to do euell befoze the: therefore lestest thou them in the hand of theyr enemyes, so that they had the dominion ouer them. So they conuerted, and cryed vnto the, and thou heardest them from heauen, and manye tymes hast thou deliuered them accor:

Notwithstanding they were proud, and hearkened not vnto thy commaundementes, but spinned in thy lawes * (whiche a man shoulde do, and lye in them) and turned the shoulder awaye, and were styffnecked, and woulde not heare. And manye yeares byddest thou forbeare the, & testifiedst vnto the thorow thy psicite, euen by the office of thy prophetes, and yet wold they not heare. Therefore gauest thou them into the hande of the nations in the landes. But for thy greates mercies sake thou hast not vtterly consumed them, neither forsaken them: for thou art a gracious and merciful God.

* Nowe oure God, thou greates God, mightie and terribile, thou that keepst couenaunt and mercy, regarde not a litle all the trauayle that hath happened vnto vs, and our kynges, prynces, preestes, prophetes, fathers and all the people, sence the tyme of the kynges of Assur vnto this daye. Thou art ryghteous in all that thou hast broughte vpon vs; for thou hast done ryghte. As for vs, we haue bene vngodly, & our kyngs, prynces, preestes and fathers haue not done after thy lawe, nor regarded thy commaundementes, and thy earnest exhortacions where with thou hast exhorted them, and haue not serued thee in their kingdome, and in thy great goodnes that thou gauest them, and in the large and plenteous lande whiche thou gauest them, and haue not conuerted from theyr wycked woorkes. Beholde therefore are we in bondage this daye: yea euen in the lande that thou gauest vnto oure fathers, to enioye the frutes and goodes thereof, beholde there are we bondmen. And greates is the increase of it vnto the kynges, whome thou haste set ouer vs because of oure synnes, and they haue dominion ouer oure bodies and cattell, and we are in greates tribble. And in all this make wee a sure couenaunte, and wyte it, and let oure prynces, Leuytes and preestes seale it.

gements and statutes of the LORD oure God: * and that we woulde not geue oure daughters vnto the people in the lande, neither to take they daughters for oure sonnes. * And of the people of the lande broughte ware on the sabbath, and all maner of bytapes to sell, that we woulde not take it of them on the sabbath and on y<sup>e</sup> holy daye. * And that we woulde let the seventh yere be fre conceyning al maner of charge.

And we decreed a statute vpon our selues, to geue yearly the thyrde parte of a ycle to the ministracion in y<sup>e</sup> house of oure God, namely to the shewbreds, to the dayly meate offeringe, to the dayly burnt offeringe of the sabbathes, of the new moones and feaste dayes, & to the thynges that wer sanctified, and to the synne offeringes, to reconcytle Israell with al, and to al the busines in the house of oure God.

And we caste the lot among the prees-tes, Leuites and the people, for offring of the wod to be brought vnto y<sup>e</sup> house of oure God from yere to yere, after the houses of our fathers that it might be bynt at tynges appoynted, vpon the aultare of the Lorde oure God, as it is wyrtten in the lawe: and yearly to bring the firstlinges of oure lande, and the firstlinges of oure frutes of all trees, yere by yere, vnto the house of the Lorde: and the firstlinges of oure son-nes, & of our cattell, as it is wyrtten in the lawe: and the firstlinges of our oxen and of oure shepe, that we shoulde byryge al thys to the house of our God vnto the preestes that mynistred in the house of oure God: and that we shoulde byryge the firstlinges of oure dowghe, and of oure heue offeringes, and the fru-tes of all maner of trees, of wyne also and of oyle, vnto the preestes to the chestres of the house of oure God. And the tithes of oure lande vnto the Leuites, that the Leuites myghte haue the ty-thes in al y<sup>e</sup> cytyes of our ministracion.

And the preestes the sonne of Aaron shall with the Leuites haue also of the tythes of the Leuites, so that the Leui-tes shall byryge by the tythes of they tythes vnto the house of oure God to the chest in y<sup>e</sup> treasure house. For y<sup>e</sup> children of Israell and the children of Le-ui shall byryge by the heue offeringes of the corne, wyne and oyle vnto the chestres. And there shalbe the vessels of the sanctuarie, and the preestes that mynister, and the porters and singers, that we forsaue not the house of oure God.

bathai and Josabad of the chete of the Leuites, in the outwarde busines of the house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Michah, the sonne of Zabor, the sonne of Asaph, whiche was the prynci-pall to begynne the thankesgeuing vnto prayer. And Bakkubiah the second amonge his brethren, and Abda the son of Sammua, the sonne of Galai, the sonne of Iouthun. All the Leuites in the holpe cyrie were two hundred and fourescore. * And the porters Zebai and Talmon, and theyr brethren that kepte the portes, were an hundred and two and seuentie. As for the reuyn of Israell, the preestes and Leuites, they were in all the cities of Iuda, euery one in his inheritance.

And the Bethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Ziba and Galpha belonged vnto the Bethinims. The ouersear of the Le-uites at Ierusalem, was Asai the sonne of Baani, the sonne of Mahabiah, the sonne of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michah.

Of the chyldren of Asaph there were syngers about the busynes in the house of God: for it was the kinges commaun-dement concernynge them, that the syn-gers shoud deale faythfully euery day

The chyldren of Benjamin of Saba, dwelte at Machmas, Ita, Bethell and in thei byllages. And at Anathoth, Rob, Ananiah, Hazor, Ramah, Bethaim, Hadid, zeboim, Abalah, Lod, Otno and in the carpenters vallepe. And certayne of the Leuites that had porcions in Iuda, dwelt in Benjamin.

The .xii. Chapter.

The preeſtes and Leuites whiche came with zojobabell to Ieruſalem are numbyed: and the walke is dede.

Here are the preeſtes and Leuites that wente by with zojobabell the ſon of Salathiel and with Jeſua: Saraiab, Jeremy, Eldras, Amariah, Meluch, Hatus, Sechaniah, Kehum, Merimoth, Abo, Genthoh, Abiah, Benjamin, Maadiab, Belgah, Semaiah, Joiarib, Jadaiah, Salu, Amok Helkiah and Jadaiah. Theſe wer the heades amonge the preeſtes and thei brethren in the tyme of Jeſua. The Leuites wer theſe: Jeſua, Bennui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Iuda and Nathaniah ouer the offyce of thankesgeyunge, they and thei brethren: Bakkukiah and Uni, and thei brethren, were aboute them in the watches.

Jeſua begate Joakim. Joakim begate Eliaſib. Eliaſib begate Joſada. Joſada begate Jonathan. Jonathan begate Jada. And in the tyme of Joakim were theſe the cheſe fathers amonge the preeſtes: vnder Saraiab Maraiab, vnder Jeremy Hananiah, vnder Eldras, Moſolam, vnder Amariah Jehoanan, vnder Melico Jonathan, vnder Sebaſiah Joſeph, vnder Harim Edna, vnder maraioth Helcai, vnder Adia zachary, vnder Genthoh Moſolam, vnder Abia zechari, vnder Minaiuin and Moadia Belſai, vnder Belgah Samua, vnder Semeiah Jehonathan, vnder Joiarib Nathnai, vnder Jadaiah uſi, vnder der Selai Kelai, vnder Amok Eber, vnder Helchiah Haſabiah, vnder Jadaiah Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliaſib Joſada, Johanan and Jada, wer the cheſe fathers amonge the Leuites, and the preeſtes wrytten vnder the capite of Dauid the Perſian. The chyldren of Leui the principall fathers were wrytten in the Chronicles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathan the ſonne of Eliaſib. And theſe were the cheſe amonge the Leuites, Haſabiah, Serebiah and Jeſua the ſonne of Cadmiel, and thei brethren ouer agaynſte them, to geue praye and thankes, accordynge as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watche ouer agaynſte another. Nathania, Balbukiah, Obadiah, Moſolam, Calmo and Abub were porters in the watch at the threſholdes of the gates. Theſe wer in the tyme of Joſakim the ſonne of Jeſua the ſonne of Joſedec, and in the tyme of Nehemiah the captaine of the preeſte Eldras the ſcribe.

And in the dedicacion of the walle at Ieruſalem, were the Leuites ſoughte out of all thei places, that they myght be broughte to Ieruſalem, to kepe the dedicacio and gladneſſe, with thankesgeyunges, with ſynginge with Cymballes, psalteries and harpes. And the chyldren of the ſyngers gathered them ſelues together from the playne countre aboute Ieruſalem, and from the byllages of Bethophathi, and fro the houſe of Galgal, and oute of the felde of Geba and Mauieth: for the ſyngers had builded them byllages about Ieruſale. And the preeſtes and Leuites purified them ſelues, and clenſed the people, the gates and the wall.

And I cauſed the princes of Iuda to goo by vpon the wall, and appoynted two great queers of thankesgeyung whiche wente on the righte hande of the wall towards the Donggate, and after them wente Joſaiab, and halfe of the princes of Iuda, and Alaria, Eldras, Moſolam Iuda, Benjamin, Semeiah and Jeremy: a certayne of the preeſte chyldren with trompettes, namely zachari the ſonne of Jonathan, the ſonne of Semeiah, the ſonne of Nathaniah, the ſonne of Michaiab, the ſonne of zechari, eur, the sonne of Asaph, and hys brethren, Semeiah, Asael, Belalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the muscalle instruments of Dauid the man of God.

And Eldras the Scribe before them, towarde the welgate, and they wente by ouer agaynste them vpon the stepes of the cytie of Dauid at the going by of the walle to the house of Dauid, vnto the watergate Eastward.

The other queer of thankesgeuinge wente ouer agaynste them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon the wall, toward the forncagegate bywarde, vntyll the brode wall, and to the porte of Ephraim, and to the Oldegate, and to the fishgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Sheah, vntyll the Shepegate. And in the pylongate stode they styll, and so stode the two queers of thankesgeuinge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers wyth me, and the preestes, namely Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michaiiah, Elieonai, zachary, Hananiah with trompettes, Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleazar, Ussi, Jehohanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ser. And the syngers sang loude, and Iestahiah was þ ouerleat.

And the same daye were there great sacrifices offered, and they reioysed: for God had geuen them greates gladnesse, so that bothe the wyues and chyldren were ioyfull, and the mirth of Ierusalem was herd far of.

At the same tyme were there inne appointed ouer the treasure chestes (wherein were the heueofferinges, the synges and the tythes) that they shoulde gather them oute of the felde aboute the cyties, to distribute them vnto the preestes and Leuites accordinge to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the preestes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of the Lord God, and the office of the purification. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and Asaph, were the chese syngers founded, and the songes of praisse and thankesgeuinge vnto god. In the tyme of Iozobabell and Nehemiah, byd al Israel geue porcions vnto to the syngers and porters, euerye daye hys porcion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thynges that were sanctified, vnto the chyldren of Aaron.

The xlii. Chapter.

Deuteronomie is read, and when they haue heard it they separte from them all strangers. &c.

At what time as þ boke of Moses was read in the eares of the people there was founde wyrtten therein, that the Ammonites and Moabites shoulde neuer come in to the congregacion of God, because they met not the chyldren of Israel wyth bread and water, and byred Balaam agaynste them, that he shoulde curse them: neuertheles oure God turned the curse in to a blessing. Now when they herde the Lawe, they separated from Israell euery one that had myrte hym selfe therein. And before thys had the preest Eliafib deliuered the chesse of the house of our God vnto hys kynsman Tobiah: for he had made hym a great chesse, and there had they afore tyme layed the meateoffringes, frankencense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wine and oyle (according to the commaundemente geuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the heueoffringes of the preestes.

But in all thys was not I at Ierusalem: for in the two and thyrtyeth yere of Artaxerxes kinge of Babilon, came I vnto the king, and after certayne dayes obtayned I licence of the kyng to come to Ierusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euil that Eliafib byd vnto Tobiah, in that he had made hym a chesse in the courte of the house of God, and it grieved me sore, and I caste forth the all the vesselles of the house of Tobiah out of the chesse, and commaunded them to cleanse the chesse. And thyrther broughte I agayne the vesselles of the house of God, the meateofferynge and the incense.

And I perceaued, that the porcions of the Leuites wer not geuen them, for the whiche cause the Leuites and syngers were Red, euerye one to hys lande for to worke. Then reprovod I the rulers, and sayde: why forsake we þ house of

ii. Eldras

of God. But I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought I all Juda the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers ouer þe treasure, euen Seleniah the preest, & Sadoc the scribe, and of the Leuites Phadaiah and vnder their hande Panah the sonne of zacut the sonne of Mathaniah: for they were counted faythful, and their offyce was to distribute vnto the brethren.

*Thinke vpon me O my God here in, and wyte not out my mercede, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers therof.

At the same tyme sawe I some treddynge wine presses on the Saboth and byngynge in clusters, and asses laden wyth wyne, grapes, sygges, and byngynge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Sabothe daye. And I rebuked them earnestly the same day that they solde the vitayles. Ther dwelt I of Tyre also therein, which brought fyre and all maner of wate, and solde on the Saboth day vnto the chyldre of Juda and Jerusalem. Then reprovod I the rulers in Juda, and sayde vnto them: what euell thinge is this that ye do, and breake the Sabothe daye? Wyd not oure fathers euen thus, and oure God broughte all this plage vpon vs and vpon this cytye? And ye make the wrathe more yet vpon Israel, in that ye breake the Sabothe.

And it fortunod, that when the porters of Jerusalem made shadow before the Sabothe, I commaunded to shut the gates, and charged that they shoulde not be opened til after the Saboth: and some of my seruauntes set I at the gates, that there shoulde no burthen bee broughte in on the Saboth daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes once or twyse ouer nyghte without Jerusalem with all maner of wates. Then reprovod I them sore, and sayde vnto them: whye tarpe ye all nyghte aboute the wall? If ye do it once agayne, I wyl laye handes vpon you. Frome that tyme forth came they no more on the Saboth. And I sayde vnto the Leuites whiche were cleane, that they shoulde come and kepe the gates, to haue lowe the Saboth daye. Thinke vpon me (O my God) concerninge this also, and spare me accordynge to thy great mercede.

And at the same tyme sawe I Jewes, that maryed wiues of Ahdob. Ammon & of Moab & their chyldren spake halfe in þe speache of Ahdob, & could not speake in þe Jewes language, but by þe tonge might a man perceave euery people. And I reprovod them, & curled the, & smote certayne me of them, and pluckt them by, and toke an othe of them by God: Ye shall not geue your daughters vnto their sonnes, neyther shal ye take their daughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Wyd not Salomon the kynge of Israel synne therein: and yet amonge manye herthen was there no kynge lyke hym, and he was deare vnto his God, and God made hym big ouer all Israel, & yet neuertheles outlandyshe women caused hym to synne. And shal we then obeye vnto you, to do all this great euell, and to traungresse agaynst oure God, and many straunge wyues?

And one of the chyldren of Jehoiada the sonne of Eliaib þe hye preest, had made a contracte wyth Sanabalat the Hozonite: but I chased hym from me. O my God, thynke thou vpon them that are quite of the preesthode, and haue desyled the couenaunte of the preesthode and of the Leuites. Thus clensted I this from all suche as were outlandyshe, and appoynted the courses of the preesthos and Leuytes, euerye one to his offyce, and to offere the wod at tymes appoynted, and the fyre frutes. Thynke thou vpon me (O my God) for the beste.

The ende of the seconde boke of Eldras, otherwyse called the boke of Achemiah.

In the tyme of Ahasuerus whiche raygned fro India vnto Ethiophia, ouer an hundreth and seuen and twentye landes, what time as he sat on his seate royall in the castell of Susa in the thyrde yere of hys raygne, he made a feaste vnto all his princes and seruautes, namelpe vnto the myghty men of Persia and Media, to the capitaynes and tulers of hys countrees, that he myghte shewe the noble ryches of his kingdome, and the glorious worshyppe of hys greatnesse, manye dayes longe, euen an hundreth and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes wer expyred, the kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susa, bothe vnto greate and smal, seuen dayes longe in the court of the garden by the kynges palace: where there hanged white, reed and yalow clothes, fastened with coardes of lynnen & scarlet in syluer rynges, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of golde and syluer made vpon a pauement of grene, whyt, yalowe and blacke Marble. And þe drynke was caried in vessels of gold, & there was euer chaunge of vessel. And the kynges wyne was much accordyng to þe power of the kynge. And no manne was appoynted what he shoulde drynke: for the kynge hadde commaunded all the officers of his house, that euery one shoulde do as it liked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feaste also for the women in the palace of Ahasuerus. And on the seuenth daye when the kynge was merpe of the wyne, he commaunded Mehuman, Bartha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar and Carchas, the seuen chamberlaynes (that dyd serue in the presene of king Ahasuerus) to fetch the quene Vasthi with þe crown regall, that he myghte shewe the people and princes her fairnesse: for she was bewtyful. But the quene Vasthi would not come at the kynges worde by hys chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge very wrothe, and hys indignacion kindled in hym.

And the kynge spake to the wyse men that had vnderstanding in the ordinaunces of þe lande for the kynges matters must be hadled before all such as haue knowledge of þe lawe & iudgement: and the next vnto him were, Carlena, Sesthar, Admatha, Charlis, Mates, Martsana & Hamucan, the seuen princes of the Persians, & Medes, which saw the kynges face, & sate aboue in the kynges dome. What law shoulde be execut vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordyng to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaines. Then sayd Hamucan before the kynge & the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not only done euell against þe king but also againste all the princes & al the people in al the landes of king Ahasuerus for this dede of the quene shal come abrode vnto al wemen, so that they shal despice their husbandes before their eyes, & shal say: þe king Ahasuerus comaunded Vasthi þe quene to come before him, but she would not. And so shal the princesses in Persia, and Media saye lykewise vnto all the kynges prices, whē they heare of this dede of the quene, thus shal there arysen despytfulnes and wrathe ynoughe. If it please the kynge, let there go a commaundement from him, and let it be wrytten accordyng to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before kynge Ahasuerus, and lette the kynge geue the kingdome vnto another that is better then she.

And that this wrytinge of the kynge whiche shalbe made, be published thorow out al his empyre (which is great) þe all wyues may hold their husbandes in honour, both among great & small.

This pleased the kynge and the princes, and the kynge dyd accordyng to the worde of Hamucan. Then were there letters sente forth into all the kynges landes, in to euery land accordyng to the wrytinge thereof, and to euery people after theyr language, & euery man shoulde be loyde in his owne house. And thys caused he be spoken after the language of his people.

fter these artes when p displeasure of kinge Ahasuerus was layed he thoughte vpon Mithi, what he had done, and what was concluded concerning her. Then sayd the kinges seruantes: Let there be saite yong virgins soughte for the kyng, and let the king appoynt ouerseers in all the landes of his empire, that they may bringe together al p sayre younge byrgis vnto the castell of Susan to the womens buyldinge, vnder the hande of Hagei the kynges chamberlayne, that kepeth the women, and let hym geue them their apparell. And loke whiche damsel pleaseth the kinge, let her be quene in Mithi his steade. This pleased the kyng, and he dyd so.

In the castell of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the sonne of Jair, the sonne of Seimei, the sonne of Cis the sonne of Iemini, which was caried away from Ierusalem. * whan Jekoniah the kyng of Iuda was led a waye, (whome Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon carped a waye) and he nothed Hadassah (that is Esther) hys vnckles daughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, and she was a fayre and beutyful damsell. And whē her father and mother dyed, Mardocheus receaued her as hys owne daughter.

Nowe when the kynges commaundement and commaunssion was published, and many damself were brought together vnto the castell of Susan vnder the hand of Hagei, Esther was taken also vnto p kynges house vnder the hand of Hagei the keeper of the women, & the damself pleased him, & she founde grace in his sight. And he caused her opntmet to be geuen her, and her gyftes, & gaue her. vii. notable gentyl women of p kynges house, and arayed both her and her gentyl women very richely in the house of the women. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her, that she should not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery daye before the courte of the we-mens buyldinge, that he myght knowe how Esther dyd, and what shoulde become of her.

And when the appoynted tyme of euery damself came that she should come to the kyng Ahasuerus, after that she had bene twelue monethes in the deskyng of the women (for their deckinge muste haue so muche tyme, namely six monethes with Balme and Myrrour, and fyre monethes with good spyes, so were the women beutyfied) then wente there one damself vnto the king, & what soeuer she requyred, that must be geuen her to go wyth her oute of the womens buyldinge vnto the kinges palace. And when one came in the eueninge, the same went from hym on the morow into the seconde house of women, vnder the hand of Salagas the kinges chamberlayne, which kepeth the concubins. And she must come vnto the kyng nomore, except it pleased the kinge, and that he caused her to be called by name.

Now when the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vnckle (whome he had receaued as hys owne daughter) that she should come to the king, she despyed nothyng but what Hagei the kinges chaumberlayne the keeper of the women sayde.

And Esther founde sauoure in the syghte of all them that looked vpon her. And Esther was taken vnto king Ahasuerus into the house royal, in the tenth moneth which is called * Tebeth, in the seuenth yere of his raigne.

And the kyng loued Esther aboue al the women, and she founde grace and mercy in his syghte before all the virgins: and he set the quenes crowne vpon her head, & made her quene in steade of Mithi. And the kyng made a great feast vnto all hys prynces and seruantes (which feast was because of Esther) and let the landes bee in quietnes, and gaue royall gyftes.

And whan the byrgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kinges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, according as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Esther did after the wyorde of Mardocheus, like as when he was her tutoure. At the same tyme while while Harbocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaines Bagathan and Chares whiche kepte the doze, were wroth, and sought to lay their handes on the kyng Abasuerus: wherof Harbocheus gat knowledge, and tolde it vnto quene Esther, & Esther certified the kyng therof in Harbocheus name. And when inquisycion was made, it was founde so. And they were bothe hanged on tre: and it was wyrtten in the Cronycles before the kyng.

The.iii. Chapter.

¶ Haman the Accooman, after he was exaltp, obtained of the kyng that al the Jewes shoulde be put to death, because Harbocheus had not done hym worship as other had.

fter these actes dyd the kyng promote Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, and set him hye, & set his seate aboue al the prynces that were with him. And al þ kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and did reuerence vnto Haman: for the kyng had so commaunded. But Harbocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, said vnto Harbocheus: why trā gresseth thou the kynges commaundement? And when they spake this daylye vnto him, and he folowed the not, they tolde Haman, that they myght se whe- ther Harbocheus matters woulde en- dure: for he had tolde them, that he was a Jewe. And when Haman sawe, that Harbocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignacion and thought it to lytel to lay handes onely on Harbocheus: for they had shewed him the nacio of Har- docheus, but he soughte to destroye all the Jewes the nacion of Harbocheus, that were in the whole empire of Abasuerus.

In the fyrste moneth (that is the mo-neth Nisan) in the twelueh yere of hig Abasuerus they cast þur (þ is a lote) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shoulde be done; and it wēt oute the twelueh moneth that is þ mo-neth Adar. And Haman said vnto kyng Abasuerus: There is a people scattered abrode and dispersed amonge al people in all the landes of thine empire, & their lawe is contrarie vnto al people, & they do not after the kynges lawes, nether is it the kynges profyt to suffer the after this maner. If it please the kyng, let him wyte, that they may be destrō-ed, and so wyl I weye downe ten thousande talentes of syluer, vnder þ han-des of the worckmen, to be brought in to the kynges chamber. Then toke the kyng his rynge from his hande, & gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemye. And the kyng sayde vnto Haman: Let the syluer be geuen the, & that people also, to do with al what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes called on the thirteenth daye of the fyrste moneth, and there was wyrtten (acco-rdyng as Haman comaunded) vnto the kynges prynces and to the captiues e-uery where in the landes, and to the ru-lars of euery people in the countreyes on euery syde, accordyng to the wyrt-tyng of euery nacion, and after theyr language in the name of kyng Abasu-etus, and sealed with the kynges ringe.
And the wrytinges were sent by postes in to all the kynges landes, to rote out, to kyll, and to destroye all Jewes; bothe yonge and olde, chyl dren and wemen in one day (namely vpon þ thirteenth daye of þ twelueh moneth, which is the moneth Adar) and to spoyle theyr goodes.

This was the summe of the wrytinge, that there shoulde be a commaundement geuē in al landes, to be publyshed vnto all people, that they shoulde be readye agaynst the same daye. And the postes wente in all the haste accordyng to the kynges commaundemente. And in þ castel of Susan was the commaundement deuyld. And the kyng and Haman sat and drancke. But the cite of Susan was dysquieted.

The.iiii. Chapter.

thyddes of the cittle, & cryed loude and lamentable, and came before þe kynges gate: for there myghte no man entre within the kynges gate, that had sacke clothe on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges word and commaundement extended, there was great lamentacion amonge the <sup>a</sup> Jewes and many fasted, wepte, mourned, and laye in sacke clothes and in ashes. So Esthers damself, and her chamberlaynes, came and tolde it her. The was þe quene B exceedyngly astonied. And she sent rayment, that Hardocheus should put the on, and laye the sacke clothe from hym. But Hardocheus would not take the. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whiche stode before her) and gaue hym a commaundement vnto Hardocheus, þe he myght know what it were, and wherfore he did so. So Hathath went forth to Hardocheus vnto the strete of þe ctyte, which was before the kynges gate.

And Hardocheus tolde him of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to wepe doune in þe kynges chamber because of the Jewes for to destroye them: and he gaue him the coppe of the commaundement, that was deuyled at Susan to destroye them, that he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to speake to her and charge her, that she should go in to the kyng and make her prayer and supplicacion vnto hym for her people.

And when Hathath came in, & tolde Esther þe wordes of Hardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded hym to saue vnto Hardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the landes of the kyng knowe, that whosoever commeth within the courte vnto the kyng, whether it be man or woman, whiche is not called, the commaundement is that the same shal dye immediatlye, excepte the kyng holde oute the golden scepter vnto hym, that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kyng nowe this thirtie dayes.

And whē Hardocheus was certified of Esthers word, Hardocheus bad saue agayne vnto Esther: thynke not to saue thynne owne lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house before all Jewes: for yf thou holdeste thy peace at this tyme, then shall the Jewes haue helpe and deliuerance oute of another place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art come to the kyngdom, for this tymes sake? Esther bad geue Hardocheus this answer: Go thou thy waye then, and gather together al the Jewes that are founde at Susan, and faste for me, that yf I eate not and drynke not in thre dayes, nether daye nor nyght, I and my damself will faste lykewyse, and so will I go in to the kyng contrarye to þe commaundement: yf I perishe, I perishe. So Hardocheus wet his way, & did all þe Esther had commaunded him.

The Notes.

a. The Jewes were first called Hebrues, of her the eldest sonne of Sale sonne of Aephar, as it appeareth. Gen. xi. b & i. Paral. i. c. after were they called Israel of Jacob, & after Jewes of one of the sonnes of Jacob that is to wote of Juda.

The. v. Chapter.

Esther entred in to the kyng and shewed him Haman to a feast. Haman prepared a galoult for Har- docheus.

And on þe thirde daye put Esther on her roial apparel, and stode in the courte of the kynges palace win ouer against the kynges house. And the kynges late vpon his roial seate in the kynges palace ouer agaynst the gate of þe house. And when the kyng sawe Esther the quene standyng in the courte, he forde grace in his syght. And the kyng helde out the golden scepter in his hande towarde Esther. So Esther stepte forth, and touched the toppe of the scepter.

Then sayde the kyng vnto her: What what wylte thou quene Esther? & what requyrest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shall be geuen the. Esther sayde: If it please the kyng, let the kyng and Haman come this daye vnto the banquet that I haue prepared. The kyng sayde: cause Haman to make hast, þe he maye do as Esther hath said.

Now when the kyng & Haman came to the banquet þe Esther had prepared, the kyng said vnto Esther at the banquet of wine. Esther, what is thy pettice and it shalbe geuen the. And what requyrest thou? If it be euen the halfe of the empire, it shalbe done.

Then

C Then answered Esther and sayde: my petition & desyre is, yf I haue founde grace in the syght of the kyng, and yf it please the kyng to geue me my petition, & to fulfil my request, then let y<sup>e</sup> kyng and Haman come to the bancket that I shall prepare for them, and so will I do to morowe as the kyng hath sayde.

Then wente Haman forthe the same daye ioyfull and merie in his mynde. And when he sawe Haradocheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before hym, he was full of indignacion at Haradocheus. Neuertheles he refrayned hym selfe: & when he came home, he sate, and called for his frendes, and zares his wyfe, and tolde the of the gloze of his riches, and the multitude of his children all together how y<sup>e</sup> kyng had promoted him so greatly, and how that he was taken aboue the prynces and seruantes of the kyng. Haman sayde moreouer: Yea, and Esther the quene let no man come with the kyng vnto the bakket that she had prepared, excepte me, and to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the kyng. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Haradocheus the Jewe sittynge at the kynges gate. Then said zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a galowes of fyftie cubites hie, and to morow speake thou vnto the kyng, that Haradocheus may be hanged theron, yf thou comest merelye with the kyng vnto the bancket. Haman was well contente with all, and caused a galowes to be prepared.

The. vi. Chapter.

The kyng turneth ouer the Chronicles and findeth the synfulle of Haradocheus: & then to the confusion of Haman commaundeth Haradocheus to be had in honour.

The same nyghte coulde not the kyng slepe, and he commaunded to bynge the Chronicles and storyes: whiche whē they were red before the king they happened on y<sup>e</sup> place where it was written, howe Haradocheus had tolde, that the kynges two chamberlaynes (whiche kepte the thresholds) soughte: to laye handes on kyng Asauius. And the kyng sayde: what worshyp and good haue we done to Haradocheus therfore? Then sayde the kynges seruantes that ministered vnto hym. There is nothyng done for him. And the kyng sayde: who is in the courte? (for Haman was gone in to the courte without before the kynges house, that he might speake vnto the kyng to hange Haradocheus on the tree, that he had prepared for hym.) And the kynges seruantes sayde vnto hym: beholde, Haman standeth in the courte. The kyng said: let him come in. And when Haman came in, the kyng sayd vnto him: what shal be done vnto the man, whome the kyng woulde sayne bynge vnto worshyppe? But Haman thoughte in his herte: Whome shoulde the kyng els be glade to byng vnto worshyppe, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kyng: Let the man vnto whome the kyng woulde be glade to do worshyppe, be broughte hither, that he maye be arayed with the royall garmentes whiche the kyng selleth to weare: and the horse that y<sup>e</sup> kyng rydeth vpon, and that the crowne royal maye be set vpon his head. And let this raymente and horse be deliuered vnder the hande of one of the kynges prynces, that he maye araye the man withall (whome the kyng woulde sayne honour) and carie hym vpon the horse thorowe the strete of the cytie, and cause it to be proclaimed before hym: thus shall it be done to euery man, whome the kyng woulde sayne honour.

The kyng sayde: make haste, and take as thou haste sayde, the raymente and the horse: and do euē so with Haradocheus the Jewe that sitteth before the kynges gate, and let nothyng faile of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the raymente and the horse, arrayed hym, and broughte hym on horses backe thorowe the strete of the cytie, and proclaimed before hym: Euen thus shall it be done vnto euery man whom the kyng is dysposed to honour. And Haradocheus came againe to y<sup>e</sup> kynges gate, but Haman gat hym home in all the haste mournynge with bate heade, and tolde zares his wyfe and all his frendes, euery thyng that had happened hym. Then sayde his wyfe men and zares his wyfe vnto hym: If it be Haradocheus of the seide of the Jewes, before whome thou haste beginne to fall, thou canste do no thyng vnto hym, but shalt fall before hym. Whyle they were yet talkynge with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, and caused Haman to make haste to come vnto the bancket that Esther had prepared.

The vii. Chapter.

The quene byddeth the kyng and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the galowes, which he had prepared for Harbocheus.

Ad when the kyng and Haman came to þe bancket that quene Esther had prepared, the kyng sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the bancket of wyne: what is thy petition quene Esther, that it maye be geuen the? And what requyrest thou? Yea, aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shal be done. Esther the quene answered and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy syghte (O kyng) and yf it please the kyng then graunte me my lyfe at my desyre and my people for my peticiōs sake: for we are solde I and my people bothe to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perishe.

And woulde God we were solde to be bonde men and bonde women, thē woulde I holde my tonge, * so shoulde not the enemye be so hye to the kynges harme.

She rede although the enemye shuld not receyue the kynges harme.

The kyng Ahasuerus spake and said vnto quene Esther: what is he that? Where is he that darre presume in hys mynde to do suche a thyng after that maner? Esther sayde: the enemye and aduersarye is this wicked Haman.

As for Haman, he was exceedingly afrayed before the kyng and the quene. And the kyng arose from the bancket and from the wyne in hys dyspleasure and wente into the palace garden. And Haman stode vp, and besoughte quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe þe there was a mischefe prepared for him of the kyng all ready.

And when the kyng came againe out of the palace garden into the parler where they had eaten, Haman had laied him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon.

Or, in my presence.

To couer his face, is to shew him worthe of deathe.

Then said the kyng: wyl he force the quene also besyde me in the house? As sone as that worde wente out of þe kynges mouth, they couered Hamans face. And Harbonah one of the chamberlay-nes that stode before the kyng, sayde. Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Hamans house fyrste cubytes hie, which he had made for Harbocheus; I spake good for the kyng. The kyng sayde: hange him theron. So they haged Haman on the galowes that he had made for Harbocheus. Then was the kynges wrath pacified.

The viii. Chapter.

After the death of Haman to Harbocheus exalteth, and then are there confortable letters sente vnto the Jewes.

The same daye did kyng Ahasuerus geue the house of Haman the Jewes enemye, vnto quene Esther. And Harbocheus came before the kyng: for Esther tolde howe that he beloged vnto her. And the kyng put of his syngettyng, whiche he had taken fro Haman, and gaue it vnto Harbocheus. And Esther set Harbocheus ouer the house of Haman. And Esther spake yet more before the kyng, and fell downe at his fete, and besought hym, that he woulde put awaye þe wyckednes of Haman the Agagite, and hys deuyce that he had ymagined agaynst the Jewes. And the kyng helde oute the golden scepter vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, and stode before the kyng, and sayde: yf it please the kyng, and yf I haue founde grace in his syghte, and yf it be conuenient for þe kyng, & yf it be accepted in hys sight then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman þe sonne of Hamadatha þe Agagite, maye be called againe: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes in al the kynges lades. For how can I se the euil that shal happen vnto my people? and howe can I loke vpon the destruccion of my kynred?

Then sayde the kyng Ahasuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Harbocheus the Jewe: Beholde, I haue geuen Esther the house of Haman, and hym haue they hanged vpon a tre, because he layed hande vpon the Jewes. Wryte ye nowe therfore for the Jewes, as it lyketh you in the kynges name, & seale it with the kynges ryng (for the wrytynges that were wrytten in the kynges name, and sealed with the kynges kynges ryng, durst no mā dysanulle.) Then were the kynges serpybes called at the same tyme in the thyrde moneth, that is the moneth * Suan, on the thre and twentveth daye.

The booke Fol. cxxix.

And it was wrytten (as Hardocheus commaunded) vnto the Jewes and to the princes, to the Debities and cap- taynes in the landes from India vntyl Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seven and twentv landes, vnto euery one ac- cordynge to the wrytynge therof, vnto euery people after theyr speche, and to the Jewes accordynge to theyr wryting and language.

And it was wrytten in the kynges A- hasuerus name, and sealed with þ kynges ryng. And by postes that rode vpon swifte ponge Mules, sent he þ wry- tynges, where in the kyng graunted the Jewes (in what cytyes soeuer they were) to gather them selues together, and to stande for theyr lyfe, and for to rote out, to slaye, and to destroye al the power of the people and lande þ woulde trouble them, with children and weimen, and to spoyle their good vpon one daye in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus namely vpon the thirtenth daye of the twelue moneth, whiche is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the wrytynge was, howe there was a commaundement ge- uen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people, that the Jewes should be readye agaynste that daye to auenge them selues on theyr enemyes. And the postes that rode vpon þ Mules made haste with all speede, accordynge to the kynges worde: and the commaundemēt was deuysed in the castell of Susan.

As for Hardocheus, he wente oute from the kyng in royall apparel of pe- lowe and whyte, and w a great crowne of golde, beyng arayed with a garmēt of linnen and purple, and the cytye of Susan reioysed and was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come hyghte and gladnesse, and ioye and worthyppe. And in all landes & cytyes, into what places soeuer the kynges worde and commaundemente reached, there was ioye and myrth, prosperite, & good dayes amonge the Jewes: in so muche that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes belefe, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

The .ix. Chapter.

At the commaundement of the kyng the Jewes put theyr aduersaries to death. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feaste daye in remembraunce of theyr deliuerance.

In the twelue moneth, that is þ moneth Adar, vpon the thyrteenth daie, whiche the kyng worde and commaundemēt had appoynted, that it shuld be done, euen vpon the same daye þ the enemyes shoulde haue destroyed þ Jewes to haue oppressed them, it turned contrarywysse, euen þ the Jewes shoulde subdue their enemyes. Then gathered the Jewes together in their cities with in al the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, to laye hande on suche as woulde do them euil, and no man coulde withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And al the rulers in the landes, and princes & Debities, & officers of the kyng promoted the Jewes: for the feare of Hardocheus came vpon them. For Hardocheus was greate in the kynges house, and the reporte of hym was noysed in all landes, howe he increased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all their enemyes with a sore slaughter, and slew and destroyed, and dyd after their wyll vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at the castell of Susan slew þ Jewes and destroyed fyue hundred men: & slew Pharsandatha, Delpho, Alphas- tha, Phozatha, Adalia, Aridatha, Phar- masta, Arisai, Aridai, Marzatha, & ten sonnes of Haman the sonne of Hamada- tha the enemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they layed no handes. At the same tyme was the kyng certified of the nombze of those that were slayne at the castell of Susan. And the kyng C sayde vnto the quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hun- dret mē at the castell of Susan, & þ ten sonnes of Haman: what shall they do in the other landes of the kyng? what is thy petition, that it may be geuē ther- and what requitest þ more to be done? Esther said: If it please the kyng, let him suffer þ Jewes to morwe also to do s.iii. accordynge accordynge vnto this dayes commaundement, that they maye hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon the tre. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was deuyled at Susan, and Hamans ten sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes gathered them selues together at Susan, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and slew thze hūdzeth mē at Susan, but on their goodes they layed no handes.

the next chapter
before at the letter

D As for the other Jewes in þ kynges landes, they came together, and * stode for their lyues, and gat rest from theyr enemyes: & Awe of theyr enemyes fyue and seuentye thousande, how be it they layed no handes on their goodes. This was done on the thirteenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourteenth day of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they ordeyned to be a daye of feastyng and gladnesse. But the Jewes at Susan were come together both on the thyrtyenth day and on the fourteenth, and on the fyfteenth daye they rested, and the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastyng & gladnes. Therefore the Jewes that dwelte in the byllages and walled towne, ordeyned þ fourtēth daye of þ moneth Adar, to be a daye of feastyng and gladnes, and one sent gystes vnto another.

E And Hardocheus wrote these actes, and sente the wrytynges vnto al þ Jewes that were in all the landes of kyng Ahasuerus, bothe nye and farre, that they shoulde yearlye receaue and holde the fourteenth and fyfteenth day of þ moneth Adar, as the dayes wherin the Jewes came to rest frō theyr enemyes, and as a moneth wherin their payne was turned to ioye, and theyr sorowe into prosperite: that they shoulde obserue the same as dayes of wealth and gladnes, and one to sende gystes vnto another, and to distribute vnto the poore.

F And the Jewes receaued it þ they had begonne to do, & that Hardocheus wrote vnto them: how that Haman the sonne of Hamadatha all the Jewes enemye, had deuyled to destroye all the Jewes, and caused to caste Phur (that is Lot) for to put them in feare, and to bynge them to noughte: and how Hester wente and spake to the kynge, that thorowe letters hys wycked deuyces (which he ymagined against þ Jewes) myghte be turned vpo his owne heade, and howe he and his sonnes were hanged on the tre, for the which cause they called this daye Phurim after þ name of * Phur, accordynge to all the wordes of this wrytyng: and what they them selues had sene, and what had happened vnto them.

And the Jewes set it bp, and toke it vpon them and theyr sede, and vpon all such as toyned them selues vnto them: that they woulde not mysse to obserue these two dayes yearly, accordynge as they were wrytten and appoynted, how that these dayes are not to be forgotte, but to be kepte of the childers chyldren amonge all kyntedes in all landes and cyties. They are the dayes of Phurim, which are not to be ouerslypte, amonge the Jewes, and the memorypall of them ought not to peryshe from their sede.

And quene Hester the daughter of Abihail and Hardocheus the Jewe wrote with all auctorite, to cōfirme this seconde wrytyng of Phurim, and sente the letters vnto all the Jewes in þ hūdzeth and seuen and twenty landes of the empyre of Ahasuerus, with frendlye and saythfull wordes, to cōfyrme these dayes of Phurim, in theyr tyme appoynted, accordynge as Hardocheus the Jewe and Hester the quene had ordeyned concernynge thē: lyke as they vpon theyr soule & vpon their sede had cōfyrmed the actes of the * fastynges and of hys complaynte. And Hester cōmaunded to stablyshe these actes of this Phurim, and to wryte them in a boke.

The .x. Chapter.

The gloire and noblenes of Ahasuerus: and the rege of Hardocheus.

And the kynge Ahasuerus layed tribute vpon the lande, and vpon the fles of the sea. As for all the worke of his power and auctorite, and the great worshyppe of Hardocheus, whiche the kynge gaue hym beholde, is wrytte in þ Cronycles of þ kynges of Media & Persia. For Hardocheus the Jewe was þ seconde nexte vnto kynge Ahasuerus, & great amonge þ Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of his brethre, as one that seketh þ welth of his people, and speaketh the best for all hys sede.

This man had. vii. sonnes and iii. daughters. * Hys substance was. vii. oxen. iii. shepe. iii. camels. v. c. yonges of oxen. v. The asses, and a very great houtholde: so that he was one of þ most principall men amonge all them of the east countre. And his sonnes went, and made banckettes: one daye in one house, another daye in another, and sente for their. iii. sisters to eate & dryncke with them. So when they had passed ouer the tyme of their banckettyng rounde aboute, Job sente for them, and censed them agayne, and gat vp earlye, & offered for euery one a brenthoffertynge. For Job thoughte thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue bene vnthankful to god in their hertes. And thus dyd Job euery daye. * Nowe vpon a tyme, when the seruantes of God came and stode before the Lord, Sathan came also amonge them. And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan: from whence comest thou? Sathan answered the Lord, and sayde: * I haue gone aboute the lande, and walched thyrow it.

Then sayde the Lord vnto Sathan: haste thou not considered my seruant Job, how þ he is an innocent & vertuous man: suche one as feareth God, and escheweth euell, and that there is none lyke hym in the lande. Sathan answered, and sayde vnto the Lord: Woe

Job feare God for houghter: haste thou not preserved hym, his house, and all his substance: on euery tyme: haste thou not blessed the workes of his handes? Is not his possession increased in þ land? But laye thyne hande vpon him a litle: touche once all that he hathe, and (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan: lo, all that he hathe, be in thy power: onely vpon hym selfe, se that thou laye not thyne hande. Then went Sathan forth from the Lord.

Nowe vpon a certayne daye, when his sonnes & daughters were eatynge, and drynkinge wyne in their eldest brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Job, and sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowynge, and the asses goynge in the pasture besyde them: the Sabees came in violentlye, and toke them all away: yea, they haue slayne thy seruantes with the swearde, and I onely ranne my waye, to tell the.

And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came another, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, it hathe consumed, and brente vp all thy shepe and seruantes: and I onely ranne my waye, to tell the. In the meane reason whyle he was yet speakinge, there came another, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armies, and fel in vpon thy camels, whiche they haue carted away: yea, and slayne thy seruantes with the swearde: and I onely am gottē awaye, to tel the: Whyle he was speakynge, there came yet another, and sayde: Thy sonnes and daughters were eatynge & drynkinge wyne in their eldest brothers house: and sodenlye there came a myghtie greate wynde oute of the southe, and smote the. iiii. corners of the house: whiche fel vpon thy chyldre, so that they are deade: and I am gotten awaye alone, to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, and rente his clothes, haued his heade, fell doune vpon the grounde, worshypped; and sayde: Naked came I oute of my mothers wombe, and naked shal I turne thither agayne. The Lord gaue, and þ Lord hath taken awaye: * nowe blessed be the name of the Lord. In all these thynges dyd Job not offende, * nor murmured

a. By the seruantes of God here, vnderstande, not onely angelles, by whom he ordereth & couereth and workes of the world: but also of the godly and chosen, to whom he continually careth and prouideth for. Job. ii. a.

b. Came and stode before the Lorde, thinke not that God some tyme appeareth to the angelles, and sometyme not, for the good angelles do alwayse se the face of God. Neither cometh god ether with the angelles or with the deuill with bodely speache, but the holy ghoost in the scriptures speaketh manye thynges vnto vs accordyng to oure fealyng and vseth a maner of speakyng familiar to vs, attybutyng, apparenyng, speakyng, enquiryng, and wrytynge to God & to angelles, whiche thyng man onely vseth, to thynke that we thereby maye the easely perceyue hys meanyng. The comynge of the angelles here is no other thyng then to geue accountes of the offyce intownd them: which they geue, knowyng that God seeth with what trueth they byd it: and to geue thanks, and wyse for theyr remembrance. They came (sayeth Drigen) honouryng, magnifyng, prayyng, geuyng thanks. Of Sathan also wryteth he thus. He came, ether with counsel, or comynge in, but he came in thought, counsel, and moost wyched desyre to accuse the ryghteous before God. His thought and desyre are taken as a comynge. The deuill then is cōfessed to haue come into the syght of God, not that the moost wyched came in deede in the syght of the good God, but because his cruell and moost wyched thoughtes came into the syght of God. And thus euen now a dayes also cometh the deuill with them into the syght of God, in that he dailye accuseth, sundeth fault, vexeth, persecuteth and troubleth the godlye.

The.ii. Chapter.

Job is plagued with sore byles, and afterwarde is mocked of hys wyfe. His frendes vsyte hym, and haue compassion on hym.

IT happened also vnto a tyme, that when the seruantes of God came and stode before the Lorde, Sathan came amonge them, & stode before him. And the Lorde sayde vnto Sathan: from whence comest thou? Sathan answered, and sayde: I haue gone aboute the lande, and walcked thowowe it.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: haste thou not considered my seruante Job: how that he is an innocēt and vertuous man, suche one as feareth God, and escheweth euil, & that there is none lyke him in the lande? But I mouedest me agaynst hym, to punyssh hym: yet is it in vayne, for he continueth styll in hys godlynesse. Sathan answered the Lorde, and sayde: Skynne for skynne, yea a man wyl geue all that euer he hath, for his lyfe. But laye thyne hande vpon him, touche him once vpon thome and fleshe, & (I holde) he shall curse the to thy face. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Sathan: lo, there hast thou hym in thy power, but spare his lyfe.

So wente Sathan forth from the Lorde, and smote Job with maruelous sore byles, from the sole of the fote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon a grounde in the ashes, and scraped of the fylthe of his sores with a potsherde.

Then sayde hys wyfe vnto hym:

* Doest thou continue yet in thy persecutyng? curse God, and dye. But Job said vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Seynge we haue receyued prosperite at the hande of God, wherfore shoulde we not be content with aduersyte also? In all these thynges, dyd not Job synne with his lippes.

Nowe when Jobs frendes herde of all this trouble, that happened vnto him, there came thre of them, euery one from hys owne place: namelye, Eliphaz the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed together to come, to shewe their compassion vpon him, and to comforte hym. So when they lyfte vp theyr eyes a fatte of, they knewe him not.

Then they cryed, and wepte: then euery one of them rente hys clothes, and spynckled dust vpon theyr heades in the ayre. They sat them doune by him also vpon the grounde. vii. dayes and .vii. nyghtes. Neither was there any of them that spake one worde vnto hym, for they sawe, that hys payne was verie greate.

The Notes.

a. God is here describ'd as hyng and demaundyng, not that he vnto whome all thynges are knowne shoulde therby learne anye thyng: but that the decreates and reuoluer of Sathan which alwayes lyeth in wayte, myghte be vnto vs the better knowne, to the end that we shoulde walke the more warde.

The.iii. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherein he declareth that thys vylent lyfe is myserable: and that the death of a ryghteous soule is copious and fortunable.

After this opened Job hys mouth, & curs'd his dape, and said: lost be y day, wherein I was borne: & the nyghte, in the which it was sayde: there is a man childe chylde concealed. The same daye be turned to darckenesse, and not regarded of God from above, nether be shyned vpon wyth lychte: But be conered wyth darckenesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be lapped in wyth sorowe on the day tyme. Let the darcke storme ouercome that nyght, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, nor counted in the monethes. Despyred be that nyghte, & dyscommended: Let them curse the day, euen those that be ready to rayse bp mournynge gene it also their curse. Lette the starres of that nyghte be dymme thorowe darckenesse of it. Let it lye for lycht, but let it se none, nether the risynge bp of the fayre moornynge: because it shut not bp hym wombe that bare me, nor hys these sorowes fro myne eyes.

Alas why died I not in the byrth? why dyd not I perishe, as sone as I came out of my mothers wombe? why let they me vpon their knees? why gaue they me sucke wyth their brestes? The shoulde I nowe haue lye still, I shoulde haue slept and bene at rest: like as the kinges and Lordes of the earth, whyche buyde them selues specyall places: As the prynces that haue great substance of golde, and their houses full of syluer. That I bitterly hadde no beyng, or were as a thyng borne out of tyme (that is put a side) ether as ponge chylde, whiche neuer sawe the lychte. There muste the wycked cease from their tyrannye, there suche as are ouerlaboured be at reste: There are those let out ffre, whyche haue bene in pyn, so that they heare no moze the voyce of hym oppressour: There are small and great: The bondman, and he that is ffre from hys maister.

Wherefore is the lychte geuen to hym that is in miserie? And lye vnto them, that haue heuie heartes: Whiche longe for deathe, yf it come not: And searche for it moze then for treasure, whyche also woulde bee excedynge gladd, and reioyce, yf they fonde their graue any where. That shoulde toye to the man whose waye is hys: whiche God kepeth backe from hym. For my sighes come before I eate, and my roarynges fall oute lyke flowynge water. For the thyng that I feared is come vpon me: And the thyng that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me: was I not happye? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in reste? And nowe cometh suche miserie vpon me

a. Cursed hys daye. Lyke as a man hauinge an impostume (saith Chrysostome) yf he be cut of the surgeon, hauinge nothinge wherewith he may rest, duringe the tyme of hys curtyng, holdeth fast the thynges that be nye hym, and is ready to byte them that stande by him, and yet can do no thyng vnto them: euen so Job fearinge the greuousnes of blasphemynge and cursynge, dothe wronge to vniuerte thynges, & speakynge after the maner of the common people, whych impute their miserie to the influence of the starres, & to the daye of their birth, curseth his daye, that is, testifieth with cursynge howe bitter a lyfe he liueth, and vnto howe greaue myteries he was borne (as we commenlye saye) in an vnhappye houre, euen as though now a dayes a man cursynge his synnes, woulde say: Wo is me wretch. In an vnhappye houre was I borne, whiche my deades haue denyed my maker, too worth it. & cetera.

b. They that curse the daye, are those that are werye of their lyfe, in so muche that they fall in dede to cursynge.

The. liii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended of impatience and iniustice, & of the presumption of hys owne ryghteousnes.

When answered Eliphaz the Themanite, and sayde vnto hym: If we begynne to comē with the, peraduenture thou wilt be discontent, but who can withholde hym selfe frome speakynge? Beholde, thou haste bene a teacher, of manye, and haste comforted the werye handes. Thy woordes haue sette vp those that were fallen, thou haste refreshed the weake knees. But nowe that the plage is come vpon the, thou synckest awaye: Nowe that it hath touched thy selfe thou arte saynte hearted. * Is not thys thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy patience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consydre (I praye the) whoeuer perished beyng an innocent? Or, whē were the godlye destroyed? As I haue sene them that plowe vanite & sow malice, reape the same. wyth the blast of God did they perishe, and wyth the breste of hys anger consumed they awaye. are broken. The Lyon perished for lacke of praye, and the Lyons whelpes are scatered abroad.

And vnto me was the worde hydde, and myne eare hath receaued a litle therof. In the phantasies and thoughtes of the visions of the nyghte, when slepe cometh on men: feare came vpon me, and dreade, and made my bones to shake. And whē the wynde passed by befoze my presence it made the heeres of my fleshe stande by. He stode there, and I knewe not hys face, an ymage there was befoze me, and there was stilnes, so y I hearde this voyce,

D * Shall man be more iust then God? D * Hal mā be puter than hys maker? D * Behold, there is no trust to hys seruantes, and in hys Angelles hath he founde frowardnes. Howe muche moze in them that dwelle in houses of claye, whose foundacion is but earth: whyche shalbe consumed by y Moth. They shalbe smytten frome the moztynge vnto the eueninge: Yea, they shal perishe euerlastinglye, and no mā thyncke thereon. Is not their dygnite taken awaye wryth them, they shal dye, and not in wisdom.

The Notes.

a. By the roaringe, the voyce, and the teethe, are vnderstande the blasphemies and backbittinges, that are vsed agaynst the innocent, as it is said Psouer. xxx. b. By the similitude of the Lyon he meaneth, that wicked shal perishe howe great or mightie soeuer they be.

b. Shal man be more iust? &c. Of this principle will Eliphaz reason thus agaynst Job. If God would destroye an innocent; it should followe pma wote moze righteous & pure thā God, but this is impossible, for the contrarie is shewed vnto me by reuelation.

c. Beholde there is no trust. &c. He labourerth in confirminge that which he had befoze propounded. The summe of the reason is, Angels are not purer then God, ergo not men.

d. Dignite signifieth here whatsoeuer they haue wherein they excel other, whether it be in riches or honour, power, or conninge. &c. For none of these shal redeame them from death.

The. v. Chapter.

The charge of a sole. The righteousness of God. The Loyde chasteneth hys, and deliuereth them agayne.

N Aline me one els, yf thou cāst finde anye: Yea, loke aboute the vpon anye of the holpe men. As for y folish man, displeasure kylleth hym, and anger slayeth the ignoraunte. * I haue sene my selfe, when the folish was depe rotyd; that his beuty was sodaynlye destroyed, y his childre were without prosperite or health: that they were slayne in the doze, and no man to deliuer them: that his * haruest was eaten by of the hungrye: that the weaponed man had spoyled it, and that the thursty had droncke by hys ryches. It is not the earth y byngeth for the trauayle, neither cometh sorow out of y groude: but it is man that is bozne vnto miserie, lyke as the byrde for to flye.

But nowe wil I speake of y Loyde, and talke of God: which doeth thyngs, that are vnsearcheable, and meruailes withoute nombze: * whyche geueth rayne vpon the earth, and powreth water vpon all thinges: * whiche setteth by the of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in heuiness: which destroyeth the deuices of the sottyl, so y they are not able to performe the thynges that they take in hande: * whiche compasseth the wise in their owne craftinesse, and ouerthroweth the counsell of the wycked. In so muche that they runne in to darckenesse by fayre daye, & grope about them at the none daye, lyke as in the nyghte.

* Beholde, happye is the man, whom God punisheth: therefore, despise not thou the chasteninge of the Almighty. * For though he make a wounde, he geueth a medicine agayne: though he smyte, his hāde maketh whole agayne.

* He deliuereth thee oute of fire troubles, so y in the seuenth there can no harme touch the. In the midst of y hunger he saueh the from death: And when it is warre from the power of the swerde.

He shall kepe the from the perelous tonge, so that when trouble cometh, thou shalte not nede to feare. In destruction & darch thou shalt be mery, & shalte not be afraied for the beastes of the earth: But the castels in y lande shall be confederate wryth thee, and the beastes of the felde shal geue the peace. Yea,

Yea, thou shalt knowe, that thy dwelling place shall be in rest, thou shalt beholde thy substance, and be no more punished for synne. Thou shalt see also, that thy seed shall encrease, & y<sup>e</sup> thy posterite shall be as the grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a fayre age, like as the corne sheues are brought in to the barne in due season. Lo, this is the matter, as we our selues haue proued by experience. Therefore nowe y<sup>e</sup> thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

The Notes.

a. He deliuereth & c. This sentence propounded after the manner of a propheticke, signifieth alone with that of saule. i. Cor. x. c. God is sayrful, whiche shall not suffer you to be tempted aboue your strength, but shall in the middes of the temptation make away to escape oute. Eliphaz meaneth: He hath verely wrapt the in many miseries, but when the cruelty commeth, and when it shall come to him that the offence is sufficiently punished, & that thou hast leste thyne impatience (for that layeth he to Job, though vniustly) it shall be prosper the with so great health that thou shalt after leade thy lyfe most fortunately.

The. vi. Chapter.

Job answereth, that his payne is more grievous than his fault, yet notwithstanding he deserveth therein.

Job answered, and sayd: O that my miserie were weped, and my punishment layed in the balaunces: for then shulde it be heuier, then the sande of the sea. This is the cause, that my woordes are so sorowfull.

for the arrowes of the almyghtye are in me, whose indygnacion hath broncke by my spirite, & the terrible feates of God fight agaynst me. * Doeth the wynde Alle roate when he hath grasse: Or crieth the ore, when he hath fodder ynough: that which is vnlaue, shall it be eaten withoute salt: or is there any tast in the white of an egge. The thinges that some time I might not away with all, are nowe my meate for verie sorow. O that I might haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunt me the thyng, that I longe for: That he wolde beginne & smite me: that he wolde let his hande goe, and hewe me downe. Then shuld I haue some comfort: yea, I wold desire hi in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I wyl not be agaynst the wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure: Or what is myne ende, y<sup>e</sup> my soule might be patiente: Is my strength y<sup>e</sup> strength of stones: Or is my fleshe made of brasse: Is it not so y<sup>e</sup> there is in me no helpe: and y<sup>e</sup> that my substance is taken fro me. He y<sup>e</sup> is in tribulacion ought to be comforted of his neighbour: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane awaye: Mine owne brethren passe ouer by me, as the water brouke, that hastely runneth thowowe the valleyes. * But they that feare the hoare froste, the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When their time commeth, they shall be destroyed and perishe: And when they be set on fyre, they shall be remoued oute of their place, for the pathes that they goe in, are crooked: they hast after vayne thinges, and shall perishe. Consider the pathes of Cheman, & y<sup>e</sup> wayes of Saba, wherein they haue put their trust. Confounded are they that putte any confidence in them: for when they came to obtaine the thynges, that they looked for, they were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me: but nowe that ye see my miserie, ye are afrayde. Wyl I desire you, to come hither: Or to geue me anye of your substance: To deliuer me from the enemies hand, or to saue me from y<sup>e</sup> power of the mightie: Teache me, and I wyl holde my tongue: and yf I do erre, he we me wherein.

Wherefore blame ye then the wordes, that are wel and truely spoken: which of you can reprove them: Sauynge onely y<sup>e</sup> ye are solit to checke mens sayynges, and can speake manie wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon the fatherlesse, & goe aboute to ouerthrowe your owne frende. Wherefore looke not onely vpon me, but vpon your selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into your owne selues (I praye you) be indifferent iudges, and consider myne vngittinesse: whether there be any vnrighteousnes in my tongue, or vayne wordes in my mouth.

The Notes.

a. The arrowes of the almyghtye after some mens opinion, are the foreknowledge of his iudgment and his wrath: after some other, they are the trouble, whiche the lawe moueth in the heartes of men, while they thereby are stirred to hate them them selues, and so are healthfully kylled: as it is sayde: psalme. xxxvii. a. Some agayne expoundeth to be the crosse of miserie and wretchednes, wherein God had now wrapped hi. For þe Tainctes (saye they) receyue their crosse of the hande of God. The same wyll, that this sentence be a encreasynge and amplifyng of that, which his aduersarye had fearfully layde agaynst hym. Eliphaz in the beginning of the. iiii. chapter had sayde, that the plague was come vpon him: & had touched him, w<sup>ch</sup> this (saye they) meareth he now. Behold, it not only toucheth me, but woundeth me with arrowes, and those venomed with venome, hapely with gal of dragons, with which touchinge, bothe my bloude warerth woode, and al my spirite is supped vp. Moreouer God hath not onely throwen these darter vpon me, but also his dreadfull feares, that is, what soeuer he hath that is terrible, layeth he on me.

b. That my substance is taken frome me. The Chalde. interpre. hath. Wisdom is departed from me, and that after. i. i. of. the wisdom of deuilinge iudgings and tryng of thynges. As though he woulde saye, so sore is my greefe, with my helpe is taken frome me, that I am not permitted to breath so longe, tyll I maye call to remembrance what is mooste acceptable to God. Some reade. Is not al the strengthe of myne inforcement gone frome me.

c. But the feare of the Lorde. &c. As though he sayde. But alas, now a dayes, there is no feare of the Lorde left: and therefore it is no meruayle, yf charite also which is ioyned to the feare of God, be not in vse.

The. vii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that thys lyfe is but a battayle of warfare.

IS not the lyfe of man vpon earth a verie battayle? Are not his dayes lyke the dayes of an hyred seruaunt? For lyke as a bonde seruaunte desireth the shadow, & as an hyredlinge wold sayne haue an ende of hys woork: euen so haue I laboured whole moneths longe (but in vayne) and manye a carefull night haue I told. * When I layed me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shall I ryse. Agayne, I longed sore for the night. Thus am I ful of sorowe, tyll it be darcke. My fleshe is clothed wyth wormes, fylthynesse and dust: my skine is wythered, and crompted together: * my dayes passe ouer more spedyly, then a weeuor can weue out his web: And are gone, or I am aware. O remember, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shal no more se the pleasures therof, yea, and that none other mans eye shal see me anye more. For yf thou fasten thyn eyes vpon me, I come to nought like as a cloude is consumed & banished awaye, euen so be þ goeth down to hel: cometh no more vp, nether turneth agayne into hys house, nether shal his place know hi anye more.

Therefore I wyl not spare my mouth, but wyl speake in the trouble of my spirite, in þe bytternesse of my mynde I talke. And I a sea or a whalffish, that thou kepest me so in prysone: When I thinke: my bedde shal comforte me. I shal haue some refreshynge by talkynge by my selfe vpon my couche:

* Then troublest thou me wyth dreames, & makest me so afrayed thowow byssions, that my soule wytheth rather to be strangled, and my bones to be deed.

I can see no remedy, I shal lye no more: O spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne. What is mā, that thou hast him in suche reputation, and testest so muche by hym? Thou takest diligent care for him, and sodaynly doest thou * trye him.

Why goest thou not frome me, nor lettest me alone, so longe tyl I swallow downe my spetle? I haue offened, what shall I doe vnto the, O thou preseruer of men? Why hast thou made me stande in thy waye, and am so heuie a burden vnto my selfe? Why doest thou not forgive me my synne? Wherefore takest thou not awaye my wyckednesse? Beholde, now we must I slepe in dust: and yf thou sekest me to morowe in the mornynge, I shalbe gone.

The. viii. Chapter.

Job is reprehended and noted to haue deferred his payne. A description of hypocrisie.

When answered Baldad the Suhite, & sayde: Howe long wilt thou talke of such thynges: Howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes: both God peruerete the thyng that is lawfull. Or, doth the Almyghtye destroye the thyng that is ryghte? When thy sonnes synned agaynst hym, dyd not he punishe them for their wyckednesse? * If thou wouldest nowe resorte vnto God by tymes, & make thine humble praye: er to the Almyghtye: yf thou wouldest liue a pure and a godly life: Shouldest he not wake vp vnto the immediatly, & geue the, the bewtife of righteousnes agayne? Enquire of the that haue bene before the, <sup>Amos. v. 6</sup> searche diligentely amonge thy fore fathers: Namelye, that we but of peaster dave, and conside not, that our dayes vpon earth are but a very shadowe. They shal shew the, they shal tell the, yea, they wyl gladly confesse the same.

Have a rushe be grene withoute moystnesse: Have the grasse growe without water: No: but (or ever it be shot forth, and or ever it be gathered) it withereth, before anye other herbe. Even so goeth it withal the, that forget God: A euen thus also shal the ypo-rites hope come to noughte. His confidence shal be destroyed, for he trusteth in a spyders webbe. He leaneth him vp on his house, but he shal not stande: he holdeth hym faste by it, yet shal he not endure. Oft time a thinge doth flourish, and men thynke that it maye abyde, the sunne shynynge: it shutech forthe the braunches in his garde, it taketh many rotes, in so muche that it is lyke an house of stones.

But yf it be taken out of his place, every man denieth it, sayinge: I know the not. Lo, thus is it to him, that re-lopeth in his owne doynges: as for other, they growe out of the earth.

Beholde, God wyl not cast awaye a vertuous man, neither wyl he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouthe shal be fylled with laughinge, and thy lippes wyth gladnesse. They that hate the, shal be confounded, and the dwellinges of the vngodly shal come to nought.

The. ix. Chapter.

Job declareth the benefites of God, & that mans righteousness is nothinge.

Job answered, and sayde: As for that, I know it is so of a trueth, that a man copared vnto God, can not be iustified. If he wil argue with him, he shal not be able to answer hym vnto one amonge a thousande. He is wyle of heart, and mightie in strength. Who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynst him: He translated the mountaynes, or ever they be aware, and ouerthroweth them in his wrath. He remoueth the earth out of her place, that her pyl- lers make withall. He commaundeth the sunne, and it styeth not: he closeth by the starrs, as it were vnder a signet. He hym selfe alone spredeth oute the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the sea. He maketh the waynes of heauen, the Dyons, <sup>Amos. v. 6</sup> & p. vii. starrs and the secreete places of the Southe. He doeth great thinges, suche as are vnsearcheable: Yea, and wōders with- oute nombze.

If he came by me, I might not loke vpon hym: Yf he wente hys waye, I shulde not perceaue it. If he be hasty to take anye thyng awaye, who wyl make him restore it agayne: Who wyl say vnto him: what doest thou: He is God, whose wrath no man may with- stande: But the proudest of all muste stoupe vnder him. Howe shoulde I the answer him: Or what word shulde I finde out agaynst him: Yea, thoughe I be righteous, yet wyl I not geue him one woorde agayne, but mekelve submit my selfe to my iudge. Al be it yf I cal vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure, that he hath hearde my voyce: he troubleth me so with the tē- pest, and woundeth me out of measure without a cause. He wyl not lette my spirite be in reste, but fylleth me with bytternesse.

If men will speake of strengthe, he is the strongest of all: Yf men wyl speake of righteousness, who darre be my recorde. If I wyl iustifie my self, my owne mouthe shal cōdempne me: If I wyl put forthe my selfe for a per- fecte man, he shal proue me a wicked doer: for that I shuld be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not: yea, I my selfe am weery of my lyfe.

This one thinge wil I saye: He de- stroyeth bothe the righteous & vngodlye. And thoughe he slaye sodaynlye with the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishment of the innocent. As for the worlde, he geueth it ouer into y power of y wicked, such as the rulers be, wherof al landes are ful. Is it not so: where is there any, but he is such one.

that halteth to the praye. When I am purposed to forget my cōplayninges to chaūge my cōtēnauce, & to cōforte my selfe: then am I afrayed of all my work, for I knowe thou fauourest not an euill doer. If I be then a wycked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Though I washed my selfe with snow water, and made myne handes neuer so cleane as y<sup>e</sup> wel, yet shuldest y<sup>e</sup> dip me in the miet, & myne owne clothes shuld defyle me. For he y<sup>e</sup> I muste geue answer vnto, and with whome I goe to lawe, is not a man as I am. Nether is there anye dayes man to reprove both the partes, or to laye hys hāde betwixt vs. Let him take his rodde awaye from me: yea, let him make me no more afrayed of him, and thā thā I answere hym without feare. For as longe as I am in suche fearefulnesse, I can make no answer: And why? It greueth my soule to lyue,

a. God translateth the mountaynes, not onely these of the earth, but also the arrogant & proud tirauntes, and the great realmes of the wolde, which by a borrowed speache are often tymes in the scripture signified by mountaynes and hylles. So translated he pharaos. Exod. xiii. g. and kynge Senacherib. Esay. xxxvii. g.
b. Here is it good to see that Job presumeth not of his owne righteousness, but playnly confesteth him selfe vnrightheous and a sinner before God, although before the wolde he had lyued blamelesse. God loketh on the hearte though men loke but onely on the outwarde apperaunce. His aduersaries thought that he shulde neuer haue had such a crosse laide on him, onlesse then he had also outwardly and openly liued in wickednesse. So answered Job in diuerse places that he therein was not culpable, & therefore accuseth as if were after the maner of men, the iudgement of God, concerninge suche as are outwardly righteous: and studious to lyue vertuously: namelpe suche as lyue without blame amonge men, and that bothe entēde and doe well to all men, and yet are wrapped in manye miseries and wickednes often tyme ouer cruell. And herein lyeth the chiefe of the contrarietye betwixt Job & his aduersaries, that Job defendeth him selfe not to haue deserued his punishment by his outwarde lyuing: where as his aduersaries armed onelye with manly and fleshly witte, thoughte God to be vnrightheous, yf he wolde so greuously punish him that had not bene an outward sinner agaynst him. Job, his conscience bearinge hym witness, had lyued innocentlye and streyghtlye, and hurt no man, had alwayes feared God, and worshipped him onely, his children also had beenourred to the feare of God, & coulde of no mā be accused of wickednes. Yet witnesseth he in x. ly here (as the godly do) that he was not vicerly without sinne, for other wise had he bene a liar.

i. Job. i. If we saye, we haue no sinne, we deceane our selues, and truch is not in vs. Whenfore in the places where he sayeth that he hath not deserued his punishment, and that though he came to geue him blamelesse, knowe that he speaketh of his outwarde maner of liuing, not of the inward thoughtes and desires of the heart, wherein he was vndoured an offender.

The .x. Chapter.

Job is wearye of his lyfe, & setteth oute hys handes before God. He desireth the tyme to repēt, & discription of death.

Euerthelesse, nowe wyl I put forth my wordes: I wyl speake out of y<sup>e</sup> verve heuynesse of my soule, and wyl saye vnto God: O do not condempne me, but shewe me the cause, wherefore thou iudgest me on thys maner. Thinkest thou this welde done, to oppres me, to cast me of (beynge a worcke of thy handes) and to mayntayne the counceyl of y<sup>e</sup> vngodlye? Hast thou fleshy eyes then, or doest thou loke as man loketh? Are thy dayes as y<sup>e</sup> dayes of mā, & thy yeares as mans yeares? That y<sup>e</sup> makest suche inquisition for my wyckednes, & searchest out my sinne: where as (not withstandinge) thou knowest that I am no wycked person, and that there is no man able to deliuer me oute of thyne hand. * Thy hādes haue made me, & fashioned me altogether rounde aboute, wylt thou then destroye me sodaynlye? O remēbre (I beseeche the) how y<sup>e</sup> thou madest me of the moulde of the earth, and shalt bringe me to earthe agayne.

Hast thou not milked me, as it were milcke: and turned me to cruddes like chese? Thou hast couered me wth skynne and flesh, and toynd me together with bones, and sinowes. Thou haste graunted me lyfe, and done me good: and the diligente hēde that thou tokest vpon me, hath preserued my spīte.

Though thou hydest these thinges in thine heart, yet am I sure, that thou remēbrest the al. Wherefore dydest thou kepe me, when I spinned, and hast not clenched me from myne offence? If I do wickedlye, wo is me therfore: If I be righteous, yet dare I not lyfte vp my heade: so full am I of confusyon, and se in myne owne miserye.

Thou huntest me out (beynge in deupnesse) as it were a Lpon, and troublest me out of mea sure. Thou bringest frethe witnesseltes agaynst me, thy wrath increasest thou vpon me, verye manye are the plagys þat I am in. * Wherfore hast thou brought me oute of my mothers wombe? That I had perished, and þat no eye had seene me. If they had caried me to my graue, as soone as I was borne, then shoulde I be nowe, as though I had neuer bene.

¶ Shal not my shorte lyfe come sooone to an ende? Hold the from me, let me alone, that I maye ease my selfe a litle afore I goe thither, frome whence I shall not retorne agayne. Namelye, to that lande of darckenesse & shadowe of death: Yea, into þat darcke cloudy lade & deadlye shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare as in the darcknesse.

The. xi. Chapter.

Job is vnderlye rephensid of Sophar. God is incomprehensible. He is mercifull to the repentante.

When answered Sophar the Naamathite, & sayd: Shulde not he that maketh manye wordes, be answered? Shoulde he that habbleth muche, be commended therein? Shoulde men geue eare vnto the onely? Thou wilt laugh other men to scoorne, and shal no bodye mocke the agayne. Wylte thou saye vnto God: The thynges that I take in hande is perfecte, & I am cleane in thy syght? That God woulde speake, and open hys lippes agaynst the, that he might shewe the (oute of his secreete wilddome) howe manyfolde hys lawe is: then shouldest thou know, that God had forgottē the, because of thy synnes.

¶ Wylte thou finde out God wth thy seynge? Wylte thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghtie? He is hyer then heauen, what wylte thou doe? Deeper then the hell, howe wylte thou then knowe hym? Hys lengthe exceadeth the lengthe of the earthe, and hys bredth the bredth of the sea. Though he turne al thynges vp syde downe, close them in, or thurst them together, who darre checke hym therfore.

¶ For it is he that knoweth the banter of men: he seyth their wickednes al: so, shuld he not the confidre it? I bayne bodye exalteth hym selfe, and þat some of man is lyke a wyld Asses foale. If thou haddest nowe a ryghte heart, and liftedest vp thynne handes toward him: yf thou wouldest put awaye the wickednesse whiche thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlines dwelt in thy house. Then myghtest thou lyfte vp thy face wythoute shame, then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

¶ The shuldest thou forget thy misery, and thynke no more vpon it, then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shuld thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone day, and sprynge forth as the moornyng. Then myghtest thou haue comforte, in the hope that thou haste: And slepe quietlye, when thou arte buried. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and nomā to make the afrayed: yea, manye one shulde set much by the. As for the eyes of þat vngodlye, they shalbe consumed, and not escape: their hope shalbe miserie and sorowle of mynde.

The. xii. Chapter.

Job in shewing hys patience declareth þat myghte and power of God.

So Job answered, and sayd: Then (no doute) ye are the men alone, & wisdom shal perswade with you. But I haue vnderstandynge as well as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of his neighbour: the godlye and innocent mā is laughed to scoorne. Godlynesse is a lyghte despised in the heartes of the rich, and is set for them to stoble vpon. The houses of robbers are in wealth & prosperite, & they þat maliciouslye medle agaynst God, dwel wthout care: yea, God geueth all thynges richely with hys hande.

¶ Aske the cattell, & they shall informe the: the foules of the ayre, & they shall tell the: Speake to the earthe, & it shall shewe the: Or to the fyshes of the sea, and they shall certifie the. What is he but he knoweth that the hande of the Lorde made all these? In whose hand the soule of euerye lyuynge thyng, and the brette of al mē. * Haue not the eares pleasure in hearynge, & þat mouth in tastynge the thynges þat it eateth? * Amonge olde persons there is wisdom, and amonge þat aged there is vnderstandynge. Job reproveth his frendes wth their owne sayynges, and condemneth hypocryse.

Dal thys haue I sene with myne eye, hearde with myne eare, & vnderstande it. Loke what ye knowe, that same doe I knowe also, nether am inferiour vnto you. Neuerthelesse I am purpo- sed to talke with the almyghtye, & my desire is to comē with God. As for you, ye are workmaisters of lyes, and vn- profitable physycians all to gether. Wolde God ye kept your tongue, that ye might be taken for wise men. Ther- fore heate my wordes, & pondre the se- tence of my lyppes. Wyl ye make an- swere for God with lyes, & mayntayne hym with disceate? Wyl ye accept the persone of God, and intreate for hym? Shall that helpe you, when he calleth you to rekenyng. shall punyſhe you and reydne you, if ye doe secretly accepte anye person. Shal he not make you afrayed, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shal not his ter- ryble feare fall vpon you? Howe re- membzaunce shalbe like vnto the dust, and your pyde shalbe turned into claye. Holde your tongues now, and let me speake, for there is some thyng into my minde. * Wherefore do I beare my fleche in my teethe, & my soule in myne handes? No, there is nether com- fort nor hope for me, yf he wyl slaye me. But yf I shewe and * reprove my- ne owne wayes in his syghte, he is eni the same, that maketh me whole: And why there maye no hypocrite come be- fore hym. Heare my wordes, and pon- dre my sayynges w your eares. * Be- holde, now haue I prepared my iudge- ment, and knowe that I shalbe founde righteous. What is he, that wyl goe to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tongue, I shall dye. Neuerthelesse graunte me two thynges, & then wyl I not hyde my selfe from thee.

Withdrowe thyne hande from me, & let not the fearfull drede of the make me afrayed. And then sende for me to the lawe, & I may answere for my selfe: or els, let me speake, and geue thou the answer. Howe great are my misdoes and synns: Let me know my trangressi- ons and offences. * Wherefore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thine enemye? Wylte thou be so cruel and ex- treme vnto a flyyng leafe, & folow vpon drie stubble, that & layest so sharply to my charge, and wylte vtterlye vn- do me, & for & synes of my youth: & thou hast put my fote in the stocks: Thou lokest narrowlye vnto all my paches, & markkest the steppes of my fete: where as I (not wythstandyng) must confu- me lyke as a foule caryon, & as a clothe that is moth eaten.

hath geuen me ouer to the vngodly,

And deliuered me into the handes of the wicked. I was som tyme in wealth, but suddenly he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rente me, and set me, as it were a mark for him to shote at. He hath compassed me rounde aboute with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the ground. He hath geue me one wound vpon another, & is fallen vpon me lyke a gaunte. I haue sowed a sacke cloth vpon my skynne, & lye with my strength in the dust.

My face is swollen with wepyng, and mine eyes are waxe dymme. Howbeit there is no wyckednesse in my handes, & my prayer is cleane. O earth, couer not my blood, and let my cryenge fynde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen, and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heyght. My frendes laugh me to scozne, but myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. Though a body myght please with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my peccates are come, and I must go the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

The notes.

a. To open their mouthes, signifieth to threaten with most extreme and cruell punishment, and to reprove with shamefull and spyttfull wordes, as in the psal. xlii. c.

b. O earth couer not my bloude, that is, as Abrahams pounders it: hyde not my bloude so but that it be auenged, let not the auengement thereof be unknowne, but open vnto all mens eyes: as was the auengement of Dathan and Abiram, whom the earth swallowed. Num. xvi. c. Ye maye also crypoude it thus. Hyde not my bloude but let it testifie and wytnes myne innocencye, as by the blood of Abel, of whom we reade that his bloude cryed from the earth. Gen. iiii. b.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Job sayeth that he consumeth awaye, and yet doth paunely abyde it.

My brethren falleth, my dayes are shorte ned. I am harde at deathes doze. I haue disceaued no man, yet must myne eye continue in heynesse. O deliuer me and see me by the: who shall the be able to thrust my handes together. Thou shalt withholde their hertes from vnderstandynge, therfore shall they not be set vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes patte of his good, but his owne chyldren spende it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the comyn people. I am his gestynge stocke amonge the. My countenance is heuy for very anger, & the membres of my body are become lyke a shadow. Vertuous men therfore shall well consydre this, & the innocent shall take parte agaynst the pporrite.

The ryghteous wyl kepe his waye, and he that hath cleane handes, wyl euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence, for I can not se one wyse man among you. My dayes are past, my thoughtes are banysched awaye, whiche haue vexed myne herte, chaunginge the nyght in to daye, and the lyght into darckenes. Though I tarie neuer so much, yet the graue is my house, and I must make my bed in the darke. I call corruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother & my syster. What helpeth then my longe taryenge. Or, who wyl fulfill the thinge, that I loke for. All that I haue, shall go downe in to the pytt, & lye with me in the dust.

Salad rehereth the paynes of the vniuersall and wycked.

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayde: When wyl * ye make an ende of youre wordes. Marke well, and consydre, we wyl speake also. Wherfore are we counted as beastes, & reputed so hyle in youre syght. Why destroyest thou thy selfe with anger. Shall the earth be forsaken, or the stones remoued oute of their place because of the. Shall not the lyght of the vngodly be put oute: yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne. The lyght shalbe darcke in his dwellinge, and his candle shalbe put out with him. His presumptuous goynges shall be kepte in, & his owne coucell shal cast him downe. For his fete shalbe taken in the nette, and he shall walke in the snare. His tote shalbe holden in the gilder, and the thugre shall catch him. The inare is layed for him in the grounde, and a pitfall in the waye.

The .xix. Chapter.

Job receyved his myseries and greuous paynes. He prophesied of the generall resurrection.

In answered, and said:
howe longe will ye bere my mynde, and trouble me wyth wordes. Lo, tē tymes haue ye reproued
me: are ye not ashamed, for to laugh me so to scoyne. yf I go wroge, I go wroge to my self. But yf ye wyl enhaunce your selues agaynst me, and accuse me to be a wicked personne, because of the shame that is come vpo me: knowe this then, that it is GOD, which hath hadled me so violently, and hath cōpassed me aboute in his scourges. Behold, though I crye, yet violence is done vnto me, I can not be herde: * Though I complayne, there is none to geue sentence with me. He hath hedged vpon my path, I can not get awaye, he hath set darknesse in my gate. * He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the <sup>a</sup> crowne awaye from my head. <sup>b</sup> He hath destroyed me on every side, and I am vndone: My hope hath he taken awaye fro me, as it were a tree plucke vpon by the rote. His wrath is kindled agaynst me, he taketh me, as though I were his enemy.

His men of warre came together, whiche made their waye ouer me, and beseged my dwellynge rounde aboute.
* He hath put my brethren farre awaye fro me, and suche as were of myne acquayntance, are become straungers vnto me. Myne owne kynfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue put me out of remembraunce. The seruautes and maydes of myne owne house, take me for a straunger, and I am become as an aleaunt in their sight.

When I call vpon my seruaunt, he geueth me no answer: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my brethren, I am fayne to speake fayre vnto the chyldzen of myne owne body. Yea, the very deserte foolles despyse me, and whē I am gone from them, they speake euell vpo me. All such as were my most familiar, abhorre me: and they whome I loued best, are turned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my fleshe is awaye, only there is left me the skynne aboute my teth. Haue pytie vpon me, haue pytie vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the LORD hath touched me. Why do ye persecute me. As GOD doeth and are not satisfied of my fleshe.

That my wordes were wyrtten, <sup>c</sup> that they were put in a boke: wold god they were grauen wyth an yron penne in leade, or in stone to continue. for I am sure, that my redeemer lyueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earth in the latter daye: yf I shall be clothed agayne with this skynne, & se God in my fleshe.
Yea, I my selfe shall beholde hym, not wyth other but wyth these same eyes.
My reynes are consumed within me, when ye saye: Why do not we persecute him: we haue founde an occasiō agaynst hym. But beware of the swearde, for the swearde wyl be auenged of wyckednesse, and be sure, that there is a iudge-ment.

The notes.

a. Kabi Abraham understandeth by the crowne, the dignitie that cometh to the riche by the meanes of their riches: for all men haue the riche in honour: although some vnderstande thereby his chyldren, as in the prouerb. The crowne of olde men are their chyldrens chyldren. Other some, vnderstande the dignitie that came vnto hym of his wysdome and conynge. So Jobs meaning is, that of a worshipfull and riche man, he is become poore and despised.

b. The Hebrews reade as they do, meaneinge the cruell which are not satisfied wth his flesh: such he wolde he not that his frendes shoulde coliterfer.

c. Are not satisfied of a mānes flesh, is a borrowed speache taken both in the good & euil parte. In the good parte it signifieth to loue to iudge frendlye, and then at the length to fall to praylinge. In the euil parte, it is cruelly and deaulye to missege, and (as it were) to teare wth spitefull and haineous wordes.

The .xx. Chapter.

Sophar sayeth, that the vnsatysfyll, the couetouse, and the wyched shall haue a shorte ende.

When answered Sophar the Naamathite, & sayd: for y<sup>e</sup> same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer. And why my mynde is tossed here and there. I haue sufficiently herde thy checkinge & reproofe, therfore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstanding. Knowest thou not this, namely: that from the begynnyng (euer sence the creacion of man vpon earth) the prayse of the vngodly hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrites continued but the twyncklyng of an eye. Though he be magnified v<sup>y</sup> to the heauen, so that his heade reacheth vnto y<sup>e</sup> cloudes: yet he perissheth at the last lyke dounge: In somuch that they whiche haue sene hym, saye: Where is he? He vanissheth as a dreame, so that he can no more be founde, and passeth awaye as a visio in the nyght. So that the eye which sawe him before, getteth nowe no syght of hym, and his place knoweth him nomore. His chyldren go a beggynge, their handes bringe them to sorow and heuynesse.

from his yowth his bones are full of byre, which shall lye downe with him in the earth. Whē wychednesse is sweete in his mouth; he hydeth it vnder his tounge. That he fauoureth, that wyl he not forsake, but kepeth it close in his

throte. The meate that he eateth, shall be turned to the poyson of serpentes, with in his body. The riches that he deuoureth, shall he perbrake agayne, for GOD shall drawe them out of his belly: he shall sucke the serpent's head, and the adders tonge shall aspe hym: so that he shall nomore se the ryuers and brokes of hony and butter: But labour shall he, and yet haue nothyng to eate. Greate trauayle shall he make for riches, but he shall not enioye them. And why he hath oppreseth the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, and not buylded them. His belly coude neuer be filled, therfore shall he perissh in his coueteousnesse. He deuoured so greedely, that he lefte nothyng behinde, therfore his goodes shall not prospere. Though he had plenteousnesse of euery thyng, yet was he poore, and therfore he is but a wretch on euery syde.

For though the wicked haue neuer somuch to fill his belly, yet GOD shall sende his wrath vpon hym, and cause his battayll to raygne ouer him: so that yf he fle the yron weapens, he shall be shotte with the stele bowe. The arrowe shall be taken forth, and go out at his backe, and a glisterynge swearde thorowe the gall of him, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darcknes be able to hyde hym. An vkindled fyre shall consume hym, and loke what remayneth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wickednesse, and the earth shall take parte agaynst hym. The substance that he hath in his house, shall be taken awaye and perishe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the porcyon that the wicked shall haue of GOD, and the heritage that he maye loke for of the Lorde.

Job. 27. 8.

The notes.

a. He shall sucke the serpent's head, that is, he shall be subiect to all cursednesse and suffer all manner sorowes. It is such a manner of speache as is before in the .xv. b. of dyschynge wychednesse.

b. That is, he can not hyde him from perelles.

The boke

In answered, & sayde: O heare my wordes, & amende your selues. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, and then laughe my wordes to scozne, yf ye wyll. Is it with a man, that I make this disputacyon. Whiche yf it were so, shoulde not my spete be then in soze trouble? Marke me well, be abashed, & laye your hande vpon your mouth. For when I pōdye and consyde this, I am afrayed, & my flesh is synpten with feare. * Wherfore do wicked men lyue in health and prosperite, come to their olde age, and increase in ryches. Their chylders chyl- dzen lyue in their sight, and their gene- racyon befoze their eyes. Their houses are safe from all feare, * for the robde of God doth not smyte the. Their bul- locke genbzeth, and that not oute of ty- me: their cowe calueth, and is not vn- frutefull.

* They sende forth their chyldzen by flockes, & their sonnes lede the daunce. They beate with them tabzettes & har- pes, & haue instrumentes of musyke at their pleasure. They spende their dayes in welthynesse: but sodenly they go do- wne to hell. They saye vnto God: go frō vs, we despyze not the knowledge of thy wayes. * What maner of felowe is the Almyghtie, that we shoulde serue him? What profyt shoulde we haue, to sub- mytte oure selues vnto hym? Lo, there is bitterly no goodnesse in them, ther- fore wyll not I haue to do wth the coun- cell of the vngodly. * Howe ofte shall the candele of the wicked be put out: howe ofte commeth their destruction vpon them? What sorowe shall God geue them for their parte in his wryth: * Yea, they shal be euen as chaffe befoze the wynde, and as dust that the stozme carieth awaye.

C And though God saue their chyldzē frō such sorowe, yet wyll he so rewarde them selues, that they shall knowe it. Their owne destructiō and misery shal they se with their eyes, and drinke of the fearfull wryth of the Almyghty. For what careth he, what become of his housholde after his death? whose monethes passe awaye swifter then an arrowe. In as much then as God hath the best power of all, who can teache him any knowlege? One dyeth nowe, when he is myghty, and at his best, rich, and in prosperite: euen when his * bowels are at the fattest, and his bo- nes full of mary. An other dyeth in so- rowe and heynesse, & neuer had good dayes. Howe slepe they both a lyke in the earth, and the wormes couet them. But I know what ye thyncke: yea, and what ye ymagine agaynst me vntigh- tuously. * For ye saye: where is þ þrin- ces palace? where is the dwellynge of the vngodly: Aske any man that goeth by the waye, and (yf ye will not regarde their tokens & dedes) he shall tell you, * that the wicked is kepte vnto þ dape of destructiō, & that the vngodly shal be brought forth in þ dape of wryth. Who dare reprove hym for his wayes to his face? who rewarde hym for þ vngra- ciousnesse that he doth? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, & watch amonge the heape of the deed. Then shall he be sayne to be buryed amonge the bones by the broke syde. All men must folowe hym, and there are innumerable gone befoze hym. O howe bayne is the com- forte that ye geue me? Are not your answeres cleane contrary to ryght and treuth?

The xxii. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vnnecessary fulnesse.

S Eliphaz the Themanite gaue answer, & sayd: Maye a man be cōpared vnto God in wysdome, though he seme to him selfe, for to be lyke him? What pleasure hath God in þ thou art righ- tuous? Or what doth it profite him, þ thy wayes are perfect? Is he afrayed to reprove þ, & to steppe forth with the in to iudgement? * Commeth not this for that great wickednesse, & for thyne vngtracious dedes whiche are innume- rable? Thou hast taken the pledge from thy bzethrē for nought, & robbed þ na- ked of their clothig: * To such as were weery, hast þ geuen no water to drinke, thou hast withdrawē bread frō the hu- grye: Shoulde such one then as bleth vtolēce, wryge & opprestion (doinge all thynge of parcialite, & hauinge respecte of personnes) dwell in the lande? Thou hast sent wyddowes awaye emptye, and opprested the poore fatherlesse.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he dothe knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the moone, & sayeth that he hath walked in his right wayes.

In answered, & sayde: My sayynge is yet this daye in bitternes, & my harte heuy amonge my grownynges. * that I myght se hi a synde hym: * that I myght come befoze his seate, to pleate my cause befoze hym, & to fyl my mouth w argumetes: * that I might know, what answere he wolde geue me: and that I might vnderstade, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he pleate agaisst me with his greate power and strength, or wyl he leane him selfe bitterly vpon me? Oh no, let him not do so with me. But let hym geue me lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to wyne my matter. For though I go befoze, I fynde hym not: If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of hym: Yf I go on the lefte syde, to ponde his worckes, I can not atterpne vnto them.
Agayne, yf I go on the right syde, he hyndeth hym selfe, that I can not se him.
But as for my waye, he knoweth it: * & tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

Nevertheless my fete kepe his path, his hye strete haue I holden, & not gone oute of it. I haue not forsaken the commandement of his lippes, but loke what he charged me with his mouth, that haue I shut vp in my herte. It is he him as he is God, he maketh my herte softe: and saynge that he is Almightye, he putteth me in feare. Thus ca not I get out of darcknesse, the cloude hath so co-owhe: that dyue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take þe wyddowes ore for a pledge: that thrust the pooze oute of the waye, & oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Beholde, the wyld asses in the deserte goo by times, as their maner is, to spoyle: Yea, the very wyl-dernesse ministrereth foode for their chyldren. They reape the corne felde that is not their owne: & gather the grapes out of his vineparde, whom they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so many me are naked and bare, hauynge no clothes to couer them, and to kepe them from colde: So that when the howets in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckinge fatherles chyliden, and put the pooze in prison:
In somuch that they let them go naked without clothinge, and yet the hungrie beate the sheenes. The pooze are fayne to labour in their oyle milles: yea, and to treade in their wyne presses, and yet to suffre thyrst. The whole cytie cryeth vnto the Lord with syghyng, & the coules of the sayne make their cōplante:
But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they (not withstanding) are rebellious & disobedient enemyes:
which seke not his lght and waye, nor turne agayne in to his path. & Tymely in the moornyng do they aryse, to murthur the symple and pooze, and in the nyght they go a stealyng.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the aduouterer, that wapreth for the darcknesse, & sayeth thus in him selfe: Cusch, there shall no man se me, and so he dis-gyfeth his face. In the nyght reason they search the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wyl not knowe the lght. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of death cōmeth vpon them, and they go in horrible darcknesse. The vngodly is very swifte: & that his porton also vpon erth were swifter then the runnyng water, whiche suffreth not the shipman to beholde the saye and pleasaunt bynepardes. & that they (for the wickednesse whiche they haue done) were drawen to the hell, soner then molwe mel-teth at the heate. & that all compassion vpon them were forgotten: that their daynties were worimes, that they were cleane put out of the remembraunce, & bi-terly hewen downe lyke an vncutefull tre. For they mayntayne the baren, and make them that they can not beare, and ce, as longe as they lyue. And though they myght be safe, yet they wyl not receauie it, for their eyes loke vpon their stowe wayes. They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerte, and taken out of the waye: yea, and bitterly placte of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? who wyl the reprove me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are nothyng worth?

The. xlv. Chapter.

Balad proueth that no mā is cleane and without synne before God.

Ben answered Balad
the Subite, and sayde:
Power & feare is wylth him about, that maketh
peace, sperrynge in hys highnesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, & whose lght aryseth ouer all. But how maye a man compared vnto God, & be iustified? & how can he be cleane, that is bozne of a woman? Behold, the Moone shyneth nothing in cōparison to him, & the starres are vncleane in his sight. Howe muche

The xxvii. Chapter.

The continuance and perfectnes of Job, and the part of the beneficent will with God.

And Job proceeded and went forth in his comunicacion, sayinge: As truly as God lyueth (which hath taken away my power fro me) and the Almighty, that hath vexed my mynde: My lippes shall talke of no vanite, and my tonge shall speake no dysceate, whyle my brythe is in me, and as long as the wynde (that God hath geuen me) is in my nostrils.

God forbade, that I should graut poure cause to be ryght. As for me, vntill myne ende come wyl I neuer goo from myne innocenye. My ryghtwise dealyng kepe I faste, which I wyl not for sake: my heart shal not reprove me of my deates. * Therefore myne enemy shal be founde as the vngodlye, and he that taketh parte agaynst me, as the vntightious. What hope hath the vpposite, though he haue greate good, and though God geue him ryches after hys hertes desyre. Both God heare him the louer, when he crieth vnto him in his necessite: Hath he suche pleasure and delyte in the Almighty, that he darre alwaye call vpon God: I wyl teache C you in the name of God, and the thyng that I haue of the Almighty, wyl I not kepe from you. Beholde, ye stande in youre owne conceate, as though ye knewe all thynges. Wherefore then do ye go aboute with such vayne wordes, sayinge: * This is the porcion that the wycked shall haue of God, and the heritage that Tyrantes shall receaue of the Almighty. If he get many chyldren, they shall perishe with the sword, and his posterite shall haue scarcenesse of breade. Like whome he leaueth behynde hym, they shall dye and be buried, and no manne shall haue pite of hys wyddowes. Though he haue as muche money as the duste of the erth, and ray-ment as readye as y claye, he may well prepare it: but the godly shal put it vpon hym, and the innocent shal deale out the moneye. His house shall endure as the mothe, and as a boothe that the watch man maketh. * When the ryche man dyeth, he carieth nothyng with him: he is gone in the twinklynge of an eye. Destruction taketh holde vpon hym as a water floude, and the tempest stealeth him awaye in the nyght season.

A behemente Calte wynde carryeth him hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh him oute of his place. It rusheth in vpon hym, and spareth hym not, he may not escape from the power therof.
Then clappe men theyr handes at him, yea, and feast of him, when they loka

Job sheweth that the wysdome of God is vnto thynges: the stones and the darcke, and the horrible shadowe, with the ryuer of water parteth he a sunder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbourhead: suche as are rude, vnnanelye and boysterous. He byngeth foode oute of the earth, and that whiche is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are cleane

Saphirs, and where the clottes of the earthe are golde. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no bullets eye hath seene: wherein the proude and hye mynded walke not, and where no lyon cometh. There putteth he his hande vpon the stony rockes, and overthroweth the mountaines. Riueres flow oute of the rockes: and loke what is pleasaunt, hys eye seyth it. Out of dropes bringeth he great floudes together, and the thinge that is hyd byngeth he to lychte. How cometh a manne then by wysedome? where is the place that men fynde vnderstandinge? Merelye no man can tell howe worthy a thyng she is, neyther is she founde in the lanbe of the lvinge. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The sea sayeth: she is not w me. She can not be gotten for the most fine golde, neyther maye the pryce of her be boughte with any moneye. No wedges of gold of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphirs may be compared vnto her. No, neyther golde nor Christall, nether swete odours nor golden plate. There is nothyng so worthy, or so excellent, as once to bee named vnto her: for perfecte wysdome goeth far beyond them all. The Topas that cometh oute of Inde, maye in no wyse be lykened vnto her: yea, no manner of apparell howe pleasaunt and fayre soeuer it be.

From whence then cometh wysedome: and where is the place of vnderstandinge? She is hyd from the eyes of all men lvinge: yea, and frome the foules of the ayre. Destruction & death saye: we haue hearde tel of her with our eeres. But God seyth her waye, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the worlde, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he wyped the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the raine in ordre, and gaue the myghtie floudes a lawe. Then when he se her, then declared he her, prepared her & knew her. And vnto man he saide: Beholde, * to feare the LORD, is wisdome: and to forsake euell, is vnderstandinge.

¶ The xxx. Chapter.

Job complayneth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, subtyllie prouinge, hys frenndes of iusturye, because they saye that Job suffered accordinge to hys deservynge.

Sob proceeded and went forth in hys communication, sayinge: that I wet as I was in the monethes by passe, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lychte shyned vpon my heade: when I went after the same lychte, and shynynge euen thorough the darcknesse. As it stode with me, when I was welthy and had ynough: when God prospered my house: when the Almighty was yet with me: when my housholde folkes stode aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer with butter, and when the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thorough the cytte vnto the gate, and when they set me a chayre in the strete: when the younge men (as soone as they sawe me, hyd them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the princes leste of theyr talking, and layed theyr hande to theyr mouth: when the myghty kepte still theyr voyce, and when theyr tonges cleued to the sole of theyr mouthes. When al they that heard me, called me happye: and when al they that sawe me, wysshed me good. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse I wanted helpe. He that shoulde haue bene lost, gaue me a good worde, and the wyddowes herte praised me. And why? I put vpon me a ryghe tuousnes, whiche couered me as a garmente, and equyte was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a foote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore: and when I knew not their cause I sought it oute diligently. I brake the chawes of the vnyghtuous, & plucked the spoule out of their teth.

Therefore, I thought verely, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes shoulde haue bene as manye as the sandes of the sea. For my roote was spede out by the water syde, and the dewe lay vpon my corne. Myne hounour increased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hand. Vnto me men gaue eate, me they regatred, and with sylence they taried for my counsell. If I had spoken, they would haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well taken amonge them. They waited for me, as the earth doth for the rayne: & gaped vpon me, as the ground dothe to receaue the latter shower. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and thys testymonye of my countenance pleased them no thyng at al. When I agreed vnto theyr way, I was the chiefe, and sat as a king amonge hys seruantes: Or as one that comforteth suche as bee in heuynesse.

The xxx. Chapter.

The great dyspyllinge of men and curse of God that Job suffereth.

But nowe they that are myne inferiours and younger then I, haue me in derision: yea, euen they, whose fathers I woulde haue thoughte scoone to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of theyr handes myghte do me no good, & as for theyr age, it is spente and past awaye with out any profit. For very misery and hunger, they wente aboute in the wyldernesse lyke wretches and beggers, pluckynge by herbes from among the bushes, and the Junipers rote was theyr meate. And when they were dysuened for the, men cryed after them, as it had bene after a thefe.

Theyr dwellynge was besyde foule brokes: yea, in the caues and denues of the earthe. Vpon the dype heathe wente they aboute crynge, and in the brome hylls they gathered them together. They were the chyldzen of fooles and vllaynes, whiche are dead away from the world. Nowe am I theyr song, and am become theyr feastynge: shoketh they abhorre me, they fle farre from me, and stayne my face with spetle. For I Lords hathe opened his quyer, he hathe hye me, and put a byrdle in my mouth. Vpon my right hand they rose together agaynste me, they haue hurte my fete, made a waye to destroye me, and my pathe haue they clene marred. It was so easye for them to do me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. They fel vpon me, as it had bene the breaking in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned agaynste me.

Myne honoure banyshe awaye more swyftly then wynde, and my prosperite departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde powdered full of heuynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearced thowowe in the nyghte season, and my synewes take no reste. With all theyr power haue they chaunged my garment, and gyrded me therewith, as it were with a coate. I am euen as it were clape, and am become lyke ashes and duste. When I cry vnto the, thou doest not heare me: and though I stand before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become mine enemye, and with thy violent hand thou takest part agaynste me. In tymes past thou dyddest set me vp on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe halte thou geuen me a very soze fall. Sure I am, that thou wilt deliuer me vnto deathe: where as a lodgyng is prepared for all men lyuinge. Howe ble not men to do byolence vnto them, that are destroyed all ready: but where hurte is done, there ble they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the pooer? Yet neuerthelesse, where as I looked for good, euell happened vnto me: & where as I wayted for lyghte, there came darcknesse. My bowels seeth with me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Hekepy and lowlye came I in: yea, and withoute anye dyspleasure: I stode vp in the congregation, and communed with them. But nowe, I am a companyon of byagons, and a felowe of Estriches. My

The. xxxi. Chapter.

I made a couenaunte with myne eyes. * that I woulde not loke vpon a damsel. for how great a porcion shal I haue of God frome aboue: and what enheritaunce from the almyghty on hye. As for the vngodly and he that ioyneith him selfe to the companie of wycked doers, shal not destruccyon & myserye come vpon hym: * Dothe not he se my wayes, and tel al my goynges. If I haue cleued vnto vanyte, or if my fete haue runne to dysceauce: let me bee weyed in an euen balaunce, that God maye se my innocenpe. * If so be that I haue withdrawen my fote out of the ryghte waye, yf my herte hath folowed myne eye syghte, yf I haue stayned or defyled my handes: O then is it reason that I Lowe, and another eate: yea, that my generacion and posterite bee cleane rote oute. * If my herte hath lusted after my neighboures wif, or if I haue layed wayte at his doze. O then let my wyfe be another mannes harlot, and let other lie with her. * For this is a wickednesse and sinne, that is worthy to be punyshed: yea, a syne that vitterly shoulde consume, and rote out al my substaunce.

B Dyd I euer thynke scozne to do ryght vnto my seruauntes and maidens, whē they had any matter agaynst me. But seyng that God wyll spt in iudgement, what shal I do. And for so much as he wyll nedes byset me, what answere shal I geue hym. He that fashyoned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also. were we not bothe shapen alyke in oure mothers bodyes. When the pooze despyeth any thyng at me, haue I denyed it them. Haue I caused the wydowe stande waytinge for me in vainer. Haue I eaten my porcyon alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no parte with me. for mercye grewe by with me fro my youth, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any manne peryshe thorow nakednesse, and wante of clothyng. Or any pooze manne for lacke of rayment, whose sides thanched me not, because he was warmed with the wolfe of my sheper.

Dyd I euer lyfte by my hande to hurte the fatherlesse: yea, in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in auctorite: then let myne arme fall frome my shoulber, and myne arme holes be broken frome the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeaunce and punishment of God, and knew very well, that I was not able to beare his burthen. Haue I put my truste in gold. Or haue I sayde to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my confydence. Haue I reioyced because my substaunce was grete, and because my hande gat so muche. Dyd I euer greatly regarde the ryngs of the sunne. or had I the goinge downe of the moone in great reputacion. Hath my herte medled pryuely with any deceiver. Or dyd I euer kysse myne owne hande: that were a wickednesse worthy to be punyshed, for then shoulde I haue denied the God that is aboue. * Haue I euer reioyced at the hurte of myne enemy. Or was I euer glad, that anye harme happened vnto hym. Oh no: I neuer suffred my mouthe to do suche a synne, as to wysch hym euil. Yet they of myne owne housholde save: who shal lette vs to haue oure be: lye full of fleshe. I haue not suffred a stranger to lye wythoute, but opened my doozes vnto hym that wente by the waye. Haue I euer done anye wycked dede where thorow I shamed my selfe before men: or anye abhomy nacion, that I was fayne to hyde it. For yf I had feared any great multytude of people: or yf I had bene dyspyssed of the simple, O then shoulde I haue bene affrayed. Thus haue I quietly spent my lyfe: and not gone out at the doze. O that I had one whiche woulde heare me. Lo, this is my cause. Let the almyghty geue me answere: and let hym that is my cotrary partye sew me with a lible. Then shal I take it vpon my shoulber, and as a garlande aboute my heade. I haue tolde þ nombre of my goynges, & deliuered the vnto him as to a prince. But yf case bee that my lande crye agaynst

Eliu after the other had synched theyr communica-cion, reponeth them of folyshnes. He maketh not a man wylle, but the spirit of God.

So these thre men would stryue no more wth Job, because he helde hi selfe a ryghteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite of y<sup>e</sup> kindred of Ham, was verie sore displeased at Job, that he called him selfe iuste before God. And with Jobs thre frendes he was angry also, because they hadde founde no reasonable answer to ouer-come hym. Nowe tarped Eliu tyll they had ended theyr communicacion with Job, for why, they were elder then he.
So when Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe, that these thre menne were not able to make Job answer, he was wylcontente: so that he gaue aunswere him selfe, and sayde: * Considring, that I am young, and ye be men of age, I was astrayde, and durste not shewe to the my mynde, for I thoughte thus within my selfe: It becometh olde men to speake, * & the aged to teach wysdom.
Euerie man (no doute) hath a mynde, * but it is the inspiration of the almighty that geueth vnderstandinge. All men are not wyse, neyther both euerie aged man vnderstande the thyng that is law farre as I maye bee hearde) and wyl shewe you myne oppynion. for when I had wated tyl ye made an ende of your talkinge, and hearde your wysedome, municacion yea, when I had diligently pondered what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made anye good argumente agaynst Job, or that directely coude make answer vnto his wordes: lest ye shoulde prayse your selues, to haue founde oute wysdome: because it is God that hath call hym out, and no man. Neuerthelesse, seynge he hath not spoken vnto me, therefore wyl not I an-swere hi as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coude not make answer, nor speake one worde) but in so muche as ye wyl not speake, stan-dyng as I shal be dome men, and making no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte to shawe him an answer, and to shewe him my meaninge. for I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is with in me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, whiche hath no venter, and bursteth the newe vessels in sunder. Therefore wyl I speake, that I maye haue a venter: I wyl open my lippes, and make aun-then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stand before my face to face. Behold, before God am I euen as thou, for I am falslyoned & made euen of the same mould. Therfore, thou nedest not be a feared of me, nether nedest thou to feare that my auctoryte shalbee to heuie for the. Nowe haste thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am cleue without any faute, I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath pecked a quatell againste me, and taketh me for his enemye: he hath put my fote in the stocks, and loketh narrowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these vntreasonable wordes of thyne wyll I make answer.

Shoulde God be reproued of man? Why doest thou then stryue agaynste hym, because he geueth the no accomptes of all his doinges? For when God dothe once commaunde a thyng, there shoulde no manne be curyous, to search whether it be ryght. * In dreames and visions of the night season (when sloumyng cometh vpon men, that they fall a slepe in theyr beddes) he rowndeth them in the eares, he, infourmeth them, and sheweth them playnly, that it is he, whiche withdraueth man from euyl, & lyuereth hym from pryde, kepeth hys soule from destruccion, and his lyfe fro the swearde. He chasteneth hym wyth syknesse, & byngeth him to his bedde: he layeth soze punyshmente vpon hys bones, so that hys lyfe may away with no breade, and hys soule abhorreth to eate anye dayntye meate: In so muche that his body is cleane consumed away, and hys bones appeare no moze. Hys soule draweth on to destruccion, and his lyfe to death. Nowe yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sente for to speake vnto man, & to shew him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercifull vnto him, and sayeth: He shalbee deliuered that he fall not downe to destruccion, for I am sufficiently reconeyled. Than hys fleshe (whiche hath bene in mysery and trouble) shalbe as it was in his yowth. For if he submyt him selfe vnto God, he is gracious, and sheweth hym hys countenance ioyfull, and rewardeth man for his ryghtuousnes.

Suche a respecte hath he vnto man: Therfore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hath chastened and reformed me: I dyd vnyghtuously, neuerthelesse he hath not recompensed me thereafter. Yea he hath deliuered my soule from destruccion, & my lyfe, that it leith the lychte. Lo, thus worketh God alwaye with man, that he kepe the hys soule from perpyng, and letteth him enioye the lychte of the lyuynge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the styll, vntyll I haue spoken. But if thou haste anye thyng to saye, then aunswere me, and speake, for thy answer pleaseth me. If thou haste no thyng, then heare me, and holde thy tongue, so shal I teache the wyldome.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

In proceeding forth in this communicacion, sayd: Heare my wordes (O ye wyle men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the * monthe tasteth the meates, so the eare proueth and discerneth þ wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs seke it out amonge oure selues that we may know what is ryghte. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghtuous, but God dothe me wronge. I muste needs bee a lyer, though my cause be right, and violent: I am plagued where as I made no faute: where is there such one as Job, that drinketh vp scornfulnesse lyke water? whiche goeth in the compaignie of wycked doers, and walketh with vngodlye men: for he saythe: Though a man be good, yet is he naught before god. Therfore herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he should medle with wickednesse: and farre be it from the almyghtye, that he should medle with vnyghtuous dealing: but he rewardeth the workes of manne, and causeth euery man to fynde accordynge to his wayes. For sure it is, that God condemneth no man wrongously, and the iudgemente of the Almightye is not vnyght birightuous. Who ruleth the earth in his steade. Or, whome hath he set to gouerne the whole worlde. To whome hath he geuen his herte, for to draw his spirite and brythe vnto hym. All fleshe shall come together vnto naughte, and all men shall turne agayne vnto earth. If thou now haue vnderstanding, heare what I saye, and herken to the voyce of my wordes.

May he be made whole, that loueth no ryghte. If thou were a verie innocent man, shouldest thou then bee punished. For he is euen the same, that knoweth the rebellious kynges, and sayeth to Princes: Ungodly menne are ye. He hath no respecte vnto the perionnes of the lordly, and regardeth not the ryche more the p. poore. For they be all the workes of hys handes. In the twynckling of an eye shall they be flaine: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyrauntes rage, then shall they perishe, and be taken away without handes. And why hys eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth all hys goynges. Ther is no darcknes nor thicke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers from him. For no man shall bee suffred to go into iudgemente with God.

Many one, yea innumerable dothe he punyssh, and setteth other in theyr steades. For he knoweth theyr euell and darcke workes, therfore shall they bee destroyed. They that were in steade of Seates, dealt lyke vngodly men. Therfore turned they backe trayterously and vnfaithfully from hym, and wold not receaue hys wayes. In so muche that they haue caused the voyce of the poore to come vnto hym, and now he heareth the complaynte of suche as are in necessite. If he deliuer and graunte pardon, who wyl iudge or condemne. But if he hyde away his countenance, who wyl turne it aboute agayne, whether it be to the people or to anye man. For the wyckednesse and synne of the people, he maketh an ypoctyte to reigne ouer them. For so much then as I haue begonne to talke of God, I wyl not hynde the. If I haue gone a mysse, enfourme me: If I haue done wronge, I wyl leaue of. Wylte thou not geue a reasonable answer, wete thou a trayped of anye thyng, sayinge thou beganest fyrste to speake, and not I. For els the menne of vnderstanding and wisdom, that haue herde me, myght saye: What canste thou speake. As for Job he hath neyther spoken to the purpose nor wyllye. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath turned hym selfe to the wycked: yea aboute hys synnes he hath blasphemed, which offence he hath done euen before vs, in þ he stryueyth against God with his wordes.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

In spake moreouer, I sayde: Thyngest thou it ryghte that thou sayest: I am ryghtuous before God. Seinge thou sayest so, howe doest thou knowe it. What thinge hast thou more excellent the I, that am a sinner. Therfore wyl I geue answer vnto the and thy frendes: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consydre the cloudes, howe they are hygher then thou. If thou synnest, what doest thou vnto hym. If thine offences bee manye, howe gettest thou hys fauour. If thou be ryghtuous what geuest thou him. Or what receauest he of thy handes. Of suche an vngodlye personne as thou, and of the son of man that is ryghtuous as thou pretendest to be: there is a greate crye and complaynte made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea euery manne complayneth vpon the cruell arme of tyrauntes. For suche one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me, and that shyneth vpon vs, that we myght praise him in the nyghte. Whiche geueth vs more vnderstandinge then he dothe the beastes of the earthe, and teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

If anye suche complayne no manne geueth answer, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude tyrauntes. But yf a man call vpon God, dothe not he heare hym. Dothe not the almighty accepte his cry. Whan thou speakest then, shouldest thou not be pardoned, yf thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy truste in him, then vseth he no violence in his wrath, nether hath he pleasure in curpous & depe inquisitiones. Therfore

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Eliphaz sheweth wherefore God punyssheth & correcteth. In proceeded forth in hys talking & sayd: Holde the styl a litle, & I shal shew the, what I have yet to speake on Gods behalfe: I wyll open vnto thee yet more of myne vnderstandynge, & proue my maker righteous: True are my wordes, & no lye; & I knowledg wher w all I argue against the, is perfect: Behold, god casteth not a waye & mighty, for he him selfe is mighty i power & wisdome:

As for the vngodlye, he preferueth them not, but helpeth & ppoze to theyz righte: * He turneth not his eyes away from the righteous; * he setteth vp kynnes in theyz trone, and confirmeth the, so that they alwaye lyt therein: But yf they be layed in prison and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of pouertye; then sheweth he them their worckes and dedes and the sines wherwith they haue bled cruell byolence:

* He with punishing and nurrtyng of them, cōwnderth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of fro their wickedyne, and to amende: * If they nowe wyll take hede and bee obediēte, they shall were oute theyz dayes in prosperite, and theyz yeares in pleasure and ioye: But if they wyll not obeie, they shall go thorow the swearde, and perissh or euer they bee aware: As for suche as be sayned, dissemblers, and ypocrites, they heape vp wyathe for them selues; for they call not vpon him, though they be hys prisoners: Thus theyz soule perissheth in solyphnesse, and theyz lyfe with the condemned: The poore deliuereth he out of hys straytenesse, and cōforteth such as be in necessite and trouble: Euen so shall he kepe thee (yf thou wilt be contente) from the bottomlesse pytte that is benethe; and yf thou wyll holde the quyet, he shall fyll thy table with plenteousnesse:

Neuerthelesse thou hast condemned the iudgemente of the vngodlye, yea euen suche a iudgemente and sentence shalt thou suffice: For then shall not thy cause be stylled with crueltye, nor pacyfied with manye gyftes. Hady god ordeyned then, that the glorious lyfe of the, and all such myghty men should not be put downe: Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyl there come a night for the, to set other people in thy steade: But be ware, that thou turne not asyde to wickednesse and scime, which hitherto thou haste chosen more then mekenesse: Bes holde, God is of a myghty hys power: Where is there suche a gyde and lawe geuer as he? Who wyll reproue hym of his waye? who wyll say vnto hym: thou haste done wronge?

Consider how great and excellent hys worckes be, whome all men loue & prayse; yea wondze at him, and yet they se hym but a farre of. Beholde, so greates is God, that he passeth our knowledg, nether are we able to come to the experience of hys peares: * He turneth the water to smalle droppes, he dryueth his cloudes together for to rayne, so that they poure downe and drop vpon men: He can sprede out the cloudes (a coueryng of his tabernacle) and cause hys lyghte to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of the sea: By these thynges gouerneth he his people, and geueth them a boundaunce of meat: In the turnyng of a hande he hydeth the lyghte, and at hys commaundemente it cometh agayne: The risynge vp thereof sheweth he to hys frendes and to the cattell.

The notes.

a. With punishing and nurrtyng to rōunde them in the eares, is, to byng them to the knowledg of their synnes, and to cause them to be perswaded in them selues, that they be punysshed for them.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Eliphaz proueth that the wysdome of God is vnsearchable.

A this, my hert is assayed, and moued oute of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voice, and the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euerye thyng vnder the heauen, and his lyghte reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaringe voyce foloweth him: for his glorious maiesty geueth suche a thondze clap, that (though a manne heare it) yet maye he not perceaue ceauē it afterwarde. It geueth an horrible sounde, when God sendeth oute his voyce: greates thiges doth he, which we can not cōprehende. * Whē he commaundeth the snōwe, it falleth vpon the erth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the shōwers haue their strength, and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon every man, that they might knowe their owne worckes. The beastes cripe into their dēnes, and take their rest. Out of the south cometh the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the breath of God, the frost cometh, and the waters are shed abroad. The cloudes do their labour in geuing moystnesse, the cloudes poure downe their rayne. He dystributeth also on every syde, accordig as it pleaseth him to deale out his worckes, & they maye do, whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to punyssh any land, or to doo good vnto them, that feke hym.

C Herken vnto this (O Job) stande still, and consydre the wondrous worckes of God. Art thou of counsell wyth God, when he doth these thinges? Whē he canseth & lyght to come forth of his cloudes? Art thou of his counsell whē he spredeth out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowledge of his wōders? and howe thy clothes are warme, when the lande is still thorow the South wynde? Hast thou helped hi to spreade out the heauen, which is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto him, for we are vnnmete because of darcknes. Shal it be tolde him what I saye? Should a man speake, or should he kepe it backe? For every man seyth not the light, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes, whiche he tēseth, whan he maketh the wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of the North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare cometh from God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghtye: for in power, equite, & tryghtheousnesse, he is hyer thā can be expessed. Seynge then that every body feareth him, why shoulde not all wyse men also stande in feare of him?

The notes.

a. The breath of God here signifieth a stronge and vehement wynde, as is the north wynde.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The wonders and maruelles that the Lord hath done from the begynnyngs.

He spake the Lord vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: what is he that hideth his mynde in folyshe wordes? * Gyde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for

I wyl question the, se thou geue me a directe answer. Where wast thou, whē I layde the foundations of the earth? Tell planely yf thou hast vnderstandinge. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or, who hath spredde the lyne vpon it? Where vpon stande the pylers of it? Or, who layed & corner stones? Where wast thou, when the morning starres prayled me together, and all the chyldren of God reioysed triumphantly? Who shutt the sea with doores, when it brake forth as a chyld out of his mothers wombe? Whē I made the cloudes to be a couertynge for it, & swadled it with & darcher. When I gaue it my commaundement, makinge doores & barres for it, sayinge: Hither to shalt thou come, but no further, and here shalt thou laye downe thy proud and hye waues. Hast thou geuen the moornyng his charge (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the dawe spring his place, & it might take holde of the corners of the earth, and that the vngodly might be shake out? Their tokens and weapes hast thou turned lyke claye, & set the vpon agayne as the chaunge of a garmēt. Yea, thou hast spoiled the vngodly of their lyght, and broken the arme of the proud. Camest thou euer into & ground of & sea: or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the depe? Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doore of euerlastyng treasure? Hast thou also perceaued howe broad the earth is? Howe yf thou hast knowledge of all, then shewe me where lyght dwelleth, & where darcknes is: that thou mayest bringe vs vnto their quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to their houses.

Knewest thou (whē thou wast borne) howe olde thou shouldest be: aggentest thou euer in to the thesauruses of the knowe, or hast thou sene the secreete places of the hayle, * which I haue prepared against the tyme of trouble, against the tyme of batell and warre. By what waye is the lyght parted, and the heate dealt out vpon the earth: who deuydeth the aboundance of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for þe stozmy wether, that it watereth and moystureth the drye and baren grounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no man remayneth: who is the father of rayne: or who hath begotten the dropes of dewe. Out of whose wombe came the yse: who hath genyred the coldnes of the ayre: that the waters are as harde as stones, and yce congeled aboue the depe. Hast thou brought the vii. starres together: or art thou able to break the circle of heauen: Canst thou bringe forth the morning starre or the euerynge starre at conuenient tyme, and conueye them home agayne: knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set by the ordinaunce therof vpon the erth: Moreover, canst thou lyfte by thy voyce to þe cloudes, that they maye poynt downe a greate rayne vpon the: Canst thou thondre also that they maye go their waye, and be obediēt vnto the, sayinge: Lo here are we. who geueth sure wysedome or stedfast vnderstandinge: who nombzeth the cloudes in wysedome: who styllleth the behement waters of the heauen: who turneth the clottes to dust, and then to be clottes agayne: Hunttest thou the praye from the lyon, or fedest thou his welpes lying in their denimes, and lupyng in their couches: * who prouideth meate for the rauens, when his pounge ones crye vnto God, and ste aboute for want of meate.

The notes.

a. He sayth not that heauen was made before the earth, but when his godly wysdome made them, he sayth he had a dwelling place and that he needed no earthly mansyon: for then was he prayed of the angels, whiche here are called the children of God. He meaneth also that there was no mā by or helped him, when he made the starres and created the intellectuall and spirituall natures.

The xxxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job, shewing hym by the examples of his workes, that his rightwysnes is vnsearchable.

Knowest thou the tyme when þe wilde goates bringe forth their pounge among the stony rockes: or layest þe waye when the hyndes ble to fawne: rekenest thou the monethes after they engendze, that thou knowest the tyme of their beateringe: or when they lye downe, when they cast their pounge ones, and when they are deliuered of their trauayle and payne: how their pounge ones growe by and ware greate thow good fedying: who letteth the wilde asse go fre, or who loseth the bondes of the mule: vnto whom I haue geue the wyldernes to be their house, and the vntylled lande to be their dwelling place. That they may geue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, nether regarde the cryenge of the dyuer: but seke their pasture about the mountaynes, and folow þe grene grasse. wyll the vnicorne be so tame as to do the seruice, or to abyde styll by thy crybe: Canste thou bynde the yock aboute him in thy foromes, to make him plowe after the in the balleis: Mayest thou trust him (because he is stronge) or commit thy labour vnto him: Mayest thou beleue him, that he wyll bringe home the corne, or to cary any thing vnto the barne. The Estrich (whose fethers are sayter than the wynges of the sparowe hauke) when he hath layed his egges vpon the ground, he breedeth the in þe dust, & forgetteth the: so that they might be troden with fete, or broken with some wyld beast. So harde is he vnto his pounge ones, as though they were not his, & labourereth in bayne without any feare. And that because God hath taken wysdome fro him, & hath not geue him vnderstandp lge. When his tyme is, he flyeth bp on hys, and careteth nether for hoyse nor man.

C Hast thou geue the hourse his strength, or lerned hym to bowe downe his necke wth feare: that he letteth hym selfe be dyuen forth lyke a greshopper, where as the stoute neyenge that he maketh, is fearfull: he breaketh the grounde wth the hofes of his fete chearkully in his strength, and runneth to mete the harness men. He layeth asyde all feare, his stomack is not abated, nether starteth he a backe for any swerde.
Though the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shyld gylstre:
yet russheth he in fearfully, and beateth vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blow, thusly (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battell a farte of, the noyse, the Capitaynes and the shoutinge.

D Commeth it thowowe thy wysdome, that the Goshauke flyeth towarde the South: Doth the Eagle moue bp, and make his nest on hye at thy commaundemēt: He abyde in the stony rockes, and vpon the hye toppes of harde mou-taines, where no man can come. From thence maye he beholde his praye, and loke farre about wth his eyes. His younge ones are fed wth bloude, * and where any deed body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

Moreover, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Can he that stryue wth the Almyghtye, be at rest: Shoulde not he whiche disputeth wth God, geue hym an answer: Job answered the Lorde, sayinge: Beholde, I am to hyle a personne, to answer the, therfore wyl I lay my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twyse haue I spokē, but I wyl saye

- b. The Behuies vnderstande by Behemoth the greatest beast in the erth that is an Elephant. Other vnderstande therby any earthly beaste that is great: but vnto an Elephant do all the proper- ties here recyted ryght well agree, wherfore it seemeth most agreeable to the trueth, that by the worde be signified an Elephant.

¶ Of the same Icyathan wherof is mencyoned in the Chapter afoze.

Who is able to stāde before me? Or, who hath geue me any thyng afoze hande, that I am bounde to reward him agayne? All thynges vnder heauen are myne. I feare him not, whether he threaten or speake fayre. Who lyf- teth him vp, and stryppeth him out of his clothes, or * who taketh him by the byt of his bydle? Who openeth the doze of his face? for he hath horrible tethe round aboute. His body is couered with scales as it were with shyldeg, lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together. One is so ioynd to another, that no ayze cā come in: Yea, one hangeth so vpon ano- ther, and stycketh so together, that they can not be sundered. His neslinge is lyke a glystering fyze, and his eyes lyke the moornyng shyne. Out of his mouth go torches and fyze brandes, out of his nostrels ther goyth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sethyng pot. His byeth maketh the coales burne, the flamme goeth out of his mouthe. In his necke remaineth strength, and before his face sorowe is turned to gladnesse. The mēbres of his body are ioynd so strypte one to ano- ther, and cleue so fast together, that he can not be moued.

His hert is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the Rithpe that the hammer man smytteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtyest of all are afrayed, and the waues hemy. If he drawe out the swearde, there may nether speare, nor byest plate, abyde hym. He setteth as muche by a strawe as by yron, and as muche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He starteth not awaye for him that ben- deth the bowe: and as for synge sto- nes, he careth as muche for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth hym to scozne that maketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in the myze lyke the sharpe pot sherdeg. He maketh the depe to sethe and boyle lyke a pot, and ste- reth the sea together lyke an oymntment. The waye is lyght after him, the depe is his walkyng place. vpon erth is there no power lyke vnto his, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man will consydre all hys thynges, this same is a king ouer all the chyldre of yppre,

The .xlii. Chapter.

¶ The repentance of Job. The prayere for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto him.

When Job answered the Lorde, & sayd: I knowe that thou hast power ouer al thynges, and that ther is no thought hyd vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shalbe knowne? Therefore haue I spoken vn- wysely, sepyng these thynges are so hye, and passe myne vnderstandyng. O her- ken thou vnto me also, & let me speake: answer vnto the thyng that I will aske the. I haue geuen diligent care vnto the, and nowe I se the with myne eyes.

eyes. Wherefore I geue myne owne selfe the blame, and take repentaunce in the duste and ashes.

Nowe when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanit: I am displeased with thee and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoken the thing that is right before me, lyke as my seruaunte Job hath done. Therefore take. vii. oxen and vii. cammes, and goo to my seruaunte Job, * offre by also for youre selues a brentoffring: and let my seruaunt Job praye for you. Him wyll I accepte, and not deale with you after youre folyshe- nesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng whiche is ryghte, lyke as my seruaunte Job hathe done.

So Eliphaz the Themanite, Bal- dad the Suhite and Sophar the Naamathite wente theyr waye, and byd accordyng as the Lorde commaunded them. * The Lorde also accepted the per- sonne of Job, and the Lorde turned him vnto Job, when he prayed for his fren- des: * Yea the Lorde gaue Job twyfe as much as he hadde afore.

And then came there vnto him al his brethren, all hys sisters, with all them he had bene of his acquaintaunce afore, and ate breade with him in hys house, wondryng at hym, and comfortyng him ouer all the trouble, that the Lorde had broughte vpon him. Euery manne gaue hym a shepe and a Jewell of gold.

* And the Lorde made Job rycher than he was before: for he had. xlii. shepe vi. camels, a. poucke of oxen, and a. asses. He had chyldezen also. vii. sonnes and. iii. daughters. The fyrste called Waxe: the seconde Pouerte: the thyrde All plenteousnes. In al the land, were none founde so fayre as the doughters of Job, and theyr father gaue the enheritaunce amonge theyr brethren.

After thys lyued Job. lxx. yeres, so that he saw hys chyldezen, and hys chyldezens chyl- dzen to the fourthe generacyon. And so he dyed, being olde and of a perfect age.

The fyrst psalme.

Those that forsake the counnelles and tradicions of the wyched, and wholy geue them selues to knowe the lawe of God, and to shewe it in their lyuynge: doth this psalme pronounce blessed, bothe here and in the worlde to come: and the contrarie parte, in bothe the worldes, miserable and wyched.

Blessed is the mā þ goeth not in þ counsel of the vn godlye: þ abydeyth not in a the waye of synners, b and spt: teth not in þ seate of the scorneful.

But delitech in the law of the Lord: and exerceyth hym selfe in hys lawe, bothe daye and nyghte.

Suche a man is lyke a tre planted by the water syde, that byngeth forth his frute in due season.

His leaues shall not fall of, and loke whatsoeuer he doeth, it shall prosper.

As for the vngodlye, it is not so with them: but they are lyke the duste, whiche the wynde scatereth away from of the grounde.

Therefore the vngodly shall not be able to stande in the iudgement, nether the synners in the congregacion of the ryghteous.

For the Lord aloweth the waye of the ryghteous, but the waye of the vngodlye shall perishe.

The Notes.

a. The maner and ordinaunces of sinners where in they walke as if they were in a waye are called the waye of synners. And in the scriptures, it is com- munt too take this waye for whatsoeuer we do or go aboute be it good or euil. As in the last verse of this psalme.

b. He sittyeth in the seate of the scornfull, that conspircyth with them, and becommeth felowe of their mysdoles, as in the psalm. xxx. b

c. He standeth in iudgement, that wyppeth the proccesse, and hath sentence pronounceth on hys syde, as he that lettereth the proccesse and hath sen- tence pronounceth agaynst right and reueth, rob- beth iudgement. As in Esai. i. a. So then this verse meaneth no more here, but that the wicked foreribbe a sentence geuen vpon them, þ they shall not be able to abyde when the Lord shall come to the general iudgement. It meaneth not that the wyched shall nor appeare in iudgement.

The. ii. psalme.

They that knowe not God are moued agaynst the kynge of Christ: with wonderfull ententes, but in vayne. Yet runneth their rage thorow the whole worlde. The onely waye to health is to submitte thy selfe to Christ.

Why do the heathen frowne? Why do the people ymagyne vayne thynges?

The kynge of þ earthe stande vp, and the rulers are come to- gether, agaynst the Lord, & agaynst hys anoynted.

* Let vs breake their bondes asun- der, & caste awaye their yocke from vs.

* Neuerthelesse he that dwelleth in heauē, shall laughe them to scorn: yea, euen the Lord hym selfe shall haue them in derysion.

Then shall he speake vnto them in his wrathe, and bere them in hys sore dyspleasure.

* Yet haue I set my kynge vpon my holy hill of Sion.

* As for me, I wyl preache the lawe, wherof the Lord hath sayd vnto me: Thou arte my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the.

Desyre of me, and I shall geue thee the heathen for thyne inheritaunce. Yea, the vttermost partes of the worlde for thy possession.

* Thou shalt rule them with a rodde of yron, and breake them in peces lyke an earthen vessel.

* Be wylse nowe therfore, O ye kyn- ges, be warned, ye that are iudges of the earthe.

Serue the Lord with feare, and re- ioyse before him with reuerence.

Kysse the sonne, lest the Lord be an- gry, & so ye perishe from þ ryght waye.

For his wrathe shall be kyndled short- ly: blessed are all they that put theyr truste in hym.

The Notes.

a. God speaketh to men in his wrathe, when he ordereth and determineth to destroy them as he doth in wra- the. xxxii. a.

b. This Iron rod is a sure vndomable dominion. An Iron rodde.

c. This is after the Debue and it is a figuratiue To kysse speache, in whiche by the fygure is vnderstaunde the sounde that whiche is signified thereby. For by the kysse of the kynge hande euen now a dayes in many regions, so the subiectes restify that they wyl be in the faythe and power of the kynge. He calleth hym sonne because he before broughte in the fa- ther saing: Thou art my sonne. The storye of this tytyle is in the seconde of the bygges from the .xv. Chapter vnto the .xx.

a. In the Hebrue tongue a psalme is called Agitrom that is a songe, or as some wyl, the sounde of an harpe.

b. This worde after Kabi kinci was a sygne or token of lyfynge vpon the voyce, and also a monition and aduertismente to enforce the thought and mynde earnestly to geue hede to the meynynge of the verse wherunto it is added. Some wil that it signifye perpetuallie or verely.

c. The teethe of the vngodlye are broken, when their blasphemie is broughte to nought, as psalme. lvi. b.

The. iii. psalme.

David prayeth the beniuolence and the ready helpe of God towards hym in the conspiracie of Absalom. He rejoyceth the madnes of the brades and rulers of Israel that conspyred agaynste hym, and calleth them agayne to amendement: and after he gloryeth of the aduancement of goodes, peace and safete restored agayne vnto him by the benyfyte of the Lorde.

To the Chaunter in Reginoth, a psalme of David.

Hearke me when I call, O God of my righteousness: that comfortest me in my trouble: haue mercy vpon me, & her-ken vnto my prayer.

O ye sonnes of men, how longe wyl ye blaspheme myne honoure: why haue ye suche pleasure in vanite, and seke after lyes: Selah.

Knowe this, that the Lord dealeth matuelously with his saynte: & when I call vpon the Lorde, he heareth me.

* Be angrye, but synne not: comen with your owne hertes vpon your beddes, and remembre youre selues. Selah.

Offre the sacrifice of righteousness, and put youre truste in the Lorde.

There be many that say: who wil do vs any good: Lorde: lyfte vp vpon vs the light of thy countenance.

Thou reioycest myne herte, though the their increase be greate bothe in corne and wyne.

Therefore wyl I laye me downe in peace, and take my rest: for thou Lorde onely settest me in a sure dwellinge.

The Notes.

a. The whiche is here translated, to the chaunter is in Hebrue Lamnazah. Whiche worde after Ezra and David Kimhi (expouitours in hebrue) signifyeth to the chiefe of the syngers, whom we commonly call in englyshe, the father of the quyre, or chaunter. This interpretacion also, do both the mosse number and the best lerned of the latinistes, best allowe, and therefore haue I folowed the same the whole psalter thowme expouit by this worde chaunter. Notwithstandynge dyuers authours do diuerslye interpret it. Some saye that it signifyeth, to the victour or ouercommer, some to the victorie, whiche maye rous agre together, yf thou take a psalme to be a expyng vpon and exhortacion to put oure truste in God, beyng sure to obtrayne the victorie. And where some interpret, vnto the ende vnderstande euery the same. For therefore do we put oure truste in God, that we maye come to the ende of the victorie. Some translate the tytyle thus. A beyng and often made exhortacion in instrumentes of musike, a psalm to David, that is, as they them selues expounde it. A psalm reuelate vnto David. For David is in Hebrue the darthe east and not the geuerne.

b. This worde signifyeth the tune or note of the instrumentes. Wher after the psalmes before which it is prefixed were songe. For the psalmes were song at certen instrumentes, but so the sweet tune & melody of instrumentes, prepared & mynde more perfectly to receyue the word of Godlye dictie.

c. God lyfeth by the lyght of his countenance vpon vs, when by manifest benyfytes sheweth vnto vs, he declarerth him selfe to fauour vs.

Psal. 11. a

Haue mercye vpon me (O Lorde) consydre the trouble that I am in amonge myne enemyes, thou that lyftest me vp from the * gates of death.

That I maye shewe all thy prayses within the * portes of the doughter of Sion, a reioyse in thy sauynge healthe.

As for the heithen, they are suncken downe in the pytte that they made: in the same nette whiche they sprede oute pyuely, is theyr owne feete taken.

Thus the Lorde is knowen to execute true iudgemente, when the vngodlye is trapped in the workes, of hys owne handes. Selah.

The wycked muste be turned vnto hell, and all the heithen that forget God.

But the pooze shall not all waye be oute of remembraunce, the paypente abydyng of suche as be in trouble shall not perishe for euer.

Up Lorde, let no man haue the v-per hande, let the heithen be condemned before the.

O Lorde set a scolemaster ouer them, that the heithen maye knowe them selues to be but men. b Selah.

How

i. Of David, Psalm. x. and. xi.

How be it this title should seme more conuenient for the next psalme which after the Hebrewes, is a distinct psalme from this, where as the latinistes make this and the nexte bothe one.

Cities. c. Here do cities signifie, the defences, Turre, armour, wylly doctrine, sayned rightuousnes, and all that the worlde trusteth in agaynst the Lorde: as i. xxi. xliii. b.

He maketh inquisition d. As some wylly. He requirerth their bloude or slaughter, that is, he leauerth not innocent bloude vnauged nor forgetteth the crye of the afflicted, as Gene. xliii. b.

The complaynte of the poore e. The complaynte of the poore, is the feruent despayre and burning affection, wherewith they crye vnto the lord, and be heard. By the poore is vnderstande in the scripture, the afflicted, whose their neede and temptation, and do sorowe & lament that the truerth is ouertreden puttynge no truste in any thyng that is in this worlde. Yea these be they that be despyred and forsaken of þ world, and cleaue vnto the liuynge God onely, assured that at his hand they shall fynde helpe, though the worlde be neuer so extreme agaynst them. As in the nexte psalme.

The gates of death. f. The gates of death, are þ iudgements to death, the counsellors of the wycked, the congregations of Satan, the doctrines of falsenes, and what so euer leadech to death.

Portes of Sion. g. The portes of Sion, are the companies of the good and saydfull, wherein are recyted þ truerth of God, and all that leadech to lyfe. As psalme. lxxvii. a.

Selach. h. Of this loke in the. iii. psalme. a.

The. x. psalme.

A prayer agaynst frowarde, malicious, and wycked men, which both with whyles and violence oppresse all that are poore and helpelesse: wherein also their intolerable pyde and vngodlynes, with their studie and desyre to hurte other are described.

There is no Tytle in the Hebrew.

Why arte thou gonne so farre of, O Lorde: wylte thou hyde thy selfe in tyme of trouble: whyle the vngodly hath the ouer hade, the poore must suffre persecution:

That they were taken in the imagination whiche they go aboute.

For the vngodly maketh booste of his owne hertes desyre, the couetous blesseth him selfe, & blasphemeth þ lord.

The vngodly is so proude and ful of indignacion, that he careth not: nether is God before his eyes.

His wayes are alwaye fylthye, thy iudgements are farre out of his sight, he despyeth all his enemyes.

For he sayeth in his herte: Tushe, I shal neuer be caste downe, there shal no harme happen vnto me.

Rome. iii. e

* His mouth is full of cursynge, fraude and dysceate: vnder hys tonge is a trauayle and sorowe.

Prover. i. b

* He spytteth larkynge in þ gardes, that he maye pitiuelye murder the innocent, hys eyes are set vpo the poore.

He lyeth waytynge secretlye, as it were a lion in hys denne.

He lurketh that he maye rauyn the poore, yea to rauyn þ poore, when he hath gotten him in to his net.

Then Smyteth he, then oppressech he and casteth downe þ poore with hys auctorite.

For he sayeth in his herte: Tushe; God hath forgoten, he hath turned away hys face, so that he wylly neuer se it.

Arise O Lorde God, lyfte vp thyne hande, and forget not the poore.

Wherfore shoulde the wycked blaspheme God, and saye in his herte: tushe, he careth not for it:

This thou seyst, for thou consydrest the myserye and sorowe.

The poore geueth hym selfe ouer in to thy hande, and commytteth hym vnto the, for thou arte the helper of the frendelesse.

Breake thou the arme of the vngodlye and malyciouse, searche out the wickednesse whiche he hath done, that he maye perishe.

The Lorde is kynge for euer, the heithen shal perishe oute of his lande.

Lorde, thou hearest the despyrous longynge of the poore: they hearte is sure, that thyne eare hearkeneth therto.

Helpe the fatherlesse and poore vnto their ryght, that the vngodlye be no moze exalted vpon earth.

The Notes.

a. In the scripture, tranell and sorowe are taken for wyckednes and malice, as in the psalme. cxi. c.

b. In the scripture, the face of God, dothe often tymes signifie, the fauoure, grace or beniuolence of God. As in the psalme. lxxv. b. c. xix.

The. xi. psalme.

We reasoneth his wrongs with them that trust hym forthe of all the dominion of Israel, so that he founde no place to abyde in. He prayeth his confidence to godwarde, and the iudgements of God both towards the good and euill.

* To the chaunter, of David.

In the Lorde put I my trust: howe wylly ye then saye to my soule: that the shoulde be as a byrde vpon youre hyll.

* for lo, the vngodlye haue bent their bowe, and made ready their arrowes.

Of Dauid Psalme. xii. and. xiii. Fol. v

wes in the quyet, that they maye pryncely shoote at them, whiche are true of herte.

The verbe foudacion haue they cast downe, what can the ryghtuous the do with all.

* But the Lorde is in his holy temple, the Lordes seate is in heauen: He consydereth it with hys eyes, hys eye lyddes beholde the chyldren of men.

The Lorde seith bothe the ryghtuous and vngodlye, but who so delyteth in wickednes, hy in his soule abhorreth.

Upon the vngodlye he shall rayne snares, fyre, byrystone, storme & tēpest: this rewarde shal they haue to dryncke.

For the Lorde is ryghtuous, and he loueth rightuousnes: his countenance beholdeth the thynge that is iust.

The Notes.

a. Loke the tytle of the fourthe psalme.

b. This is a borrowed speache, by whiche is signified that the wicked enemyes of Dauid were moost prest and redy to destroye hym. For this psalm, as some suppose, was made when he fled from Saul and hyd him selfe in diuers & sundrye places, as ye reade. i. Regum from the. xxi. chapter, to the. xxvii. where his persecution was so greate, that at the length he was fayne to fle ouer of the coaste of Israel vnto the philistines. After lyke maner do our Sauours persecute the christen, psalm. xxxvii. b.

c. Loke in the. xxxiii. psalm. c.

The. xii. psalme.

We complayneth that rightuousnes & sayth are euer where decayed, & that wyse and gylful flatterers rule al, and prayeth the Lorde to haue compassion on the afflicte, whiche they cruellye vce: and also to helpe them accorde hyng to hys worde, whiche onely can not deceaue, and to dispur hys, from the falshe compagne of the wicked.

* To the Chaunter vpon b Shemini, a psalme of Dauid.

Help Lorde, for there is none saynte moze: verbe fewe saythful are there amoge the chyldren of men.

Euery mā telleth lyes to his neyghboure, they do but flatter with their lippes and dyssemble in their herte.

That the Lorde wolde rote out al dyscreatfull lippes, and the tonge, that speaketh proude thinges.

Whiche saye: oure tonge should pryncalle: we are they that ought to speake, Whos Lorde ouer vs.

the Lorde) I wyll helpe them, and set them at rest.

The wordes of the Lorde are pure wordes: euen as the syluer, which from earthe is tryed and purgysed: bit. tymes in the fyre.

Kepe b them therfore (O Lorde) and preserue vs from thys generacion for euer.

And why & when banite and ydlnes getteth the ouer hāde amonge the chyldren of men, all are ful of the vngodly.

The. xiii. psalme.

Dauid being in a leoparouse case: & in great perill both carnally with pytelnes despye Goddes helpe, to thynkente that hys enemyes shoulde not reioyce at hys deathe, but that he rather myghte reioyce of hys healtre obtayned, and wozthelye magnifye and prayse hys pryncer God.

* To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

How longe wilt thou forget me O Lorde: for euer how longe wilt thou hyde thy face fro me.

Howe longe shall I seke counsayle in my soule: Howe longe shall I be so vexed in myne heart: Howe longe shall myne enemye tryumphe ouer me.

Consider, and heare me, O Lorde my God: & lygheten myne eyes, that I seepe not in deathe.

Lest myne enemye saye: I haue preyed agaynst hym: for yf I be cast downe, they that trouble me wyll reioyce at it.

But my truste is in thy mercye, and my hearte toyfull in thy sauyngge healtre.

I wyll syng of the Lorde, that dealeth so loutingelye with me.

(Yea, I wyll prayse the name of the Lorde the mooste hyst.)

The Notes.

a. Loke in the tytle of the fourth psalme.

b. We are sayde to seke counsayle in our soules: when we take deliberation.

To slepe in death.

d. It is sayd that we slepe in death, when we die, or be slayne of our enemyes, wherfore it foloweth lest myne enemyes say. I haue preuayled, &c.

The. xlii. psalme.

He bewayleth that all places are full wycked and open spynners, and disceribeth their moke corrupt, fylthye and violent condempn: and further, he prophesieth vengeance to them, and saluation to the innocent whom they oppresse and deuoure.

a To the chaunter, of Dauid.

A *folish bodies say in their hearts: tush, there is no God. They are corrupt, and become abhominable in their doynges, * there is not one that doeth good.

The Lorde looked downe from heauen vpon the chyliden of men, to see yf there were any that wolde vnderstande and seke after God.

But vthey are all gone oute of the waye, they are all together become vnprofytable: There is none that doeth good, no not one.

Howe can they haue vnderstanding, that worcke mischefe, eatynge vp my people, as it were bread, and call not vpon the Lorde.

Therefore shall they be broughte in great feare, for God standeth by the generation of the righteous.

As for you vye haue made a mocke at the counsaile of the poore, bycause he putteth hys trust in the Lorde.

Oh that the sauynge healthe were geuen vnto Israel: out of Sion.

Oh that the Lorde woulde deliuer his people out of captiuitie.

Then shoulde c Jacob reioyse, and Israel shoulde be ryghte glad.

The Notes.

a. Toke in the title of the fourth psalme.
b. We goe out of the waye, when we depart fro the way of God and set aparte his lawe, falling to oure owne inuencions, counsailes and prouisions. As. psal. lili. a. Rom. iii. b.

d. They mocke the counsaile of the poore, & take them for foolles that putre their whole trust in God, vnfaynedly beleuyng that for his sonnes sake he will be their defence, succoure, & ayde.
e. By Jacob or Israel, is vnderstande the whole stocke progenie and offsprynge of Jacob or Israel. As in the. psalme. lxx. a

The. xlv. psalme.

This psalme describeth what maners & condempn the very cityes of heauen and memberes of the church of God must haue.

A psalme of Dauid.

Lorde, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle: who shall rest vpon thy holy hyll.

*Euen he that leadeth an vncorrupt lyfe: & doeth & thyng which is right, and that a speaketh the trueth from his hearte.

He that vseth no disceat in his targe: he that doeth no euell to his neighbour, and claundzeth not hys neighbours.

He that setteth not by the vngodly, but maketh much of the that feare the Lorde: he that sweareth vnto hys neyghbour, and dispoyneth hym not.

*He that geueth not his money vpon vserpe, and taketh no rewarde agaynste the innocent.

Who so doeth these thynges, shall neuer be remoued.

The Notes.

a. He speaketh the trueth from his hearte, that meaneth good fayth, and entendeth to do that he promisyth, not saynyng in worde an other thyng from the he thinketh in heart. As in the. xli. psalme. a.

The. xvi. psalme.

He desireth God to be his defender. He professeth that he is geuen to the fauoure of the sayntes, and that he abhorreth Idolaters. He lotheth to haue the perfect and continual lope of the syghte of God.

b. Here and in manye other places, the scripture calleth the faythful sayntes, as in. psal. xii. a & the Apostle in manye of his epistles.

c. God is on our right hand, when he helpeth, addeth, and succoureth vs, and is pres<sup>t</sup> & ready thereto. psalme. cxi. d.

d. God leaueth not oure soules in hell, when he suffereth the not to dye, neither forsaketh vs nor taketh his assent grace from vs. And p<sup>r</sup> whiche foloweth (neither shalt thou suffer thy saynt to see corruption) signifieth, Thou shalt not suffer my bodie to abide in the graue, and so to corrupt. So doeth Peter expounde this place of Christs. Act. ii. paul. Act. xiii.

The. xviij. psalme.

A vehement and feruente prayer of David that he might be deliuered from the persecutions of Saul. He innocently prayeth his owne innocency, as he dyd in the lxxviii. psalme. He cryeth for helpe, desireth the good conditions and dayntie intentions of his persecuters, and confesseth that his felicity consisteth in the knowledge of God.

A prayer of David.

Hearke the right (O Lorde) cōfesse my cōplaynt: herken vnto my prayer, that goeth, not out of a fained mouth.

Let my sentence come forth from thy presence: and loke vpon the thinge that is equall.

mat. xxi. d.

From the vngodly that trouble me, fro myne enemyes whych compasse my soule rounde aboute.

Whych mayntayne their owne welthynges with opprellion, & their mouth speaketh proude thynges.

They lye waytinge in our waye on euery syde, turninge their eyes downe to the grounde.

Like as a Lyon that is grede of his pray, & as it were a Lyons whelp lurchyng in his denne.

Up Lorde, disapoynte hym and cast hym downe: deliuer my soule wth thy swerde from the vngodlye.

The. xviij. psalme.

For he desireth the great and freuent confidence whych he had in God, and then the euilles wherewith he was once laden: After that, the power of God and good will towards hym: Then sheweth he his owne deliuerance, his innocency and iudgement of God towards all men. And after these, the greates byctorye obtained of his most myghty enemye, and that the coastes of his kyngdome were meruailously enlarged, and his power confirmed for euer: at the laste he endeth the psalme wth prayes, and with a prophesy of Christs.

To the chaunter of David seruante of the Lorde, whiche sayde vnto the Lorde the wordes of this songe, on the daye in whych the Lorde deliuered hym frome the hande of al his enemyes, and frome the bande of Saul, and sayde:

i. Of Dauid Psalme. xlviii

I will loue the (O Lorde) my strength.

The Lorde is my succour, my refuge, my sauoure: my God, my helper in whome I truste: my buckler, the hope of my health and my protectyon

2. Re. xlii. a * I will praise the Lorde, & call vpon him, so shall I be safe fro myne enemies.

psal. cxvi. a The sorowes of death compassed me, and the brokes of vngodlynnesse made me afraide.

The paynes of hell came aboute me, the snates of death toke holde vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the Lorde, and complayned vnto my God.

So he hearde my voyce oute of hys holpe temple, and my complaynt came before hym, yea, euen into hys eares.

mat. xviii. f * Then the earth trembled and quaked, the very foundations of the hilles shooke and were remoued, because he was wrothe.

There went a smoke out of hys nostrilles and a consumynge fyre oute of hys mouth, so that coales were kindled at it.

He bowed the heauens & came downe, & it was darcke vnder hys fete.

He rode vpon the Cherubyns and dyd flye: he came flyenge with the winges of the wynde.

He made darckenesse hys paupers on rounde aboute hym, with darcke water and thicke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnes of hys presence the cloudes remoued, with hayle stones and coales of fyre.

The Lorde also thondred oute of the heauen, and the heyght gaue hys thondre with hayle stones & coales of fyre.

He sent out hys arrowes and scatered them, he caste soore lyghtnynges and destroyed them.

The spraynges of waters were sene, and foundations of the rounde world were dyscouered at thy chydyng (O Lorde) at the blastynge and breathe of thy displeasures.

C He sent downe from heyght to fetch me, and toke me out of a great waters.

He deliuered me fro my stronge enemyes, and fro my foes whiche were to myghtye for me.

They preynted me in tyme of my trouble, but the Lorde was my defence: He brought me forth also into lyberte: and deliuered me because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The Lorde shall rewarde me after my righteous dealynge, and according to the cleannesse of my handes shall he recompense me.

For I haue kepte the wayes of the Lorde: And haue not behaued my selfe wickedlye agaynst my God.

I haue an eye vnto all hys lawes, & cast not out his comandementes fro me. Incorrupte will I be before him, and will eschewe myne owne wyckednes.

Therefore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my ryghteous dealynge, and accordynge vnto the cleannesse of my handes in hys eyesyghte.

With the holy thou shalt be holpe, & with the innocent thou shalt be innocent.

* With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed, & bringe downe the hye lookes of the proude.

Thou lyghdest my candle, O Lorde my God: Thou makest my darckenesse to be lyghte.

For in the I can discomfort an hoste of men: Yea, in my God I can leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfecte waye: the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyre: He is a shyld of defence, for all them that truste in hym.

* For who is God, but the Lorde: Who hath anye strength, but our God.

It is God that gyrded me with strengthe and made my waye incorrupte.

* He hath made my fete lyke hartes fete, and set me vpon an hye.

* He teacheth myne handes to fighte, and maketh myne armes to breake euil a bowe of stele.

Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy health, thy ryght hande vpholdeth me, and thy louynge correccion maketh me greate.

Thou hast made rowme ynoughe vnder me for to goe, that my fote stepes shoulde not slyde.

I will smyte them, they shall not be able to stande, but fall vnder my fete.

Thou hast gydded me with strength vnto the battell, thou hast throwe them all downe vnder me, that rose vp agaynste me.

Thou haste made myne enemyes to tourne their backs vpo me, thou hast destroyed them that hated me.

* They cryed, but there was none to helpe them: Yea, euen vnto the Lorde, but he hearde them not.

I will beate them as smalle as the duste claye in the wynde, I will caste them out as the claye in the stretes.

Thou shalt delpuer me from the strynges of the people, thou shalt make me the heade of the heithen

A people whom I haue not knowen shall serue me.

As soone as they heare of me, they shall obey me, but the straunge chyldren dyssemble wyth me.

The straunge chyldren are waken olde, & go halting out of their pathes.

The Lord lyueth: and blessed be my helper, praiseth be God of my health.

Euen the God whiche seyth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

It is he that delpuereth me fro my cruel enemyes: thou shalt lyfte me vp from them that rype agaynste me, thou shalt rydde me from the wycked man.

* For this cause I will geue thankes vnto the Lord amonge the gentiles, and syng prayles vnto thy name.

* Great prosperite getteth he vnto his kynge, and sheweth louynge kynde vnto Dauid his anoynted, yea, & vnto his seed for euermore.

e. Of this ye haue Genesis. xi. a.

f. This is an hebreue worde, and signifieth in englishe, swifte birdes. And by al the thynges here rehearsed, is described the power, myghte, & maiestie of almighty God, whiche he declareth in tempestes, of whiche the whole. xxi. psalme entreateth, & in Job. xxi. are like thynges mencioned, to the settinge out of his power. Often tymes we read, that God when he wolde more openlye and moore expresselye declare his power vnto men, causeth thonder lightninge and earthequake. & c. As in Exod. xxi. when the lawe was geuen, and. i. synge the. xxi. when the people desired a kynge. Math. xxi. when Christe was on the crosse. Act. ii. when the holy Ghost came vpon the apostels. Act. iii. wher they prayed. With suche lyke wonders doe some suppose that God dyd at one tyme or other shewe his beniuolence to Dauid, and confirmed his promise with makinge of the earth, sendinge thonder, lightninge, hable, cloudes, stormes, and other terrible tokens, wherwith he holpe Dauid, and ouerthrew his enemyes. Rather letteth it that the scripture mentioneth not therof in anye place: for it maketh no mention of the tempest that Elay prophced to come in the delpuraunce of Iherusalem from the Assyrians, yet who wyl denie but that it was in verye dede so done.

g. By the waters are signified great, myghty and valiaunt enemyes. From whom he saith he was deliuered by the hande of God.

h. By his rowme is signified aboundaunce or prosperite of all thynges. psalme. cxi. d.

i. This heade is the ruler or gouernoure.

k. Strange chyldren are those that ought to be of the housholde of God, and that also auante them selues thereof, but be in dede worldlye, and walke not in the pathes of his commaundementes, as they haue promised to doe, wherof is spoken. Elay. i. a.

The. xix. psalme.

He describeth the power of God, wonderfullie declared by the workmanshipp of the heauen. He sheweth the excellences of the lawe of God, desirynge to be sanctified from synne, and wrytheth that what soeuer he ether thinketh in hearte, or speaketh with mouth, maye be good and acceptable to God.

The very heauens declare the glozve of God, and the very firmament sheweth his hande bye woordes.

One daye telleth another, and one nyght certifieth another.

There is nether speache nor language, but their voyces are heard amonge them.

* Their sounde is gone oute into all landes, and their woordes into the endes of the worlde.

In them hath he set a tabernacle for the Sunne, whiche commeth forth as a hydegrome out of his chambze, and croppeth as a sprauite to runne his course.

It goeth forth from the ende of the heauen, and runneth aboute vnto the same ende agayne, and there maye no man hyde hym selfe frome the heate thereof.

The lawe of the Lord is a perfecte law, it quickeneth the soule.

The testimonye of the Lord is true, and geueth wisdom euen vnto babes.

The statutes of the Lord are ryght, and reioyse the heart: the commaundement of the Lord is pure and geueth lyght vnto the eyes.

The feare of the Lord is cleane, & endureth for euer: the iudgements of the Lord are true and ryghteous all together.

O my God, I crye in the day tyme: but thou hearest not: and in the nyght season also I take no reste.

Yet dwellest thou in the sanctuary, O thou worshyppe of Israel,

Our fathers hoped in the, they trusted in the, & thou dydest deliuer them

They called vpon the, & were helped: they put theyr truste in the, & were not confounded.

But as for me, I am a worme & no man: a very scoone of men and the out caste of the people.

The voyce of the Lord is mightye in operacion, the voyce of the Lord is a glorious voyce.

The voyce of the Lord breaketh the cedre trees: yea the Lord breaketh the Ceders of Libanus.

He maketh them to skyppe lyke a calfe: Libanus & Sirion lyke a ponge C vncrope.

The voyce of the Lord deuyeth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lord maketh the wyldernesse, yea the Lord maketh the wyldernesse of Cades.

The voyce of the Lord moueth the floodes, and discovereth the chynke luf: Ther in his temple shall euery man speake of his honoure.

The Lord stilleth the water fonde, & the Lord remaineth a kyng for euer.

The Lord shall geue power vnto his people, the Lord shall geue his people the blessinge of peace.

The Notes.

a. This voyce, is the will of the Lord, which worketh all thinges euen at a worde, neyther is ther any thyng that can resist his will.

b. The Lord maketh the wyldernesse, when he maketh the bydouse and scyth the beastes of the wyldernesse to quake.

The xxxi. psalme.

He greatly thankes for the obtaining of his health.
He greatly prayeth the goodness of God, which he beth not aduer, but vnto his people, for the best, and protesteth, that he desireth not the lengthening of his lyfe for any other cause, then to reioyce and let forth the thynges that make for the glorie of God and profit of the saintes.

A psalme and songe of the dedicacion of the house, of David.

I will magnifye the, O Lord, for thou hast set me vp, and not suffred my foes to triumphe ouer me.

O Lord my God, I cryed vnto the,
and thou hast healed me.

Thou Lord hast brought my soule out of hell: þ hast kepte my lyfe, where as they go downe to the pytte.

Synge prayles vnto the Lord (O ye saintes of his) geue thanks vnto hym for a remembraunce of his holy-nesse.

* For his wrath endureth but the twyncling of an eye, and his pleasure is in lyfe: heynesse maye well endure for a nyght, but ioye commeth in the morn-ynge.

As for me, whē I was in prosperite, I sayde: Cusch, I shall neuer fall more.

And whye thou Lord of thy goodnesse haddest made my hyl so stronge.

But as soone as thou turnedest thy face fro me, I was brought in feare.

Then cryed I vnto the, O Lord yea vnto the Lord made I my prayer.

What profyt is there in my blonde, if I go downe to corruption.

Whe I must geue thackes vnto the,
O shall it declare thy faythfulnesse.

Heare, O Lord, & haue mercy vpon me: Lord be thou my helper.

And so thou hast turned my heynnesse in to ioye: þ hast put of my sacke cloth, and girded me with gladnesse.

I wyll be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast cōsolydēd my trouble, thou hast knowne my soule in aduersite.

Thou hast not delpued me ouer in to the handes of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme.

C Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble myne eye is consumed for very heynesse, yea my soule and my body.

My lyfe is waken olde with heyn-esse and my peaces with mournynge.

My strength faileth me because of myne aduersyte, and my bones are corrupte.

I am become a very reproche amonge all myne enemyes, my neyghbours and they of myne owne acquaintance are afraid of me: they p se me in the strete, conueye them selues from me.

I am cleane forgotten and out of mynde, as a deed man: I am become lyke a broken vessel.

for I haue herde the blasphemy of the multitude: every man abhorreth merthey haue gathered a counsell toge-take awaye my lyfe.

But my hope is in the Lorde, and I saye: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy hande: delpue me from the hande of myne enemyes, & from them that persecute me.

Shewe thy seruauant the lychte of thy countenance, helpe me for thy mercies sake.

Let me not be confounded, O Lord, & for I call vpon the: let the vngodly re-ther be put to confusyon, and brought vnto the hell.

Let the lychte lynes be put to sy-lence, whiche cruelly, disdainfully, despytfully, speake agaynst the righteous.

even before the sonnes of men.

Thou hydest them pryncely by thyne owne presence fro the proude men, thou kepest them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tongues.

Thankes be to the Lord, for he hath shewed me maruelous greates bynde-nesse in a stronge cytie.

for whē the todayne feare came vpon me, I sayd: I am cast oute of thy sight.

trust in the Lorde.

The sheweth that all aduersities come of sin, & that he therefore is happye, that hath his sinnes forgauen: And further, that both forgiveness of sinnes and the p[ro]tection and defence of God are obtained by earnest acknowledgement of our offences, and fervent prayer.

An instruction of Dauid.

Blessed are they, whose vni-righteousnesse is forgiven, &

* Blessed is the man, vnto complaininges.

And because thy hande was so helping me both daye and nyght, my moysture was lyke the drouth in Sommer, Selah.

Therefore I confessed my synne vnto thee, & hyd not myne vni-righteousnesse.

I sayde: I * wyll knowlege myne offence, & accuse my self vnto the Lord, and so thou forgavest me the wyckednesse of my synne Selah.

* For this shall euery sayncte make

Thou art my defence in the trouble that is come aboute me, & compasse thou me about also with the roye of deliveraunce. Selah.

* I will enforce thee, and shewe the the waye wherein thou shalt go: I will fasten myne eyes vpon thee.

Let him seke peace and ensue it.

For the eyes of the Lorde are ouer the rightuous, and his eares are open vnto their prayers.

But the face of the Lorde beholdeth the that do euell, to destroye the temem-braunce of them out of the earth.

When the rightuous crye, the Lorde heareth them, and delyuereth them out of all their troubles.

The Lorde is nye vnto them that are contrite in hert, and will helpe such as be of an humble spete.

I. of David Psalme xxxvi and xxxvii

To the Chaunter, of David the servant of the Lorde.

MY heart sheweth me þy wickednesse of the vngodly, that *there is no feare of God before his eyes.

For he dyssembleth before his face, so long tyll his abhominable synne be founde out.

The wordes of his mouth are vnrightuousnes and disceate, he will not be lerned to do good.

He ymagyneth myschese vpon his bedde, he wyl come in no good waye, nor refuse the thinge that is euell.

Thy mercy, O Lorde, reacheth vnto the heauē, and thy faithfulness vnto the cloudes.

Thy ryghtuousnesse standeth lyke the stronge mountaynes, and thy iudgement lyke the greates depe.

* Thou Lorde preferuest both men and beastes.

Bow precious is thy mercy, O God, that the chyldren of men may put their trust vnder the shadow of thy wynges.

They shalbe satsfied with the pleasurable of thy house, and thou shalt geue them dryncke of the ryuer of thy pleasures.

* For by the is the well of lyfe, and in thy lyght, shall we se lyght.

O sprede forth thy louynge kynnesse vnto them that knowe the, and thy ryghtuousnesse vnto the that are true of hert.

Holde the still in the Lorde, and abyde patiently vpon him: but greue not thy selfe at one that hath prospered, and lyueth in abhominacion.

Leaue of from wrath, let go displeasure, let not thy gelously moue the also to do euell.

For wycked doers shalbe rote oute, but they that paciēly abyde the Lorde, shall enherit the lande.

Suffre yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodly shalbe cleane gone: thou shalt loke after hys place, and he shalbe awaye.

* But the meke spreted shall possesse the earth, and haue pleasure in much rest.

The vngodly layeth waye for þy iust, & gnasheth vpon him with his tethe.

The vngodly draw out the swerde and bende their bowe, to cast downe the simple and poore, and to slaye such as go the ryght waye.

Neuertheles, their swerde shall go thorow their owne herte, & their bowe shalbe broke.

* A small thyng that the ryghtuous hath, is better then greates riches of the vngodly.

For the armes of the vngodly shalbe broken, but the Lorde upholdeth the ryghtuous.

The Lorde knoweth the dapes of the godly, and their inheritance endureth for euer.

i. Of Dauid Psal. xxxix. and xl Fol. xli

The. xl. psalme.

He reioyeth that he is to be saved by the helpe of his grete ioye: for by the helpe of God, and wondereth at his unspeakable goodnes towards them that feare him: and for it, for he setteth not by sacrifices, but requiereth the whole manne, he committeth hym selfe vnto him: and sayeth that he will praye his ryghtwysnesse and goodnes continually: Then sheweth he the gentleness of the ioyfull where he was, and the cause thereof, whiche was his synners. At the last he beseecheth God to shew his grace vnto his enemyes, and to gladden the hartes of the good.

1. To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

I praye pacientlye for the Lorde, whiche enclined him selfe vnto me: and herde my callynge.

He broughte me oute of the horrible pytte, oute of the myre and clay: he set my fete vpon the rocke, and ordeed my goynges.

He hath put a new song in my mouth euen a thankesgeuynge vnto our God.

Manye men seynge this, shall feare the Lorde, and put theyr truste in hym.

* Blessed is the man that setteth his hope in the Lorde, and turneth not vnto the proude, and to suche as go about with lyes.

B O Lorde my God, great are thy wonderous worckes whych thou hast done: and in thy thoughtes towards vs there maye none be lyckened vnto the.

I woulde declare them, and speake of them: but they are so many, that they can not be tolde.

* Sacrifice and offeryng thou wouldest not haue, but a bodye haste thou ordeyned me: burnt offerynges and sacrifice for synne thou hast not allowed.

Then sayd I: Lo, I come. In the begynnyng of the booke it is wyrtten of me, that I shoulde fulfill thy wyll O my God, and that am I contente to do: yea thy lawe is within my hert.

* I will preache of thy ryghtuousnesse in the greate congregacion: Lo, I will not restryne my lippes, O Lorde, and that thou knowest.

* I do not hyde thy ryghtuousnesse in my herte, my talkyng is of thy truth and sayyng healthe: I kepe not thy louinge mercye and faithfulness backe from the greate congregacion.

Turne not thou thy mercye fro me O Lorde, but let thy louyng kyndnesse and truth alwaye preserue me.

for innumerable troubles are come about me: my synnes haue taken niche holde vpon me, that I am not able to loke vp: yea, they are mo in numbere then the heeres of my heade, and my herte hath sayled me.

* O Lorde, let it be thy pleasure to deliuer me, make hast (O lorde) to helpe me.

Let them bee ashamed and confounded, that seke after my soule, to destroye it: let them fall backwarde and be put to confusion, that wyth me euell.

Let them soone be brought to shame, that crye ouer me: there there.

But lette all those that seke the, be ioyful and gladde in the: and let al such as delyte in thy sauyng health, saye alwaye: the Lorde be prayesed.

As for me, I am poore and in myserye, but the Lorde careth for me.

Thou arte my helper and redemer, make no longe tarynge, O my God.

The. xli. psalme.

In this psalme also speaketh he of a dyscase, where in whyle he was holden his enemyes were greatelye reioyced, hopinge that he shoulde be made awaye with the violence of his dyscase. And in which also his frendes had forsake him, but God holpe him, which alwayes woulde preserue hym: And therefore in the begynnyng, he pronounceth hym happye whiche perceaueth the counsell of God concerning hym.

2. To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

Blessed is he that considreth the poore: the Lorde shall deliuer hym in the time of trouble.

The Lorde shall preserue hym, and kepe hym alpye: he shall make hym to prospere vpon earthe, and shall not deliuer hym in to the wyll of his enemyes.

The Lorde shall refreshe hym, whyle he lyeth sycke vpon his bed, yea thou makest his bedde in all his syncknesse.

I sayde: Lorde bee mercyfull vnto me, heale my soule, for I haue synned agaynst the.

b. In the scripture, poore signifieth not only hym that hath no mouye or goodes of this world: but also him that hath a sorrowful herte, and him in whome there is no hygh mynd, but only meknes and lounge lowlines.

The. xlii. psalme.

The sheweth howe sorrowfull he was, because he was let from the holy assemble and feaste of the Lorde by the conspirasye of his sonne. Absolom: and how he was disquieted with the voyce of the wyched, whiche blasphemed the deysie of Godlynes, wherunto he was geyuen, for a daye. and vnpofitable thyng.

a. To the chaunter, a monicion of the sonnes of Corah.

¶ Like as the herte despyeth the water brokes, so longeth my soule after the, O God.

My soule is a thurst for God, yea euen for the lusinge God: when shall I come, and beholde the face of God?

* My teares are my meate day and nyghte whyle it is dayly sayd vnto me: where is now thy God?

Nowe when I thincke there vpon,

* I poure out my herte by my selfe: for I would fayne go hence with the multitude, and passe ouer with them vnto the house of god, in the voyce of prayse and thanckesgeyunge, among such as kepe holy daye.

* Why arte thou so full of heyneg (O my soule) and why arte thou so vnquiete within me.

O put thy truste in God, for I wyll yet geue him thākes, for the helpe of his countenance.

¶ My God, my soule is vexed withyn me: therfore I remembre the lande of Jordane, and the litle hil of Hermon. One depe calleth another with the voyce of thy whystles, * all thy waues and waterfloodes are gone ouer me.

The Lorde hath promysed hys lounge kindnesse dayly, therfore wyll I praise him in the nyghte season, and make my prayer vnto O God of my life.

I wyll say vnto God my stony rock: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heuelye, while the enemye oppreseth me?

Whyle my bones are broken, and while mine enemyes cast me in the teth, daylye sayinge vnto me: where is now thy God?

Why art thou so heuy (O my soule) and why art thou so disquieted within me?

O put thy trust in God, for I wyll yet thanke hym for the helpe of his countenance, and because he is my God.

The. xliii. psalme.

The despyeth to be deliuered from the conspirasye with Absolom, that he maye worshippe God in hys holy temple.

¶ Cue sentence vpon me (O God) and defende my cause agaynst the vnholy people: Oh deliuer me from the disceitfull, and wyched man.

For thou (O God) art my strengthe: why hast thou shot me frome the? why go I then so heuelye, whyle the enemye posseseth me?

Oh sende oute thy lyghte and thy truth, that they may leade me and bring me vnto thy holy hyl, & to thy dwelling.

That I maye go into the aulter of God, euen vnto the God whiche is my ioye and pleasure, and vpon the harpe to geue thankes vnto the, O God, my God.

* Why arte thou so heuy (O my soule) and why arte thou so dysquieted within me?

O put thy truste in God, for I wyll yet geue hym thankes for the helpe of hys countenance, and because he is my God.

How thou hast driuen out the heithen with thy hande, and planted the in: how thou hast destroyed the nations and cast them out.

* For they gat not the lande in possession thowowe they owne swerde, nether was it they owne arme that helped them.

But thy ryght hand, thyne arme and the lyght of thy countenance, because thou haddest a fauoure vnto them.

* Thou arte the Kinge and my God, thou sendest helpe vnto Jacob.

Thowowe thee, wylle we ouerthowe oure enemyes: and in thy name wylle we treade them vnder, that tye vp as gapnst vs.

For I wylle not truste in my bowe, it is not my swearde that shall helpe me.

Thou haste made vs a herp by word among the heithen, and that the people make their heades at vs.

Al this is come vpon vs, and yet haue we not forgotten the, nor behaued oure selues vnfaithfully in thy couenaunt.

Oure herte is not turned backe, nether oure steppes gone out of thy way.

For thou haste smytten vs in the place of dragons, and couered vs with the shadowe of deathe.

If we had forgotten the name of our God, and holden by our handes to any straunge God.

Should not God fynde it out: for he knoweth the very secretes of y heart.

* But for thy sake we are kylled al the daye longe, and are counted as shepe appointed to be slayne.

Up Lord, why sleepest thou: awake, and cast vs not of for euer.

Wherefore hydest thou thy face: wilt thou cleane forget our mysery and oppression?

The. xlviii. Psalme.

For the excellent gloze of God declared thowout the whole world. Of the conversion of kinges and people unto God.

To the chaunter, a psalme of the chyl- dren of Corah.

Clap your handes together (all ye people) & syng vnto God with the voyce of thankesgeuinge.

For the Lorde the most hych is to be feared, and he is the greates kyng upon all the earthe.

He shal subdue the people vnder vs, and the heithen vnder our fete.

He chooseth vs for an heritage, the beuty of Jacob whom he loued. Sclab.

God is gone by with a mery noise, & the Lord with the sounde of the trompet.

Syng praples, sing praples vnto God: Syng praples, syng praples vnto oure kyng:

For God is king of all the earth, & sing praples vnto him with vnderstanding.

God is king ouer the heithen, God sitteth in his holy seate.

The prynces of the people are gathered together vnto the God of Abraham: for God is satre hyer exalted, then the mightye lordes of the earthe.

Greate is the Lorde and hyelp to be prayed, in the cytie of our God euen vpon his holy hyl.

The hyl of Sion is lyke a fayre plante, wherof all the land reioyseth: vpon the north the lyde lyeth the cytie of the greates kyng.

God is well knownen in her palaces, that he is the defence of the same.

* For lo, kynges are gathered, and gone by together.

They marche, to so such thynges: they were astonied, & sodenly cast downe, feare came there vpon them, & sozow as vpon a woman in her trauayle.

Thou shalt breake the shippes of the sea, thou shalt cast wylde.

Lyke as we haue herde, so se we in the cytie of the Lorde of hostes, in the cytie of oure god: God bpholdeth the same for euer. Sclab.

We wayte for thy louynge kindnesse (O God) in the myddest of thy temple.

O God, accordyng vnto thy name, so is thy praise vnto the worldes ende:

* Thy right hand is ful of rightuousnesse. * Oh let the mount Sion reioyce, and the daughters of Juda be glad because of iudgements.

Walke aboute Sion, go rounde aboute her, and tell her c. tolyes.

That is as muche to saye, as tye not with God but performe that thou vowest unto hym. Yet foloweth it not by this that we maye conspire in the purpose of a wicked bove (for god abhorreth bothe the makinge and performance of such bowes) but this is rather to be gathered of it, that our bowes be made whole to goddes glory, and then we muste in no wyse deslake in performance.

The li. psalme.

A prayer of David wherein he earnestly acknowledgeth his synnes, he desyeth the holy Ghost, and prayeth for the church, whiche is the true Jerusalem.

To the chaunter, a psalm of David, when the prophet Nathan came unto him, after he was gone in to Bethsabe.

Hue mercye vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes, and according vnto thy great mercyes, do awaye myne offences.

Wathe me well from my wickednesse, and cleanse me from my synne.

For I knowlege my fautes, and my synne is ever before me.

Agaynst the onely, agaynst the haire I synned, and done euell in thy syght: that thou myghtest be iustified in thy sayynges, and shouldest ouer come when thou arte iudged.

Beholde, I was borne in wickednesse, and in synne hath my mother conceived me.

But lo, thou haste a pleasure in the trueth, and hast shewed me secreete wysdome.

O purge me with hyssope, and I shall be cleane: wathe thou me, and I shall be whiter then snowe. Ob let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that thy bones whiche thou hast broken, maye recover.

Turne thy face from my synnes, and put out all my iniquities.

Make me a cleane herte, O god, and renue a ryghte spirite within me.

Cast me not awaye from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me.

Geue me the comforte of thy helpe agayne, and stablyshe me with thy fre spirite.

Then shall I teache thy wayes vnto the wycked, that synners maye be converted vnto the.

Deliver me from bloude gyltynesse O God, thou that arte the God of my health, that my tongue maye prayse thy ryghteousnesse.

Open my lippes, O Lorde, that my mouth maye shewe thy prayse.

For yf thou haddest pleasure in sacrifice, I woulde geue it the: but thou deliest not in burnt offerynges.

The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirite, a broken and a contrite hert, O God, shalte thou not despyse.

O be fauourable and gracious vnto Sion, that the walles of Ierusalem maye be buylded.

For then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifice of ryghteousnesse, with the burnt offerynges and oblacions: then shal they lay bullockes vpon thine altier.

I wepte & chastened my selfe with fastyng, and that was turned to my reprofe.

I put on a sacke cloth, and therfore they iested vpon me.

* They that sate in the gate, spake agaynst me, & the bronckardes made songes vpon me.

But Lorde I made my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme.

Hear me, O God, with thy greates mercy.

Of David Psalme lxx. lxx. Fol. xxii

mercy and sure helpe.

Take me out of the myre, & I synke not: Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me, & out of the depe waters.

Let the water floude drowne me that the depe swalowe me not: bp. and that the pytte shut not her mouth vpon me.

Hear me, O Lorde, for thy louynge kynnesse is comfortable: turne the vnto me accordyng vnto thy great mercy.

Hyde not thy face from thy seruait, for I am in trouble: O haue thou to helpe
me.

Drawe nye vnto my soule, and saue it, Oh deliuer me because of myne enes myes.

Thou knowest my reprofe, my shame and my dishonour: myne aduersaries are all in thy syghte.

The rebuke breaketh my heart, and maketh me heupe: I looke for some to haue petye vpon me, but there is no mā:
for some to cōfort me, but I fynd none.

* They gaue me galle to eate, and when I was thurstye, they gaue me vineger to drynke.

* Let their table be made a snare to take them selues wpyth all, an occasion to fall and a rewarde vnto them.

Let their eyes be blynded, that they se not: & euer bowe downe their backes.

Poure oute thyne indignation vpon them, and let thy wrathfull displeasure take holde vpon them.

* Let their habitacion be voyde, and no man to dwell in their tentes.

For they persecute hym whome thou hast smytten, and besyde thy woundes they haue geuen him moo.

Let them fall frome one wyckednesse to another, and not come into thy righ-teousnes.

* Let them be wyped out of þ boke of the lyuynge, and not bee wyrtten amonge the ryghteous.

As for me, I am pooze and in heuynesse, let thy helpe defend me, O God.

That I may prayse the name of God wpyth a songe, and magnifie it wpyth thabelgynginge.

Thys shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hathe hornes and hoofes.

* Consider thys and be glad (ye that be in aduersite) seke after God, & poure soule shall lye.

For the Lorde heareth the pooze, and despylsh not hys prisoners.

Let heauen and earth prayse hym, the sea and al that moutheth therein.

For God wyl saue Sion, & buyde the cyties of Iuda, that men may dwell there, and haue them in possession.

The seide of hys seruantes shal en-herite it, and they that loue hys name shal dwell therein.

ii. Of David Psalme. lxxi. and lxxii.

To the chapter.

a. Take the title of the. lxxi. psalm.

C The. lxxi. psalm.

Whe sheweth howe he was comforted of the Lorde, whiche as he had persecuted hymselfe he was a chyld, so he wold not forsake hym in hys age, when he desired helpe agaynst them (as it is supposed) he conspired wth Salomon and how he gave prayse and thanks to hym.

psal. xxi. a.
and. lxxi. a.

In the, O Lorde, is my trust, let me neuer be putte to confusion, but rydde me, and deliuer me thowme thy ryghteousnes: enclyue thyn eare vnto me, and helpe me.

Be thou my stronge holde (where vnto I maye alway flee) thou that hast promised to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence and my castell.

Deliver me, O my God, oute of the hande of the vngodlye, out of the hande of the vntighteous and cruel man.

For thou, O Lorde God, art þ thing that I long for, thou art my hope euen from my yowthe.

I haue leaned vpon the euer sence I was borne, & thou arte he that tooke me out of my mothers wombe, therefore is my prayse alway of the.

I am become a wonder vnto the multitude, but my sure trust is in the.

Oh let my mouth be fylled with thy prayse and honour al the daye longe.

Cast me not awaye in mine olde age, forsake me not when my strength faileth me.

For myne enemyes speake agaynst me, and they þ laye wayte for my soule, take their counsell together, sayenge: God hath forsaken him, persecute him, take him, for there is none to helpe him.

Goe not farre fro me, O God: My God, haste the to helpe me.

Let them be confounded and perishe, that are agaynst my soule: let them be couered with shame & dishonoure, that seke to doe me euill.

As for me, I wyll patientlye abyde all waye, and wyll euer encrease thy prayse.

My mouth shall speake of thy ryghteousnesse and sayunge healthe al the daye longe, for I knowe no ende therof.

Let me goe in (O Lorde God) and I wyll make mention of thy power and ryghteousnesse onelye.

Thou, O God, haste learned me fro my yowthe by vntyll nowe, therefore wyl I tell of thy wonderous workes.

Forsake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am gray headed: vntyll I haue shewed thynne & arme: vnto chyldrens chyldren, and thy power vnto all them that are yet for to come.

Thy rightousnes, O God, is before hye, thou that doest great thynges: O God, who is lyke vnto thee?

What great troubles and aduersities haste thou shewed me: And yet dyddest thou tourne and restryke me: Yea, and broughtest me from the depe of the earth agayne.

Thou hast brought me to great honour, and comforted me on euery syde.

Therefore wyl I prayse thee and thy faythfulnesse, O God, playnge vpon the Lute, vnto the wyl I syng vpon the harpe, O thou holpe one of Israel.

My lippes woulde sayne syng prayses vnto thee: And so woulde my soule whom thou hast deliuered.

My tonge talketh of thy ryghteousnesse all the daye longe, for they are confounded & brought vnto shame, that sought to doe me euill.

The Notes.

a. This is often tymes taken for continually and without ceasing. As in the psalmes, lxxi. b. and lxxii. b.

b. The holpe one of Israel, signifieth Christe. psalme. lxxii. c.

C The. lxxii. psalm.

Whe prayeth that the kyngdome of God maye come thowme Christ, and propheth of the nobles, rightousnes, pleynfaynes, and durableness of this kyngdome: But all vnder the shadowe of the kyngdome of Salomon.

Of Salomon.

Gue the kyng the iudge ment, O God, and thy rightousnesse vnto the kynges glorie.

That he maye gouerne thy people, & accordynge vnto ryghte, and defende thy poore.

That the mountaynes maye bring peace, and the lytle hylles ryghtousnesse vnto the people.

He shall kepe the temple folke by their ryght, defende the chyldren of the poore, and punishe the wrongous doer.

Thou shalt be feared as longe as the sunne and the moone endureth, fro one generacion to another.

Of David Psalm. lxxiii. lxxiiii. Fol. xxiii

He shall come downe lyke the rayne into a fleete of wolfe, and lyke the dropes that water the earth.

In hys tyme shall righteousnesse flourish, yea, and aboundaunce of peace, so longe as the moone endureth.

* Hys dominion shall be from the one sea to the other, and from the foud vnto the worldes ende.

They that dwelle in the wyldernes shall knele before him, and hys enemies shall lycke the dust.

* The kynges of the sea and of the fles shall byynge presentes, the kynges of Araby and Saba shall offer gyftes.

All kynges shall worshyppe hym, and all heathen shall doe hym seruyce.

For he shall deliuer the poore when he cryeth, and the neadye that hath no helpe.

He shall be fauourable vnto the simple and poore, he shall preserue the soules of suche as be in aduersite.

He shall deliuer their soules from extortion and wzonge, a deare shall their bloude be in hys sight.

He shall lyue, and vnto him shall be geuen of the golde of Arabia: Prayer shall be made euet vnto hym, and daylye shall he be praysed.

There shall be an heape of corne in the earth hye vpon the hilles, his fruite shall make lyke Libanus, and shall be grene in the este, lyke grasse vpon the earth.

Hys name shall endure for euer, hys name shall remayne vnder the sunne amonge the posterites, which shall be blessed thowme hym, and all the heathen shall prayse hym.

Blessed be the Lorde God, euen the God of Israel, which only doeth wondrous thynges.

And blessed be the name of hys maiestie for euer, and all landes be fulfilled wth hys glorie. Amen. Amen.

Here ende the prayers of Dauid the sonne of Jesse.

And why? I was greued at the wicked to see the vngodly in suche prosperite.

Job. xli. a. Here. xli. a.

For they are in no parell of death, but stande faste lyke a palare.

They come in no misfortune lyke other folke, neyther are they plagued lyke other men.

And thys is the cause that they be so puffed vp in pryde, & ouerwhelmed with crueltie and vncyghteousnes.

Their eyes swell for fatnes, they doe euen what they lyst.

Corrupte are they, and speake blasphemyes maliciouslye, proude and presumptuous are their wordes.

They stretche forth the their mouthe vnto the heauen, and their tonge goeth thowme the worlde.

Therefore fall the people vnto them, and thereout sucke they no smal auantage.

For lo, they that forsake thee shall perish: thou destroyest all them that commit fornicacion agaynst thee.

But it is good for me, to holde me faste by God, to putte my truste in the Lorde God, and to speake of all thy workes

The Notes.

a. He washeth his handes in innocency, that he may be pure and without reproche. As it is sayd. Psalm. xxvi. b

b. That is their estimation and glorie.

c. He that putteth any parte of his full trust and hope in any other then in God onely: committeth fornicacion agaynst God. For the matter standeth betwene God and them that professe his name, as it doeth betwene a man and his wyfe.

The lxxiii. psalme.

We complayneth of the destruction of the temple, and of the blasphemie of the wicked people agaynst God and his holie thynges. And after he hath mentioned the power of God in the principall thynges of this world, to the strengthening and comfort of hope, he prayeth that the sayntes and goodly persons maye be quickned, and the heathen brought under wth wofull punishment.

An instruction of Asaph.

D God, wherfore dost thou caste vs so cleane away: why is thy wrath so hooted agaynst the shepe of thy pasture.

O thinke vpon thy congregation, whome thou hast purchased from the begynnyng: The staffe of thyne inheritance, whome thou hast redeemed, euen this hill of Sion wherein thou dwellest.

Treade vpon them wth thy fete, and caste them downe to the ground, for the enemy hath destroyed all together in the Sanctuary.

Thyne aduersaries roare in thy houses, and sette vp their banners for tokens.

Men maye see the axe glyster as a boue, lyke as those that hewe in the wodde.

They cutte downe all the sprynge worcke of the Sanctuary with bylles and axes.

* They haue set fyre vpon the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwelling place of thy name, euē vnto the ground.

Yea, they saye in their heartes: let vs spoyle them all together, thus haue they brente vp all the houses of God in the lande.

We see our tokens no more, there is not one prophete more, no not one that vnderstandeth anye more.

O God, howe longe shall the aduersarye doe this dishonoure? How longe shall the enemye blaspheme thy name for euer?

Why withdrawest thou thyne hand: why pluckest thou not thy right hande oute of thy bosome, to consume thyne enemies?

But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doeth it hym selfe.

* Thou deuiledest the sea thorow thy power, thou breakest the heades of the dragons in the waters.

Thou smitest the heades of Leviathan in peeces, and givest hym to be meate for the people in the wilderness.

Thou drygest vp welles and brookes, thou dryest vp myghty waters.

The daye is thyne, and the nyght is thyne: thou hast prepared the lyghtes and the sunne.

Thou hast set all the borders of the earth, thou hast made bothe souther and norther.

Remember this, O Lorde, howe the enemye rebuketh, and howe thou

When I may get a couenient tyme, I shall iudge accordynge vnto ryghte.

The earth is weake and all that is therein, but I beare vp her pylers.

I sayde vnto the mad people, Deale not so madly, and to the vngodlye: set not vp youte hornes.

Set not vp your hornes on hye, and speake not with a styfe necke.

for promotion cometh neither from the East nor from the West, nor yet from the wyldernesse.

And why? God is the Iudge: he putteth down one, & setteth vp another.

for in the hande of the Lorde there is a cuppe full of stronge wyne, and he poureth out of the same.

As for the dregges therof, al the vngodlye of the earth shall dryncke them, and sucke them out.

But I wyl talke of the God of Jacob, and prayse hym for euer.

All the hornes of the vngodlye wyl I breake, and the hornes of the ryghteous shalbe exalted.

* Cryed vnto God wth my voyce, pea, vnto God cried I with my voyce, and he heard me.

In the tyme of my trouble I sought the Lorde, I helde by myne handes vnto him in the night season, for my soule refused all other comforte.

When I was in heuynes, I thought vpon God: when my hearte was vexed, then dyd I speake. Selah.

Thou heldest myne eyes wakynge,
I was so feble, that I could not speake.

Then remembred I the tymes of olde, and the yeares that were paste.

I called to remembrance my song in the nyghte: I communed wth myne owne hearte, and sought out my spete.

Wyl the Lorde caste oute for euer:
wyl he be no more entreatede?

Is his mercye cleane gone?

Is his promise come vtterlye to an sayeth he, that although they were vngratfull, yet dyd he wonders in Egypt, and brought them from thence,

and thought they provoked hym to anger in the wyle desert, gave them aboundaunte thyngs benefites. And after that, when they were destroyed, which came forth of Egypt for their wickednesse: yet brought he them sonnes (although they followed their fathers vnto the halles, and despyed the wonders done in the wyldenesse for their fathers) in to the lande promised, and broue out the anshyres: In wyche, although he often punished them grievously, wile they prouoked and tempted hym; and at the laste in token of a greates fauour wash, before their great slaughter, distressed also the he-del to be taken from them, in the tyme of Ely the Prynce: he helde he them fauourably agayne, geuyng them Daclope youre eares vnto the wor-des of my mouthe.

* I wyl open my mouthe in parables, and speake of thynges of olde.

Whych we haue heard and knowen, and such as our fathers haue told vs.

That we shoulde not hyde them from the chyldren of & generacions to come

but

but to shewe the honour of the Lorde, his myght and wonderful workes that he hath done.

He made a couenaunt with Jacob, & gaue Israell a lawe, * whiche he commaunded our forefathers to teache their children.

That their posterite myghte knowe it, & the childre which wer yet vnborne to thintent þ̄ whē they came by, they myght shewe their chyldren the same.

That they also myght put theyr trust in God, and not to forget what he had done, but to kepe his commaundemen-tes.

And not to be * as their forefathers, a * frowarde and ouertwarte generacion, a generacion that sette not theyr hert a ryght, and whose sprete was not true towarde God.

B Lyke as the childzen of <sup>b</sup> Ephraim, whiche beyng harnessed and carpeng bootes, turned theym selues backe in the tyme of batayll.

They kept not the couenaunt of God, and woulde not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he had done, and the wonderfull workes that he hadde shewed for them.

Miraculous thynges dyd he in the syght of our fathers in the lande of E-gipte, euen in the felde of <sup>c</sup> zoan.

* He deuided the sea & let the go tho-rowe it, and made the waters to stande lyke a wall.

* In the daye tyme he led the wyth a cloude, & all the nyghte thorowe with a lyght of fyre,

* He cloaue the harde rockes in the wyldernes, and gaue theym dryncke therof, as it had bene out of the greate deapth.

He brought waters out of the * stony rocke, so that they gushed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all this they synned agaynst him, and prouoked the most hyest in the wyldernes.

They tempted God in their hertes, & requyred meate for their lust.

For they spake agaynst God, & sayd: C yea, God shall prepare a <sup>d</sup> table in the wyldernes, shall he.

To he smote the stony rocke, that the water streames gushed out, and the streames flowed with all: but howe can he geue breade & prouide fleshe for hys people?

When the Lord heard thys, he was wroth: so the fyre was kyndled in Jas-cob, & heuy displeasure agaynst Israel.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes aboue, & opened the dozes of heauen.

He rained downe Manna vpon them for to eate, and gaue them breade from heauen.

Then ate they angels <sup>e</sup> fode, for he set them meate ynough.

He caused the East wynd to blow vnder the heauen, & thorowehys power he brought in the south wynde.

* He made fleshe to rapne vpon the as thynke as dust, and fethered foules like as the sande of the sea.

He let it fall among their tentes round about their habytacions.

So they ate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their owne desyre.

They were not disapoynted of their luste.

* But while the meate was yet in theyr mouthes: the heauy wrath of god came vpon the, slewe the wellthyest of them, and smote downe the cholen men of Israel.

* But for al this they synned yet more, & beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therefore theyr dates were consumed in vanite, and sodely theyr peates were gone.

* When he slewe them, they sought him, and turned them early vnto God.

They thoughte then that God was their succoure, and that the hye GOD was their redemer.

Neuertheles they did but flatter him in their mouthes, and dyssembled wyth him in theyr tonges.

For their hert was not whole wth him, nether continued they in his couenaunt.

But he was so merciful, þ̄ he forgauē their myddes, and destroyed the not.

Yea, manye a tyme turned he hys wrath awaye, and wolde not suffre hys whole displeasure to aryse.

For he consydered that they were but fleshe: euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and commeth not agayne.

E *Howe ofte haue they greued him in the wildernes.

How many a tyme haue they prouoked him in the deserter.

They turned backe, and tepted God, and moued the holy one in Israell.

They thought not of his hand, in the day when he deliuered them from the hand of the enemye.

How he had wrought his myracles in Egypt, and his wonders in the lande of soan.

*Howe he turned their waters into bloude, so that they myght not drinke of the ryuers.

*Howe he sent lyce amonge them, to eate the vp, & frogges to destroye the.

*Howe he gaue they frutes vnto the carpyller, and their labour vnto the gresshopper.

*How he bet downe their bynepardes wyth hable stones, and their molberytrees with the frost.

*How he smote their catel with hable stones, & their flockes wyth hote thunder boltes.

Howe he sent vpon them the furyousnesse of his wrathe, anger and displeasure: with trouble and fallynge in of euill angels.

*When he made a way to his feare, full indignacion, & spared not their soules fro death, yea, & gaue their castel ouer to the pestilence.

*When he smote all the first borne in Egypt, the most principall and myghtyest in the dwellynge of Ham.

F But as for his owne people, he led them forth lyke shepe, and carped them in the wylernes lyke a flocke.

He brought them out safely, & they shuld not feare, and ouerwhelmed their enemyes with the sea.

He caried them into the borders of hys Sanctuarie: euen into thys hyll, whiche he purchased wyth hys ryghte hande.

*He dyd cast oute the heathen before the, caused theyr lande to be deuided among the for an heritage, & made tribes of Israell to dwell in their tentes.

For all this they reempted and displeased the most hye God, and kepte not his couenaunt.

But turned their backes, and fel as wayne lyke their forefathers, fastynge asyde lyke a broken boowe.

And so they greued him with their hye places, and prouoked hym wyth theyr ymages.

When God heard this, he was wroth, and toke sore displeasure at Israell.

*So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Silo, euen his habitacion wherein he dwelt amonge men.

*He deliuereth their power into captyuite, and their gloire into the enemyes hande.

He gaue his people ouer into swerds, for he was wroth with his herptage.

The fyre consumed their pong men, and their maydens were not geuen to mariage.

Their priestes were slayne wyth the swerde, and there were no widdowes to make lamentacion.

So the Lorde awaked as one out of slepe, and lyke a gyaunte refreshed with wyne.

*He smote his enemies in the hynder partes, & put the to a perpetual shame.

He refused the tabernacle of Ioseph, and chose not the trybe of Ephraim.

*Neuerthelesse, he chose the trybe of Iuda, euen the hyll of Syon whyche he loued.

And there he buylded hys temple on hye, and layed the foundacyon of it lyke the grounde, that it myght perpetually endure.

*He chose Dauid also hys seruaunt, and toke him away fro the shepe foldes.

As he was folowing the yowes great with ponge, he toke him, that he mighte fede Jacob his people, and Israell hys enherptauce.

So he fed them wyth a saythfull and true herte, and ruled them with all the diligence of his power.

Tel it out among the heathen, that the Lord is kinge: and that it is he whiche hath made the round world so fast, that it canne not be moued, and how that he shal iudge the people rightuously.

For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke, and my bones are bzent vp as it were a fyre brande.

My hearte is smytten downe and wythered lyke grasse, so that I forget to eate my breade.

* For the voyce of my gromyng, my bone will scarce cleue to my flesh.

I am become lyke a Delycane in the wyldernes, and lyke an oule in a broken wall.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparowe syttinge alone vpon the house toppe.

Myne enemyes reuile me all the day longe, they laugh me to scozne, and are sworne together againste me.

I eate ashes with my bread, and mingle my dryncke with wepinge.

And that because of thyn indignacyon and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me awaye.

My dayes are gone like a shadowe, and I am wythered lyke grasse.

But thou, O Lord, endurest for euer, and thy remembraunce thow out all generacions.

chylde, euen so is the Lorde mercifull vnto them that feare him.

For he knoweth wherof we be made,
he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a man in his time is but as is grasse, & flourisheth as a floure of the felde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and the place thereof knoweth it no moze.

But the mercifull goodnesse of the Lorde endureth for euer and euer, vpon the that feare him, and his rightous-nesse vpon theyr childers chylde.

Suche as kepe his couenant, and

The people of God, sparkles abroade for their offi-and after in the lande of Canaan.

Praise the euerlastyng.

A Gene* thanckes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his me-cy endur eth for euer.

Who can expresse the noble actes of the Lorde, or shewe forth al his prayse.
Blessed are they that alwaye kepe iudgement, and do ryghteousnes.

Remembre vs, O Lorde, accordyng to the fauoure that thou bearest vnto thy people: O byset vs with thy sauynge healthe.

That we myghte se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we might reioyse in the gladnesse of thy people, and geue thankes with a thyne enherptauce.

We haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealte wykedlye.

Oure fathers regarded not thy wōders in Egypte, they kepe not thy great goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the sea, euē at p<sup>er</sup> read sea.

B Neuertheles, he helped them for his names sake, that he myght make hys power to be knowen.

* He rebuked the read sea, and it was dried vp: so he led them thowow the depe as in a wyldernes.

Thus he saued them from p<sup>er</sup> hande of the hater, and deliuered the from the hande of the enemye.

* As for those that troubled the the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them left.

* Then beleued they in his word, and en-fange prayse vnto hym.

But within a whyle they forgat hys wozkes, and woulde not abyde hys counsell.

Alasse came vpō them in the wildernesse, so p<sup>er</sup> they tēpted God in p<sup>er</sup> deserte.

Yet he gaue them their desyre, & sent them ymoughe at their wylls.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aaron the sapiente of the Lorde.

* So the earthe opened & swallowed vp Dathan, and couered the congrega-cion of Abiram.

The fyre was kindled in their com-panye, the flame brent vp the vngodly.

* They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Thus they turned their b<sup>er</sup> glouze in to symilitude of a calfe, that eateth haye.

They forgat God their Sauoure, whiche had done so greate thynges in Egypte.

Wonderous wozkes in the lande of Ham, and fearful thiges in p<sup>er</sup> read sea.

So he sayde he woulde haue destroyed them, had not Moses his chosen stād before hym in p<sup>er</sup> gappe: to turne awaye his wrathful indignacion, lest he should destroye them.

* Yea they thought scozne of p<sup>er</sup> pleasaunte lande, and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in their tentes, & her-kened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lifte he vp his hande agāst the,
to ouerthrowe them in the wyldernes.

To cast out their sede among the naci-ons, and to scatter them in the landes.

* They loyned the felues vnto Baal peor, and ate the offeriges of the deade.

Thus they prouoked him vnto anger with their owne intencions, and the plage was greate amonge them.

* Then rode vp whinches and excuted iustyce, and so the plague ceased.

And p<sup>er</sup> was coucted vnto him for righ-teousnes, among all posterity for euermore.

* They angered him also at the waters of strepe so that Moses was punished for their sakes.

Because they prouoked his spirite, and he tolde them playnly in his lippes.

Neither destoyed they the heathen,

* as the Lorde commaunded them.

But were mengled amonge the heathen, and lerned their workes.

In so muche that they worshipped their ymages, whiche turned to theyr owne decaye.

* Yea they offered their sonnes & their daughters vnto deuels.

* And shed the innocēte bloude of their sonnes and of their daughters, whome they offered vnto the ymages of Canaan, so the lande was despyled with bloude.

Thus were they stayned with theyr owne workes, and wente a whozyng with their owne inuencions.

Therefore was the wrath of the Lorde kyndled against his people, in so much that he abhorred his owne enheritaunce.

And gaue them ouer in to the hande of the heathen, and they that hated them, were lordes ouer them.

6 Their enemyes oppressed them, and had them in subteccion.

Many a tyme dyd he deliuer them, but they prouoked him with their owne inuencions, and were broughte downe for their wyckednesse.

Nevertheless when he sawe their aduersyte, he herde their complaynte.

He thoughte vpon his couenaunte, and * pytied them, accordyng vnto the multitude of his mercyes.

Yea, he made all those that had leade them awaye captiue, to pytie them.

Deliver vs, O Lorde our God, and gather vs from amonge the heathen: that we maye geue thanckes to thy holy name, & make our boast of thy praise.

The sheweth that all euils and aduersities are both sente and taken awaye of God.

D Geue * thanckes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

Let them geue thanckes whom the Lorde hath redeemed, & deliuered from the hande of the enemye.

And gather them out of the landes, from the East, from the West, from the North and from the South.

They wente astraye in the wyldernes in an vntrouen waye, and founde no cytie to dwel in.

Hongrye and thirstye, and their soule faynted in them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he deliuered them from their dystresse.

He led them forth by the right waye, that they myghte go to the cytie where they dwelte.

That men woulde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde, and the wondrous that he doth for the chyldren of men.

* for he satisfied the emptie soule, and fylled the hongrye soule with good.

Suche as sat in darcknesse and in the shadowe of death, beyng faste bounde in myserye and prison.

Because they were not obediēte to the commaundementes of God, but lightly regarded the counsell of the most hygh.

Their herte was vexed wth labour, they fell downe, and there was none to helpe them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in their trouble, and he deliuered them out of their dystresse.

He broughte them out of darcknesse and out of the shadowe of death, and brake their bondes in sonder.

That men woulde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde, and the wondrous that he doth for the chyldren of men.

for he hath broken the gates of brass, and smytten the barres of yron in sonder.

For the men were plagued for their offence, and because of their wickednesse.

Holde not thy tonge, O God of my prayse.

For the mouthe of the vngodlye, yea, and the mouth of the discreatfull is opened vpon me, and Let his chyldren be vagaboundes, and beg their bred: let them seke it, as they that be destroyed.

Let the extorcioner cosume al that he hath, and let straungers spyle hys laboure.

Let there be no man to petye, nor to haue compassion vpon his fatherlesse chyldren.

Let his ende be destruccion, and in the nexte generacion let his name be cleane put oute.

Let the wyckednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the syghte mother be done awayne.

Let them alwaye be before y Lord;
but as for y memorial of them selues, let it petye from out of the earthe.

And that because hys mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helplesse, and him y was vexed at the herte, to slaye him.

His delyre was in cursynge, & therfore shall it happen vnto him: he loued not blessinge; and that shall be farre from him.

He clothed him selfe with cursynge like as with a rayment: yea, it wente in to his bowels like water, & lyke oyle in to hys bones.

Let it be vnto him as the cloke that he hath vpon hym, and as the gyrdle that he is gyrded with all.

Let it thus happen from the Lorde vnto myne enemys, and to those that speake euell agaynst me soule.

But deale thou with me, O Lorde God, accordynge vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercye.

O deliuer me, for I am helplesse and poore, & my herte is wounded within me.

teth, and am dyspyen awaye as y grefe hoppers.

My knees are weake thow wylfasting my flesch is dyped vp for wate of fatnesse,

I am become a rebuke vnto them, they loke vpon me & shake their heades.

Helpe me, O Lord my God, oh saue me for thy mercyes sake.

That they maye know, howe y this is thy hande, and y thou haste done it.

Thoughe they curse, yet blesse thou:
and let them be confounded, that tyle vp agaynst me, but let thy seruaute reioyce.

Let myne aduersaries be clothed in

The cxvi. Psalme.

The thankesgeuyng for the helpe of the Lord wher-by he escaped when he was compassed aboute with the Hoste of Baule. He receyeth the greates iopardye and strayte wherein he then was: and prayeth the goodnes of God, by whose benefyte he was preserued.

I Am well pleased, that the Lord hathe hearde the voyce of my prayer.

That he hathe enclyned his eare vnto me, therfore wil I cal vpon hym as longe as I lyue.

The snares of deathe compassed me roude aboute, the paines of hel gate holde vpon me, I founde trouble and heynesse.

Then called I vpon the name of the Lord: O Lord: delpyer my soule.

Graciouse is the Lord, and a righteous, yea oure God is merciful.

The Lord preferueth the symple, I was broughte downe, and he helped me.

Turne agayne then vnto thy rest, O my soule, for the Lord hathe geuen the thy desyre.

And why? thou hast delpyered my soule from deathe, myne eyes from teas-res, and my fete from salpunge.

I wyll walcke before the Lord, in the lande of the lyuynge.

* I beleued, & therfore haue I spoken, but I was sore troubled.

I sayde in my haste: * All men are lyars.

What rewarde shal I geue vnto the Lord, for al the benefytes that he hath done vnto me?

I wyll receaue the cuppe of saluation, & cal vpon the name of the Lord.

I wyll paye my bowes in the presence of all his people, ryght deare in the syghte of the Lord is the deathe of his saynctes.

O Lord, I am thy seruaunte, I am thy seruaunt, and the sonne of thy hādes mayde, thou hast broken my bondes in sonder.

I wyll offre to the, the sacrifice of thankesgeuyng, and wyll call vpon the name of the Lord.

* I wil paye my bowes vnto the Lord in the syghte of all his people, in the courtes of the Lordes house, euen in the myddest of the, O Jerusalem.
Prayse the euerlastyng.

The cxvii. Psalme.

The propheth that the benefite of the Gospel shal come vnto the Gentyles and heathen.

Prayse the Lord al ye a Gentyles, laude him all ye people.

* For his merciful kyndnes is euer moze and moze towarde vs, and the trueth of the Lord endureth for euer.
Prayse

praise the everlastynge.

The Notes.

a. By the gentyles or heathen are vnderstand the vnfaithfull that beleue not in God & by the people, cyphar phul and beleuers. Isa. xlv. d. Therefor shall the people geue thanckes. & c.

a. A songe, wherewith Dauid deliuered from hys aduersities, and promoted to the kynngdome of al Israell, gaue thanckes to God openly in the tabernacle: In whiche he also beareth the figure of Christe.

a. *Geue thanckes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and hys mercye endureth for euer.

Let Israell nowe confesse, that hys mercy endureth for euer.

Let the house of Aaron now confesse, that hys mercy endureth for euer.

Yea, lette them nowe that feare the Lorde confesse, that hys mercye endureth for euer.

I called vpon the Lorde in trouble, and the Lorde hearde me at large.

b. *The Lorde is my helper, I wyl not feare what man doeth vnto me.

The Lorde is my helper, and I shall see my desyre vpon myne enemyes.

It is better to truste in the Lorde then to put any confidence in man.

It is better to truste in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in prynces.

All heathen compassed me rounde aboute, but in the name of the Lorde I wyl destroye them.

They kepe me in on euery syde, but in the name of the Lorde I wyl destroye them.

They came aboute me lyke Bees, & were as hote as the fyre in the thornes, but in the name of the Lorde I wyl destroye them.

They thurst at me, that I myghte fall, but the Lorde was my helpe.

*The Lorde is my strengthe, and my songe, and is become my saluacion,

The voyce of ioye and myrthe is in the dwellynges of the ryghteous, for the ryght hande of the Lorde hath gotten the victorie.

The ryght hande of the Lorde hath the premyence, the ryght hand of the Lorde hath gotten the victorie.

I wyl not dye, but lyue, and declare the woorkes of the Lorde.

The Lord hath chastened and correct me, but he hath not geuen me ouer vnto deathe.

*Open me the gates of ryghteousnes, that I maye goe in there thowme, and geue thanckes vnto the Lorde.

This is the doore of the Lord, the ryghteous shall enter in thowme it.

I thanke the, that thou hast heard me, and art become my saluacion.

*The same stone whiche the buylders refused is become the heade stone in the corner.

This was the Lordes doyng, and it is maruelous in oure eyes.

This is the daye whiche the Lorde hath made, let vs reioyce and be glad in it.

Helpe now O Lorde, O Lord sende vs nowe prosperite, *Blessed be he that cometh in the name of the Lorde, we wyshe you good lucke, ye that be of the house of the Lorde.

God is the Lorde, and hathe shewed vs lyghte: O garnyshe the solempne feast wyth grene bzaunches, euen vnto the hornes of the aulter.

Thou arte my God, and I wyl thanke the: thou arte my God, and I wyl prayse the.

O geue thanckes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and hys mercye endureth for euer.

The Notes.

a. He openeth the gates of rightousnesse, that declarerth vnto the worlde the rightousnes that cometh of God, so Esay. xxi. a. Open the gates that the good people maye goe in. & c.

b. This stone is Christe, and the buylders suche teachers, as taughte that he was vnprofitable. Mat. xxi. d. Suche buylders remaine yet, and wal docto the worldes ende.

c. By day, vnderstand here the tyme of preaching the gospel and glad tydings of Christe, whiche continueth as long as the true saythe in Christe remaineth. Of this day speaketh Dauid also. 1. Cor. vi. a. Behold, now is the day of saluacion.

a. This psalme declarerth howe muche the sayntes and chyldren let by the lawes of God, and howe greatlye they endeuoure them selues vnto them, in so muche that they sorowe them to be transgressed and withstandinge of the wycked: And howe they praye to be taughte them fro aboute, and to be accustomed wyth them: and wythe as many as transgress and withstand them, to be destroyed and made awaye.

in thy iudgementes.

So shall I alwaye kepe thy lawe, yea, for euer and euer.

And I wyl walcke at libertye, for I seke thy commaundementes.

I wyl speake of thy testimonyes uen before kynges, and wyl not be shamed.

My delyte shalbe in thy commaundementes, whiche I loue.

My handes also wyl I lyft vp vnto thy commaundementes whiche I loue, and my talkynge shalbe of thy statutes.

6 O thynke vpon thy seruaunte, as concernynge thy worde, wherewith thou hast caused me to put my trust.

For it is my comforte in my trouble, yea, thy worde quickeneth me.

The proude haue me greatly in detision, yet thynke not I from thy law.

I remembre thyme ouerlasting iudgementes, O Lorde, and am comforted.

I am horriblely afrayde for thy vngodly, that forsake thy lawe.

Thy statutes are my songes in the house of my pylgrymage.

I thinke vpon thy name, O Lorde, in the nyght season, and kepe thy lawe.

It is myne owne, for I kepe thy comaundementes.

Psalm.

* Thou arte my porcyon, O Lorde,
I am purposed to kepe thy lawe.

I make myne humble petition in thy presence with my whole hearte, O be mercifull vnto me accordynge vnto thy worde.

I call myne owne wayes to remembraunce, and tourne my fete into thy testimonies.

I make haste, and prolonge not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I forget not thy lawe.

* At my nyghte stande I vp, to geue

They that feare the, wyl be gladde when they see me, because I putte my truste in thy worde.

I knowe, O Lorde, that iudgementes are ryghte, and that thou of verye faythfulnesse hast caused me to be troubled.

O let thy mercifull kyndnesse be my comforte, accordynge to y prouises that thou hast made vnto thy seruaunte.

O let thy louynge mercies come vnto me, that I maye lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte.

Let the proude be confounded, which handle me so falslye.

The way of truerth. c. This waye of truerth, is the lyfe that is ordered after the worde of truerth, which is contayned in the scripture. In this waye Dauid sayeth that he harbe walched, and nor in fayned tradicions and holynes imagyned by hym selfe or by anye mortall man. In the same signification doeth peter vse this worde in the. ii. a of his. ii. Epistle. There shalbe false teachers. By whome the waye of truerth shalbe euyl spoken of. &c.

Seueme
vndersta-ndynge. d. He despyeth to haue an other vnderstandynge then that whiche is but manlye, whiche is ignoraunt of God and of his wyl, power, mercede and anger. Yea, though it were neuer so wel instruct and taught, yet woulde it neuer vnderstande of it selfe without the spirite of God, that God is merciful, righteous, and foregeth synnes feyle, without anye deservynge. psalme. cxii. b

Lanterne e. The worde of God is called a lanterne & light, because, & without it, al that there is, is darkenes, and because that he whiche foloweth it, can not fal in to anye error, as it is sayde. ii. peter. i. d.
We also that. &c.

f. That man is sayd to haue his soule in his hand, that is alwaye redy and prest to offer his lyfe to dager, as ye haue it expounded in Job. xii. c. wher is spokē more at large. It should not seme amys expounded to saye that the man & framed al the workes of his handes after & lawe of God, had his soule in his handes. As who shoulde saye, he dothe in al his workes regarde the health of his soule.

g. Loke in the. xv. psalme. a.

h. Of the princes is sayde. about in this psal.

The. cxx. psalme.

In aucterous complaynte of the prophet, beyng dynen out of the land and abyding amonge the wicked that dyd al thynges by fraude and violence.

The songe of the steares.

When I am in trouble, I call vpon the Lozde, and he an-swereth me.

Deliuer my soule, O Lozde, from lyeinge lippes, and from a discept, full tongue.

What rewarde shalbe geuen or done vnto the, thou false tongue.

Geuen mightye and sharpe arrowes, wyth hote burnynge & coales.

Who is me that my banishment endureth so longe: I dwel in the tabernacles of the sozowfull.

My soule hath longed dwelt amonge them, that be enemyes vnto peace.

I laboured for peace, but when I spake therof, they made the to batayle.

The notes.

a. In Hebrue & gabelcloth. Abi. Ezra thynketh it to be the beginninge of some songe, after whos tune the psalmes & haue this tytle meete & ge. ther expound it to signifie: in a high place. Some there be that saye, that the Levites sange al these psalmes in Dauids house, vpon & steares whiche went frome the chambie where the men assembled, to the chambie where the women comelye abode.

The. cxxi. psalme.

He sheweth that the godly must loke for their helpe of God only, and that he geueth it verie readelye.

The songe of the steares.

Lytte by myne eyes vnto the & hylls, fro whence commeth my helpe.

* My helpe commeth euē from the Lozde which hath made heauen and earthe.

He wyl not suffre thy fote to be moued, and he that kepeth the, slepeth not.

* Behold, he that kepeth Israel, doth neither slomber nor slepe.

The Lozde hym selfe is thy keper, & Lozde is thy defence vpon thy ryghte hande.

So that the sunne shall not burne the by daye, neither the moone by nyght.

The Lorde preserveth the frome all evill, yea, it is the Lorde that kepeth thy soule.

The Lorde preserveth thy goyng out and thy commynge in, from thys tyme forth for ever more.

The Notes.

a. By these hylls is meant the heauens.

The. cxvii. Psalme.

Under the shadowe and figure of Jerusalem he describeth the felicitye of the congregacion of Christe, and the desires of the sayntes, wythynge euer the further saunter of it.

The songe of the sheares.

I was glad, when they sayde vnto me: * we wyl goe in to the house of the Lorde.

Oure fete shall stande in thy gates,
O Jerusalem.

Jerusalem is buylded as a cytie, that is at vnite in it selfe.

for there the trybes go by, euen the tribes of the Lorde: to testifie vnto Israel, to geue thanckes vnto the name of the Lorde.

for there is the seate of iudgement, euen the seate of the house of Dauid.

O praye for the peace of Jerusalem, they shal prospere that loue the.

Peace be within thy walles, a plentiousnes within thy palaces.

for my brethren and companions sakes, I wyl wish the prosperite.

Yea, bycause of the house of the Lorde oure God, I wyl seke to doe the good.

The. cxviii. Psalme.

The godly subdueth to the wycked, do affectuous-lye God to deliuer them, for vnto hym they wholye commit them selues.

The songe of the sheares.

Unto the lyfte I by myne eyes, * thou dwellest in the heauens.

Behold, euen as the eyes of seruauntes loke vnto the handes of their maysters: and as the eyes of a mayden vnto the handes of her maistresse, euen so our eyes wayte vpon the Lorde our God, vntyl he haue mercede vpon vs.

Haue mercy vpon vs, O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs, for we are vtterlye de-spoyled.

Oure soule is filled wyth the scoznes full repproche of the welthy, and with the despitfulnesse of the proude.

The Notes.

a. By the eye to the Debyes almost continualite understande the heart and minde. As before in the psal. cxv. and in manye other places.

The. cxviii. Psalme.

The godlye cryeth that they are vynde, by the helpe of God, fro a trouper whereunto they were deye nyg.

The songe of the sheares.

If the Lorde had not bene of oure syde (nowe maye Israell saye) If the Lorde hadde not bene of oure syde, when men rose by agaynste vs.

* They had swallowed vs by quicken, p. 10. l. b. when they were so wyathfull ye displeased at vs.

Yea, the waters had drowned vs, the streame had gone ouer oure soule.

The depe waters of the proude had gone euen vnto oure soule.

But praysed be the Lorde, which hath not geue vs ouer for a pray vnto their teeth.

Oure soule is escaped, euen as a birde oute of the snare of the fowler: the snare is broken and we are deliuered.

The. cxv. Psalme.

The churche or congregacion is in safetie when the Lorde defendeth it, and shal be prosperous when he sanctifyeth it, and purgeth the wycked thereoute.

The songe of the sheares.

They that put their truste in the Lorde, are euen as a mount Sion, which maye not be remoued, but standeth fast for euer. Psal. cxv. l. b.

The hylls stande aboute Jerusalem; euen so standeth the Lorde rounde as boute his people, from this tyme forth for evermore.

That the robbe of the vngodly come not into the lotte of the ryghteous, lest the ryghteous putte their hande vnto wyckednesse.

So well, O Lorde, vnto those that be good, and true of hearte.

As for suche as tourne backe vnto theyre owne wyckednesse, the Lorde shal leade them forth with the yuell doers: but peace be vpon Israell.

The. cxv. Psalme.

He describeth the gladnes of the people returninge agayne from Babylon, and vnder the figure hereof the redyng of the Chycken, whome the sonne of God hath made free from the captiuite of synne and death.

v. Of Dauid Ps. cxxvi. cxxvii cxxviii

When  $\beta$  Lorde turneth agayne the captiuite of Sion, then shall we be lyke vnto them that dreame.

Then shall oure mouthe be fylled with laughter, & our tongue with ioye.

Then shall it be sayde amonge the Heathen: the Lorde hathedone greates thynges for them.

Yea, the Lorde hath done great thynges for vs al ready, wherof we reioyce.

Turne oure captiuite, O Lorde, as the ryuers in the southe.

They that sowe in teares, shall reape in ioye.

He that nowe goeth in his waye wepyng and beareth forth good sede, shall come agayne wyth ioye, and bryng hys sheaues with hym.

* The. cxxvi. Psalme.

of this psalme By the onely lyberalte & gyfte of God, is  $\beta$  house and howsholde geuen, the cytye defended, meate mynystryed, chyldren & those towarde and thynges obtaigned.

The songe of the sheares.

Excepte the Lorde buyde the house, their labour is but lost that buyde it.

Except the Lorde kepe the cytye,  $\beta$  watchman waketh but in vayne.

* It is but lost labour that ye syle by earlye, and take no rest, but eate the breade of carefulnes: for loke to whom it pleaseth hym, he geueth it in slepe.

Lo, chyldren and the fruite of the wombe are an heretage and gyfte, that commeth of the Lorde.

Lyke as the arrowes in the hande of the Gyaunt, euen so are the yonge chyldren.

Happye is the man, that hath hys quiver full of them: they shall not be ashamed, when they speake wyth their enemyes in the gate.

* The. cxxviii. Psalme.

of this psalme He that feareth God shall doe wel and fortunatlye at al seasons.

The songe of the sheares.

Blessed are al they that feare the Lorde, and walcke in hys wayes.

For thou shalt eate the labours of thyne handes: O wel is thee, happye arte thou.

Thy wyfe shall be as  $\beta$  fruteful vyne vpon the walles of thy house.

Thy chyldren lyke the olīue bryans, ches rounde aboute thy table.

Lo, thus shall the man be blessed, that feareth the Lorde.

* The Lorde shall so blesse the oute of Sion, that thou shalt see Ierusalem in prosperyte all thy lyfe longe.

Yea, that thou shalt see thy chyldren, and peace vpon Irael.

The notes.

a. That is, fylled with welth and prosperite.

The. cxxix. Psalme.

of this psalme Although he the wycked do longe and greates perils cūte the godlye, yet shall they not pynnyple ouer them: yea, they shall at  $\beta$  length perysh when the godlye shall in lastre.

The songe of the sheares.

Manye a tyme haue they foughte against me fro my youth vp (may I Irael nowe saye.)

Yea, manye a tyme haue they fought agaynst me fro my youth vp, but they haue not ouercome me.

The plowers plowed vpon my back, and made longe sorowes.

But  $\beta$  righteous Lorde hath heuen the yoke of the vngodlye in peces.

Let them be confounded and turned backward, as many as haue euell wyll at Sion.

* Let them be euen as the hape vpon the house toppes, whyche wythereth before it be pluckte vp.

Whereof the mower filleth not his hande, neyther he that byndeth vp the sheaues, hys bosome.

So that they which goe by, say not so much as: the Lorde prospere you, we wysh you good lucke in the name of the Lorde.

The notes

a. In the scripture, Sion betokeneth the whole church and congregacion of God, and euery saythful soule that hath his whole intente, affection and desire towarde God.

The. cxxx. Psalme.

of this psalme An earnest prayer of hym that is oppressed wyth aduersite for his synnes, and that surely hopeth to obayne of God bothe forgiveness of his synnes and deliuerance from hys aduersities.

The songe of the sheares.

Out of the depe call I vnto the, O Lorde, Lorde heare my voyce.

O lette thyne eares comfyrte wel the voyce of my complaynte.

* Yf thou Lorde wylt be extreme to marcke what is done amysse, O Lorde who may abyde it?

But

of David Psal. cxxxi. cxxxii. cxxxiii. Fo. r

But there is mercy with thee, & thou mayest be feared.

I loke for the Lorde, my soule doeth wayt for him, & in his word is my trust.

My soule doth patiently abyde the Lorde, fro the one mornynge to the other.

Let Israel trust in the Lorde, for with the Lorde there is mercy & plenteous redemption. And he shall redeme Israel from all his synnes.

The notes.

a. By the depe is vnderstande the aduersitie wher in the people of Israel were when they were scattered among the Chaldes. Vnto vs christe, it signifyeth the aduersitie, trouble and misery, & hap- pency to vs for our offences and synnes.

The. cxxxi. Psalme.

He sheweth & he was not proude, but meke and lowly.

The songe of the steares.

Lorde, I am not hye minded, I haue no proude lokes.

* I do not exerceyse my selfe in great matters, which are to hie for me.

But I restryne my soule and kepe it lowe, lyke as a childe that is wayned fro his mother: yea, my soule is euen as a weyned childe.

Let Israel trust in the Lorde, from this tyme forth for evermore.

The. cxxxii. Psalme.

He sheweth that the prosperite of Chyries kyngdom durth euyl, that God is alway preser with his church and congregation: Chys doeth he vnder the figure of David and of the arke abyding in Sion.

The songe of the steares.

Lorde, * remembre David and all his trouble.

* How he swore vnto & Lorde, and bowed a bow vnto the al- mighty one of Jacob: I will not come within the tabernacle of my house, nor clyme vp in my bedde.

I wyl not suffre mine eyes to slepe, nor myne eye liddes to somber.

Vntyl I fynde out a place for & Lorde, an habytacyon for the myghtye one of Jacob.

As we hoarde of the same at Ephrata, and founde it in the wod.

We wyl go in to his tabernacle, and fall downe before his fote stole.

* Arise, O Lorde, into thy * restinge place, thou and & arcke of thy strength.

* Let thy priestes be clothed with righ- tuousnesse, and let thy sayntes reioyse for thy seruaunte Dauids sake, & turne not awaye the presence of thyne anoynted.

* The Lorde hath made a faythfull oath vnto David, & he shall not shynke from it: Of the fruite of thy body shall I set vpon thy seate.

If thy children wyl kepe my touchat, and my testymonye that I shall learne theym, theire children also shall set vpon thy seate for evermore.

For the Lorde hath chosen Sion, to be an habytacyon for him selfe hath he chosen her.

This shall be my rest, here wyl I dwel, for I haue a delyste therein.

I wyl blesse her vitalles with encrease, and * wyl satisfye the poze with breade.

I wyl decke her priestes with health, and her sayntes shall reioyse & be glad.

There shall I make the * horne of Da- uid to floreye, I haue ordered a * lan- terne for myne anoynted.

As for hys enemyes, I shall clothe them with shame, but vpon him selfe shall his crowne florish.

The Proverbes of Salomon the sonne of David King of Israel: to lerne wisdom, instruction, understanding, prudence, rightousnesse, iudgemente and equite. That the very babes might haue wyl, and that yonge menne might haue knowledge and vnderstandynge. By hearinge, the wyle man shall come by more wisdom: and by experience he shall be more apte to vnderstande a parable, and the interpretation thereof, the wordes of the wyle, and the darcke speeches of the same. * The feare of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. But fools despise wisdom and instruction.

My sonne, heare thy fathers doctrine, and forsake not the law of thy mother: for that shall bring grace vnto thy heade, and shall bee as a cheyne aboute thy necke. My sonne, consente not vnto synners, yf they entyse thee, and saye: come with vs, lette vs lape wayte for bloude, and lutche prauelye, for the innocent withoute a cause: let vs swallowe them vp lyke the hell, lette vs deuoure them quicke and whole, as those that go downe into the pyt. So shall we fynde al maner of costelye ryches, and fyll oure houses with spoyle. Caste in thy lot amonge vs, we shall haue al one purse.

My sonne, walcke not thou with the reftayne thy rote frome theyr wayes.

* For their fete runne to euell, and are hastie to shedde bloude. But in bayne is the nette layed for the before the byrdes eyes. Yea, they them selues lape wayte one for anothers bloude, and one of the would sleie another. These are the wayes of all suche as bee couetous, that one would rauyn another lyfe.

* Wisdom cryeth without, and putteth forth her voyce in the stretes. She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes thorow the cytie, saying: O ye chyldre, how long wil ye loue the chyldyshnesse? how longe wyl the scozners delpte in scoynge, and the vnwyle be enemyes vnto knowledge? O turne you vnto my correction: so, I wyl expresse my mynde vnto you and make you vnderstand my wordes. * Seing then that I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande, and no man regarded it, but all my councelles haue ye despyed, and sette my correccions at naughte. Therefore shall I also laughe in youre destruction, and mocke you, when the thing that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thyng that ye be afrayed of, falleth in sodenly lyke a storme, and youre mysery lyke a tempest: yea, when trouble and heuynesse commeth vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyl not heare: they shall seke me earlye, but they shall not fynde me: And because they hated knowledge, and receaued not the feare of the Lord, but abhorred my counsell, and despyed my correccion. Therefore shall they eate the frutes of their owne waye, and be fylled with thair owne councelles, for the turninge awaye of the vnwyle shall sleie them, and the prosperite of foolles shall be their owne destruction. * But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwel safely, and haue ynoughe withoute anye feare of euell.

The.iii. Chapter.

The commandementes of God must be diligently regarded and obserued.

My sonne, * forget not my lawe, but se þe thine heart kepe my commandementes. For they shall prolonge the dayes and yeaues of thy lyfe, and byynge the peace. Let mercy and saythfulnes neuer goo from the: bynde them about thy necke, and wyte them in the tables of thyne hearte. So shalt thou synde sauour and good vnderstanding in the syghte of God and men. Put thy trust in the Lorde with all thine hearte, and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstandinge. In all thy wayes haue respect vnto hym, and he shall ordeyne thy goynges. * Be not wyle in thyne owne conceite but feare the Lorde, and departe from euell: so shall a thy nauell be whole, and thy bones stronge.

* Honour the Lorde with thy substance, and with the fyrstlynges of all thyne encrease: so shall thy barnes be filled with plenteuousnesse, and thy p̄sentes shall flowe ouer with swete wyne. * My sonne, despyse not the chastening of the Lorde, neyther saynte when thou arte rebused of him. * For whome the Lord loueth, him he chasteneth: and yet delyteth in hym, euen as a father in his owne sonne. Well is him that synneth wysdome, and opteyneth vnderstanding: for the gettinge of it is better then anye marchaundise of syluer, and the profyt of it is better then golde.

* Wysdome is more worthe then p̄cious stones: and all the thynges that þe canst desyre, are not to be compared vnto her. vpon her righte hande is longe lyfe, and vpon her leftte hande is riches and honoure. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and all her pathes are peaceable. * She is a tree of lyfe to them that lay holde vpon her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

With wysdome hath the Lord layed the foundation of the earth, and thou towe vnderstanding hath he stablyshed the heauens. Thowow þys wysdome the deapthes breake vp, & the cloudes drop downe of the dewe. My sonne, let not these thynges departe from thyne eyes: but kepe my lawe, and my counsell: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, and grace vnto thy mouth. Then shalt thou walke safelye in thy waye, and thy fote shall not stumbe. * If thou slepest, thou shalt not be afrayed, but shalt take thy rest and slepe sweetely. Thou needest not to be afrayed of anye sodayne feare, neyther for the vyolent rushynge in of the vngodlye, when it commeth. For the Lord shall besgethe, and kepe thy fote that thou be not taken. Do good vnto hym that shoulde haue it, so longe as thynne hande is able to do it. Saye not vnto thy neyghboure: go thy waye and come agayne, to morow wyl I geue the: where as thou haste nowe to geue hym. Intend no hurte vnto thy neyghboure, seynge he hopeth to dwell in rest by the. Striue not lyghtely with anye man withoute cause, where as he hath done the no harme. * folowe not a wicked man, & chose none of his wates: for the Lorde abhorreth the frowarde, but hys secreete is amonge the rightuous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodlye, but he blesseth the dwellinges of the rightuous. As for the scoynesfull, he shall laughe them to scoyne, but he shall geue grace vnto the lowlye. The wyse shall haue honour in possession, but shame is the promociou that folowes that haue.

The. iiii. Chapter.

Wisdom and her frutes and wayes ought to be searched.

Wisdom, O ye chyldren, the fatherlye exhortacion, & take good hede, that ye may lerne wisdom. Yea, I shall geue you a good reward, if ye wyl not forsake my law. For when I my selfe was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly be loued of my mother, he taught me also, sayinge: * Let thynne hearte receaue my wordes, kepe my commaundementes, & thou shalt liue. Get the wisdom, get the vnderstandinge: forget not the wordes of my mouth, and shrinke not from them. Forsake her not, and she shall prelerue the: loue her, & she shall kepe the.

The these poynte of wisdom is, that thou be wyllynge to opteyne wisdom, and before all thy goodes to get the vnderstanding. * Make much of her and she shall promote the: Yea, if thou embrace her, she shall bring the vnto honoure.

She shall make the a gracious head, and garnish the with a crowne of glory. Heare my sonne, and receaue my wordes, that the peares of thy lyfe may be many. I wil shew the the way of wisdom, and lead the in the right pathes.

So that if thou goest therein, there shall no straitnesse hynder the: & when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall. Take fast holde of doctrine, let her not goo: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. * Come not in the path of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wycked. Eschue it, and go not therein: departe aspyde, and passe ouer by it. For they can not slepe excepte they haue first done some myschefe: nether take they any rest, excepte they haue first done some harme. For they eate the breade of wickednesse, and dryncke the wyne of robbery. The path of the rightuous shyneth as the lyghte, and is euer brighte and brighte vnto the perfecte daye. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darcknes, where in men fall, or they be aware. * My sonne, marcke my wordes, and encline thine eare vnto my sayinges: Let them not departe from thine eyes, but kepe them euen in the myddest of thynne herte.

For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them, and healte vnto all theyr bodyes. Kepe thynne herte with al diligence, for there vpon hangeth life. Put a way from the a froward mouthe, and let the lippes of sclaunder bee far from the. Let thynne eyes beholde the thinge that is ryghte, and let thynne eye liddes loke strait before the. Vnderste the path of thy fete, so shall al thy wayes be sure. * Turne not aspyde, nether to the b right hande nor lefte, but withholde thy fete from euell.

The notes.

a. That is with greute and singular honoure as, after in the xii. a.

b. By the right hand is vnderstande the false and wycked confidence in workes, and by the lefte despyeracion. To turne aspyde or adde to the ryghte hande is to ad that to the worde of God whiche God neuer commaunded. To turne a syde or bowe to the lefte hande is, to take awaye from the word of God or to that whiche is forbydden. As it is wyrtten in Deut. xxi. b. and Josue. xxii. b.

The. v. Chapter.

The warning to eschue and flee wisdom. He forbyddeth prodigality and wastfull spending. He willety be in love of our owne laboures. Men must loue their wyse.

My sonne, geue hede vnto my wisdom, and how thynne eare be to my prudence: that thou maiste regarde good counsell, and that thy lippes maye kepe nourtoure. * For the lippes of an harlot are a dzyppynge poynt hony combe, and her throte is softer the oyle. But at the laste she is as bytter as wormwode, and as sharpe as a two edged swerde. Her fete go downe vnto deathe, and her steppes pearle thoro we vnto hell. She regardeth not the path of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wayes, that thou canste not knowe them. Heare me therfore (O my sonne) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth.

Kepe thy way farre frome her: and come not nye the doores of her house. That thou geue not a thyne honoure vnto another, and thy peates to the cruell.

That other men bee not fylled with thy goodes, and that thy labours come not in a straunge house. Yea, that thou mourne not at the laste (when thou hast spent thy bodye and goodes) and then saye: Alas, why hated I nourtour: why byd my herte despyse correction: wherfore was not I obedient vnto the voice of my teachers, and hearkened not vnto them that instructed me: I am come almoste into all my fortune, in the midst of the multitud and congregaicon.

Drinke of the water of thyne owne well, and of the ryuers that runne oute of thyne owne springes. Let thy welles flowe oute abroade, that there maye be ryuers of water in the stretes: but let them be onely thyne owne, and not straungers with the.

Let thy well be blessed, and bee glad with the wife of thy yowthe. Louynge is the hynde, and frendelye is the Roo: let her brestes alwaye satisfie thee, and holde the euer content with her loue.

My sone, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosome of another woman? For euerye mans wayes are oped in the sight of the Lord, and he pondreth all theyr goynge.

The wyckednesses of the vngodly shall catche hym selfe, and with the snares of his owne synnes shal he be trapped.

Because he woulde not be resourmed, he shall dye: and for his greate foly, nesse he shalbe destroyed.

The notes.

a. That is thy substance.

b. That is, hold the onely to thyne owne wife.

c. That is, let thy chyldren come out of thy house with honour, and not as bastards.

The. vi. Chapter.

The slouthfull and drowny synne is byrked and byrked to woche. The seymatike is reposed. Admonyng ought to be earnestly auoyded.

My sonne: if thou be surety for thy neyghboure, thou hast fastened thine hand with another man: yea, thou art bound with thyne owne wordes, and take with thyne owne speache. Therefore, my sonne, do thys: dyscharge thy selfe, for thou arte come into thy neyghbours daunger. Go thy way then soone, and intreate thy neyghboure: let not thyne eyes slepe, nor thyne eye liddes flomber. Saue thy selfe as a doo from the hande of the hunter, and as a byrde from the hande of the fowler. Go to the Gynnet (thou sluggard) consydre her wayes, & lerne to be wyse. She hath no gyde, no teacher, no leader: yet in the somer she prouydeth her meate, and gathereth her fode together in the harvest. How longe wilt thou slepe, thou sluggard man? When wilt thou aryse oute of thy slepe? Yea, slepe on styll a lytle, flomber a lytle, folde thyne handes together yet a lytle, that thou mayest slepe: so shall pouertie come vnto the as one that trauaileth by the waye, and necessitie lyke a weapened man. A dissemblynge person, a wycked manne goeth with a froward mouth, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with hys fete, he poynteth with hys fingers, he is euer ymagenyng myschefe and frowardnesse in his herte, and causeth discorde. Therfore shal his destruction come hastelye vpon him, suddenly shal he be all to broken, and not be healed.

* There bee sixe thynges whiche the Lord hateth, and the seuenth he utterely abhorreth: A proude loke, a dyssemblynge tonge, handes that shede innocent bloude, an herte that goeth aboute with wycked ymaginations, * fete that be swyfte in runnyng to do myschefe, a false wytnesse that bringeth by lyes, & suche one as soweth dyscorde amonge brethzen. My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother. Put them vp together in thyne hearte, and bynde them aboute thy necke. That they may leade the where thou goest, preserue the when thou art a slepe, and that when thou awakest, thou mayest talke of them.

The Prover, Chap. vii. and. viii Fo. xlv.

* for the commaundement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: yea, chastenynge and nourtoure is the waye of lyfe: that they may kepe the frome the euell woman, frome the flatteringe tonge of the harlot: that thou lust not after her beautye in thyne hert, and lest thou be taken with her fayze lokes. In harlot wyl make a man to begge hys breade, but a married woman wyl hunt for the prectous lyfe. Hape a man take fyze in hys bosome, and hys clothes not bee brenter. Or canne one go vpon hoate coales, and his fete not be hurt. Euen so, whofoeuer goeth into his neighbours wyfe, and toucheth her, can not bee vngyltpe. * Men do not vtterlye despyse a thefe, that stealeth to satisfie his soule, when he is hongrye: but yf he maye be gotten, he restozeth agayne seuen tymes as muche, or els he maketh recompence with all the good of hys house. But who so committeth aduoutry with a woman, he is a foole, and byngeth his lyfe to destruccion. He getteth him selfe also shame and dishonoure, suche as shall neuer be put out. For the gelously and wyath of the man wyl not be intreated, no, though he thou wouldest offre him greate giffes, to make amendes, he will not receaue them.

¶ The. vii. Chapter.

¶ God oughte to bee feared and honoured: hys commaundementes ought to be kept: Wanton appetites, and desyes ought to be shunned.

My sonne, * kepe my wordes, and laye vp my commaundementes by the. Kepe my commaundementes and my lawe, eue as the apple of thine eye, and thou shalt lyue. Synde them vpon thy fyngers, and wyte them in the table of thyne hearte. Hape vnto wysdome: thou arte my syster, and call vnderstandinge thy kynswoman: * that she may kepe the from the straunge woman, and from the harlot which geueth swete wordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I looked thorow the lettelle, and behelde the simple people: and among other younge folkes, I spied one younge toole goinge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the way toward the harlottes house in the twilight of the eueninge, when it beganne now to be nyght and darcke. * And beholde, there met hym a woman, * in an harlottes apparell (a dysceatfull, wanton and an vnstedfast woman: whose fete coude not abide in þ house, now is she withoute, now in the stretes, and lurketh in euery corner) she caught the younge man, kysed hym, and was not ashamed, sayinge: I had a bow to paye, and this daye I performe it. Therfore came I forth to mete the, that I myghte seke thy face, and so I haue found the. I haue deckt my bedde with coueringes and clothes of Egypte. My bed haue I made to smel of Myrroure, Aloes, and Cynamon. Come, let vs lye together, and take our pleasure tyll it be daye lyghte, and we wyl emoy the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken þ bagge of money with him: who can tell when he cometh home. Thus with manye swete wordes she ouercame hym, and with her flatterynge lyppes she wanne hym.

Immedyatelye he folowed her, as it were an oxe lead to the slaughter (and lyke as it were to the stockes, where soles are punished) so longe tyll she had wounded his spuer with her dart: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowinge that the patell of his lyfe lyeth there vpon. Heare me now therfore, O my sonne, and marcke the wordes of my mouthe. Let not thyne herte wandre in her waies, and be not thou disceaued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded, and caste downe, yea, manye a strong man hath she slaine. Her houses is the waye vnto hell, where men go downe into the chambers of deathe.

Standeth she not in the hye places, in the stretes a wates: doth she not cry before the whole cytie, and in the gates where men go out and in. It is you, O ye men (sayeth she) whom I call: vnto you (O ye chyldren of men) I pte I bp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowledge, O ye ignorauite: be wyse in heart O ye folles. kedlye gotten, profyt no thinge, but rightuouinesse deliuereth from death. * The Lord wyl not let the soule of p rightuous suffer hunger, but he putteth the vngodly fro his desyre.
An ydle had maketh pooze, but a quicke laborynge hand maketh ryche. Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wise: but he that is sluggyshe in haruest, byngeth him selfe to confusyon. Louyng and fauorable is the face of the rightuous, but the forehead of the vngodly is past shame, and presumptuous.

* The memoriall of the iust shall haue a good reporthe, but the name of the vngodlye shall stynke. A wysse man wyl receaue warynge, but a folle wyl coner be smit ten in the face. * He that leaureth an in nocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wrongs waye, shalbe knowne.

* He that winketh with his eye, wil do some harme: but he that hath a foo lysh mouthe, shalbe beaten. The mouthe of a rightuous manne is a well of lyfe, but the mouthe of the vngodlye is past shame, and presumptuous.

Cyill wyl stereth by styfe, * but loue couereth the multitude of synnes. In the lyppes of him that hath vnderstan dyng a man shall fynde wysdome, but the rodde belongeth to the backe of the folysh. Wise men lay by knowledge, but the mouth of the folyshe is nye destruc cion.

The ryche mannes goodes are his stronge holde, but pouertye oppres seth the pooze. The rightuous labo reth to do good, but the vngodlye bseth his encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nurtoire, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to bee reformed, goeth wrong.

* Byssem
blyng lyppes kepe hatred secretly, and he that speaketh anye sclaunder, is a foole. Wher much bablyng is, there muste nedes bee offence: he that restray neth his lyppes, is wisest of all. An innocente tonge is a noble treasure, but the herte of the vngodlye is nothyng worth.

The lyppes of the rightuous fede a whole multitude, but folles shall dye in their owne foly. * The blessing of the Lord maketh riche men, as for carefull trauayle, it doth nothyng ther to. A folle doth wyckedly, and maketh but a spoyle of it: neuerthelesse it is wis dome for a man to beware of suche.

The thyng that the vngodlye are a fayed of, shall come vpon them, but the ryghtuous shall haue theyr desyre.
The vngodlye is like a tempest that pas seth ouer, and is no moze sene, but the rightuous remayneth sure for euer.

As vineger is to the teth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, euen so is a sluggyshe personne to them that sende hym forth.

The feare of the Lord maketh a longe lyfe, but the peaces of the vngodlye shal be shortened. The paciente abydinge of the rightuous shalbe turned to glad nesse, but the hope of the vngodlye shall peryshe. The way of the Lord geueth a corage vnto the godly, but it is a fear for wicked doers. * The rightuous shal neuer be ouerthrowen, but the vngodlye shall not remayne in the lande. * The mouthe of the iuste wylbe talkyng of wysdome, but the tonge of the froward shall peryshe.

The. xi. Chapter.

A false * balaunce is an abhomynacpon vnto the Lorde:
but a true weyghte pleaseth him. Where pyde is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowlynnes, there is wysdome.
The innocente dealyng of the iust shal leade them, but the vnfaithfulnesse of the despisers shalbe their owne destruction. * Riches helpe not in the daye of vengeaunce, but rightuousnesse de-lyuereth from deathe. The ryghtuoufnesse of the innocente ordreth his waye, but the vngodlye shal fall in his owne wyckednesse. The rightuousnesse of the iuste shal deliuer them, but the despysers shalbe taken in their owne vngodlynnesse.

* When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone, the confydence of ryches shal perishe. The rightuous shalbe deliuered out of trouble, and the vngodly shal come in his steade. Thow the mouth of the dyssebler is his neighbour destroyed, but thow knowledge shal the iust be deliuered. * When it goeth wel wyth the rightuous, the citie is mery: and when the vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth, the cytie prospereth: but whe the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth.
A foole bringeth vp a sclander of his neighbour, but a wyse manne wyll kepe it secrete. * A dyssemblinge personne wyll dyscouer prey thynges, but he that is of a faythfull heart, wyll kepe counsell. * Where no good coun-cell is, there the people decay: but wher as many are that canne geue counsell, there is wealth. * He that is suertyp for a straunger, hurteth hym selfe: but he that medleth not wth suertypeshyp, is sure. A gracious woman mantey-neth honestye, as for the myghtye, they manteyne ryches. * He that hath a getyl lyberall stomacke is mercyful: but who so hurteth hys neyghboure, is a tyraunte. The labour of the vngodlye prospereth not, but he that soweth ryghtuousnesse, shal receaue a sure rewarde. Like as ryghtuousnes bringeth lyfe: euen so to cleaue vnto euell, bringeth deathe. The Lorde abhorreth a fayned herte, but he hathe pleasure in them that are vndefiled. It shal not helpe the wycked, though they laye all theyr handes together, but the sede of the rightuous shalbe preserued.
A fayre woman withoute discrete ma-ners, is lyke a ringe of golde in a swy-nes snoute. The iust labourer for peace and tranquilyte, but the vngodlye for dysquetynesse.

* Some man geueth out hys goo-des, and is the rycher, but the vgarde (haupnge ynough) wyll departe frome nothyngs, and yet is euer in pouerty.
* He that is lyberall in geuyng, shal haue plenty: and he that watreth, shal be watred also hym selfe. Who so hoordeth vp his corne, shalbe cursed amonge the people: but blessinge shal lyghte vpon his head that selleth it. He that laboureth for honestye, fyndeth hys desyre:
but who so seketh after myschefe, it shal happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his riches, shal haue a fall: * but the ryghtuous shal stowthe, as the grene leafe.

Who so maketh dysquetyne in his owne house, he shal haue wynde for his heritage, and the foole shalbe seruaunt to the wyse. The frute of the rygh-tuous is as the tree of lyfe, a wyse man also wynneth mennes soules. * If the ryghtuous bee recompensed vpon earth, how muche more then the vngod-ly and the synner.

The. xii. Chapter.

Who so loueth wysdome, wil be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be repproued, is a foole. * A good man is acceptable vnto the Lord, but the wicked wyll be condempne. A man can not endure in vngodlynnesse, but the rote of the ryghtuous shal not be moued. A sted-fast woman is a crowne vnto her husband: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestye, is a corruption in hys bones. The thoughtes of the ryghtuous are ryghte, but the Imaginacion of the vngodlye are disceitfull.
The talkyng of the vngodly is, howe they maye laye wayte for bloude, but the mouth of the ryghtuous wyll de-will deliuer them. * Or euer thou caste B turne the aboute, the vngodlye shal be ouerthrowe: but the house of p righteous shall stande. A man shal be commē-ded for his wysedome, but a foole shal be despyed. * A symple man which laboureth and worketh, is better the one that is gorgous and wanteth breade. A righteous man regardeth the lyfe of his catell, but the vngodlye haue cruel hertes. * He that tyllith his lande, shal haue plentuousnesse of breade: but he that foloweth idelnes, is a very foole.

The desyre of the vngodlye hunteth after myschefe, but the rote of p righteous byngeth for the frute. The wicked falleth into the snare, thowhe p malice of hys owne mouthe, but the iuste shall escape oute of patell. Euery man shall enioye good, accordinge to the innocencie of his mouthe, & after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded.

Loke what a foole taketh in hande, he thinketh it well done: but he p is wyle, wyl be counceled. A foole vttereth hys wrathe in al the hast, but a discrete man couereth wronge. A iust man wil tel the trueth, and shewe the thyng p is right: but a falsse witnesse disceaueth. A slauiderous personne pricketh lyke a sword, but a wyle mans tonge is wholsome.
A true mouthe is euer constante, but a dyssemblinge tonge is soone chaiged.
They that imagin euil in their mynde, wyl disceau: but the counsellors of peace shal haue ioye folowig the. There shal no mysfortune happē vnto p iuste, but p vngodly shal be fylled w miserie.

* The Lorde abhorreth dysceatfull lippes: but they that laboure for trueth please him. He that hath vnderstāding, can hyde his wysedome: but an vndys-crete herte telleth out his folyshnesse. A diligent hande shall beare rule, but the foole shal be vnder tribute. * Heupnesse disceageth the harte of man, but a good worde maketh it glade agayne.

The ryghteous is lyberall vnto hys neighbour, but the waye of the vngod-lye wyl dysceau them selues. * A dys-ceatfull mā shal fynde no vantage, * but he that is content with that he hath, is more worthe then golde. In the waye of righteousnesse there is lyfe, as for any other waye it is the pathe vnto deathe.

b. By a foole in p proverbes is principally vnderstande him p in folowig his owne counceyl despyer infidelitie & the vnknowig of god, for trueth and high wysed: & wil by no meynes herke & obey to p word of god, as before in p. i. a in. d. r. b. &. xiii. a.

The. xii. Chapter.

A wyle sonne wyl receaue hys fathers warnyng, but he that is a scoznefull, wyl not heare when he is reproued. A good man shall enioye p frute of his mouthe, but he that hath a frowarde minde, shal be spoyled. He that kepeth hys mouthe, kepeth his life: but who so speaketh vnaduisid, syndeth harime. The slogarde, would sayne haue, & can not get his de-syre: but the soule of the dyspente shall haue plentye. A righteous man abhorreth lyes, but p vngodly shameth both other and him selfe. Ryghteousnesse kepeth the innocente in the waye, but vngodlynesse shal ouerthrowe the synner.

* Some men are riche, thowhe they haue nothyng: agayne, some men are pooze haupnge greate riches. With goodes euery man deliuereth hys lyfe, and the pooze wil not be reproued. The lyght of the righteous maketh ioyfull, * but the candle of the vngodlye shal be put out. Amonge the proude there is e-uer stryfe, but amonge those that do all thinges with aduiseiment, there is wise-dome. Hastely gotten goodes ate soone spente, but they that be gathered together with the hande, shal increase. Logtarynge for a thyng that is dyffered, greueth the harte: but when the desyre commeth, it is a tree of life. Who so despiseeth the word, destroyeth him selfe: but he that feareth p commaundemēte, shal haue peace. The law is a wel of lyfe vnto the wyle, p it may kepe him from the snare of death. Good vnderstandynge geweth fauoure, but harde is the waye of the despisers. A wyle man dothe all thynges with discreciō, but a foole wyl declare his foly. An vngodly messaun-ger bzigeeth myschefe, but a faithfull em-ballidour is wholsome. He p thynketh scozne to be resourtiend, cometh to pouer-tye and shame: but who so receaueth correccion, shal come to honoure.

When a desire is brought to passe, it delipteth the soule: but foolles abhorre hym that eschueueth euell. He that goeth in the companye of wyle men,

The Proverbes Chapter. xiii.

men, shalbe wyse: but who so is a companion of fooles, shalbe hurte. Mischefe foloweth vpon synners, but the righteous shal haue a good rewarde.

Job. 17. c Which their childers childre shal haue in possession, for the riches of y synner is layed vp for the iust. There is plenteousnesse of fode in the felde of y pooze: and shalbe increased out of measure.

Eccle. xxx. a * He that spareth the rodde, hateth hys sonne: but who so loueth hym, holdeth hym euer in nourtoure. * The righteous eateth, and is satisfyed, but the bely of the vngodly hath neuer inoughe.

The. xiiii. Chapter.
A wyse womā vpholdeth her house, but a foolyshe wyse plucketh it downe. Who so feareth the Lord, walketh in the ryght pathe: and regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of the Lord. In the mouthe of the foolyshe is the boastyng of lordshyp, but the lypes of the wyse wylbe ware of such. Where no oxen are, there the crybbe is empye: but where the oxen laboure, there is muche frute. A fapthfull wytnesse wyl not dyssemble, but a false recorde wyl make a lye. A scoznefull bodey seketh wyldome, and findeth it not: but * knowledge is easy to come by, vnto him that wil vnderstande. Se that thou medle not with a foole, and do as though thou haddest no knowledge. The wyldome of him that hath vnderstandige is, to take hede vnto his waye, but the foolyshe of the vntwyse dysceaueth. Fooles make but a spozte of sinne, but there is fauorable loue amōg the righteous. The herte of hym y hath vnderstandyng wyl nether dyspare for any sorow, nor be to presumptuous for any soddayne ioye.

B The houses of the vngodly shalbe ouerthrowne, but the tabernacles of the righteous shal stoythe. There is a waye which some men thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto deathe. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, and the ende of mirth is heuynesse. An vnfapthful personne shalbe filled with his owne wayes, but a good man wyl bewate of such. An ignorant bodey beleueth all thynges, but who so hath vnderstandyng, loketh well to hys goynges. A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euell, but a foole goeth on presumptuously. An impatient mā dealeth foolyshe, but he that is well aduysed, dothe other wayes. The ignorant haue foolyshe in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowledge. The euell shal bowe them selues befoze y good: a y vngodly shal waite at y dozes of the righteous. The pooze is hated euen of hys owne neyghbours, but the riche hath many frendes.

Who so dyspyseth hys neyghboure, dothe amysse: but * blessed is he that hathe pitie of the pooze. They that ymagin wyckednes, shal be dysappointed: but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shal happen mercye and fapthfulnesse. Diligent labour byngeth ryches, but where many bayne wordes are, trulpe there is scarcenesse. Ryches are an oznamente vnto the wyse, but the ignorantie of fooles is very foolyshe. A fapthfull witnesse deliuereth soules, but a lyar dysceaueth them. The feare of the Lord is a stronge holde, for vnto his he wyl be a sure defence.

The feare of the Lord is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snares of deathe. The increase and prosperite of the cōmens, is the kynges honoure, but the decaye of the people is y confusio of the prync. Patience is a tokē of wisedōe, but wrath a hasty displeasure is a tokē of foolyshe. A merce herte is y lyfe of the bodey, but rancoure consumeth a waye the bones. * He that doth a pooze man wronge, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hathe pytie of the pooze, doth honoure vnto God. The vngodly is afrayed of euery pael, but y righteous hath a good hope euen in deathe. Wyldome testeth in the hearte of hym that hath vnderstandyng, and he wyl teache the that are vnlearned. * Righteousnesse setteth vp the people, but wickednesse byngeth folke to destruction. A dyscrete seruaunte is a pleasure vnto to the kyng, but one that is not honest prouoketh him vnto wrath.

The. xv. Chapter.

The Proverbes Cha. xv. and. xvi. Fol. I.

A * Softe answer putteth downe displeasure, but fro warde wordes prouoke vnto anger. A wise tonge commen deth knowledge, a folyshe mouthe blab beth out nothing but folyshnesse. The eyes of the Lorde loke on euery place, bothe vpon the good and badde.

A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde. A foole despyeth his fathers correcion, but he that taketh hede whan he is reprovied, shall haue the moze vn derstandynge.

In the house of the ryghteous are great riches, but in the increase of the vngodlye there is myorder. A wyse mouthe poureth oute knowledge, but the herte of the folyshe dothe not so.

* The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly, but the prayer of a righte ous is acceptable vnto him. The waye of the vngodlye is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde, but who so foloweth righteousnes, him he loueth. He that forsaketh the right strete, shall be sore punished: and who so hateth correcion, falleth into deathe. The hell with her payne is knowne vnto the Lorde, howe muche moze then the heartes of men. * A scornerful body loueth not one that rebuketh him, nether wyll he come amonge the wyse. * A merry heart mak eth a chearful countenaunce, but an vniquiet mynde maketh it heuy. A wyse hearte wyll seke after knowledge, but the mouthe of fooles medleth with foly shnesse. All the dayes of the poore are myserable, but a quyet herte is as a continuall feaste. * Better is a lytle with the feare of the Lorde then greate treasure, for they are not withoute so rrowe. Better is a messe of potage with loue, then a fat oxe with euell wyl.

An angrye man styrrerh vp strife, but he that is paciente styllleth dyscorde.

The way of the flouthful is ful of thoz nes, but the strete of the ryghteous is well clenfed. * A wyse sonne maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete bodye shameth his mother. A foole reioyseth in folyshethiges, but a wyse man loketh wel to his owne goynges. Vnaduyfled thoughtes shall come to noughte, but where as men are that can geue good counsel, there is stedfastnesse. Howe ioyfull a thyng is it, a man to geue a conuenient answer. How pleasaunte is a worde spoken in due season. The waye of lyfe leadeth vnto heauen, that a man shoulde beware of hell beneth.

The Lorde wyll breake downe the house of the proude, but he shall make fast the borders of the wyddowe. The Lorde abhorreth the imaginacions of the wycked, but pure wordes of inno centes are pleasaunte vnto him. The couetous mā roteth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shall lyue.
A ryghteous man museth in his mynde howe to do good, but the mynde of the vngodlye imagineth, howe he maye do harme. The Lorde is farre from the vngodlye, but he heareth the prayer of the ryghteous. Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth in hea rte, so doth a good name fede the bones. The eare that harkeneth vnto wholsome war nyng, and enclyneth therto, shall dwel amonge the wyse. He that refuseth to be reformed, despyeth his owne soule: but he that submitteth him selfe to cor recion, is wyse.

The Notes.

a. That is, no wyll of man can come to good pur

The. xvi. Chapter.

The feare of the Lorde is the right scyence of wysdome, a lowlynes, goeth before honoure. * A man maye well purpose a thing in his herte, but the answer of the tonge commeth of the Lorde. * A mā thiketh all his wayes to be cleane, but it is the Lorde that sa thioneth the myndes. * Commytte thy worckes vnto the Lorde, and loke what thou deuysest, it shall prosper. The Lorde dothe all thynges for his owne sake, yea, and when he kepeth the vn godlye for the daye of wrath. The Lorde abhorreth al presumptuous and proude hertes, there maye nether strength nor pow er escape.

With lounge mercye and fayther fulnesse, synnes be forgeuen: and who so feareth the Lorde eschueeth euell.
When a mans wayes please the Lorde, his herte, but it is þe lord þe ordyner his goynges. Whe þe prophete is in þe lyp-pes of the kynge, his mouth shal not go wronge in iudgement. * A true measure and a true balaunce are the Lordes, he maketh all weyghtes. It is a great ab-hominacion, when kynge are wycked, for a kynge seate shoulde be holden bp with righteousnesse. Righteous lippes are pleasaunt vnto kynge, & they loue hym þe speaketh the trueth. The kinges displeasure is a messaunger of deathe, but a wyse man wyl pacifye hym. The chereful countenaunce of the kynge is lyfe, and his lounge fauoure is as the euenynge dewe. * To haue wysdome in possession, is better then golde, & to get vnderstandynge, is moze worthe the siluer. The path of þe righteous eschueth euyl, and who so loketh well to his wa-ies, kepeth his owne soule. Presumptu-ousnes goeth before destruccio, and after a proude stomacke there foloweth a fall. Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowly, then to deuyde the spo-les with the proude. He that handleth a matter wysely, opteyneth good: and * blessed is he, that putteth hys trust in the Lorde. Who so hathe a wise vnderstandynge, is called to counsell: but he that can speake fayre getteth moze ryches. Understandynge is a well of lyfe vnto him that hath it, as for the chastenyng of fooles, it is but solyghenesse.

The herte of the wyse enfourmeth hys mouthe, and amendeth the doctrine in his lippes.

Fayre wordes are an honye combe, are frethyng of the mynde, and healthe of the bones. * There is a way that men thincke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto deathe. A troublous soule dysquyeteth her selfe, for her owne mouthe hathe broughte her therto. An vngodly personne spyreth bp euyl, and in hys lippes he is as an whote burnyng fyre.

A frowarde bodye causeth strife, and he that is a blabbe of his tōge, maketh deuyssion amonge prynces. A wycked man begyleth his neighbour, and lea-deth hym the waye that is not good. He * that wycketh with his eyes, ymagineth myschefe: & he that byteth his lyp-pes, wyl do some harme. Age is a crowne of wysheppes, yf it be founde in the waye of righteousnes. A patient man is better then one stronge: and he that can rule him selfe, is moze worthe then he that wynneth a cytye. The let-tes are caste in to the lappe, but they fall standeth in the Lorde.

The. xvii. Chapter.

Better is a dyre morsel in qui-etnesse, then a full house & man-ny fat castell with stryfe. * A dyscrete seruaunce shal haue moze rule then the sonnes that haue no wysdome, and shal haue lyke heritage with the brythren. * Lyke as syluer is tryed in the fyre, and golde in þe forna-ce, euen so dothe the Lorde proue the her-tes. A wicked bodye holdeth muche of false lippes, and a dissemblynge person geueth eare to a dysceatful tong. * Who so laugheth þe pooze to scozne, blasphemeth hys maker: and he that is glad of another mans hurte, shal not be vnpunyshed.

* Chyldren are a wyshepp
vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honour of the chyldren. An eloquent speache becometh not a foole, a dissem-blynge mouthe alsō becometh not a pryncce. A pberalpyte is a pprecious stōne vnto hym that hathe it, for where soeuer he becommeth, he prospereth. Who so coueteth another mans offence, seketh loue: but he that dyscloseth the faute, setteth frendes at variaunce. One re-proue onely doth moze good to him that hathe vnderstandynge, then an. C. stry-pes vnto a foole. * A ledicious personne seketh myschefe, but a cruel messainger shal be sent agaynst him. It were better to come agaynst a the Beate robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a foole in his foolyshnes. * Who so rewardeth euyl for good, the plage shal not departe fro his house. He that soweth dyscorde and stryfe, is lyke one that diggeth bp a water broke: but an open enemy is lyke the water that breaketh out and reneth abroade. The Lorde hateth as wel him that iustifieth the vngodlye, as hym that condempneth the innocent. What helpeth it to geue a foole money in hys hande, where as he hathe no mynde to bye wysdome? * He is a verste a man shall knowe who is hys brother. * Who so prompseth by p hāde, and is suertye for another, he is a foole. He that loueth strife, deliteth in synne: and who so setteth his doze to hys, sebeth after a fall. * Who so hathe a forwarde herte opteyneth no good: and he that hathe an ouerthwarte tonge, shall fall into myschese. * An vnwyse bodye byyngeth hym selfe in to sorow, and the father of a foole can haue no ioye. * A merp herte maketh a lustye age, but a sorowfull mynde dyeth vp the bones. The vngodlye taketh gyftes out of the bolome, to wreste the wayes of iudgemente. * Wpfdome shyneth in the face of hym that hathe vnderstandynge, but the eyes of fooles wandre thozowe out all laudes. * An vndercrete sonne is a grete vnto his father, and an heynesse vnto his mother that bare him. To pynthe the innocente, & to smyte p pynnes that geue true iudgemente, are bothe euell. * He is wyse and dyscrete, that tempereth his wordes: and he is a man of vnderstandynge, that maketh muche of his spirite. * Yea, a very foole (when he holdeth his tonge) is counted wyse, to haue vnderstandynge, when he shutteth hys lippes.

The. xviij. Chapter

Who so hathe pleasure to sowe dyscorde, prcketh a quarel in euery thynge. A foole hath no delite in vnderstandynge, but onely in those thinges wherein his herte reioyseth. Where vngodlynes is, there is also dysdaine: and so there foloweth shame and dishonoure. The wordes of a wyse mā's mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wpfdome is lyke a full streame. It is not good to * regarde the personne of the vngodlye, oz to put backe the righteous in iudgemente. * A fool's lippes are euer brawlpnge, and his mouthe prouoketh vnto battayle. A fool's mouthe is his owne destruccio, & hys lippes are the snare for hys owne soule. The wordes of a sleaunders are very woundes, and go thozowe vnto the inmost partes of the bodye. * Who so is slouthfull & slacke in hys labour, is the brother of hym that is a waster. The name of the Lorde is a stronge castell, the ryghteous flyeth vnto it, and shalbe saued. But p riche mans goodes are his stronge holde, yea, he taketh the for an hys wall rounde aboute hym. After payde commeth destruccio, and honoure after lowlpnes. * He that geueth sentece in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, and worthye to be confounded.

A good stomacke dyspueeth awaye a mans dysleafe, but when the spirite is beryed, who maye abyde it. A wyse herte labourereth for knowledge, and a pruden eare seketh vnderstandynge.

A lybertye byyngeth a man to honoure and worshyp, and setteth hym amonge greute men.

The ryghteous accuseth hym selfe fyrste of all, yf his neyghboure come, he shall fynde hym.

The lot pacifyeth the variaunce, and parteth the mightye a sunder. The vnite of byethzen is stronger then a castel, and they that holde together are lyke the barre of a palace. A mans bely shal be satisfyed with the frute of hys owne mouthe, and with the increase of hys lippes shal he be fylled. Deathe and lyfe stande in the power of the tonge, he that loueth it, shal enioye the frute thereof. * Who so fyndeth a good wyse, fyndeth a good thynge: and receaueth an whollome benefyte of the Lorde. The pooze maketh supplicacion & prayeth mekelpe, but the tyche geueth a rough answer. A frende that delyteth in loue, dothe a man moze frendshyp, and stycketh faster vnto hym then a brother.

The. xix. Chapter.

Better * is the pooze that lyueth godly, then the blasphemous mer p is but a foole. * Where no discrecion is, there p soule is not wel: and who so is swifte on fote, stomblyeth hastely. Foolpynesse maketh a man to go oute of his waye, and then is his herte vnpacient against p Lorde. Ryches make many frendes: but the pooze is forsaken of his owne frendes. * A false wptnesse shal not remayne vnpunished, and he that speaketh lyes shal not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon greute men, and euery mā fauoureth him that geueth rewardes.

Who so kepeth the commaundemente, kepeth his owne soule: but he that regardeth not his waye, shal dye. He that hath pittie vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lorde: and loke what he laieth oute, it shalbe payed him againe. Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope, but let not thy soule be moued to slepe him. For great wyathe byngeth harme, therfore let him go, and so mayest thou teache him more nutfoure. O gene eate vnto good counsell, and be contente to be reformed, that thou mayest be wyse here after.

Pro. 20. 13. d.

There are manpe deuyces in a mans herte: neuertheles, that counsell of the Lorde shall stande. It is a mas worthyp to do good, and better it is to be a poore man, then a dyssembler. The feare of the Lorde preferueth that lyfe, yea it geueth plenteousnes, thout the visytacio of any plague. * A sloughful body putteth hys hande into his bolome, so that he can not put it to his mouthe.

He that hurteth his father or putteth oute hys mother, is a shameful and an vnworthyp sonne. My sonne, heare no more the doctryne that leadech thee awaye from the wordes of vnderstandynge.

A false wytnes laugheth iudgement

The. xx. Chapter.

Wine is a voluptuous thing, and dronckennes causeth isidicio: who so deliyeth therein, shall neuer be wyse. * The kyng oughte to be feared as the roarynge of a Lyon, who so prouoketh him vnto anger, offendeth agaynst hys owne soule. It is a mans honoure to kepe him selfe from stryfe, but they that haue pleasure in braulynge, are foolles euery one. A slouthfull bodye will not go to plowe for colde, therfore shall he go a beggynge in Sommer, & haue no thyng. Wyse counsell in the herte of man is lyke a water in the depe of the earthe, but he that hath vnderstandig, byngeth it forth. Many there be that are called good doers, but where shall one fynde a true saythfull man? * Who so ledeth a godlie and an innocent lyfe, happye shall his chyldren be whome he leaueth behynde hym. A kyng that sytteth in iudgemente, and loketh well aboute hym, byueth awaye all euell. * Who can saye: my herte is cleane, I am innocent from synner. To be two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, bothe these are abhominable vnto the Lorde. A chyld is knownde by hys conuersacion, whether hys woorkes be pure & ryghte. As for the heatynge of the eare & the syght of the eye, the Lorde hath made them bothe.

* Saye not thou: I wyl recōpence euell, but put thy truste in the Lord, and he shal defende the. * The Lord abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, a false balauance is an euell thyng. * The Lord ordereth euery mans goinges, for what is he, that vnderstādeth his owne wayes? It is a snare for a mā to blaspheme that whiche is holy, and then to go aboute with bowes. * A wyse kynge destroyeth the vngodly, and byngeth the whele ouer them. The lanterne of the Lord is the bryght of man, and goeth thorowe all the inwarde partes of the bodye. * Mercye and faithfulness preserue the kynge, a with lounge kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The strength of yonge men is their worthyppe, and a grape heade, is an honoure vnto the aged. Woundes bypue awaye euell, and so do stryppes the inwarde partes of the bodye.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The * kynges hearte is in the hande of the Lord, like as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whyther so euer he wyl. Every man thynketh hys owne waye to be ryght, but the Lord iudgeth the hertes. * To do ryghteousnesse and iudgemēt, is moze acceptable to the lord then sacrifice. A presumptuous loke, a proude stomacke, and the lanterne of the vngodlye is synne. The deuyces of one that is dyligente, bynge plenteousnes: but he that is vnaduyced, commeth vnto pouertie. * Who so hoodeth vp rythes with the dysceatfulness of his tog, he is a foole, and lyke vnto them that seke their owne death. The robberies of the vngodly shal be their owne destruction, for they woulde not do the thyng that was ryghte. The wayes of the frowarde are straunge, but the wayes of hym that is cleane, are ryghte. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then with a brawlyng man in a wyde house.

The soule of the vngodlye wytheth euell, and hath no pytie vpon his neyghboure. * When the scornerfull is punished, the ignoraunte take a better hede: and when a wyse man is warned, he wyl receaue the moze vnderstandyng. The righteous enfourmeth the house of the vngodlye, but the vngodlye goe on styl after their owne wyckednesse. * Who so stoppeth his eare at the cryng of the poore, he shall crye him selfe and not be hearde. A pryncesse rewarde pacifieth displeasure, and a gifte in the bosome stilleth furiousnesse.

The iust delyteth in doyng a thyng that is right, but the workers of wyckednesse abhorre the same. The man that wandreth oute of the waye of wisdom, shall remayne in the congregacion of the dead. * He that hath pleasure in banckettes, shal be a poore mā: who so delyteth in wyne and delycates, shall not be ryche. The vngodlye shal be geuen for the ryghteous, and the wycked for the iuste.

* It is better to dwell in a wylder-nesse, then with a chydunge and an angrye woman. In a wyse mans house there is great treasure and plenteousnesse, but a foolyshe bodye spendeth by all. * Who so foloweth ryghteousnesse and mercye, synneth bothe lyfe, ryghteousnesse and honoure. A wyse man winneth the cryte of the myghtye, and as for the strength that they truste in, he byngeth it downe. * Who so kepeth his mouth and his tonge, the same kepeth his soule fro troubles. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scornerfull man, whiche in wraathe darre worcke malyciouslye. The voluptuousnesse of the flouthfull is his owne deathe, for his handes wyl not labour. He coueteth a desyreth a litle daie longe, but the righteous is alwaye geuyng, a kepeth nothyng backe. * The sacrifice of the vngodlye is abhominacion, for they offre the thyng that is gotten with wyckednes. * A false wytnesse shall peryshe, but he that wilbe content to heare, shall alwaye haue power to speake him selfe. An vngodly mā goeth forth rashlye, but the iuste refourmeth

The. xxii. Chapter.

A* Good name is more worthe then greate ryches, & lounge sauoure, is better then syluer and golde.

Whether ryches or pouerte do mete vs, it commeth all of God. A wyse man seeth the plage and hydeth hym selfe, but the folysh go on styll and are punyshed. The ende of lowlynnes and the feate of God, is ryches, honoure, prosperyte and health. Speares and snares are in the waye of the scowarde, but he that wyll kepe his soule, let hym fle from suche. If thou teachest a chyld in hys yowth what waye he shoulde go, he shall not leaue it when he is olde. The ryche ruleth the pooze, and the borower is seruaunte to the lender. He that so wyth wyckednesse shall reape sorowe, and the rodde of his plage shall destroye hym. * A lounge eye shall be blessed, for he geueth of his bread vnto the pooze.

Laboure for to get the trueth: sel not away wisdom, nourtoure and vnderstandyng (for a ryghteous father is maruelous glad of a wyse sonne, and delyteth in hym) so shall thy father be glad, and thy mother that bare thee, shall reioyce. My sonne, geue me thyne heyrte, & let thyne

Where is sorowe? Where is stryfe? Where is braulyng? Where are woundes wythoute cause? Where be redde eyes? Euen amonge those that be euer at the wyne, and seke out where the best is. Loke not thou vpon the wyne, howe redde it is, and what colour it geueth in the glasse.

It goeth downe softly, but at the last it byteth lyke a serpente, and styngeth as an adder. So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, and thyne heart shall muse vpon froward thynges. Yea, thou shalt be as thoughe thou sleptest in the myddest of the sea, or vpon the toppe of the masse. They wounded me (halte thou saye) but it hath not hurte me: They smote me, but I felte it not. A wyse man is stronge, yea, a man of vnderstandyng is better, then he that is mighty of strength. For with discrecion muste warres bee taken in hande, and where as are many that can geue good councel, there is the victory. Wylsdom is an hye thyng: yea, euen to the foole, for he dare not open hys mouthe in the gate. He that ymagineth myschefe, maye wel be called an vngacious person. The thought of the fo-

Take the drosse from the syluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessel thereof.

Take awaye vngodlynes from the kyng, and hys seate shalbe stablyshed with ryghteousnesse.

Putte not forth the thy selfe in the presence of the kyng, and prease not into the place of greate men.

* Better it is that it be sayd vnto thee: come by hyther, then thou to be sette downe in the presence of the pryncer who thou seyst with thyne eyes. * Be not hasty to go to the lawe, lest haplye thou orde thy selfe so at the laste, that thy neyghboure put the to shame. Handle thy matter wyth thy neyghboure hym selfe, and discouer not another mannes secrete: lest when men heare thereof, it turne to thy dishonoure, and lest thyne euill name do not cease. Make not thy boaste of to morrowe, for thou knowest not what maye happen to daye.
Let another man prayse the,
and not thyne owne mouth: yea, other folkes lippes, and not thyne

* The stone is heuye, and the sande weyghtye: but a foolles wrath is he-uier then they bothe.

Wrathe is a cruell thyng, and furi-ousnesse is a verie tempeste: Yea, who is able to abyde enuye? * An open rebuke is better then a secreete loue, sayth full are the woundes of a louer, but the kysse of an enemye are disceatfull.
He that is full, abhorreth an honye combe: but vnto hym that is hongrye, euery sower thyng is swete. He that ofte tymes sitteth, is lyke a byrde that forsaketh her neste. The heartte is glad of a swete oymtente and sauoure, but a stomacke that can geue good counsell, reioysseth a mannes neyghboure.

Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frende see thou forsake not, but goe not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble.

Better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of.

My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalt make me a glad heartte: so that I shall make answer vnto my rebukers. A wyse man seynge the plage, wyll hyde hym selfe, as for fooles they go on styl, and suffer harme. * Take hys garment that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknewen mannes sake.

He that is to haue to prayse hys neyghboure about measure, shalbe taken as one that geueth hym an euell reporte. * A braulynge woman and the rofe of the house droppynge in a raynye daye, maye well be compared together.

He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in his hande. Lyke as one prou whetteth another, so doeth one man comforte another. Who so kepeth hys eygge tree, shal enioye the frutes therof: he that wayteth vpon hys master, shall come to ho-noure. Lyke as in one water there ap-peare diuerse faces, euen so diuerse me-haue diuerse heartes. Lyke as hell and destruction are neuer full, euen so the eyes of men can neuer bee satisfied.

* Syluer is tryed in the moulde, and golde in the fornaice, and so is a man, when he is openly praysed to hys face.
Thoughe thou shouldest braye a foolle with a pestell in a morter lyke otemell, yet wyll not his foolyshe nesse goe from
hym. See that thou knowe the nombre of thy cattell thy selfe, and looke well to thy flockes. For riches abyde not alway, and the crowne endureth not for euer.
The haye groweth, the grasse cometh vp, and herbes are gathered in y mounttaynes. The lambes shall clothe thee, and for the goates thou shalt haue money to thy husbandrye. Thou shalt haue goates implecke ynoughe to fede thee, to vpholde thy housholde, and to susteyne thy maydens.

of vnderstandynge: but he that fedeth prouous men, Hameth hys father. Who so increaseth hys riches by vantage and wyninge, let hym gather them to helpe the poore withal.

* He that tourneth awaye hys eare from hearynge the law, his prayer shall be abhorred. Who so leadeth the ryghteous into an euell way, shall fall into his owne pyrte, but the iuste shall haue the good in possession. The ryche man thinketh hym selfe to be wise, but the poore that hath vnderstandynge can per-ceiue hym well ynoughe. * When richteous men are in prosperite, then doeth honour florish: but when the vngodlye come by, the state of men chaungeth.
He that hideth his synnes shall not profpere: But who so knowlegeth them, & foraketh them, shall haue mercye.

Wel is him that standeth alwaye in lawe: As for hym that hardeneth hys hearte, he shall fall into mischefe. Lyke as a roatynge Lyon, and an hongrye beare, euen so is an vngodlye pynce ouer the poore people.

Where the pynce is without vnderstandynge, there is greate oppresyon and wynginge: but yf he be suche one as hateth coueteousnesse, he shall longe raigne. He that by violence sheddeth any mans bloude, shall be a runnagate vnto hys graue, & no man shall be able to succour hym. * Who so leadeth a godly and an innocent lyfe, shall be safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall once haue a fall. * He that tyllith his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of breade: but he that foloweth ydelnes, shall haue po-uerthe ynoughe. A saythfull man is greatly to be commended, * but he that maketh to much hast for to be rich, shall not be vngylte. To haue respecte of persones in iudgement is not good: and wher he wyll doe wronge, yea, euen for a peece of breade.

He that wyll be ryche all to soone, hathe an euell eye: and considereth not,
that pouerte shall come vpon hym.
He that rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauour at the laste, then he that flattereth hym. Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a murthe-rer. He that is of a proud stomache, stry-
-

reth by stryfe, but he that putteth hys truste in the Lorde, shall be wel fedde.

* He that trusteth in hys owne heart, is a foole: but he that dealeth wylly, shall be safe. * He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye his eyes frome suche as be in ne-cessite, shall suffre greate pouerte hym selfe. * When the vngodlye are come by, men are layne to hyde them selues:
But when they peryshe, the righteous increase.

The notes.

liiii. psalme. b. They are afrayde when no feare is. c. Whiche thinge chaunceth, when all thin-

c. Some reade, search it. That is to saye to iudge

The. xxix. Chapter.

That is stifnecked and wylnot be reformed, shall sodenlye be destroyed withoute any helpe. * Where the richteous haue the ouer hande, the people are in prosperite: but where the vngod-lye beareth rule, there the people mounne. Who so loueth wysdome maketh hys father a glad man: * but he that kepeth harlottes, spendeth awaye that he hathe. With true iudgement the kynge setterh by the lande, but yf he be a man that taketh gyftes, he tourneth it by syde downe. Who so flattereth his neighbour, layeth a nette for his feete.

The synne of the wycked is hys owne snare, but the righteous shall be gladde and reioyse.

The righteous conspyeth the cause of the poore, but the vngodlye regardeth no vnderstandynge. Wycked people byynge a cytpe in decaye, but wyse men sette it by agayne. If a wyse man goe to lawe wth a foole (whether he dealeth with him frendelye or roughlye) he getteth no rest. The bloude theyste hate the righteous, but the iuste seke his soule.

A foole poureth oute hys spyrte all together, but a wyse man kepeth it in tyll afterwarde.

C If a pynce delyte in lyes, al his seruauntes are vngodlye. The poore and the lender mete together, & the Lorde lighteneth bothe their eyes. * The seate of the kynge that saythfullye iudgeth the poore, shall continue sure for evermore.
The rodde and correccio minstre wis-dome, but yf a chylde be not loked vnto, he byngeth hys mother to shame.
When the vngodlye come vp, wyckedlength. An angrey man stirreth vp strife, and he that beareth euell wyl in

Agur the prophete of a true sayth-full man, whome God hath helped, whom God had comforted & nourished. For though

I am the lest of all, and haue no mans vnderstandynge (for I neuer learned wydome) yet haue I vnderstandynge, & am wel infourmed in godly thynges.
Who hath climmed vp into heauen: who hath come downe fro thence: who hath holden the wynde fast in hys hand: who hath comprehended the waters in a garment: who hath set al the endes of the worlde: what is hys name, or his sonnes name: Canst thou tell: * All the wordes of God are pure & cleane, for he is a hynde vnto all them, that putte their truste in hym. * Putte thou no thyng therfore vnto hys woordes, lest he reprove the, & thou be founde a liar.

Two thynges I require of the, that thou wylte not denye me before I dye.
Remoue fro me vanite and lyes: geue me neither pouerte nor ryches, onely graunt me a necessarpe lyuynge. Lest yf I be to ful, I deny the, and saye: * what felowe is the Lorde. And lest I being constrayned thowme pouerte, fall vnto stealynge, and forswear the name of my God. Accuse not a seruaunte vnto hys maister, lest he speake euill of the also, and thou be hurte. He that byn-geth vp an euell reposte vpon the ge-neracion of hys father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generacion that thynke them selues cleane, shall not be clenfed frome their fylthynesse. There are people that haue a proude looke, and caste vp their eye lyddes. Thys peoples teethe are swerdes, and wyth their chaffe bones they consume and deuour the simple of the earthe, and the poore from amonge
men.

Thys generacion (whiche is lyke an hoxfleche) hath two doughters: the one is called fetche hyther, and the other bynge hyther.

There be thre thynges that are neuer satisfied, and the fourthe sayeth nes-uer hoo. The hell, a womans wombe, & the earthe hath neuer water ynough.
As for fyre, it sayeth neuer hoo. * Who so laugheth hys father to scoorne, and setteth hys mothers commaundemente at nought: The Rauens prycke out his eyes in the balleye, and deuoured be he of the ponge Egles.

There be thre thynges to hye for me,
and

as for þ fourth, it passeth my knowledge. The way of an Eagle in þ ayre, þ waye of a serpente ouer a stone, the way of a shyppe in the sea, and the waye of a man wyth a younge woman. Suche is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, whyche wyppeth her mouthe like as when she hath eaten, and sayeth: As for me, I haue done no harme. Tho-rowe thre thynges the earthe is disquieted, and the fourth maye it not beare: Thow a seruaunt that beareth rule:
Thow a fole that hath great riches, thow a ydle huswyfe, and thow a an handmayden that is heyre to her maistres. There be foure thynges in the earthe, the whiche are very lytle: but in wisdomme they excede the wyse. The Emmetts are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate together in the hartest. The Conyes are but a fe-ble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes. The Greshoppers haue not a gyde, yet goe they forthe together by heapes. The spyder laboureth with her handes, and that in the kynges palace.

There be thre thynges that go stif-lye: But the goynge of þ fourth is the goodlyest of al. A Lyon whiche is king of beastes, and geueth place to no man; A Cocke readye to fighte: A Ramme, & a kynge that goeth forth with his people. Yf thou be so foolyshe to magnifie thy selfe, or meddest in any such thyng, then laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth.
Who so chyneth mylke, maketh but ter: He that rubbeth his nose, maketh it blede: And he that causeth wraoth, byn-geth styffe.

The booke of the Preacher, otherwyle called Ecclesiastes.

The first Chapter.

All that is in this worlde is vanitie.

These are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of David, kynge of Ierusalem. * All is but vanitie (sayeth the Preacher) all is but playne vanite. for what els hathe a man, of all the labour & he taketh vnder the sunne. One generacion passeth awaye, and another cometh: but the earth abyedeth styl. The Sunne aryseth, the Sunne goeth downe, and returneth to hys place, that he may there ryle vp agayne. The wind goeth towarde the southe, and fetcheth hys compasse aboute vnto the North, and so turneth in to hym selfe agayne. * All fluddes runne into the sea, per the sea it selfe is not fylled: for looke vnto what place & waters runne, thence they come agayne. All thynges are so harde, that no man can expresse the. * The eye is not satisfied with sight, & eare is not fylled with hearynge. * The thing that hath bene, cometh to passe agayne: and the thinge & hath bene done, is done agayne, there is no new thyng vnder the sunne. Is there anye thinge whereof it maye be sayd: lo, this is new, for it was long ago in & tymes that haue bene before vs. The thinge that is past, is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thynges & are for to come, shal no moze be thought vpon amonge them that come after. I my selfe the Preacher, beyng kynge of Israell and Ierusalem, applyed my mynde to seke oute and searche for the knowledge of al thinges & are done vnder heauen. Such trauaile and labour hathe God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercise them selues therein.

Thus haue I considred all the thinges that come to passe vnder the sunne: and lo, they are all but vanite, & vexacion of mynde. The croked can not be made streight, & the faultes can not be nombred. I communed with myne owne heart, sayinge: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gotten moore wysdome, then al they that haue bene before me in Ierusalem. Yea, my hearte had greete experience of wysdome and knowledge, for there vnto I applyed my mynde: That I myghte knowe what were wysedome and vnderstandynge, what were extour and folyshenes. And I perceived, that this also was but a veraci- on of minde: for where muche wysdome is, there is also great trauaile & disqui- etnesse: and the more knowledg a man hath, the more is his care.

Abundance of riches, of pleasures of buydynge and vayne thynges.

Ihen sayde I thus in my hert: Now go to, I wyll take myne ease, & haue good daies. But lo, that was vanitie also: in so muche that I sayd vnto the man geuen to laughter: þ art mad, and to myrth: what doest thou?

So I thoughte in my herte, to with- drawe my selfe fro wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to cōprehēde folyshnes, vntyll the tyme that (among all þ thynges whiche are vnder þ sūne) I myght se what were best for me to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made gorgeous fayre workes. I buylded me houses, & planted hynerar- des. I made me orchardes & gardens of pleasure, & plated trees in them of all maner frutes. * I made poles of water, to water the grene & fruteful trees with all. I bought seruauntes & maidens, & had a great housholde. As for catell and shepe, I had more substance of the, then all they þ were before me in Ierusalē. I gathered syluer and golde together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me syngers, and women, whiche could playe of instrumentes, to make men myrth & passyme. I gatte me dyckyng cupps also & glasses. (Short- ly) I was greater & in more worshyppe, then all my predecessours in Ierusalē. For wysedō remainned to me: and loke what soeuer mine eyes desyred, I let the haue it: & wher in soeuer my herte desy- red, or had any pleasure, I forghelde it not from it. Thus my heart reioysed in all that I dyd, and thys I toke for the porcyon of al my trauaile. But when I considered all the workes that my han- des had wrought, & al the labours that I had takē therein: lo, al was but vanitie & veracyon of mynde, and nothyng of a- ny value vnder the Sunne. Then tur- ned I me to consider wysedom, erreure and folyshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that myght be compared to me the kyng in suche workes?) & I sawe, that wysdome excelleth foolshnesse, as farre as light doth darknesse. * for a wise mā beareth his eyes aboute his head, but þ foole goeth in the darknesse. I perceau- ed also that they both had one ende.

Then thought I in my minde: If it hap- pen vnto the foole as it doeth vnto me, what nedeth me the to labour any more for wysedome? So I confessed within my hert, that this also was but vanitie, for the wyse are euer as lytle in remē- brance as the foolyshe, and al the daies for to come shall be forgotten: yea, the wyse man dyeth as well as the foole.

Thus began I to be weery of my lyfe, in so muche that I could away with no- thyng that is vnder the Sunne, for all was but vanitie & veracyon of mynde: Yea, I was weerye of all my labour, whiche I had taken vnder the Sunne, because I shuld be sayne to leaue them vnto another man, that cometh after me: for who knoweth, whether he shall be a wyse man or a foole? And yet shall he be lord of al my labours, whiche I with suche wysedome haue taken vnder the Sunne. Is not this a vayne thyng?

So I turned me to restryne my mind from al such trauaile, as I toke vnder the sūne: for so much as a man shuld we- rye him selfe with wysedome, with vnderstandynge and opportunitie, & yet be faine to leaue his labours vnto another that neuer swette for them. This is al- so a vaine thing & a great mysery. for what getteth a mā of al þ labour & tra- uaple of his mynde, þ he taketh vnder þ Sunne, but heurnes, forow, & disquiet- nes al þ dayes of his lyfe. In so muche, that his hert can not rest in þ night. Is not this also a vayne thing? * Is it not better the for a mā to eat & drinke, & his soule to be meri i his labour. yea, I saw þ this also was a gift of God: for who may eat, drinke, or byg any thyg to passe with, without him. And why he geueth vnto man, what it pleaseth hym: whether it be wylsome, vnderstanding, or gladnes. But vnto the synner he geueth weerynes and sorow, that he may gather and heape together the thyng, that afterwarde shalbe geuen vnto him whom it pleaseth God. This is now a bayne thing: yea, a very disquietnes and vexacion of mynde.

The. iiii. Chapter.

All thynges come in their tyme and passe awaye in their tyme.

Job. 14. 2.

Every thing hath a tyme: yea, all that is vnder the heauen, hath his conuenient season. * There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to plucke by the thyng, that is planted: A tyme to slaye, & a tyme to make whole. A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde by:

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh: A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to dance: A tyme to cast away stones, and a tyme to gather stones together.

A tyme to embrace, & a tyme to refrayne from embracing:

A tyme to wyne, and a tyme to lese:

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende:

A tyme to cut in peces, & a tyme to sowe together:

Eccle. 12. 1. and. xxxi. 1. and. xxxii. 1.

* A tyme to kepe sylvence, and a tyme to speake:

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate:

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace:

What hath a mā els (p doth any thyng) but weerynes and labour: for as touching the trouble & carefulnes which God hath geuen vnto men, I te that he hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All thys hath he ordered meruelous goodlye, to every thyng his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hartes of men, p they shoulde not fynde out the grounde of his workes, whiche he doth from the begynnyng to p ende.

So I perceaued, that in these thynges there is nothing better for a mā, the to be mery, & to do wel so long as he liueth. For al that a man eateth and drinketh: yea, whatsoeuer a mā enioyeth of al his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I confydred also p whatsoeuer God doth, it continueth for euer, & that no thyng can be put vnto it, nor take fro it: that God doth it to the intēt, p men shoulde feare him. * The thyng p hath bene, is now: & the thyng p is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for god restoreth again the thyng that was past. Moreover, I saw vnder the Sunne vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgemēt, and iniquite, in steade of ryghtuousnes. Then thought I in my mynde: God shall separate the ryghtuous from the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgemēt of al concelles & workes. I comened in myne owne hart also, concerning the chyldren of mē: how God hath chosen the, & yet letteth the appeare: as though they were bestes: for it happeneth vnto me as it doth vnto bestes, & as the one dyeth, so dieth the other: yea, they haue both one manner of byth, so that (in this) a mā hath no preemynce aboue a beaste. But all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all by to one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto duste agayne. * Who knoweth: the spere of mā that goeth bywarde, & the byeth of the beaste that goeth downe into p earth: whether I perceaue, p there is nothing better for a man, then to be toful in his labour, for that is his porcyon. But who wyl byngne him to see the thyng that shall come after him?

The. iiii. Chapter.

The myserys of the innocent. The superfluous labour of men. The childe that is poynted to wele.

I turned me, & I confydred I saw all the violent wrong that is done vnder the Sunne: & beholde, the teares of such as were oppressed, and there was no man to cōfort them, or that wold help: and defend the fro p violence of their oppressours. Wherefore I iudged those that are dead, to be more happye: the such as be aliue: yea, him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease the they bothe, because he seyth not the miserable workes that are done vnder the Sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trouble and dyligence of labour was hated of every man. This is also a bayne thing, and a vexacyon of mynde. The foole foldeth his hādes together, and eateth

Of the Preacher. Chapter. v. Fol. lviij

by his owne fleshe. One hande full (saith he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour and trauaile of mynde. Moreover, I turned me, and beholde yet another vanite vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but hym selfe alone, haupnge neyther childe nor brother: yet is there no ende of his carefull trauaile: his eyes can not be satisfied wyth ryches, (yet doeth he not remembre hym selfe, and saie:) for whom do I take such trauaile? for whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thyng. Therefore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyte of theyr labour. If one of theym fall, his companion helpeth him vp agayne: But wo is hym that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe hym vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but howe can a bodye be warme alone? One maye be overcome, but two maye make resistance: A threholdes cable is not lightely broken. A poore chyld beinge myse, is better then an olde king that doteth, and can not beware in time to come. * Some one cometh oute of pylon, and is made a king: and another: whiche is borne in the kyngdom, cometh vnto pouerte. And I perceived, that all men lyuynge vnder the Sunne, go with the seconde childe, that cometh vp in the steade of the other.

As for the people that haue bene before him, and that come after hym, they are innumerable: yet is not their toye the greater thoroowe him. Thys is also a vayne thyng and a vexacyon of mynde. When thou comest in to the house of god, kepe thy fote, a drawe, that God whiche is at hand may heare: that is better then the offerynge of fooles, for they knowe not what euill they do.

The Notes.

a. Some reader: for he is readier to heare (vnderstande thy word) then to receyue sacrefices that sholes geue.

b. Some reader: rather to heare, then to geue, as fooles offerynge sacrefyce.

The. v. Chapter.

A monition to beware of rather commynycacyon.

We ought not to marreple at the apperayson of the voye. The colitions is not satisfied wth hys ryches.

Not haaste wth thy mouth and let not thine hert speak any thyng rashely before God. For God is in heuen, and thou vpon earth, therefore let thy wordes be fewe. For where muche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where manye wordes are, there men may heare fooles. * If thou make a bowe vnto God, be not slacke to persourne it. As for solish bowes, he hath no pleasure in them. If thou promyse any thyng, paye it: for better it is that thou make no bowe, then that thou shouldest promyse, and not paye. Use not thy mouth to cause thy fleshe for to synne, that thou saie not before the angel: my foolysheesse is in the faulte. For then God wyll be angrie at thy voyce, and destrope al the workes of thyne handes. And why: where as are manye dreames and manye wordes, there are also dyuerse vanities: but loke & thou feare God. * If thou seyst the poore to be oppressed, and wrongeously dealt wythall, so that equyte and the ryghte of the law is wraisted in the lande: maruell not thou at suche iudgemente, for one greate man kepeth touche with another, and the myghtie helpe them selues together. The whole lande also wyth the feldes and all that is therein, is in subiection and bondage vnto the kynge. He that loueth money, wyll neuer be satisfied wyth money: and who so delpteth in ryches, shall haue no profyte thereof. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Where as muche ryches is, there are manye also that spende theym awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, sayunge that he maye loke vpon them wyth his eyes? A labourynge man slepeth swetely, whether it be lytle or muche that he eateth: but the aboundaunce of the ryche wyll not suffice him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, whych I haue sene vnder the Sunne (namely) riches kept to the hurt of him that hath them in possession.

For ofte tymes they perishe with his greate myserie and trouble: and yf he haue a child, it getteth nothynge. * Like as he came naked oute of his mothers wombe, so goth he thither againe, & carteth nothynge away wth him of al his labour. Thys is a myserable plage, that he shall go awaye even as he came. What helpeth it him then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the daies of hys lyfe also must he eate in þe dark, wth greate carefulnesse, sycknesse and sorowe. Therefore me thyncke it a better and a sayzer thyng, a man to eate and dyncke, and to be refresshed of all hys labour, that he taketh vnder the Sunne all the dayes of hys lyfe whiche God geueth hym, for this is his porcyon. For vnto whom soeuer God geueth ryches, goodes and power, he geueth it him to enioye it, to take it for his porcyon, and to be refresshed of hys labour: this is nowe the gyfte of God. For he thyncketh not much howe longe he shall lyue, for so muche as God fylleth his hert with gladnes.

The. vi. Chapter.

The myserie of the ryche and covetous. The difference of a foole and a wyse man.

There is yet a plage vnder the Sunne, & it is a generall thyng among men: when God geueth a man ryches, goodes and honoure, so that he wanteth nothynge of all that hys herte can desyre: and yet God geueth him not leue to enioye the same, but another man spendeth the. This is a bayne thyng & a miserable plage. If a man beget an hundred children, and lyue many yeares, so that his daies are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye hys good, neyther be buried: as for him I saye, that all vntymely byrthe is better then he. For he cometh to naught, and goeth his way in to darckenesse, and his name is forgotten. Moreover, he seyth not the Sunne, and knoweth of no rest neyther here nor there: Yea though he lyued two thousande yeares, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place. Al the labour that a manne taketh, is for him selfe, and yet hys desyre is neuer fylled after hys mynde. For what hath the wyse moze then the foole? What helpeth it the poore, that he knoweth to walcke befoze the lyving? The syght of the eyes is better, then that the soule shoulde so departe away. Howbeit this is also a bayne thyng and a dysquietnes of mynde. What is moze excellent then man? Yet can he not in the lawe gette the victoie of hym that is myghtier then he: A bayne thyng is it to cast out many wordes, but what hath a man elles?

The. vii. Chapter.

That which passeth our strengthes & wyttes ought we not to seeke after.

Who knoweth what is good for man liuing, in þe dayes of hys bayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe? Who wyl tel a man, what shall happen after him vnder the Sunne.

* A good name is moze worthe, then a pzyous oymemente, and the daye of death is better then the daye of byrthe. It is better to go into an house of mournyng, then into a banckettyng house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyving, taketh it to heart. It is better to be soye then to laughe, for when the countenance is heuy, the hert is ioyfull. The herte of the wyse is in the mournyng house, but the herte of the folythe is in the house of myrthe. * It is better to geue eate to the chaster byrnyng of a wyse manne, then to heare the songe of foolles. For the laughyng of foolles is lyke the crackyng of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a bayne thyng.

Who so doth wronge, maketh a wise man to go oute of his wyt, & destroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thing is better then the begynnyng. The payement of spete is better the the hys mynde. Be not hastily angrie in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in þe bosome of afole. Say not thou: What is the cause, that the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they that be nowe: for that were no wise question. Wylde is better then ryches, yea much moze worth the the eye sight. For wylde dom defendeth as well as money, & the excellent knowledge & wylde geueth life vnto hi þe hath it i possidion.

Of the Preacher. Chapter. viii. Fo. lix

Consider the worke of God, howe that no man can make the thyng straight, whiche he maketh croked. Use well the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of myffortune: for God maketh the one by the other, so that a man can fynde nothyng els.

These two thynges also haue I considered in tyme of vanyte: that the iust man perissheth for hys rightuousnesse sake, and the vngodly liueth in his wickednesse. Therefore * be thou nether to rightuous nor ouer wyse, that thou perish not: be nether to vnrightuous also nor to foolyshe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take hold of this, and not to lette that go oute of thy hande. for that he feareth God shal escape them all.

Wysdome geueth more courage vnto the wyse, then ten mightie men of the cytie: * for there is not one iuste vpon earth, y doth good, & synneth not. Take heed vnto euery worde that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne owne hert knoweth, that thou thy selfe also haste ofte times spoken euill by other men. All these thynges haue I proued because of wysdom:

for I thoughte to be wyse, * but she went farther fro me the she was before, yea, and so depe that I myght not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, and to seke oute science, wysdom and vnderstandyng: to know the folynesse of the vngodly, and the errour of dotyng fooles. And I founde, that * a woman is bytterer then death: for she is a verpe angle, her hearte is a net, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseth God, shal escape from her, but the synner wyll be taken wyth her.

Scholde (sayeth the Preacher) this haue I diligently searched oute & proued, that I myght come by knowledge: which as yet I seke, and finde it not. Amonge a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman among al. Lo, this onely haue I founde, that * God made man iust and ryght, but they seke vniuerse sotelties, where as no mā hath wysdome and vnderstandyng, to geue answer therunto.

The kynges commaundement oughte to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the chiefe thynges vnder the Sunne.

Wysdome * maketh a mans face to shine, but malice putteth it out of fauoure. Kepe the kynges commaundement (I warne the) and sothe that thou hast made vnto * God. Be not hastye to go out of his syghte, and se thou contynue in no euill thyng: for what so euer it pleaseth hym, that doeth he. Lyke as when a kyng geueth a charge, his commaundement is myghty: Euen so * who maye saye vnto hym: what doest thou? * Who so kepeth the commaundement, shal fele no harme: but a wyse mannes heart discerneth tyme and maner: for euery thyng wyll haue oportunitie and iudgement, and this is the thyng that maketh men full of carefulnesse and sorowe. And why? a manne knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll tell hym? Neyther is there any man that hath power ouer the sprete, to kepe styll the sprete, nor to haue anye power in the tyme of death: is it not he also that can make an ende of the battayle, neyther may vngodlynes delouer him that medleth with all.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the Sunne: howe one man hath lordshyppe vpon another, to his own harme. * for I haue oft sene the vngodly brought to their graues, and fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so muche that they were forgotten in the cytie, where they were had in so hye and great reputacon.

This is also a bayne thyng. Because nowe that euell workes are not hastily punished, the hearte of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euill person offende an hundred tymes, and God deferre, geuyng hym longe lyfe: yet am I sure, that it shal go well with them that feare god, because they haue him before their eyes. Agayne, as for the vngodlye, it shal not be wel with him, nether shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadow, so shal he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanyte vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth peneth, as though they had the workes of the vngodly: Agayne, there be vngodlye, with whom it goeth as though they had the workes of the ryghteous. This me thyncke also a hayne thyng. Therefore, I comynende gladnesse, because a man hath no better thyng vnder the Sunne, then to eate and drinke, and to be mery: for that shal he haue of hys labour all the dayes of hys lyfe, whiche GOD geueth hym vnder the Sunne. When I applyed my minde to learne wysedome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of such a fashyon, that I suffred not mine eyes to slepe, nether daye nor nyghte) I vnderstode of all the workes of GOD, that it is not possible for a manne, to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestow his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reache vnto the; yea, though a wyse man woulde vndertake to know them, yet myght he not fynde them.

The. ix. Chapter.

A man wotteth not, by the ryghtwysenes of his own workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merily with hys wyfe, & playe of wyldnes.

In all these thynges purposed I in my mind to seke out. The ryghteous & wise, yea, & their workes also are in the hande of GOD: and there is no mā that knoweth eyther the loue or hate of the thyng that he hathe before hym. It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: It goeth wyth the ryghteous as wyth the vngodly: with good and cleane as wyth the vncleane: wyth hym that offereth, as with hym that offereth not: lyke as it goeth wyth the vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the persured, so happeneth it also vnto hym that is afrayed to be forswoyne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, this is a mysse, that it happeneth vnto all a lyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are full of wyckednesse, and mad folyshnesse is in their hertes, as long as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

And why? As long as a man lyueth, he is carelesse: for a quicke dogge (saye they) is better then a dead Lyon: for they that be liuing, know that they shal dye: but they that be dead, knowe no thyng, neyther deserue they any more. For their memozyall is forgotten, so that they be neyther loued, hated, nor enuyed: neyther haue they anye more parte in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the Sunne. So thou thy way, the eate thy bread with ioye, and drinke thy wyne with gladnesse, for thy workes please GOD. Let thy garments be alwaye whyte, and lette thy heade wante none oyntment. Use thy selfe to lyue ioyfullye wth thy wyfe whō thou louest, all the dayes of thy life which is but hayne, that GOD hath geuen the vnder the Sunne, all the dayes of thy vanite: for that is thy porcyon in this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takest vnder the Sunne. What so euer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for amonge the dead, where as thou goest vnto, there is neyther work, counsell, knowledge nor wysedome.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder the Sunne, and I sawe, that in runnyng, it helpeth not to be swifte: in battayl, it helpeth not to be stronge: to sedynge, it helpeth not to be wysse: to ryches, it helpeth not to be subtell: to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be connyng: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune. For a man knoweth not hys tyme, but lyke as the fyssh are taken wyth the angle, and as byrdes are catched with the snare: Euen so are men taken in the perclous tyme, when it cometh so sodenly vpon them.

This wysedome haue I sene also vnder the Sunne, and me thoughte it a great thyng. There was a lytle cytie, and a fewe men within it: so there came a great kyng and beleged it, and made great bulwarckes agaynst it. And in the cytie there was founde a poore man (but he was wysse) which wysedome delpyered the cytie: yet was there no body, that had any respect vnto suche a symple man. Then sayde I: wysedome is better then strength.ouerthelesse, a symple mannes wysdom is despyled, and hys wordes are not hearde. A wysse mannes counsell that is folowed in seplence, is farre aboue the

The. x. Chapter.

The difference betwixt a foole and a wise man. For the one and happy is that realme whiche hath a wise prince.

DEAD liues þ corrupte swete doyntment & make it to stinck, ate some thyng more worthy then the wysdome and ho-noure of a foole. A wise mannes herte is vpon the ryght hande, but a fooles herte is vpon the lefte. A doyinge foole thynketh, that euery man doth as folyshe as him selfe. * If a pryncypal spete be geuen the to beate rule, be not neglygente then in thyne offyce: for so shall greate wyckednesse be put downe, as it were with a medycyne. Another plage is there, whiche I haue sene vnder the sunne: namely, the vgnoraunce that is commonly amonge prynces: in that a foole sitteth in greate dygnitye, and the riche are sette downe beneth: I haue sene seruantes ryde vpon horses, & prynces goynge vpon theyr feete as it were seruantes. * But he þ diggeth vp a pyt, shal sal therein him selfe: & who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpent shal bite him. Who so remoueth stones, shal haue trauaile withall: and he that heweth wod, shal be hurt therewith.

When an yron is blont, and the point not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, and that with myght: Euen so doth wis-dome folowe diligence. A babler of hys tonge is no better then a serpente that styngeth wythout hymnge. The wor-des out of a wise manys mouth are gracyous, but the lypes of a foole wyl destroy him selfe. The begynnynge of his talkynge is foolyshe, and the laste worde of his mouth is great madnesse.
 A foole is so full of wordes, that a man can not tel what ende he wyl make: who wyl then warne hym to make a conclusion? The labour of the foolyshe is greuous vnto them, whyle they knowe not how to go in to the cytie.

Woe be vnto the (O thou realme and lande) whose kyng is but a chyld, and whose prynces are early at their banckettes. But well is the (O thou realme and lande) whose kyng is come of nobles, and whose prynces eate in due season, for strengthe and not for luste.

Thowowe slouthfulnesse the balkes fall downe, and thowow ydle handes it tay-neth in at the house. Meate maketh me to laugh, * and wyne maketh them me-ry: but vnto money are all thynges obedient. Wythe the kyng no euell in thy thought, and speake no hurt of þ ryche in thy prynces chambere: for a byrde of the ayre shal betraye thy voyce, and wyth her fethers shal she betraye thy wor-des.

The Ballet of Ballettes of Salomon, called in Latyne Canticu Canticozum.

The fyrst Chapter.

I mysticall deuise of the spirituall and godly loue, betweene Christ the spouse, and the church or congregacion his spouse. Salomon made this Balade of song by hym selfe: his wyfe the daughter of Pharaos, vnder the shadow of his left syngynge Chylde, and vnder the preson of his wyfe the Church.

The spouse speaketh to him selfe.

O that I might go to the mountaine of Myrrour, & to the hyl of frankincense:
tyl the day breake, and til the shadowes

The voyce of Christ speaking to the Church.

Thou arte all fayre, O my loue, and no spot is there in the. Come to me from Libanus, O my spouse, come to me fro Libanus: come soone the nexte waye from the toppe of Amana, from the top Sanir and Hermon, frome the Lyons dennes and frome the mountaynes of the leopardest. Thou hast wounded my herte, O my spster, my spouse, thou hast wounded my hearte, with one of thyne eyes & with one cheyne of thy necke. O how fayre and louelye are thy brestes, my spster

sister, my spouse: Thy brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and the smell of thine ointmentes passeth al spices. Thy lippes, O my spouse, drop as the honye combe, yea, my lcke and honye is vnder thy tonge, & the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankinsence. Thou art a wel kepte garden, O my sister, my spouse, thou art a wel kept water sprig, a sealed wel. The frutes that sprout in the, are lyke a very Paradyse of pomegranates with swete frutes: as Cipres, Cardus, Saffron, Calmus, and al the trees of Libanus: Myrr, Aloes and al the best spices. Thou arte a wel of gardens a well of lypunge waters, whiche renne downe from Libanus.

¶ Christe calleth the Heathen.

Up thou northe wynde, come thou southwynd, and blow vpon my garden, that the smell thereof maye be caried on euery syde: yea, & my beloued may come into my garden, and eate of the frutes and apples that growe therein.

¶ The. v. Chapter.

¶ Christe speaketh to the Church.

Come into my garden O my sister, my Spouse: I haue gathered my Myrr with my spice. I wyl eate my honye and my hony combe, I wyl dyncke my wyne and my mylcke.

¶ Christe speaketh to the apostles.

¶ The voyce of the Church.

As I was a slepe, my herte wakyng, I hearde the voyce of my beloued, whē he knocked.

¶ Christe to the Church.

Open to me (sayde he) O my sister, my loue, my doue, my derlyng: for my heade is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are ful of the nyghte droppes.

¶ The voyce of the spouse.

I haue put of my coate, howe can I do it on againe? I haue washed my fete, how shall I drye them agayne?

¶ The voyce of the church speakinge to the kinge of Chypre.

But when my loue put in his hande at the hole, my hert was moued toward him: so that I stode vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrr, and the Myrr ranne downe my fingers vpon the locke. Neuerthelesse when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone hys waye.

Nowe lyke as afore tyme when he spake, my hearte coulde not longer restryne: Euen so nowe I soughte hym, but I coulde not fynde him: I cryed vpon hym, neuerthelesse he gaue me no aunswere.

¶ The Church complayneth of her persecuters.

So the watchemen that wente aboute the cytie found me, smote me, and wounded me: Yea they that kept & walles, toke awaye my garment fro me.

¶ The Spouse speaketh to her companyons.

I charge you therfore, O ye doughters of Ierusalem, yf ye fynde my beloued, that ye tell hym howe that I am specke for loue.

¶ The voyce of the Synagoge

Who is thy loue aboue other louers O thou sayrest amonge women: O what can thy loue do, more then other louers, that thou chargest vs so straitlye.

¶ The Church, aunsweringe of Christe.

As for my loue, he is white and red coloured, a singular personne amonge manye thousandes: his head is the most fine golde, the lockes of his heere are bushed, browne as the euenynge: Hys eyes are as the eyes of doves by the water brokes, washen with mylke, and remainynge in a plenteous place: Hys cheekes are lyke a garden bedde, where in the Apotecaries plante all maner of swete thynges: Hys lippes droppe as the floures of that moste pryncypall Myrr, his handes are ful of golde ringes and precious stones. Hys body is as the pure puerp, decke ouer with Sapphires: His legges are as the pylers of Harbel, sette vpon sokettes of gold: His face is as Libanus, and as the bewtye of the Cedre trees: Hys throte is swete, yea he is altogether louelye. Such one is my loue, O ye doughters of Ierusalem, suche one is my loue.

Of the coming and death of Christ, and of the calyng of the heathen.

Moreouer this is the worde that was opened vnto Clape the sonne of Ammoz, vpon Juda and Jerusalem. * It will be also in p[ro]cesse of tyme: That the hyl where the house of the Lorde is buylded, shall be the chiefe amonge hilles, and exalted aboue all lytle hilles. * And all the heathen shall p[re]ace vnto him, and the multitude of people shall go vnto him, speakinge thus one to another: * bp, let vs go to the hil of y Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: y he maye shewe vs his waye, and that we maye walcke in his pathes. for the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the word of God from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall refozme the multitude of people: * So that they shal breake theyr swerdes and speares, to make sythes, scythes and sawes thereof. * From that tyme forth shall not one people lyft bp weapoun against another, neyther shall they leaue to fight fro thens forth. It is to the that I cry (O house of Jacob) bp, let vs walke in the lighte of the Lorde. But thou art scatred abrode w thy people (O house of Jacob) for ye go far be yonde youre fathers, whether it bee in Sorcerers (whom ye haue as the phylistines had) or in calkers of mens bythes, whereof ye haue to manye. * As soone as your land was full of syluer & gold, & no end of your treasure: so soone as your land was full of strong horses & no ende of your charettes: Immediatlye was it ful of ydolles also, euen workes of your owne handes, which ye yourselues haue facioned, and your syngeters haue made. There kneleth the man, ther falleth y man downe before them, so y thou canste not brynge him awaye from thence.

And therfore get the soone in to some rocke, and hyde the in the ground: fro the sighte of the fearful iudge, and from y gloze of his maiesty: which casteth downe the high lokes of presumptuous personnes, and bryngeth low the pyde of man, and he onely shall be exalted in that day. for the daye of the Lord of hostes shall go ouer all pyde and presumption, vpon all them that exalte them selues, & shal bryng them al downe: vpon al high and stout Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon al the oaks of Bassa vpon al high hylles, and vpon al stoute mountaynes, vpon all costlye towres, & vpon all strong walles, vpon al shippes of the sea, and vpon euerye thinge that is glortous and pleasaunt to loke vpon.

* And it shal brynge downe the pyde of man, and laye mans presumptuousnesse ful lowe, and the Lorde shal onely haue the byctory in that daye. But the ydols shall vtterly be rote out. * When shal crepe in to holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, from the syght of the fearful iudge, and from the gloze of his maiesty: what time as he shal wake him bp to shake the earthe: Then shall man cast awaye his goddes of syluer & golde (whiche he neuertheles had made to honour the) vnto ydols and Bakes: y he maye the better crepe into the caues and rockes, and into the cliffes of harde stones, from the syght of the fearful iudge & from y gloze of his maiesty.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ The prophecyeth that at the comynge of Chriſt, a ſtrength and power ſhall be put forth of Iuſte.

Euery man can eſchue a perſone moued i anger, for what doth he myſelfe. Euen ſo ſhall the Lorde of Hoſtes take away from Ieruſalem and Iuda, al poſſeſſions & power, all meat and dryncke, the captayne and the ſoudyare, the iudge and the prophete, the wyſe and the aged man, the worſhipfull of ſpytle yre olde, and the honozable: the Senatours and men of vndeſtanding: the maſters of craftes and oratours. * And I ſhall geue you chyldren to bee poure princes (ſapth the Lorde) and babes ſhall haue the rule of you. The people alſo ſhalbee pylled and polled, and one ſhall euer be doynge violence and wrong to another. The boye ſhall preſume againſte the elder, and the hyle perſonne againſte the honozable. Yea, one ſhall take a frende of his owne kinned by the boſome, & ſay: * thou haſt clothynge, thou ſhalt beoure head, for thou maieſt kepe vs from this fall and perell.

¶ Then ſhall he ſweare and ſay: I can not helpe you. Moreover, there is neyther meate nor clothynge in my houſe, make me no ruler of the people. For Ieruſalem & Iuda muſt decay, becauſe þ bothe their wordes & counſels are againſt the Lorde, they prouoke the preſence of his mageſtie vnto anger. The chaunginge of their countenaunce beynge with the yea, they declare their owne ſinnes them ſelues, as the Sodomites, & hode them not. Wo be vnto their ſoules, for they ſhalbe heuely rewarded. Then ſhall they ſay: O happie are þe goſp, for they maye enioy the frutes of their ſtudies. But wo be to the vngodly & vntighteous, * for they ſhalbee rewarded after theyr worckes. * O my people, tribundes oppreſſe the, and women haue rule of the.

* O my people, thy leaders deceiue the, and treade oute the waye of thy fore ſteppes. * The Lorde is here to comen of the matter, and ſtandeth to geue iudgemente with the people. The Lorde ſhall come forth to reaſon with the Senatours and princes of hys people, and ſhall ſay thus vnto them: * It is ye that haue burnt by my byneparde, the robberye of the pooze is in your houſe. Wherefore do ye oppreſſe my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes: thus ſhall the God of Hoſtes reuile them.

Moreover, thus ſapeth the Lorde: Serpente the daughters of Sion are become ſo proude, and come in with ſtreched oute neckes, and with bayne wanton eyes: ſerpente they come in ſtryppte ſo myſelfe with their ſete: Therefore ſhall the LORDE ſhane the heades of the daughters of Syon, and make theyr bewtye bare in that daye. In that daye ſhall the Lorde take awaye the gaygoutnes of theyr apparell and ſpangles, chaynes, partletttes, and colares, bracelettes and hoooues, the goodlye, ſoured wede and broderd raymente, bruches & beade bandes, rynges and garlandes, holypeday clothes and bales, kerchues and pinnes, glaſſes and ſmockes, bonnettes and taches.

And in ſteade of good ſmell, there ſhall be ſyncke among the. And for theyr gyrdles there ſhall be looce bandes. And for well ſet heere there ſhall be baldneſſe. In ſteade of a ſtomacher a ſackcloth, and for theyr beutye wetherpneſſe and ſunneburning. Theyr houſbandes and theyr myghtye men ſhall perſhe with the ſwerde in battell.

The Notes.

a. That is, thou arte better apparelled and richer than we, helpe vs with fode and other thynges necessarie. All the curses whiche the prophete here receyved, were fulfilled in the destruction of Jerusalem.

b. Some read: exactours or extortioners. He noereth the covetousnes of priestes and prelates. God here calleth the poore wydowes, the fatherlesse, and all that are destitute of the comfote of this world his people, whome the pharisees then oppressed: nowe priestes, and suche as falslye boaste them selves to be spirituall: Justlye called exactours, in as muche as they requyre the right (as they call it) more by mennes traditions, then by the word of God: & do not so seke soules to God, as moncy for them selves. Oppresse, is, to pyle, pill, and even haulme, so that they shalte leave nothing. What house, fylde, or marchaundysse is there, that sendeth them not somethyng: Whether there be children christened, or mariages made, or men come to the table of the Lorde: whether the syche be visyted or a deade buryed, there is ever somethyng requyred: Furthermore they are not onely accused to be covetouse, but also to be women, that is, effeminate and womanly: because they moost fyshelye and ydelye spende and waste that, whiche they have scraped with sugerynge, violence, and most naughtye ashyons.

c. To have the heabes of women is to make them confounded and ashamed, for it is a shame to a woman to be shaven. i. Cor. xi. a. So that the prophete hereby signifyeth, by a borrowed speache, that the Lorde shal make the daughters of Syon (by whiche vnderstande, the women of Iurpe) confounded and ashamed, and byynge them to extreme aduersyrie and povertye, & even to nought. Josephus maketh mention that Jerusalem, which was the chiefe cytie therof, was ones so famished that a certen woman of the cytie ate her owne chyld. Albe it, some vnderstande even here also by the daughters of Syon, the towynes, byllages, and castelles of Syon: as it bothe in dede often signifye in the scriptures.

The. iiii. Chapter.

In want of men, vii. women desyre to haue of one man.

That tyme shall a their gates mourne and complayne, and they shall sit as desolate folke vpon the earth.

b. They shall seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we wyll laye all oure meate and clothyng together in comen, onely that we maye be called thy wyues, and that this shamefull reproche maye be taken from vs. * After that tyme shal the ch. braunche of the Lorde be bewyfull and myghtye, & the frute of the earth shalbe fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelytes that shal spyngge therof. * Then shall the remnaunte in Syon, and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely all suche as are wyrtten amonge the lyvinge at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shal wash awaye the defolacion of the daughters of Syon, and pource the bloude out fro Jerusalem with the wynde of his smoke and fyre. Moreover vpon all the dwellynges of the hyl of Syon, & vpon the whole congregacion, shal the Lorde pource a cloude and smoke by daye, and the thynge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all theyr gloyre shalbe preserued. And Jerusalem shal be a tabernacle for a shadowe, because of here in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man may kepe him for wether & rayne.

The Notes.

a. The Gates shall mourne and complayne, because not onely the towne shal perishe with the swerde, but also the Judges and geuers of sentence. He taketh the place of iudgement for the iudges: for in the Gates was iudgement wont to be geuen. Ruth. iiii. a. Or, even the Gates shall be destroyed, and no man shall enter in or go oute therat: for the Gates mourne, if the people be not often sent in them.

b. Then shall. vii. wyues. &c. The meynyng is. The wyched women were not contented w their husbandes, but there shal come suche scarcenes of men, that there shal be scaute for euery seuenth woman one man. Suche a slaughter shal there be, that fewe men shal remaine, and fewe men shal be broughie in to captiuite.

c. By this braunche vnderstande Christe.

The. v. Chapter.

Of Christe and his wyneparde, with an exortacion of countenances and diuocionnes.

Now well then, I wyll syng my beloued frende a songe of his vineparde. * My beloued frende hath a vineparde in a verye frutefull plenteous grounde.

This he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therin. And afterwarde when he looked that it shoulde byynge him grapes, it brought forth the thornes. I shewe you nowe my cause (O ye Citezens of Jerusalem and whole Iuda :) Judge I praye you betwixt me, & my vineparde. What more could haue bene doe for it, & I haue not done. * Wherefore the hath it geue thornes, where I looked to haue had grapes of it.

Well, I shall tel you howe I wil do w my vineparde: I wil take the hedge fro it, & it may perishe, & breake down the wall, & it may be trode vnder fote. I wil laye it waste, & it shal nether be twysted nor cut, but beare thornes and breares. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes, that they

Luc. i. c

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came sene the tyme that * Ephraim departed from Juda) thowowe the kyng of the Assirians. * for at the same tyme shall the Lorde whistle, for the fyes that are aboute the water of Egypt, and for þ Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lpyghte all in the valeies, in the hawtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all cornes.

ii. par. 32. a
Ez. 36. a

At the same tyme shall the LORD haue the heere of the heade, and the fete, and þ beerd cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall paye them withal beponde the water: namely, with þ kyng of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylcke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lande, shall eate butter and honye. At þ same tyme al vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande siluerlynges) shall be turned to briers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande with arrowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become briers and thornes. And as for all hylls that nowe are betwen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of briers and thornes. And the catel shall be dryuen thither, and the shepe shall fede there.

The notes.

- a. That is, God with vs.
- b. That is, shall geue a small token and byng them together. The hoste, as well of Sennacherib as of Sennacherib was of the Assirians, Egyptians, and Indians. The Egyptians called he fyes, because there be in Egypt many fyes, and the Assirians bees, because there is in Assiria aboundaunce of bees and hony. By the wheter of Egypt, he signifieth Nilus.
- c. That is take cleane awaye.
- d. That is, the nobles and rulers. And by the heere of the fete and bearde, are signified þ carnallite, and whatsoeuer is seemely or manly in it.
- e. By the rasoure that shall paye them vnderstandeth he the kyng of Assir (and the other about named).

The. viii. Chapter.

The despayraunce of the lande by Emanuel. The stone of offence, at whiche manye shall stumbe.

Moreover, the Lord sayd vnto me: * Take the a greate lease, and wypp in it, as men do with a penne, that he spede him to robbe, and haste him to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me faithfull witnessess Uriah þ priest, and zacharias the sonne of Barachiah. After that wet I vnto the Prophetesse, that nowe had conceaued and borne a sonne. Then sayd the Lord to me: geue hym this name: Maher schal hash bas (that is: a spedde robber: an hasty spoyle). for why, or euer the chyld shall haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Im, (that is father, and mother:) shall the riches of * Damascus and the substance of Samaria be taken awaye, thowowe the kyng of the Assirians.

* The Lord spake also vnto me, sayinge: for so much as the people refuseth the stylle rennyng water of Silo, and put their delyte in Razin and Romelpe's sonne: Beholde, the Lorde shall byng mightye and greate floudes of water vpon them: namely, the * kyng of the Assirians with all his power. Whiche shall powze oute his furiousnes vpon euery man, and renne ouer all the banckes. And shall breake in vpon Juda, increasynge in power, till he ge get him by the throte. He shall fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande with hys brode wynges, O Emanuel. Go toge ther ye people, and gather you, herken to all ye of fatte countrees. Muster you, and gather you: take youre counsell together, * yet must youre counsell come to nought: go in hande withal, yet shal it not prosper. Excepte Emanuel: (that is God) be with vs. For the Lorde charged me, and toke me by the hande, and warned me, saying vnto me: I should not walcke in the waye of this people. He sayd mozeouer: rounde with none of them, whosoeuer say: ponder people are bounde together. * Neuertheles feare them not, nether be afraide of them, but sanctifye ye the Lorde of Hostes, * let him be youre feare and dreade. * For he is the sanctifyinge, and stone to stumple at: the rocke to fall by, a snare and net to bothe the houses: to Israel, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And manye shall stumple, fall, and be broken vpon hym: yea, they shalbe snared and taken.

* Howe laye the wytnesses together (sayde the Lorde) and seale þe lawe with my dysciples. Thus I wayte vpon the Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, & I loke vnto hym. * But lo, as for me, and the chyldren which the Lord hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lorde of Hostes sake, whiche dwelleth vpon the hyll of Sion.

And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at þe sothesayers, witches, charmers and conjurers, then make them this answer: Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at hys God: whether it be concernynge the deade, or the lyuyng. If any mā want lyghte, let hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testimonye, whether they speake not after this meanyng. If he do not this, he stumbleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger, he is oute of patience, and blasphemeth hys kynge and his God. Then loketh he vwarde, and downe warde to the earthe, and behold, there is trouble and darckenesse, deracion is rounde aboute him, and the cloude of erreure. And oute of such aduersite, shall he not escape.

a. Be called the kyngdome of David, which figurerh the kyngdome of Christe, the myllynynge water of Silo: whiche thyng agreeth very well vnto Christ, that was meane and lowlye of herte. Mar. xi. d. And zacha. ix. Beholde the myllynge cometh vnto the poore and lowlye: &c. He sayneth in myllynge and peaceable consciences. Silo is a springe at the fore of the hyll of Sion: whiche hath not continuallye water, but springeth certayne houres and dayes, and cometh with a great sounde by the northen of þe grounde, and ryfies and holes of an harde stoupe rocke: The maner of speakinge is borrowed, of the dyspylled lytelnes of the water, whiche signifyeth the smal estimation and pouertie of the churche. b. With his brode wynges, that is, with hys hostes of souldiers. So in Ezch. xlii. a. is a hig described, by an eagle that hath great wynges. c. Some reade, and as the rocke to fall vpon, to the ii. houses of Israel: a snare and net to the inhabitours of Ierusalem. And they expounde the sentence thus. The Lorde wyll be vnto the ii. houses of Israel, that is, to the house of Iuda, and to the house of the ten tribes: partly a sanctifyinge (by whiche vnderstande healtie and felicitye) and partly a stone to stumple at. So that some of bothe the houses shall be sanctified, and some shall stumple, but that cheselye they of Ierusalem shal be snared. Who shalbe sanctified, and who shal stumple and fall, doth S. Peter clerely expounde. i. Pet. ii. b. saying: vnto you therfore which beleue, he is precious: but vnto them, whiche beleue not, the stone whiche the builders refused. &c.

The. ix. Chapter.

The prophcey of Christes natyuite & dominion.

Like as in tyme past it hath bene well seene, that the lande of zabulon & the lande of Nephtali (where thorowe the sea waite goeth ouer Jordan in to the lande of Galylee.) * was at the firste in litle trouble, * but afterwarde sore vexed.

Neuerthelesse the people that haue dwelte in darcknesse, shall se a greates lyghte. As for them that dwel in þe lade of the shadowe of death, vpon them shal the lyghte shyne. Shalte thou multiply the people, and not increase the ioye also: They shall reioyse before the, euen as men make mery in haruest, and as men that haue gotten the victorie, when they deale the spoyle. * For thou shalt breake the pocke of the peoples butto: the staffe of hys shoulde, and the rodde of hys opprelloure, * as in þe day at Hadrian.

Mozeouer all temerarious and sedicious power (yea, where there is but a cote fylled with bloude) shalbe burnt, and fede the fyre. * For vnto vs a childe shalbe borne, and vnto vs a sonne.

shal be gotten. Upon his shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shal be called with his owne name: The wonderous geuer of counsell, * the mightie God, the euerlastyng father, & pryncce of peace: he * shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shal sit vpon the seate of Dauid, and in hys kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablyshe it with equyte and ryghteousnesse, from thence forth for euermore. This shall the gelousy of the lord of hostes byng to passe.

C The Lord sente a worde in to Iacob, the same is come in to Israel. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwel in Samaria, can lape with pryde and hys stomackes, on this manner: The tyle worcke is fallen downe, but we wyl buylde it with harder stones. The Holbery tymber is broken, but we shall set it vp agayne with Cedar. Neuertheles, the Lord shall prepare Razin the enemye agaynst them, and so order their aduersaries, that the Sirians shal lape holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israel with open mouth.

Ezay. vi. b
vii. c

* After all this, the wyathe of the Lord shall not cease, but yet his hande shall be stretched oute still. for the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastyseth them, nether do they seke the Lord of hostes. Therfore the Lord shal roie oute of Israell bothe heade and tayle, bzaunche and twigge in one daye.

Ier. xiii. c

By the heade, is vnderstande the Senatour and honourable man, and by the tayle, the Prophete that preacheth lyes. * For all they whiche enfourme the people & they be in a righte case, suche be dysceauers. Suche as men thyncke also to be perfecte among these, are but caste away.

Therfore shall the Lord haue no pleasure in their yonge men, nether fauoure their fatherlesse and wydowes. for they are all together ypocrites and wycked, and all their mouthes speake foly. After all this, shall not the Lordes wyathe cease, but yet hys hande shal be stretched oute still. for the vngodlye burne, as a fyre in the byers and thornes: And as it were oute of a fyre in a wod or a redde bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of theyr pryde.

For this cause shall the wyathe of the Lord of hostes fall vpon the lande, and the people shal be consumed, as it were with fyre, no man shall spare hys brother. If a man do turne hym to the ryghte hande, he shall sampe the, or to the left hande to eate, he shall not haue ynough. Every man shall eate & drinke of hys owne arme: Manasses shall eate Ephraim, & Ephraim Manasses, and they bothe shall eate Iuda. After all this shall not the Lordes wyathe cease, but yet shall his hande be stretched out still.

The Notes.

a. This yocke figurith the yocke and burthen of the lawe, whiche so oppressed the people, that S. Peter coulde saye to the Apostles that nyght, they nor theyr fathers were able to kepe it. Actum. xii. b. This yocke hath Christe broken, accordyng to this prophete of Esai, and better byscharged the burthen therof. For we knowe nowe that God is satisfied and contented in the bloude of hys sonne Christe, and that the manye thousande folde punishmentes whiche are due to oure synnes, are cleane pardouned and forgotten for the merites of I. same Christ. i. Iohannis. ii. a. The Hebrewes expounde this of the destruction of the holte of Sennacherib, which was done by the Angel of which ye haue after in p. xxxviii. g. And call the holte of the Sirians, the yocke of the peoples burthen, the staffe of the shoulder and rodde of the oppressoure, but it is a more greuous bondage, wherewith the spirituall Sennacherib of whome that Sirian was a certayne figure and shadowe bounde vs, and from whiche Christ hath deliuered vs.

b. By the daye at Agadian is meante I day wher in Gedon with thre hundred men slue an incredible multitude of the Agadianites, as ye recorde, Iudic. vii. Thereforthe I Lord for hym, and deliuered the people from bondage. Euen so hath he nowe deliuered vs from the captiuitie of the deuyl, deathe, and hel by Christe.

c. Heareth the sence of his owne arme, that tareth awaye the goodes of his nye frende: & robbeth his kynsmen. The meanyng is that one shal robbe and polle another.

The .x. Chapter.

The threatneth the oppressours of the poore, & propheth agaynst Sennacherib.

Woe be vnto you that make * vnryghteous lawes, and deuyle thynges, whiche be to hardie for to kepe: where thow the poore are oppressed, on every syde, and the innocentes of my people are therewith robbed of iudgemente: the wydowes may be youre praye, and that ye maye robbe the fatherlesse, what wyl ye do in tyme of the viſitation & deſtruction, that ſhall come from farre & To whome wyl ye renne for helpe & oz to whome wil ye geue your honoure, that he may kepe it: that ye come not among the prſoners, oz lye amonge the deade: * After all this ſhall not the wraſhe of the Lorde ceaſe, but yet ſhall his hande be ſtretched oute ſtill.

Woe be alſo vnto Aſſur, * which is a ſtate of my wraſhe, in whole hāde is the rod of my punyſhment. for I ſhall ſende him amonge thoſe pꝑocrite people, amonge the people that haue deſerued my diſſauoure ſhall I ſende him: that he may vtterly robbe the, ſpoyle them, and treade them downe like the myze in the ſtreete. Howbeit his meanyng is not ſo, uether thynketh his herte of this faſhion. But he ymagineth onely, howe he maye ouerthrowe and deſtroye much people, for he ſapeth: are * not my princes al kynges, Is not Calno as eaſye to winne, as Charchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus the Samaria? As who ſay: I were able to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddes, but not Jeruſalem and Samaria. ſhall I not do vnto Jeruſalem and their ymages, as I dyd vnto Samaria and they: ymagines?

wherefore the Lorde ſapeth: As ſoone as I haue perſourmed my whole worke vpon the hyl of Sion and Jeruſalem, then wyl I alſo byſet the noble and ſtoute kyng of Aſſiria, with his wyſedome and pryde. for he ſtandeth thus in his owne cōceate: * This do I, thozowe the power of myne owne hāde, and thozowe my wyſedome: for I am wyſe, I am he that remoue the landes of pꝑeople, I robbe their princes: and (lyke one of the worthyes) I drie them from their hye ſeates. My hande hath founde out the Hoſtes of the people, as it were a neſt. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and there, are gathered together: So do I gather al countrees. And there is no man, that darre be ſo bolde, as to touche a ſether, that darre open his mouth, oz once whylper.

dothe the ſawe make any crackynge, agaynſte him that ruleth it: That were euen like, as yf the rod did exalte it ſelfe agaynſte him pꝑ beareth it: oz as though the ſtaffe ſhoulde magnifye it ſelfe, as who ſape: it were no wodde. * Therefore ſhall the Lorde of Hoſtes ſende him pꝑ uertie in his riches, and burne bp his power, as it were with a fyre. But the lyghte of Iſraell ſhalbe that fyre, and his Sanctuarie ſhalbe the flamme, and it ſhall kinde, & burne bp his * thornes & briers in one daye, yea all the glozve of his woddies and ſeldes ſhalbe conſumed with bodye and ſoule. As for hym ſelfe, he ſhalbe as one chaſed awaye. The trees alſo of his ſelde ſhalbe of ſuche a nombꝛe, that a chyldꝛe maye tell them.

After that daye ſhall the remnaunte of Iſrael, and ſuche as are eſcaped oute of the houſe of Jacob, ſeke no moze cōforte at hym that ſmote them, but ſhall comforte them ſelues with faithfulneſſe and truethe in the LORDE, the holy one of Iſrael. The remnaunte, yea, and the poſterytie of Jacob, ſhall conuerſe vnto God the myghty one.

* for thoughe thy people (O Iſrael) be as the lande of the ſea, yet ſhall but the remnaunte of them onely conuerſe vnto hym. Perfecte is the iudgemente of hym that ſloweth in tyghtcouſneſſe, and therefore the Lorde of Hoſtes ſhall perfectlye fulfyll the thyng, that he hath determined in the myddelt of the whole worlde. Therefore thus ſapeth the Lorde God of Hoſtes: Thou my people, that dwelleſt in Sion, be not afrayed for the kyng of the Aſſirians: he ſhall wagge his ſtaffe at the, yea and beate pꝑ with the rodde, as pꝑ Egyptians dyd ſome tyme: But ſoone after, ſhall my wraſhe and myne indignacion be fulfilled agaynſte they: blaſphemyes.

* Whereouer the LORDE of Hoſtes ſhall prepare a ſcourge for hym, * lyke as was the punyſhement of Moadian vpon the mounte of Oreb. And he ſhall lyfte bp his rodde ouer the ſea, as * he dyd ſomtyme ouer the Egyptians. Then ſhall his burthen be taken from thy ſhoulders, and his yocke from thy necke, yea, the ſame yocke ſhall be corrupte for verpe fatnesse. He shall come to Ath, and go thorowe towarde Migron. But at Machmas shall he muster his hoste, and go ouer the foorde. Gibeath shall be their restinge place, Shamah shall be afraid, Gibeah Saul shall flee away.

The voyce of þe noyse of thy hozles (A dough ter Gallim) shall be heard vnto Ais and to Anathoth, which also shall be in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the crying of Gabin are many, yet shall he remayne at Rob that daye. After that, shall he lyte vp bys hande agaynst the mounte Sion, and against the hill of Ierusalem. But se, the Lorde God of Hostes shall take awaye the proude from thence, wth feare.
He shall hew downe the proude, and fell the hye mynded. The thornes of þe wod shall be roted out with yron, and Liba-nus shall haue a myghtie fall.

The xi. Chapter.

He propheseth of the natyuite of Christe, & of hys people, of the remnaunte of Israel, and of the tapyte of the heathen or Gentiles.

After this there shall come a rodde forthe of the kynrede of Jesse, and a blossome out of hys roote. * The spirite of the Lorde shall lyghte vpon it: the spirit of wysdome, and vnderstandyng: the spirite of counsell, and strenght: þe spirite of knowledge, and of the feare of God:
and shall make him feruente in the feare of God.

For he shall not geue sentence, after the thyng that shall be brought before his eyes, nether reprove a matter at the fyrste hearyng: but with righteousnes shall he iudge the poore, and with holnes shall he refourme the synple of the worlde.

* He shall smyte the <sup>a</sup> worlde <sup>b</sup> wyth the staffe of his mouth, and wth þe bzeach of his mouthe shall he slaye the wycked.
* Righteousnesse shall be the gyrdle of his loynes, trueth and faithfulnessse, the gyrdyng of his rapnes. * Then shall the wolfe dwell with the lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe by the gote. Bullockes, Lyons and catell shall kepe companie together, so that a lytle chylde shall dyue them forthe.

The cowe and the Bere shall fede together, and their yonge ones shall lye together. The Lyon shall eat strawe like the oxe, or the cowe. The childe while he sucketh, shall haue a desyre to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put his hande in to the Cockatrice denne. No man shall do euil to another, no man shall destroye another, in al the hyll of my Sanctuarie. * For þe earth shall be full of the knowledge of þe Lorde, euen as though the water of the sea flowed ouer the earth.

* Then shall the gentiles enquire after the rote of Jesse (which shall be set vp for a token vnto the Gentyles) for hys dwellyng shall be glorious. * At þe same tyme shall the Lorde take in hande againe, to conquere the remnaunte of his people (whiche are left alyue.) fro the Assirians, Egipcians, Arabians, Morians, Elamites, Caldees, Antiochians and Ilandes of the sea. And he shall set vp a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together þe dispersed of Israel, yea, and þe oute castes of Iuda from the foure cornets of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim and the enmyte of Iuda shall be cleane roted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euil wyll to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they bothe together shall lye vpon the shoulders of the Philistines towarde the West, and spole the together that dwell towarde the East. The Idumites and the Moabites shall let their handes fall, and the Ammonytes shall be obedyente vnto them.

The Lorde also shall cleue the tunges of the Egypcians sea, and with a myghty wynde shall he lyfte vp hys hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte his seuen streames and make men go ouer drye shode. And thus shall he make a waye for his people, that remayneth from the Assirians, * lyke as it hapned to the Israelites, what tyme they departed oute of the lande of Egipte.

Lorde is my strengthe, and my prayse, he also shall be my refuge. Therefore with ioye shall ye drawe water oute of the welles of the Sauoure, and then shall ye saye: * Lette vs geue thanckes greate thynges, as it is knowen vnto the world. Trye out, and be glad, thou that dwellest in Sion, for greate is thy pynce: the holpe one of Israell.

The notes

a. The welles of the Sauoure are. the worde of God, the doctrine of the Gospell and promises of Christe, wherewith tremblyng soules and afflict consciencs are refreshed. Out of these (sayth he) that they shall drawe water, not out of mennes traditions, whiche are but podelles.

The. xiii. Chapter.

He prophesieth the destruction of Babilon, the captivity, and the commynge agayne of the people.

Nys is the heuyn<sup>a</sup> burthen of Babilon, whiche clay the son of Amos dyd se. * Make some tokens to the hye<sup>c</sup> hylles, and call vnto them, holde vp youre hande, that the Princes maye goe in at the doore. For I wyl sende for my<sup>d</sup> debtyes and my Gyauntes (sayeth the Lorde) and in my wra-the I wyl cal for luche, as triumphe in my gloze.

* With that me thoughte I hearde in the mountaynes, a noyse, lyke as it had bene of a greate people: and a rushyng, as thoughe the kyngedomes of all nacions had come together. (And the Lorde of Hostes was the captayne of the whole armye.) As they had come not onelye oute of farre countreyes, but also from the endes of the heauens: Euen the Lorde hym selfe with the my-nistres of hys wra-the, to destroye the whole lande. Hournetherefore, for the dave of the Lorde is at hand, and commeth as a destroyer from the Almygh-tye. Then shall al the handes be letten downe, and all mennes heartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnes and sorowe shall come vpon them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman that trauayleth with chylde. c * One shall euer be abashed of another, and their faces shall burne lyke the flame.

For lo, the dave of the Lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wra-
the: to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the sinne thereof. For the sterres and planettes of heauen shall not geue their lyghte, * the sunne shall be quenched in the rpyng, and the moone shall not shyne with hys lyghte.
And I wyl punyssh the wyckednesse of the<sup>s</sup> world, and the synnes of the vngodlye, sayeth the Lorde. The hys stomackes of the proude, wyl I take awaye, and wyl laye downe the boardyng of tyrauntes. I wyl make a mā-derer then fyne golde, and a man to be moore worthe, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Moreover, I wyl so shake the heauen, that the earthe shall remoue out of her place.

Thus shall it goe with Babilon in the wra-
the of the Lorde of Hostes in the dave of hys fearfull indignacion. And Babilon shall be as an hunted or chased doe, and as a flocke withoute a shep-ces shall not spare the chyldren. * And Babilon (that glorie of kyngdomes & beute of the Caldees honour) shall be destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shall neuer be moze inhabited, neither shall there be anye moze dwellinge there, from generation to generation.

The Arabians shall make no moountentes there, neither shall the Shephardes make their foldes there anye moze. But wyld beasts shall lye there, and the houses shall be full of great Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, and Apes shall daunce there: the lytle Oules shall crye in the palaces, one after another, and Dragons shall be in the pleasaunte parlours. And as for Babilons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes maye not be longe absente.

The Notes.

- a. That is, greuous prophece, combrance mischeffe, and heuie fortune.
- b. Some reade: lift vp the banner or standart.
- c. Some reade: hyl, and vnderstande thereby Babilon whiche (saye they) is called an hyl because of the hyghte and excedynge sumptuous buildinge thereof.
- d. He calleth the people of Persia and of Medea his debities, and bys Spauantes, because he was disposed by them to ouerthrowe the Babilonyans.
- e. Some reade: Euerie man shall be abashed toward his neighbours. That is, they shall be so astonished and amased and so destitute of counsell, that one shall loke vpon another and be confounded, maruelynge howe they came in suche trouble.
- f. That is, they shall be so sore ashamed that their faces shall be as redde as fyre.
- g. By the worlde here is signified Babilon because of the greatnesse thereof.
- h. By the dwellinge of these beasts in Babilon doeth the prophete meane, that it shall be utterly destroyed, and become desolate as a wilderness: As after in the xxxvi. c. Bellicanes, Rorches, &c. shall dwell therein.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The retourne of the people from captiuitie, The prosperite of the people of God, and aduision of their enemies. The pynde of Babilon,

But the Lorde will be merciful vnto Jacob, and will take vp Israell agayne, and sette them in their owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and gette them to the house of Jacob. They shall take the people, and carie them home with them. And the house of Israell shall haue them in possession for seruantes and maydens in the lande of the Lord. * They shall take those prisoners, whose captiues they had bene afore: and rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lorde nowe shall bring thee to reste, from trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden with all: Then shalt thou vse thy mockage vpon the kyng of Babilon, and saye: Howe happeneth it that the oppressoure leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? Doubtles the Lorde hath broken the staffe of the godlye, and the scepter of the Lordelye. Whiche when he is wrothe smitteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wonders he persecuteth them, and taketh them continuallie. And therefore the whole worlde is nowe at rest & quietnesse, and men singe for ioye.

Yea, euen the fyre trees and Cedres of Libanus reioyse at thy fall, sayinge: Howe that thou arte layd downe, there come no moore vnto to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy commynge, all myghtie men and Princes of the earthe, steppe forth before thee. All Kynges of the earth stande by fro their seates, that they maye all (one after another) syng and speake vnto thee. And thou wounded also as we: Arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell: Howthes shall be layde vnder the, & womens shall be thy couerynge.

* Howe arte thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou saye moynynge chyld: Hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, thou that (not withstandinge) dyddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne heart: I will clymbe vp into heauen, and make my seate aboue the starres of God, I will sytte vpon the glorious mounte towarde the Northe. I will clymbe vp aboue the cloudes, and will be lyke the hyghest of all. Yet dare I lase, that thou shalt be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that see the, shall narrowlye looke vpon thee, and thynke in them selues, sayinge: Is this the man, that broughte all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afraid: Is this he that made the worlde in a maner waste, and layde the cyties to the grounde, whiche let not his prisoners goe home, Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euerye one at home in hys owne palace, wyth touchyppe, and thou arte caste oute of thy graue lyke a wyldre braunche: lyke as dead mennes rayment that are hotte thozowe wyth the swerde: as they that goe downe to the stones of the depe: as a dead corse that is troden vnder fete: and arte not buryed wyth them. Euen bycause that thou haste wasted thy lande, and des troyed thy people. For the generacyn of the wycked shalbe without honoure, for euer. There shal a way be sought to destroy their chyldren, for their fathets wyckednesse: They shal not come vp a- gayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the wyldre full of castels and towne.

I wyl stande by agaynst them (say- eth the Lorde of Hostes) and roote oute the name and generacion of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and wyl geue it to the Otters, and wyl make water podes of it. And I wyl swepe them out wyth the besome of destruction, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. The Lorde of Hostes hath sworn an othe, sayinge: It shall come to passe as I haue determi- ned: and shalbe fulfilled as I haue de- signed. * The Assyrians shal be destroy- ed in my lande, and vpon my mountay- nes wyl I treade them vnder fote. Where thozowe his rocke shall come from you, and hys burthen shalbe take from your shoulders. Thys deuyte hath God taken thozowe the whole wyldre, and thus is hys hand stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of Hostes determen a thyng, who wyl disanulle it? And yf he stretche forth the hys hand, who wyl holde it in agayne?

The same yere that kynge Ahaz dyed, God threatened by Elaye on this maner. * Reioyse not (thou whole Pa- lestyna) as thoughe the rodde of hym that beatech the were broken, for out of the serpentys rote, there shall waxe a cockatrice, and the fruyte shall be a sy- nyng worme. But the poze shal fede of the best thynges, and the simple shall dwell in safety. * Thy rootes wyl I destroy wyth hunger, and it shall slaye thy rem- nante. Mourne ye portes, wepe ye cry- stes, & feare y (O whole Palestina) for there shall come fro the North a smoke whose power no man may abyde. Who shall then maintayne the messages of the Gentyles? But the Lorde stably- sheth Syon, and the poze of my people shall put their truste in hym.

The Notes.

a. By the starre is vnderstanded tyrannie, and by the receyter, domination.

b. Whyle Nabuchodonosor and his chyldren ly- ued, the people were not onely oppressed, but also kynges and princes: But when they were ones crydde out of the way, then was miserie and way- linge ended. By the wyldre he signifyeth the co- mens: and by sygetrees and Cedres, the heades and rulers, as before in the. ii. c.

c. That is, euen they that be in hell, wyl tremble when Nabuchodonosor cometh thyrder. It is figuratly spoken to the further setting out of the myschere of Nabuchodonosor.

d. He compareth the deathe of Nabuchodonosor to the fallynge of Lucifer the mornynge starre, whiche he calleth the childe of the mornynge be- cause it appeareth onelye in the mornynge. The meaninge is: No suche thyng ought to haue hap- pned vnto the, that in earth was lyke the mor- nyng starre, whiche no man can take out of hea- uen: And thou that wast so myghty, that thou destroyedst what people thou wouldest, and vnto whom it was a pastime to overthrow nations, hast receyued such measure as thou broughdest. Suche a lyke thyng is there in Ezechie. xxviii. Agaynst kynge Tyrus.

The .xv. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Moab,

Wys is the heuy burthen by- on Moab: At of* Moab was destroyed (as me thought) in the nyghte season: The wal- les of Moab perished in the nyght, and banished a waye: They wente to Baith and Dibon in y hye places, for to wepe: Moab dyd mourne frome Bebo, to Medba: * All their heades were balde, and all their berdes shauen. In their stretes were they gyrded aboute wyth sacke clothe. In all the toppes of their houses and stretes was there nothyng, but mournynge and wepyng. Helbon and Eleale cryed, that their voyce was hearde vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab bleared and cryed for be- tre sorowe of their myndes: Wo is my hearte for Moabs sake. They fledde vnto the ctyte of Zoar, whiche is lyke a fayne fruttfull bullocke, they went by to Luhith, wepyng. The waye toward Bozotaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte. The waters of Rimmon were dyed by, the grasse was withered, the herbes destroyed, and what necessarye grene

D grene thynge there was betwene. In lyke maner the thynge that was lesse them of their substance, they caried it by water to Arabye. The crye wente ouer the whole lande of Moab: from Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothynge but mournynge. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for the enemye had sente thither a bonde of men, whych as a Lyon laye a wayte for the remnaunte of the lande, and for them that were escaped.

The Notes.

a. In tymes past it was a token of mourninge, to haue the heade and clyppe the beards: a thersore sayeth the prophete, that the Moabites cut awaye their beeres, for sorowe and carefullnesse. A lyke thynge haue ye in Iere. vii. f. Cut of chine heere and cast it awaye. &c.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The destruction of Moab.

Athen sente the Lordes of the lande a man of warre, frome the rocke that lyeth toward the deserte, a vnto the hyll of the doughter Sion (for as for the doughters of Moab, they were as it had bene a tremblynge byrde, that is putte out of her neste, by the fery of Arnon) whych messauger sayde: gather your councell, come together, couer vs wyth your shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyghte doeth: hyde the chaled, and bewraye not them that are fledde, lette the persecuted Moabites dwell amonge you, be our open refuge agaynste the destroyer: for the aduer sarpe oppresseth vs, the robber vndoth vs, and the tyrant byrueth vs out of our lande. But the trone of your kyngdome is full of grace, therefore he that syteth vpon it with faythfulnesse and trueth in the house of Dauid, know the thynge, and doe hys diligence to helpe shortlye, accordyng to equite and ryghteousnes. * As for Moabs pryde (shall they answer) it is well known. And although they be excellent, proude, arrogant, and hys minded: Yet is their strengthe nothynge lyke. And therefore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, where thowowe they come al to mourne: and now that they be smytten, they take their deuyce benethe by the bycke wall, and make their complaynte.

The suburbs also of Hesebon were made waste, and the byrnes of the Gentyles hewed downe the vineyardes of Sibma, whiche were planted wyth noble grapes, and spred vnto Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the deserte whose braunches stretched their selues forth beyonde the sea. Therefore I mourned for Jazer, and for the vineyardes of Sibma with great sorowe I poured my teares vpon Hesebon and Eleale, for all their longes were layde downe, in their haruest and gatherynge of their grapes: wyth and there was gone oute of the felde and vineyardes, in so muche, that no man was glad nor longe. There went no treader into the wynepresse, their mety there was layde downe. Wherefore my bely tombled (as it hadde bene a lute) for Moabs sake, and myne inward membes, for the brickwalles sake. for it happened thus also: when Moab sawe that she was turned bysye downe: She went by an hye into her Sanctuarie, to make her prayer there, * but she myghte not be helped. Thys is the deuyce, whiche the Lorde tooke in hande at that tyme agaynste Moab. But nowe the Lorde sayeth thus: In thye yere shall the power of Moab with their pompe (whiche is greate) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hyed seruaunte. And as for the remnaunte of them, they shall be lesse then a fewe, and not rekened muche worthe.

A prophete agaynste Damascus.

This is the heuye burthen vpon Damascus: behold, Damascus shalbe no more a citie, but an heape of broken stones. The ctytes of Aroer shalbe waste: the catell shall lye there, and no man shall fraye them awaye. Ephraim shal no more be strong, and Damascus shal no more be a kyngdome. And as for the gloze of the remnaunte of the Sirians, it shalbe as the gloze of the childezen of Israel, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. At that tyme also shall the gloze of Jacob be verpe poore, and hys fatnes leane. It shall happen to them, as when one sheareth in haruest, whiche cutteth hys hand ful with the sickle, and whē one gathereth the sheaves together in the valleye, of Baphtaim, there remayneth yet some eares ouer. * As when one maketh an olyue tree, whiche syndeth but two of the olyue berpes aboue in the top, and foure of fyue in þe braunches. Thus the Lorde God of Israel hath spoken.

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto hys maker, and turne his eyes to the holpe one of Israel. And shall not turne to the aulters that are the woorkes of hys owne handes, neyther shall he loke vpon grones and ymages, whiche hys fyngers haue wrought. At the same tyme shall their stronge cities be desolate, lyke as were once the forsaken plowes and toynes, which they forsoke, for fear of the chyldezen of Israel.

So shalt thou (O Damascus) be desolate because thou hast forgotten God thy Saviour, and hast not called to remembraunce the rocke of thy strength. Wherefore thou shalt also set a fayne plante, and grafted a straunge braunche. In the daye when thou dyd-dest plante it, it was greete, and gaue soone the fruite of thy seed: But in the daye of harueste, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes and myseryes.

So be to the multitude of muche people, that rushe in lyke the sea, and to the heape of folke, that runne ouer all lyke greete waters. * For though so manye people increas as the flowynge waters, and though they be armed, yet they flee farre of, and banysh away lyke the duste with the wynde vpon an hyll, and as the whyrle wynde thozowe a stone. Though they be fearfull at sight, yet in the moynynge it is gone with them. Thys is their porcion, that doe vs harme, and heritage of the, that robbe vs.

and neyghboure, yea, one cytie agaynst another, and one kyngdom agaynst another. And Egypt shalbe choked in her selfe. When they aske counsell at their Goddes, at their Prophetes, at their Soothsayers and Witches: then wyl I brynge their counsell to noughte.

I wyl delyuer Egypt also into þ hands of greuous tuelars, and a cruell kyng shal haue the rule of them.<sup>b</sup> The water of the sea shal be drawen oute, Nilus shal synke awaye, and be dronken bp. Yea, the vndiscret Princes of zoan, the counsell of the wyle Senatoures of Pharaos, shal turne to foolynesse: those that dare boast and saye of Pharaos behalfe: I am come of wyle people, I am come of the olde regall progenye. But where are nowe thy wyle men? Let them tell thee and shewe the, what the Lorde of hostes hath taken in hande agaynst Egypte. Fooles are those Princes of zoan, and proude are the Princes of Soph: Yea, they disceaue Egypt with the nobylte of their stock.

11. Re. xxi. b

* For the Lorde hath made Egypte droncken with the spirite of erroure, and they shal vse it in all matters: Euen lyke as a droncken man goeth spe wyng aboute. For Egypte shal lacke good counsell, so that they shal not knowe what to doe, nether begynnynge nor ende, nether vpon the lande nor water. The shal the Egyptians be lyke vnto women, afrayde and astonied, at the lpytynge bp of the heade, whiche the Lord of hostes shal lpyte bp ouer them, The lande of Iuda also shal make the Egyptians afrayde, who so doeth but speake vpon it, shal put them in feare. And that because of the counsell, whiche the Lord of hostes hath deuised agaynst them. Then shal the fyue cities of Egypt speake with the Cananites tongue, and * sweare by the Lorde of hostes, and Heliopolis shalbe one of them. At the same tyme shal the Lorde of hostes haue an auter in the myddest of þ lande of Egypte, with thys tytle there by: vnto the Lorde. Thys shal be a token oz testimonye vnto the Lorde of hostes in the lande of Egypte, when they shal crye vnto hym, because of those that oppresse them: That he shal sende them a Captayne and a Sauoure to delyuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shalbe bought vnto the Lorde, and the Egyptians also shal knowe the Lorde at the same tyme: they shal do him reuerence with peaceofferings, & with meatofferings: They shal prompse him offeringes, yea, and paye him also. Thus the Lord shal synke Egypte, and heale it agayne: so shal they turne vnto the Lord, & he also shal haue mercy vpon the, & saue the. Then shal there be a comen way out of Egypte into Assyria. The Assyrians shal come into Egypte, and the Egyptians into Assyria. The Egyptians also and the Assyrians shal bothe haue one Goddes seruite. Then shal Israel with honoure be the thynde to Egypte and Assur. And the Lorde of hostes shal blesse them, sayinge: Blessed is my people of the Egyptians, Assur is þ worke of my handes, but Israel is myne heretynce.

The Notes.

a. To tyde vpon a swifte cloude is, to bisset and punishe quickely with expeditiō: as the cloudes go swiftly in the ayre from region to region.
b. The water of the sea shalbe drawen out. as Egypte (as stories shewe) receaueth no rayne forthe of the ayre, but is ouerflowed with the water Nilus at certayne tymes. xiiii. v. or. xvi. cubites highe from the grounde. For yf it increase to any lesse hight, þ countree escapeth not a darch, sayeth Solinus. And therefore by the scarcenesse & wante of water is the desolation of the lande described. Nilus is here called by diuers names, some tyme the sea, some tyme ryuers, some tyme welles, some tyme poundes, &c. For that rounde runneth vnto sondry wayes, and it is called the sea, not onely because the Hebrewes cal al congregaciō of waters the sea, generally: but also because it was of of old time a constant opinion after stories, that it hath his original beginninge from the Ocean sea. Ye may also vnderstand by the drines of Nilus, that it not ouerflowed the lande contrary to the olde accustomed maner thereof. Some had leuer haue this to be figuratiue applyed. As there be certayne waters of the gospel, whiche the holy gost geneth, so are there also þ troubleous waters of Egypt, that is, of worldly doctrine. There fore when the worde of God is ouer heard, those waters drie vp. For the holy ghoſte reprehendeth the world of sinne, and openeth and declareth the workes of darckenes. In these waters do rede & rudy growe, that is, vayne and crisyng woorkes such as are the workes of Hypocrites, which after the outwarde shewe and appareance seeme grene and freshe, but are within vayne and nought worthe.

Against Egypt and Ethiopia,

In the same yere þ Charthan came to Alood, wher Sargô the kinge of the Assyrians sent him, what tyme as he also beseged Alood, & wan it þ same seasô: the spake þ Lorde vnto Elaye the sonne of Amoz, sayinge: goe & lose of that sack cloth frô thy loynes, & put of thy shues frô thy fete. And so he dyd, goynge naked and barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruauant Elay goeth naked and barefote, it is a token and signifiyenge of the thing, that after thre yere shal come vpon Egypte & Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kyng of the Assyrians dye bothe younge & olde, as prysoners naked and barefote, out of Egypt, and Ethiopia. And shal discover the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at their wyltes ende, & ashamed one of another: the Egyptians of the Moors, and þ Moors of the Egyptians, at þ syghte of their glorie. <sup>a</sup> Moreouer they þ dwell in the fles shal see euen the same daye: Beholde, thys is oure hope, to whome we fledde to seke helpe, that we myghte be deliuered from the kyng of the Assyrians. Howe wyll we escape.

The Notes.

<sup>a</sup> Some reade: And he that dwelleth in this Ile, that is, Jerusalem and the lande of Iuda is called an Ile, because it was beset round about with enemies and wicked nacijs, as it had bene with þ seas: & therefore ought it to haue trusted to the onely helpe and ayde of God. This is the heuye burthen of the waste sea: A greuous vision was shewed vnto me, lyke as whē a storme of wynd and rayne rusheth in frome the wylder nesse, that terriblye lande. Who so maye disceane (sayde the voyce) let hym disceane: Who so maye destrope, lette hym destrope. Up Elam, besege it & Madagat, for I wyll styll all their gronynges. Wyth thys the reynes of my backe were full of payne: Panges came vpon me, as vpon a woman in her trauayle: When I herde it, I was abashed: And when I looked vp, I was afraide: myne hearte panted, I trembled for feare. The darckenesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

Pea, soone make redy the table (sayde this voyce) kepe the watche, eate and dryncke: Up ye Captaynes, take you to youre shylde, for thus the Lorde hath charged me: goe thy waye, & let a watchman, þ he maye tel what he seyth. And when he had wayted diligentlye, he sawe two horse men: the one rydinge vpon an Asse, the other vpon a Camel. And the Lyon cryed: Lorde, I haue stande waytynge all the whole daye, & haue kepte my watche all the nyghte. Wyth that came there one rydinge vpon a charet, whiche answered, & sayde: * Babilon is fallen, she is tourned vpsyde downe, and all the ymages of her Goddes are smytten to the grounde. Thys (O my felowe thessers and fanners) haue I heard of the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell, to shewe it vnto you.

The heuy burthen of Dumea.

* One of Seir cryed vnto me: watchman, what hast thou espied by night? watchman what haste thou espied by nyght? The watchman answered: The daye breaketh on, and the nyghte is comynge: If your request be earnest, the aske and come agayne.

weapen, fro the drawen swerd, from the bent bow, & fro þ great battel. for thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me, * ouer a peate shal al þ power of Cedar be gone, lyke as when the office of an hyrd seruauit goeth out: & þ remnant of þ good Archers of Cedar, shalbe very fewe: for þ Lord God of Israell hath spoken it.

The notes.

a. By the wast sea is vnderstande Babilon. It is so called, by cause of the exceeding great cruelties and tyrannye, wherewith it exercised the Jewes. Herof is there a prouerbe: Babilon is a sea of euels, and euen the wast of the sea, that is the most tempestuous and desolate place, and that is lesse possible to be sayled thowtwe.

b. By darcknes here do some vnderstande tribulation and aduersite, as before in the. v. g. If we loke, &c. it shalbe darckenes and sorowe.

The. xlii. Chapter.

A prophecy agaynst Jerusalem.

In the heuie burthen vpon the valley of visions. What hast thou there to doe, that thou clymmeest vp in to the house toppe, O thou cpye of miracles, sedicious and wylfull? Seynge, thy slaynemen are neither kylled wyth swerde, nor dead in batel: for al thy captaynes gat them to their horses from the ordinaunce, yea they are al together rydden awaye, and fledde farre of. When I perceived that, I sayde: * awaye fro me, & I may wepe bitterly. Take no labour for to comfort me, as touchynge the destruction of my people. for this is the daye of the Lord of hostes, wherin he wyl plage, treade downe, & wede out the valley of visions, & breake downe the walles, with suche a cracke, that it shall geue a lownde in the mountaynes.

I sawe the Glanites take the quyuers to carrie & to horse, & þ the walles were bare from harnesse. Thy goodlye balleyes were full of charettes, & horsemen made them soone to beseege the gates. Then was the couterpyng of Iuda put from thence, and then was sene the sege of the tymbre house. There shall ye see the cystes in the walles of the cpye of Dauid, whereof there shalbe manye. Ye shall gather together the waters of the lower pole, and tel the houses of Jerusalem, and breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a pit betwyxte the two walles of the water of the olde pole, & nothyng regarde him, & tooke it in hande, & made it. And at the same tyme shal the Lord of hostes call men to wepinge, mourninge, to baldnes & putting on of sack cloth. But they to fulfyll their lust & wylfulnes, slaughter oxen: they kill shepe, they eate coslye meate, and drinke wine, * lette vs eate and drinke, to morow we shal dye. Nevertheless when the Lord of hostes hearde of it, he sayde: Yea, yf this wickednes of yours shal be remitted, ye muste dye for it. This hathe the Lord God of hostes spoken.

Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: Goe in to the treasure of * Sobna the gouernoure, and saye vnto hym: What haste thou here to doe? and from whence comest thou: that thou hast made the a graue here? for he had caused a cosly tombe of stone to be made for himselfe, and a place to lye in to be hewen out of a rocke. Beholde, the Lord shall cast the out by violence, he wyl decke the of another fashion, and putte vpon the a straunge clothe. He shall carpe the into a farre countreye, lyke a ball with his handes. There shalt thou dye, there shall the pompe of thy charettes haue an ende: Thou billeyne of the house of the Lord: I wyl shutte the out of thyne office, and put the from thyne estate.

After this wyl I call my seruante Eliakim; the sonne of Helkiah, and arape him with thy cote, and gyde him with thy girdle, and I wil geue thy power into his hande. He shall be a father of the citezens of Jerusalem, and of the kyrede of Iuda: * I wyl also laye the kepe of Dauids house vpon his shoulders, & yf he open, no man shal shut: and yf he dos shut, no man shal open. * I wil fasten him to a nayle in the place of the moste hyghe faythfulnesse, and he shall be vpon the glorious trone of hys fathers house. They shall hange vpon him all the gloze of hys fathers house, of the children and chyldrens chyldren, all apperell small and great, al instrumentes of measure, & musike. This shal come to passe (sayeth the Lord of hostes) when the nayle that is fastened to the place of the hygheest faythfulnesse, shalbe plucked of. And when the weyght that hangeth vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and be broken in a. Iherusalem is called the valey of byssons, be cause it had so many tears, that is, prophetes and teachers in Gods worde.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

A prophete agaynste Tyus, and a promise to restore it agayne.

A heuy burthen vpon * Tyrus. Mourne ye shippes of Charlis, for she is throwen downe to the ground, and coquered of them that are come from Cethim. The indwellers of the Ilandes, the marchautes of Sidon, and they that occupped the sea (of whom thou wast full somtyme) are at a poynte. For by sea were their frutes brought vnto the,
and all maner of cozne by water. Thou wast the comen market of al people. Sidon is sorre for it, yea and the power of the sea complayneth, and sayeth: O that I had neuer traueled with chyldre, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neyther noysshed bove, nor broughte by doughter. As soone as Egypte perceaueth it, she wyll be as sorre as Tyus it selfe. So ouer the sea, mourne ye that dwel in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cytie, which hath bene of longe antiquite: whose naties dwell ing far of, commende her so greatly? Who hath deuised suche thynges vpon Tyus the croune of all cyties, whose marchaun-tes & Captaynes were the hyghest and principal of the worlde? Euen the Lorde of hostes hath deuyled it, that he maye put downe al pompe, & minishe al glorye of the worlde. So thorowe thy lande.
(O thou doughter of the sea) as men go ouer the water, * and there is not a gyftill moze.

Chus the Lorde * that remoueth the kingdomes, and hath taken in hande a-gaynst that myghtie Canaan to rote it out: hath stretched out hys hande ouer the sea, and sayde: from hence forth shalt thou make no moze myrth (O thou doughter of Sydon:) for thou shalt be put downe of the Cethens. Stande by therefore, and go where the enemye wyll carpe thee, where thou shalt also haue no rest.

Beholde (for thyne ensample). The Chaldees were suche a people, that no manne was lyke them, for they builded them: he set by his castels and palaces, and broke them downe agayne. And therfore mourne (ye shippes of the sea, for your power shalbe throwen downe.

After that, shal the lxx. yeres of Tyrus (euen as longe as their kynges life was) be forgotte. And after lxx. yeres, it shal happen to Tyus as wyth an harlot that playeth vpon a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) and go aboute the cytye, thou arte yet an vknown wenche, make pastyme wyth dyuerse balettes, wherby thou mayest come into acquayntaunce. Thus shal it happen after lxx. yeres. The Lorde shal vysit the cytye of Tyus, and it shal come agayne to her marchaundysse, and shal occuppe wyth all the kyngedomes that be in the worlde. * But all her occuppyng and wynnynge shal be halowed vnto the LORDE. For then shal they laye by nothyng behynde them nor by heapes: but the marchan-dysse of Tyus shal belonge vnto the ci-tezens of the Lorde, to the feadyng and susteynyng of the hungry, and to the clothyng of the aged.

The Notes.

a. Some reade: into Tharus. He speaketh vnto the marchauntes of Egypt and to the marchaun-tes of the Iles that they shoulde get them to Tharsus, because Tyus is destroyed.

b. He meaneth Tyus, which standeth in the sea.

The. xxiiii. Chapter.

A prophete vpon the tribulacion that shal fall vpon the worlde, because of synne.

Behold, the Lorde shal wast and plage the worlde, he shal make the face of the earth desolate, and scatre abroad the inhabitours therof. * Then shal the priest be as the people, the master as the seruaunt, & dame like the mayde the seller lyke the byer, he shal lender by vsury, lyke vnto him that borroweth vpon vsury, the creditoure, as the detter. Yea, myserably shal the worlde be wasted and cleane destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determed in him selfe.
The earth shalbe heuye and decay: The face of the earth shal perishe & fall away, the proude people of the worlde shal come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her inhabitants.

B For why they haue offended þ lawe, chaunged the ordynaunces, and made the euerlastyng testament of none effect. And therfore shal the curse deuoure the earthe: for they that dwell thereon haue synned, wherfore they shalbe bzent also, and those that remaine, shalbe very fewe. The swete wyne shal mourne, the grapes shalbe weake, and all that haue bene merie in hert, shal sygh. * The myrth of tabyettes shalbe layde downe, the chere of the topyfull shal cease, and þ pleasure of lutes shal haue an ende: there shal no more wyne be droncke to myrthe, the beere shal be bytter to them that dryncke it, the wycked cyties shal be broken downe, al houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shal there be lyft vp a crye because of wyne, all mennes chere shal banishe awaye, and all tope of the earth shal passe. Desolacyon shal remaine in the cyties, and the gates shal be smytten with wastnesse. For it shal happen vnto allandes and vnto al people,

C lyke as when a man smyteth downe the * oltyes, that are left vpon the tree: or seketh after grapes; when the wyne gathering is out. And those same (that remaine) shal lyft vp their voyce, and be gladd, & shal magnifie the glorie of the Lorde, euen from the sea, & prayse the name of þ Lord God of Israell, in the valeys and flondes. We heare songes songe to the prayse of the ryghteous, from all the endes of the worlde. Therfore I must speake: O myne vnscrutefulnesse, O my pouerte. Who is me all is full of synners, whiche offende of purpose and malice. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pyt and snare.

Ier. 48. 1. * Who so escapeth the terrible crye, shal fall into the pyt. And yf he come oute of the pyt, he shalbe taken with the snare. For the wyndowes aboue shal be opened, and the foundacyon of the earth shal moue. The earth shal geue a greate cracke, it shal haue a soore ruyne, and take an horrible fall. The earth shal stacker lyke a droncken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tente. Her myfdoes shal lye so heuy vpon her, that she must fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shal the Lorde mustre together the hye hooft aboue, and the kynnes of the worlde vpon the earth. These shal be coupled together as persons be, and shalbe shut in one ward and punished innumerable dayes. * The Moone and the Sonne shal be ashamed, when the Lord of hostes shal rule them at Ierusalem vpon the mounte Sion, before and wyth his excellent councell.

The notes

a. Priest both often signifye every man that ruleth the people, be it kynge, or prince, or other chymen officer. Ier. vi. c. And from the prophete to the priest. &c.

b. Some do vnderstande by the euerlastyng Testament, not onely that whiche was made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; but also the lawe of nature, whiche is written in oure hertes. Other vnderstande thereby the lawe of charitie. For that is no newe commaundement but a commaundement fed the beginning. The lawe of charitie is the lawe of the spire. Be that loueth his neygbbour hath fulfilled the lawe Rom. xiii. Gal. v.

The xxv. Chapter.

I thanksgyngs to God for his workes.

Q Lord, thou art my God, I wyl prayse the, & magnifie thy name: for thou bzigest maruelous thynges to passe, accordyng to thyne olde counsels, truly and steadfastly. * Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone: and of head cyties, broken walles: The places of the wicked destroyest thou out of the citie, that they shal neuer be builded agayne. Therfore the very rude people must magnifye the, & cities of the cruel heth must feare the. For þ art þ pooze mans helpe, a strength for þ headfull in his necessitye. Thou art a defence agaynst the, uil, wether, a shadow agaynst the hete. But vnto the presumptuous, thou arte lyke a stronge whyle wynde, that casteth downe the boasting of the vngodly: thou kepest men from heate, with the shadowe of the clowdes, thou cuttest of the bzaunches of tyrauntes.

Q Howeuer the Lord of hostes shal once prepare * a feast for all people vpon the hyll: A plenteous, costlye, pleasaunt * feast, of fat and well fedde bestes, of swete and moste pure thynges. vpon the * hyll shal be take awaye the side bale that hangeth before the face of all the people, and the couerynge wherewith all Gentyles are couered. * As for death, he shall bitterly consume it. * The Lorde God shall wype away the teares from all faces, and take away the confusyon of hys people thorow the whole worlde. For the Lorde hym selfe hath sayde it.

D At the same tyme shall it be sayde: lo, this is oure God in whom we put oure trust, and he * hath healed vs. Chys is the Lorde that we haue wayted for: Let vs reioyce and delite in his health. For the hande of the Lorde ceaseth vpon this hyl. But Moab shall be thershen down vnder him, like as þ straw is troden vnder fete in a dong hyl. For he shall stretch out his handes vpon him, like as a swimmer doth to swimme. And with the power of hys handes shall he cast downe hys hys pompe. As for hys stronge holdes and hys walles: he shall bowe them, caste them downe, and sell them to the grounde in to dust.

¶ The Notes

a. By the feast of fat and well fedde beastes, and of swete and most pure chynges, is betokened the anger and indignacyon of God, as the scripture both often signifieth the same, vnder the name of a cuppe. zacha. xii. a. Beholde I wyl make Ierusalem a cuppe of surfeit vnto all the people that are rounde aboute her.

b. By the hyl is meant the hyl of Syon, by which is signified the churche. There wyl the Lorde iudge, and deliuer vs from all our enemies. By the bale and couerynge, vnderstande, synne, wherewith all men are founde guilty. Romano. iii. Al men haue synned. &c. From it hath the Lorde deliuered all men whiche beleue that he hath freely done it, of his only mercy for Christes sake, and not of their deservynges. Roma. iii. d

¶ The. xvi. Chapter.

¶ A songe of the deliuerance of the people.

S Den shall thys songe be songe in the lande of Iuda. * We haue a strong cytie, the walles and þ dynaunce shall kepe vs. * Open the gates, that the good people maye go in, whiche laboureth for the trueth. And thou, which art the doer and hast þ matter in hande: shalt prouyde for peace, euen the peace that men hope for in the hope styll in the LORDE, for in the LORDE GOD is euerlastynge strength. * For why, it is he, that bynnyeth lowe the hys mynded ctyezing, and casteth downe the proude cities. He casteth them to the ground, yea, euen into the myre, that they maye be troden vnder the fete of the symple, & with the stepes of the poore. * Thou (LORD) cōsidre the path of the rightuous, whether it be ryght, whether þ way of the rightuous be ryght. Therfore (LORD) we haue a respect vnto þ way of thy iudgemētes, thy name & thy remembraunce reioyse the soule. * My soule lusteth after the al the nyght longe, and my mynde hasteth freely to the. For as soone as thy iudgemēt is knowen to the worlde, then the inhabitants of the earth letne ryghtuousnes. But the vngodly (though he haue receaued grace) yet letneth he not rightuousnesse, but in that place where he is punished, he offendeth, and feareth not the glozy of the Lorde.

Lorde, they wyl not se thyne hys hande, but they shall se it, and be confounded: when thou shalt deuoure them with the wrath of the people, and wyth the fyre of thyne enemies. But vnto vs, O Lorde, prouyde for peace: * for thou workest in vs all our workes. O Lorde oure God, though he suche Lordes haue doynynacyon vpon vs as know not the: yet graunte, that we maye hope onely in the, and kepe thy name in remembrance.

* The malycyous tyrantes when they dye, are nether in lyfe, nor in the resurrection, for thou bytest them, and rotest them out, and destroyest all the memoral of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people, thou shalt be praysed and magnified in all þ endes of the worlde. * The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersite which they complayne of, is vnto them a chastening before the. Lyke as * a wyfe with chylde (when her trauaile commeth vpon her) is ashamed, crieth, and suffreth þ paine. Euen so are we, O LORDE, in thy syght. We are wyth chylde, * we trauaile, and beate, and with the spryte we bynnyng forth health, where thorow the earth is vnderstroyed, and the inhabitants of the worlde perishe not. * But as for thy dead men and oures, that be departed, they are in lyfe and resurrection. They lye in the earth, they wake, and haue ioye: for thy dewe is a dewe of lyfe and lychte. But the place of the malicious tyrantes is fallen away. * So go my people into thy chambers, and shut the doore to thee, & * suffer not we the twyncklynge of an eye, tyl the wrath be ouerpaste. * For beholde, the Lord will go out of hys habitacion, & byset the wyckednesse of them y dwell vpon earth. He will dyscouer the bloud that he hath deuoured, he shall neuer hyde theym, that he hath murdered.

Ek. ii. of

 b. The way of the iudgements of God, is the aspyryon and the crosse that wythdraweth vs from synne: In this do the christen reioyse. Roma. 5. a. We reioyse in tribulacion. ec.
 c. By the dead here is vnderstand the ryghtuous as in the Apocalip. ixiii. c. Blessed are the dead, whiche here after dye in the Lord. They shall rise agayne to lyfe nor as y other whiche are vnyghtuous. John. 5. Dani. xii.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The prophesyeth that all reaulmes shalbe destroyed about the coming of Christ.

When the Lord with his huge, great, and long sword shall * viset Leuiathan that inuynceble serpente: euen Leuiathan that croked serpent, and shal slep y whalshye in the sea. At the same tyme shall men syng of the vyneyard of Babel. The Lord kepe it, and water it in due season. I wathe day and nyghte, that no manne breaketh into it. I beare no euyl wyl in my mynd, who wyl compell me, that I greatly forgettyng all faythfulnesse, should burne it by at once with thornes and bushes. Or who wyl enforce me to kepe or make peace: * It wyl come to this poynte, that Jacob shalbe roted agayne, and Israel shalbe grene, & beare floures, & they shall syl the whole world with their frute. Smyteth he not hys smyter, as euell as he is smytten hymself: Destropeh he not the murderers, as he is murdered. Euery man recompenseth with the measure that he receaueth: He musteth vpon his sore wynd, as vpon the dapes of extreame heate. And therefore shall the iniquite of Jacob be thus reconyled. And so shall he take away al the frute of his synnes.

As for aulter stones, he shall make them al as stones beaten to powder: the groues and Idols shall not stand. The stronge cyties shall be desolate, and the sayre cyties shall be sette lyke a wyldernes. The catell shal fede & lye there, and the shepe shall eat it by. * Their harvest shalbe byent, they wyues whiche were their bewty when they came forth: shall be despyled. * For it is a people without vnderstandynge, and therefore he, that created them, shal not fauour them: and he that made them shal not be mercysfull to them. In that tyme shall the Lord shutte from the swyfte water of Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egypte. And there shal the chyldren be chose out one by one. Then shall the great trumpet be blowen, so that those which haue bene destroyed in the Assyrians lande, and those that be scattede abrode in Egypte: shall come and worshyp the Lord at Jerusalem, vpon the holy mount.

The Notes.

- a. By the swerde of the Lord is vnderstand the word of God, and the sentence of the euyl lastyng iudge. With it is the deuyl and the power of Antichrist slayne.
 b. Leuiathan becometh here the deuyl after some expositours, althow that it properly sygnifyeth a whale as is sayde Job. xl. c. Serpentes be also becomen the deuyl, because of their craftynesse and wylnesse. Gene. iii. a. The Hebrew vnderstandeth here by Serpentes myghtie kynges and myners.

The xxviii. Chapter.

Against the pyde of Ephraim, and agaynst fals dyctes and preachers.

Woe to the crowne of pryde, to the * broncke Ephraim: to the saiding floure, to the glozy of his pope, that is vpon the toppe of the plenteous balley: whiche menne be ouerladen with wyne. Beholde, * the strength and power of the Lord shal breake into the lad on euerye syde, lyke a tempest of hayle, that beareth downe strong holdes, and lyke an horryble, myghtye & ouerflowynge water. And the proude crowne of the broncken Ephraemites, shal betreden vnder fote.

* And as for the saydynge floure, the glozy of his pompe, which is vpon the toppe of the plenteous balley: it shal happe vnto him, as to an vntimely frute be fore y harvest come. Which as soone as it is sene, is by & by deuoured, or euer to come come well in a mans hande.

And then shall the Lorde of hostes be a <sup>b</sup> ioyfull crowne, and a glayous garland vnto the remnant of hys people. Vnto the lowly, he shall be a spere of iudgemente, and vnto them that dyue away the enemyes frome the gates, he shall be a spere of strength. But they go wronge by the reason of wyne, they fall a stacker because of stronge drinke.

* Yea euen the Priestes and Prophetes them selues go amysse, they are droncken wyth wyne, and weake brayned thowrow stronge dryncke. They erre in seynge, and in iudgement they fayle.

for all tables are so ful of vomyte and fylthynesse, that no place is cleane.

What is he amonge them, that canne teache, instructe or enfourme the chyl- dren, whiche are weened from sucke or taken frome the brestes: of anye other fashyon then: * Commaunde that may be commaunded, byd that maye be bidden, forbydde that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that maye be kepte backe, here a lytle, there a lytle. * And therfore the Lorde also shall speake with lispynge lippes and wyth a straunge language vnto this people, to whō he spake afore of this maner: This shall byynge rest, ys our restefle the weery, yea this shall byynge rest. But they had no wyll to heare. And therfore the Lorde shall answer the stubbournes. (Commaund that maye be commaunded, byd that maye be bydden, forbydd that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that maye be kepte backe, here a lytle, there a lytle).

That they may go forth, fal backwarde, be byoled, smared and taken. Wherfore heare the worde of the Lorde, ye mockers y rule the Lordes people, whiche is at Jerusalem. For ye comferte poure selues thus: * Tush, death & we are at a point, and as for hell, we haue made a condy-cypion with it, that thowge there breake out any fore plage it shall not come vpon vs. for with disceate wil we escape, and with numblenes wil we defende our selues.

Therfore sayeth the LORD GOD: Beholde, * I wyll laye a stone in Syon, a greate stone, a costly & corner stone for a sure foundacyon: & who so putteth his truste in hym, shall not be confounded. Rychuousnes wyll I set vp agayne in the balaunce, and iud-gement in the weightes. * The tempest of hayle shall take awaye poure refuge, that ye haue to dyscreue wythall: and the ouerflowynge waters shall breake downe your strong holdes of dissimula-cion. Thus the appoyntment that ye haue made wyth death, shall be done awaye: and the condycyon that ye made wyth hell, shall not stande. When the great destruction goeth thowow, it shall all to treade you. It shall take you quit awaye before it. For it shall go forth early in the mornynge, and continue on lye that daye and that nyghte. And the very feare onely shall teache you, when ye heare it. For the bed shall be so narrow that a man can not lye vpon it: And the couerpyge to smal, that a man may not wynde him selfe therein. * For the Lorde shall steppe forth as he dyd vpon the mount * Berazim, and shall take on as he dyd vpon the dale of Gibeō: that he maye byynge forth the hys deuyce, & hys straunge deuyce: and fulfyll his worke, his wonderfull worcke.

And therfore make no mockes at it, that your capti- uite increase not: for I haue hearde the Lorde of hostes saye, that there shall come a soden destructio and plage vpon the whole earth.

Take hede, and heare my voyce, pondre and mercke my wordes well. Goeth not the husbande man euer in due season earnestly to his lande: He moweth and ploweth hys grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it wyth fetches or compyn. He soweth the wheate and Barly in theyr place, Milium and Rye also in theyr place. And that he maye do it ryght, his God teacheth him and sheweth hym.

For he treadeth not the fytches out with a wayne, ne- ther byyngeth he the cart here and there ouer the compyn, but he thresteth the fit-ches oute with a staple, and the compyn with a rod. As for the wheate, he gryndeth it to make breade therof. In as muche as he can not byynge it to passe

The xxxi. Chapter.

The destruction of Ierusalem. Agaynst the commaundementes of men.

Woe be vnto the O Ariel, thou cytie that * David man. Take yet some yeares, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: then shall Ariel be beseged, so that he shall be heuy and sorrowful, & shall be vnto me euen as a lyon. For I wyl laye sege to thee rounde aboute, & kepe thee in with towres, a graue by dykes agaynst thee. And thou shalt be brought low, and speake out of the earth, and thy wordes shall go humbly out of the ground. Thy voyce shall come out of the earthe, lyke the voyce of a wyche, and thy talkyng shall groane out of the myre. For the multitude of thyne<sup>a</sup> enemyes shall be like meal dust. <sup>b</sup> And the nobre of Tyrauntes shall be as the * dust that the winde taketh awayne sodenlye. Thou shalt be byspered of the Lorde of hostes with thondre, earthquake, and with a great cracke, with the whyle winde, tempest, and with the flambe of a consumyng fyre. But nowe the multitude of all the people, that wente oute agaynst Ariel: the whole hooste, the stronge holdes, and sege: is lyke a * dreame which appeareth in nyght. It is lyke as when <sup>c</sup> an hungry man dreameth that he is eatinge, and when he awaketh, he hath nothinge: lyke as when a thyrstye man dreameth that he is drynckynge, and when he awaketh, he is saynte, and his soule vnpatient.

So is the multitude of all people that mustre them selues agaynst the hill of Sion. But ye shall be at youre wyttes ende, ye shall be abashed: ye shall stacke, and reke to and fro. <sup>c</sup> Ye shall be dryncken, but not of wyne. Ye shall fall, but not thowowe drynckenes: for the Lorde shall geue you an harde slepyng spete, and holde downe youre eyes: namelye youre Prophetes and heades whyche shoulde se, them shall be coner. * And al visions shall be vnto you, as the wordes that stande in a sealed lettre, when one offereth it to a man that is learned, and sayeth: reade vs this lettre. Then he answereth: I can not reade it, for it is shut. But if it be geuen to one that is not learned, or sayd vnto him: reade this lettre: Then sayeth he: I can not reade.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: for * so muche as this people draweth nymme with their mouth, and prayseth me hyghly in their lypes (where as they hert neuertheles is farre frome, and the feare whiche they owe vnto me, & turne they to mennes lawes and doctrynes) therefore wyl I also shewe vnto this people a maruelous, terrible, and great thing. (Namely this: *) I wyl destroy the wysedome of their wise, and the vnderstandyng of their learned men shall perishe. Woe be vnto them that seke so depe, to hyde theyr ymagynacion before the Lorde, which reherse their counsels in the darknes, and say: * who seyth vs, or who knoweth vs? Which ymagynacyon of yours is euen as when the potters clay taketh aduysment, as though the worke myght saue to the workmanster: make me not, or as when an erthen vessel sayeth of the potter: he vnderstandeth not. <sup>d</sup> Se ye not that it is harde by, that Libanus shall be turned into Charimel, and that Charimel shall be taken as a wodde: Then shall deafe men vnderstand the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blynde shall see without any cloude or darknesse. The oppressed shall hold a mery feast in the Lorde, & the poore people shall resoyse in the holy one of Israel.

Then shall the furpous people cease, and the mockers shall be putte away, and all they that do wronge shall be plucked tion of Jerusalem went into Egypt.

Whe to those chynking children (saith the Lord) * which seke counsell, but not at me:
which take a webbe in hand, but not after my wyll: that they maye heape one tyme vpon another. They go downe into Egypt, and aske me no counsell, to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and comforte in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shall be your confusyon, and the comforte in the Egyptians shadowe shall be your owne shame. Your rulers haue bene at zion, & your messengers came vnto Banes. But ye shall all be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, whiche shall not bringe you strengthe or comfort, but shame and confusyon.

Your heastes haue borne burthens vpon theyr backs toward the South, thozow the way that is ful of payrl and trouble, because of the Lyon & Lyons, of the Cockatrice and Butyuge dragon.
Yea, the Mules bare your substance, and the Camels broughte your treasure vpon theyr crooked backs, vnto a people that can not helpe you.

For the Egyptians helpe shall be but bayne and losse. Therfore I tolde you also that your pryde shoulde haue an ende. * Wherefore go hence and wyte theym this in theyr tables, and note it in a booke: that it may remayne by their posterite, & be spyll kept. For it is an obscynate people; * unfaithful chyldre, children & wyl not heare the law of y Lord.

They dare saue to the Prophetes: * Intromytte your selues wyth no thyng, and vnto Sophysayers: tell vs of nothyng for to come, but speake fied-ly wordes vnto vs, and preach vs false thynges. Creade out of the waye, go oute of the path, turne the holpe one of Israell from vs. Therfore thus saith the holpe one of Israell: In as muche as ye haue caste of your bewtpe, and comforted your selues wyth power and nymbleness, and put your confydence therin: therfore shall ye haue this mys-chpese agayne for your destructyon and fall, lyke as an hye wall, that falleth because of some rift (or blos) whose breaking commeth suddenly.

Not wythstandynge ye regarde it not, but ye wyl saye: No, for thus are we constrained to lie vpon horses. And therfore shall ye lie, we muste ryde vpon swyfte beastes, and therfore your persecutours shall yet be swyfter. * A thousande of you shall lie for one, or at the most for foure, which do but onely geue you euil wordes: but tyll ye be desolate, as a shippe mast vpon an hye mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an hyl.

As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wyl helpe thee. The Lorde geueth you the bread of aduersyte, and the water of trouble. The Lorde also shall set by power of his voyce, and declare his terrible arme, with his angry countenance, yea and the flame of the consuming fyre, with earthquake, tempest of wynde, and hyle stones. Then shall the * Affirians feare also, because of the voyce of the Lorde, which shall smyte him with the rodde. And the same rodde which the Lorde wyl sende vpon him, shall moue the whole foundacyon: with trompet, with noyse of warre and batell to destroye. * for he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynnyng, yea euen for kynge also. ## The .xxxi. Chapter

The curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

Ye be vnto the that go downe in to Egypte for helpe, & trust in horses, and comforte them selues in charettes, because they be manye, and in horse men because canſe they bee luſtye and ſtrong. But they regarded not the holy one of Iſrael, and they aſke no queſtion at the Lorde. Where as he neuertheles plageth the wicked, and yet goeth not from his worde, when he ſteppeth forth, and taketh þ victoꝝ againſt the houſe hold of the ſtrawd, & agaynſt the helpe of euell doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their hozes fleſh and not ſpīte. And as ſoone as the Lorde ſtretcheth oute his hande, then ſhall the helper fall, and he that ſhoulde haue bene helped, and ſhall altogether be deſtroyed. For thus hathe the Lorde ſpoken vnto me: * Lyke as the lyon oz elyons whelp toaꝛeth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed though the multitude of the ſhepardes cry oute vpon hym, neyther abaſhed for all the heape of them: So ſhall the Lorde of hoſtes come downe from the mount of Syon, and defende hys hyll. Lyke as byꝛdes ſotte aboute theyꝝ neſtes * ſo ſhall the Lorde of hoſtes kepe, ſaue, defende and deliuer Ieruſalem. Therefoꝛe, O ye chyldꝛen of Iſrael, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue exceded in your goynge backe. * For in that daye euery man ſhall caſte oute his Idols of ſiluer and golde, whiche ye haue made with pouerſynfull handes. * Affur alſo ſhall bee ſlayne with the ſwerde, not with a mans ſwerd. A ſwerd ſhall deuoure him, but not a mans ſwerd. And he ſhall ſle to the ſlaughter, and his ſeruautes ſhall be taken pꝛſoners. He ſhall go for feare to his ſtrong holdes, and his pꝛinces ſhall ſle frome hys badg. This hathe the Lorde ſpoken, whoſe lyght burneth in Syon, and his ſpye in Ieruſalem.

The condicions of good rulers and Officers.

Holde, the kynge ſhall gouerne after the rule of rightuouſnes, and the pꝛinces ſhall rule accordyng to the balaunce of equite. He ſhall be vnto meinne, as a defence for the wynde, and as a refuge for the tempeſt, like as a riuier of water in a thurſty place, and the ſhadowe of a greate rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the ſeing ſhall not be dꝛimne, and the eares of them that heare, ſhall take dilygent hede. The hearte of the kniſſe, ſhall attayne to knowledge, and the vnparfyt tynge ſhall ſpeake playnelye and diſtinctlye. Then ſhall the nygarde be no moꝛe called gentle, nor the churle lyberall. But the churle ſhall be churlelye mynded, & his hert ſhall worke euyl, and playe the ſpocryte, and imagyn abhominacyons agaynſt God, to make the hungry leane, and to wythholde dꝛynke from þ thurſtye. Theſe are the perelous weapons of the couetous, theſe be his ſhamefull counceils: that he maye begyle the poze with diſceatfull workes, yea euen there as he ſhoulde geue ſentence wyth the poze. * But the lyberall perſon ymagineth honeſt thynges, and cometh vp wyth honeſty.

Up (ye ryche & ydle cyties,) harkē vnto my voyce. Ye careleſſe cyties, marke my wordes. After yeaꝛes and daies ſhall ye be brought in feare, O ye careleſſe cyties. For harueſt ſhall be out, & þ grape gatherynge ſhall not come. O ye richyde cyties, ye that feare no peryl, ye ſhall be abaſhed and remoued: when ye ſe the barrenneſſe, the nakedneſſe and prepaꝛynge to warre. Ye ſhall knocke vpon your bꝛeſtes, becauſe of the pleaſaunt felde, and becauſe of the frutefull bynyarde. My peoples felde ſhall bynge thornes and thꝛyſtels, for in euery houſe is volupꝛuouſneſſe: & in the cyties: wylfulneſſe. The palaces alſo ſhall be broke, and the greatye occupied cyties deſolate. The towꝛes and bulwarkes ſhall become dennes for euermoze, the pleaſure of Idoles ſhall be turned to paſture for thepe: vnto the tyme that the sperte be powzed vpon vs from aboue.

Then shall the wyldernes be a fruteful felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wodde. Then shall equite dwell in the deserte, & ryghtuousnes in a frutefull lande. * And the rewarde of ryghtuousnesse shall be peace, and hit frute rest and quietnesse for euer. * And my people shall dwell in the ynnies of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure where there is ynough in them all. And when the hable falleth, it shall fall in the wodde and in the cytie. O howe happye shal ye be, when ye shal safely sowe your seede besyde all waters and dryue thy-ther the fete of your oxe and asses.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Thermyng agaynst the Assyrians. A description of them that shall see the Lorde.

Herfore wo be vnto the (Robber) shalt not thou be robbed also: and vnto the that latest wait, as who saye there shoulde no wayte be laped for the: wo vnto the which doest hurte, * euen so shalt thou be hurt also.
And as thou layest wayte, so shalt waite be laped for the also.

Lorde be merciful vnto vs, we wait for the. Thyne armie is at a poynt to vi-set vs, * but be thou our health in tyme of trouble. Graunt that the people may ste at the anger of thy voyce, and that at thyne vpslandyng the Gentyls may be scattered abroad, and that a theyr spoyle maye be gathered, as the greshoppers are comenlye gathered together in to the pyt. Stande vp Lorde, thou that dwellest on hye: Let Sion be filled with equite & ryghtuousnesse. Let truth and faithfulnes be i hit tyme: power, health, wydd, knowledge & feare of God are hit treasure. Behold, their aungels cry without, the messangers of peace wepe bitterlye. The strekes are waste, there walketh no man therein, the appoyntement is broken, the cities are despyed, they are not regarded, & desolate earth is in heynnes. Libanus taketh it but for a spoyle, that it is betwen downe: Sa-ron is lyke a wyldernes: Safair & Char-mel are turned vpsyde downe. And therfore sayeth the Lorde. I will vp, now wil I get vp, now wil I arise. * Ye shal conquer stubble, & beare straw, & your sperte shal be the fyre, & it may consume you: and the people shal be burnt lyke lyme, & as thornes burge that are hewen of, and caste in the fyre.

Howe hearken to, ye that are fatte of howe I do with them, and consydre my gloze, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are afrayd a sodane fear-fulness is come vpon the pproctres.
What is he amonge vs (saye they) that lyfe (saye I) and speaketh the trauerses He that abhorreth to do violence and dysceate: he that kepeth his hands that he touche no rewarde: whiche stoppeth his eares, that he heare no counsell a-gainste the innocente: whiche holdeth downe his eyes, that he se no euill. He it is, that shall dwell on hye whose sau-garde shal be in the true rocke, to hym shal be geuen the righte true meate and drinke. Hys eyes shall see the kinge in his gloze: and in the wyde world, and his herte shal delpt in the feare of God.

* What shall then become of the scribe of the Senatour: what of him that teacheth chylzen. There shalt thou not se a people of a straunge tynge: to haue so diffused a language, that it maye not be vnderstande: neyther so straunge a speache but it shal be preceaued.

There shal Sion be sene, the heade cittie of our solempne feastes. There shal thyne eyes se Ierusalem that glorious habitacon: the * tabernacle that neuer shal remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be taken out wold without ende, whose coardes euerychone shall neuer cor-ted to the churche and congregacion of Chyrche.

Come ye Heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Harken y earthe and al that is therein:
thou rounde compasse and all that groweth there vpon, for the Lorde is angrye with all people, and his displeasure is kindled against all the multitude of them, to curse them, and to sle ye them. So that their flaine shalbe cast oute, and their bodyes stycke: that euen the very hilles shalbe wet with the bloude of them. * Al the starres of heauen shalbe consumed, & the heauen shall folde together like a rol, and al the star-res thereof shal fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the bynes and sygetrees. For my swerde (saith he) shalbee bathed in heauen, & shal immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, & vpon y people which I haue cursed for my vengeance.

And the Lordes swerde shalbee full of bloude, and be rusty with the farnesse and bloude of lambes and gootes. with the farnesse of the kyndneys of wethers.
For the Lorde shal kyll a greate offring in Boltra, and in the lande of Idumea.
There shall the Anticoznes falle with the Bulles, (that is with the gyauntes) & their land shalbe washed with bloud, and their grounde corrupte with fatnesse. * Unto the also (O Syon) shall come the daye of the vengeance of God, and the peare when thynne owne Judgements shalbee recompensed.
Thy cloudes shalbee turned to pytche, and thynne earth to brimstone, and there with shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched daye nor night: But smoke euer more, and so forth to lie wast. And no mā shal go thorow thy land for euer: * But Pellicanes, Storkes, great Oules, and Rauens shal haue it in possession, and dwell therein.

For God shall sprede oute the lyne of desolacyon vpon it, and wepe it with the stones of emptynes. When kinges are called vpon, there shalbe none, and all prynces shalbe awaye. Thornes shal growe in theyr palaces, nettelles and thystles in their strong holdes, that the dragons may haue theyr pleasure therin, and y they may be a court for Estrinches. Ther shal straunge visures & mostruous beastes mete one another, & the wilde kepe company together. * There shal y Lamial lye, & haue her lodginge.
There shal the hedghoge builde, digge, be there at home, and bynynge forthe his young ones. There shal the kytes come together, ech one to his lyke.

* Seke thorow the scripture of the Lorde and rede it. * There shall none of these thynges be lefte oute, there shall not one (nor suche lyke) fayle. For what his mouthe commaundeth, that same dothe his spirit gather together (or ful-fylleth.) Upon whomsoever the lot falleth, or to whome he dealeth it with the lyne: those shal possesse the enheritaunce from generacyon to generacyon, and dwell therein.

The xxxv. Chapter.

Of the tyme and kyngdome of Chyrche.

In the a deserte and wil-dernes shall reioyce, the wast ground shalbe glad,
and flourish as the lyllye.
She shall flourish pleasauntlye and be ioyfull, and euer be geuyng of thanckes more & more. For the glozpe of Libanus, the bewtpe of Charmell and Saron shalbe geuen her. These shal know the honour of the Lorde, and the maiestie of oure God. * And therfore strengthen the weake handes, and comforte the feble knees.

Saye vnto them that are of a fear-full heart: * Be of good chere, & feare not.

The Prophecye.

not. Beholde your God cometh, to take vengeance, and to rewarde, God cometh his owne selfe, and wyl deliuer you. * Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lychtened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shall the lame man leape as an herte, * and the domine mans tounge shall geue thanks.

* In the wyldernes also there shall welles spring, and foudes of water in the deserte. The drye grounde shall turne to ryuers, and the thursty to springes of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, there shall growe swete floures and grene rushes. There shall be fowles and comen stretes, thys shall be called the holpe waye. No uncleane person shall goo thorowe it, for the Lorde him selfe shall go with them that waye, and the ignoraunt shall not erre: There shall be no lpon, and no rauynge beaste shall come therein, nor be there, but men shall go there fre and safe. * And the redeemed of the Lorde shall conuerte, and come to Syon with thankesgeyunge. * Everlastinge ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnesse shall be among them. And as for all sorowe and heupnes, it shall banyshe a waye.

The notes.

a. By the deserte and wyldernes is signified the countrey of the Heathen, whiche were without grace, and without the fruite of good and be-trouthe lpyunge. psalme. cxi. d. It is a borrowd speech taken of the roughnes and unfruitfulness of the wyldernes.

b. By this leape is vnderstande the reioysing, chearefulness: and quychnes of the spirit. Cant. ii. b. is there a lyke thing, of the spouse that cometh hoppinge vpon the mountaynes. Where he here sayeth, the blynde shall see, the deafe heare, &c. He prophesyeth a manifest signe of the coming of Christ & of the calling of Gentyles and Heathen, and of the kyngdome of God in the saythfull. A mannynde was deafe to heare the heauenly doctrine of God, come to prayse him, came to mynystre vnto his neyghbours, and to preach the gospel. &c. These thinges Christ hath heald with his comynge.

c. The way of the sayntes and saythfull is here called the holpe waye.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Jerusalem is assiged by Sennacherib, in the tyme of kynge Hezekiah.

In the xlii. yere of kynge Hezekiah, came Sennacherib kynge of the Assyrians downe, to laye sege vnto al þe stronge cyties of Iuda. * And the kynge of the Assyrians sent Rabshakeh, from Lachis towarde Jerusalem, agaynst kynge Hezekiah, wth a greuous hoste, whiche set him by the condyte of the ouerpole, in the way that goeth thorow þe fullers land. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim Hezekiahs sonne the chiefe, * Sobna the scribe, and Ioah Asaphs sonne the secretary.

And Rabshakeh sayde vnto them: Tell Hezekiah, that the greates kynge of Assyria sayeth thus vnto hym: What presumption is this, that thou trustest vnto: Thou thynckest (peradventure) that thou hast counsell & power ynough to mayntene thys warre: or elles wher to trustest thou, that thou castest thy self of fro me, * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broken stafe of rede (I meane Egypte) whiche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth in to his hand and mutteth hym thorowe. Euen so is Pharaos the kynge of Egypte, vnto all them that truste in him. But yf thou wouldest saye to me: we truste in the Lord our God: A goodlye God in dede: whose hye places and altars Hezekiah toke downe, and commaunded Iuda and Jerusalem, to worshyppe onelye befoze the alter. Abode the, thou hast made a condicion w my lord the kynge of the Assyrians, that he shoulde geue the two thousand hoyses: art þe able to set men ther by? Seynge now that I canst not resist þe power of þe smallest prince, þe my Lord hath, howe darrest I truste in the charettes & horsemen of Egypt: Moreover, thinkest thou I am come downe hither, to destroye this land without the Lordes wil? The Lord sayd vnto me, goo downe into the land, that thou mayest destroy it.

Then sayde Eliakim, Sobna and Ioah vnto Rabshakeh: Speake to vs thy seruantes (we pray the) in the Assyrians language, for we vnderstande it wel: And speake not to vs in the Jewes tonge, lest the folcke heare, which lyeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabshakeh: Thyncke ye, that the kynge sente me to speake this only vnto you: hath he not sente me to them also, that lye vpon the wall: that they be not compelled to eate theyr owne donge, and dryncke theiur owne stalle with you?

And Rabshakeh shode styffe, & cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tonge, and and sayde: Nowe take hede, howe the great king of the Assyrians geueth you warnyng. Thus sayeth the kinge: Let not Hezekiah disceaue you, for he shall not be able to delpuey you. Moreouer lette not Hezekiah comferte you in the Lorde, when he sayeth: The Lord with out doute shall defende vs, and shal not geue ouer this cytpe into the handes of the kynge of the Assyrians, beleue hym not. But thus sayeth the kynge of Assyria: opteyne my fauoure, enclyne to me: so maye euery man enioye his bynepardes and sygetrees, and drynke the water of his sesterne: vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and byynge you into a lande that is lyke your owne: wherein is wheate and wyne, which is both sowne with seede, & planted w bynepardes.

Let not Hezekiah disceaue you, whē he sayeth vnto you: the Lorde shall delpuey vs.

* Hight the Goddesses of the Gentiles kepe euery mannes lande, frome the power of the kynge of the Assyrians: where is the God of Beinath and Arphad: where is the God of Sepharuaim: And who was able to defend Samaria out of my hande: Or which of all the Goddesses of the landes, hath delpueyed their countre out of my power, so ſ the Lorde shoulde delpuey Ierusalem fro my hād: vnto thys Hezekiahs messengers helde theyr tonges, and answered not one worde: for the king had charged them, that they shoulde geue him none answer. So came Eliakim Hezekiahs sonne the presidente, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah Alaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Hezekiah with rent clothes, & told him þ wordes of Rabshakeh.

C The. xxxvii. Chapter.

Hezekiah humbleth him selfe before the Lorde. The sermye of Beinnaherib is Rayne of the Angel of the Lorde: and he him selfe is kyllid of his owne sonnes.

When Hezekiah hearde that, he rent his clothes, & put on a sacke clothe, and wente into the temple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the presidente, Sobna the scribe, with the eldest preestes clothed in sacke, vnto the Prophet Elay the sonne of Amoz, and they sayde vnto hym: Thus sayeth Hezekiah: Thys is the day of trouble, of plage & of wrathe:

lyke as when a chylde commeth to the byrthe, but the woman hathe no power to byynge it forth. The Lorde thy God (no doute) hathe well consydered the wordes of Rabshakeh, whome hys lorde the kynge of the Assyrians hath sente, to despye and blaspheme the lpyunge God: with such wordes as the Lord thy God hath hearde right well. And therefore lyfte vp thy prayer for the remenaunte that yet are lefte. So the seruantes of kinge Hezekiah came to Elay.

And Elay gaue them this aunswere: Saye thus vnto your lord: thus sayeth the Lorde: Be not afrayed of the wordes that thou haste hearde, wherewith the kinge of the Assyrians seruantes haue blasphemied me. Beholde, I wyll cause a wynde go ouer him, as soone as he heareth it he shal go agayne into his countre, there wyl I destroye him with the swerde. Now when Rabshakeh returned, he founde the kynge of Assyria layinge sege to Lobnah, for he had vnderstande, that he was departed frome Lachis. for there came a rumoure, that Tharhakab kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to watre agaynst him.

And when the kynge of Assyria heard that, he sente other messengers to king Hezekiah with this commaundement: Saye thus to Hezekiah kynge of Iuda: Let not thy God disceaue the, in whome thou hopest, and sayest: Ierusalem shall not be geuen into the handes of the kynge of Assyria. for thou knowest well how the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? were the people of the Gentylls (whom my progenytours conquered) deliuered at anye time thorow the goddesses? As namelye, * Cozan, Haran, Receph, and the chyldren of Eden, which dwell at Chailat. where is the kynge of Hemah, & the kynge of Arphad, and the kynge of the cytie Sepharuaim, Ena and Auar. Nowe when Hezekiah had receaued the letter of the messengers, and read it, he went vp into the house of the Lord, and opened the lettre before the Lorde. And Hezekiah prayed before the Lorde on this manner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israell, whiche dwellest vpon

Cheru,

Ezr. xlv. c. * Cherubim. Thou arte the God, that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely hast created heauen and earth. * Enclyne thine eare Gen. i. a. Lor. ii. c. Lorde and consyde, open thine eyes, O Lorde, and se, and ponde all the wordes of Sennaherib, whiche hathe sente his embassage to blasphemie the liuing God. It is true, O Lorde, that the

D kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and landes, and caste theyr goddes in the fyre. Notwithstandinge those were no goddes, but the workes of mens handes, of wod or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Deliuert vs then, O Lorde oure God, from the handes of Sennaherib, that all kyngdomes of the earthe maye knowe, that thou onely arte the Lorde. Then saye the sonne of Amoz sente vnto Hezekiah, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: where as thou haste made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Sennaherib, this is the aunswere, that the Lorde hathe geuen concernynge hym: Despyed arte thou, and mocked, a daughter of Syon, he hathe shaken his head at the, O daughter of Jerusalem.

Isa. li. b.
Isa. xlv. b.
Isa. xlv. c.

But thou Sennaherib, * whome haste thou despyed & blasphemed? And against whome hast thou lysted by thy voyce, & exalted thy proude lokes: euen againste the holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruauntes hast blasphemed the Lord, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe: I couer the hye mountaynes, and sydes of Libanus with my horsemen. And there will I cut downe the hye Cedre trees & the sayrest fyre trees. I will by into the height of it, and into the cheifest of his tymbre woddes. If there bee no water, I will graue and drinke. And as for waters of defence, I shall dye them by with the sete of myne host. Yea (saies thou) haste thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, and broughte to passe of olde tyme? That same will I do nowe also: waste, destroye, and bring stronge cyties vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabitours shalbe lyke lame men, brought in feare and confounded. They shalbee lyke the grasse and grene herbes in the felde, lyke the haye vpon house toppes, that withereth afore it be growen by.

I know thy wayes, thy going forth and thy comynge home, yea, and thy madnesse against me. Therefore thy furiousnesse agaynst me, and thy pyde is come before me. I will put a ringe in thy nose, and a byddle byt in the chaumes of the, and turne the aboute, euen the same waye thou camest. I will geue the also this token (O Hezekiah) this yere shalte thou eate that is kepte in store, and the next yere such as groweth of him selfe, and in the thyrde yere ye shall sowe & reape, yea, ye shall plante vineyardes, & enioye the frutes therof.

And such of the house of Iuda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaunte shall take roote beneth, and bringe forth the fruite aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Jerusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Sion.

And this shall the gelousy of the Lord of hostes bynge to passe. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde, concerninge the king of the Assyrians: he shall not come in to the cytie, and shall shote no arrowe into it, there shall no sylde hurte it, neyther shall they graue aboute it. The same waye that he came, shall he retourne, and not come at this citie, sayeth the Lorde. And I will kepe and saue the cytie (sayeth he) for myne owne, and for my seruaunte Dauides sake.

* Thus the angell wente forth, and newe of the Assyrians hoste, an. c. lxxv. thousande. And when men arose by earlye (at Jerusalem:) Beholde, all laye ful of deade bodyes. So Sennaherib the kyng of the Assyrians brake by, and dwelt at Babilue. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Belrah his god, that Adramalech and Sazerah his owne sonnes newe hym with the swearde, and fledde into the land of Ararat. And Asarhadon his sonne reigned after hym.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

Hezekiah is spech vnto the death, but is yet resourued by the Lorde, and lyueth. xlv. yeares after: for whych he wryte he geueth thanks.

Not longe afore thys, was Hezekiah sicke vnto death: and the Prophete Elay the sonne of Amoz came vnto hi, and sayd: Thus comaundeth the Lorde: Set thine house in ordre: for thou must dye, and shalt not escape. Then Hezekiah turned his face toward the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remember (O Lorde) that I haue walcked before the in a treuth: a stedfast herte, and haue done the thyng that is pleasaunte to the. And Hezekiah wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Elay: Go and speake vnto Hezekiah: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth thee thys worde: I haue herde thy prayer, and consydered thy teares: behold, I wyll put fyrene peaces mo vnto thy life, and deliuer the and the cytye also, from the hande of the kynge of Assiria, for I wyll defende the cytye. And take the thys token of the Lorde, that he wyll do it, as he hath spoken: Beholde, I wyll reserue the shadowe of Ahaz diall, that now is layed out with the Sunne and bring it ten degrees backward. So the Sunne turned ten degres backward, which he was descended afore.

At thankesgeuyng, which Hezekiah kynge of Iuda wrote, when he had bene speke, and was recovered:

I thought I shoulde haue gone to the gates of hell in my beste age, and haue wanted the resydue of my yeares. I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer viset the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man among the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together, and taken awaye fro me, lyke a shepherdes cotage: my lyfe is helwen of, lyke as a weauer cutteth of his webbe.

Whyle I was yet taking my rest, he bewed me of, and made an ende of me in one daye.

I thought I would haue lyued vnto the morowe, but he bzosed my bones lyke a lyon, and made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatred I lyke a swalowe and lyke a crane, and inourned as a doue.

I lyft vp mine eyes into the heighe: O Lorde (sayd I) byolence is done vnto me, be thou swettie for me.

What shall I speake or saye, that he maye thys do: that I may lyue out all my yeares, yea, in the bytternesse of my lyfe.

Werelye (Lorde) men muste lyue in bytternesse, and al my lyfe must I passe ouer therein: for thou raysest me vp, and wakest me. But lo, I wylbee well content with this bytternes.

Neuertheles my conuersacion hath so pleased thee, that thou wouldest not make an ende of my lyfe: so that thou haste caste all my synnes behynde thy backe.

For hell prapseth not the, death doth not magnifie the.

They that go downe into a graue, praple not thy treuth: but the liuyng, yea the lyuing acknowledge the, like as I do thys daye.

The father telleth his chyldren of thy saythfulnesse.

Deliver vs (O Lorde) and we wyll singe prayes in thy house, all the dayes of oure lyfe.

And Elaye sayde: take a playster of fygges, and laye it vpon the soze, so shall it be whole.

Then sayde Hezekiah: What a great thinge is this, that I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde.

The notes.

a. Treuth for purenes, as in the 13. salm. li. b. But lo, thou haste a pleasure in the treuth. c. That is in purenes, in true and perfect rightuousnes.

b. That is, I thought I shoulde haue gone to my graue, and haue dyed in my beste age. c. The be hinc worde sygnifyeth borhe hell and a graue, pytte or dyche. That maye ye perceyue in Gene. xlii. g. where Iacob sayeth, that yf any myssfortune shulde happen vnto Ben Iamin in his Iourney in to Egypt with hys other bretheren, is gray head shoulde be brought with sorrow vnto hys graue: where the comen readeth hell, for graue. As for Hezekiah, he neither feared hell nor purgatory, as ye may wel se by that he a liuel before sayth: Remember O Lorde, that I haue walcked before the in treuth and a stedfast herte, and haue done the thinge that is pleasaunt to the: which thyng who so doeth, needeth not to feare any of those two places. Besydes that the duncen men & Sophisters them selues, whiche were (as moste leached inenue thynghe) the inuentours and fynders, yea and the verye makers of purgatorye, say that before the tyme of Christes commyng, there

The xxxix. Chapter.

Hezekiah is reproued of Elay, because he shewed his treasure vnto the Embassadors of babilon.

At the same tyme He-rodach, Baladach, Ba-ladams sonne kyng of Babylon, sent lettres & presentes to Hezekiah.
For he vnderstode how that he had bene sicke, and was recoured agayne. And * Hezekiah was glad therof, & shewed them the commodities of his treasure, of siluer, of golde, of spices and rootes, of precyous oyles, all that was in his cubbozdes and treasure houses. There was not one thinge in Hezekiahs house, and so thorow out all his kingdome, but he let them se it.

Then came Elay the Prophete to kyng Hezekiah, & said vnto hym: What haue the men sayde, from whence came they vnto the? Hezekiah answered: they came oute of a farrre countre vnto me, oute of Babylon. Elay sayde: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house?

Hezekiah answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothing in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Elay vnto Hezekiah: Understande the worde of the Lorde of hostes: * Beholde, the tyme wyl come, that euerye thyng whiche is in thyne house, and al that thy progenytours haue layd vp in stoars vnto this daye, shalbe caried to Babylon, and nothinge lefte behynde. This sayeth the Lorde.
Yea and parte of thy sonnes, that shall come of the, and whome thou shalt get, shalbe caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyngs of Baby-lons court: Then sayde Hezekiah to Elay: Nowe God prospere his owne councell, which thou haste told me. He sayd moze ouer: So that there be peace and faithfulness in my tyme.

The xl. Chapter.

The coming of St. John Baptist. The prophecy of the Apokles. The callinge of the Gentiles.

BE of good chere my people, be of good chere (saith your God) comforte Jerusalem, and tell her: that a her trauaile is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath recea-ued of the Lordes hande sufficient corecpon for all her synnes. * A voyce cryeth: Prepare the waye for the Lord in the wyldernesse, make strepghte the pathe for oure God in the deserte. Lette all valleyes be exalted, and euery moutayne and hyl be leued lowe. What so is croked, let it be made strepghte, and let the roughe places bee made playne fel-des. * For the glozy of the Lorde shall apeare, and all flesh shall se it, for why, the mouthe of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Nowe crye.
And I sayde: what shall I crye? Then spake it: * that all flesh is grasse, and þ all the bewtye therof, is as the floure of the felde. When the grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breathe of the Lorde bloweth vpon them. Res-uerthelesse whether the grasse wyther, oz the floure fade away: * Yet the word of oure God endureth for euer. Mozes ouer the voyce cried thus: * Go vp vnto the hyl (O Sion) thou that byngest good tydings, lyfte vp thy voyce with power, O thou preacher Jerusalem.
Lyfte it vp without feare, and saye ha-to the cyties of Iuda: * Beholde your God

GOD, beholde the Lorde, euen the almyghtye shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he bringeth his treasure with him, and his woiches go before him. * He shall fede his flocke lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lābes together with his arme, and carpe them in hys bosome, and shall kyndlye intreate those that beare ponge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fyst? Who hath measured heauen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earth of the worlde in thre fyggers? Who hath weped the mountaynes and hylles? Who hath reformed the mynde of the Lorde? * Or who is of his counsel to teache hym? At whome hath he asked counsel, to make him vnderstande, and to lerne hym the waye of iudgement: to teache hym science: and to instructe him in the waye of vnderstādyng. Beholde, all people are in comparisō of hym, as a droppe to a boket full, and are counted as the lesse thyng that the balaūce wepeth. Beholde, the Isles are in comparisō of hym, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Lybanus is not suffyciente to mynistre fyre for his offring, and all the beastes therof are not ynough to one sacrifice. All people in comparisō of hym are rekened as nothyng, * yea, vayne vanyte and emptynesse.

To whome then wyll ye lyken God? or what symilitude wyll ye set vp vnto hym? Shall the caruer make hym a carued ymage, and shall the golde smyth couer hym with golde, or cast him in to a fourme of syluer plates? Howe ouer shall the ymage maker (that the pooze mā whiche is dysposed, may haue some thyng to set vp also) seke out and chose a tree, that is not rottē, and carue there oute an ymage, that moueth not. Knowe ye not this? Hearde ye neuer of it? Hathe it not bene preached vnto you sence I begynnyng? Haue ye not bene enfourmed of thys, sence the foundaciō of the earth was layde: That he spreketh vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitours of I world are in comparisō of hym, but as grefe hoppers: * That he spredeth out I heauen as a couerynge, that he stretcheth them oute, as a tente to dwell in: That he bringeth I princes to nothyng, and the iudges of the earthe to dust: so that they be not planted nor sowne agayne, nether their stocke roted agayne in the earthe: for as soone as he bloweth vpon them, they wither and fade away, lyke the strawe in the whyle wynde.

To whome nowe wyll ye lyken me, and whome shall I be lyke, sayeth the holy one. Lyfte vp youre eyes on hye, and consydre. * Who hath made those thynges, whiche come oute by so greute heapes: and he can call them all by theyr names. For there is nothyng hyd vnto the greatnesse of hys power, strength, and myghte. Howe maye then Iacob thynke, or howe maye I Israel saye: My wayes are hyd from the Lorde, and my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. Knowest thou not, or haste thou not hearde, that the euerlastyng God, the Lorde whiche made all the cornes of the earthe, is nether weery nor faynte: and that hys wyse dome can not be comprehended: but that he geueth strength vnto the weery and power vnto the faynte. Chyldren are weery and faynte, and the strongest men fall: * But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shall strength be encreased, theynges shall grow vpon them: when they runne, they shall not fall: and when they go, they shall not be weery.

Of the goodnes & mercy of God towards his people.

BE still (ye Ilandes) and herken vnto me. Be stronge ye people, come hyther, and shewe your cause, we will go to the lawe together. Who raiseth vp the tulle from the risinge of the Sunne, and calleth hym to go forth: Who casteth downe the people, and subdueth the kyniges before hym: that he may throwe them al to the grounde in his swearde, and scatere them lyke stuble wth his bowe. He foloweth vpon them, and goeth safely him selfe, and commeth in no fote pathe in his fete. Who hath made, created, and called the generaciōs from the begynnyng: * Euen I the Lorde, whiche am the fyrst, and with the laste.

Behold ye Iles, that ye may feare, and ye endes of the earth, that ye maye be abashed, draw nye, and come hither. Every man hath exhorted his neyghbour, and brother, and bydden hym be stronge. The Smythe confortd the moulder, and the Ironsmyth the hammerman, sayinge: It shalbe good, that we fasten this caste worcke: and then they fastened it with nayles, that it shoulde not be moued. And thou Israel my seruauite: Jacob my electe sede of Abraham my beloued, whome I led from the endes of the earth by my hande: for I called the from farre, and sayde vnto the: Thou shalt be my seruauit: I haue chosen the, and will not caste the awaye: * be not afrayde, for I will be with the. Behold, ye goddes are of noughte, and your makinge is of noughte, but abhominacion hath chosen you. Reuertheles, * I haue waked vp one from the North, and he shall come. And another from the East, whiche shall call vpon my name, and shall come to the princes, as the Potter to his claye, and as the Potter treadeth downe the myxe. Who tolde y afore. So will we confesse and say, he is righteous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth any thyng, there is none also that heareth your wordes. Beholde, I will fynde graunte them of Sion a Ierusalem to be Euangelistes. But wher I cōspyre there is

I will make the a treadinge catte and a newe flayle, that thou mayest thresh and grynde the mountaynes, and bring the hylles to poulder. Thou shalt tanne them, and the wynde shall carpe them awaye, and the whyrle wynde shall scatter them. But thou shalt reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delyte in prayling the holpe one of Israel.

* When the thyrstie and poore seke water, and fynde none, and when theyr tounge is drye of thyrst: I geue it them sayeth the Lorde. I the God of Israel forsake them not. * I byynge forth floudes in the hylles, and welles in the playne feldeg. I turne the wyldernes to ryuers, and the drye lande to conyetes of water. I plante in y wast groude trees of Cedre, Bore, Myrre and Olyues. And in the drye I set fyre trees, Elmes, and Hawthornes together. All this do I, that they altogether maye se and marke, perceauie with their heretes and conspyre, that the hande of the Lorde maketh these thynges, and that the holpe one of Israel byyngeth them to passe. Stande at your cause (sayeth the Lorde) and byynge forth your strongest grounde, councelleth the kynge of Jacob. Let the goddes come forth them selues, and shewe vs the thynges that are paste, what they be: let them declare them vnto vs, that we maye take them to herte, and knowe them hereafter. Either, let them shewe vs thynges for to come, and tel vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shal we know, y they be goddes shew sothig, ether good or bad: so will we both knowledge y same, & tel it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of noughte, and your makinge is of noughte, but abhominacion hath chosen you. Reuertheles, * I haue waked vp one from the North, and he shall come. #### The Notes.

a. I bringe forth the fountaynes in the hylls. &c.

In hye places that be easie to se, wherunto the ryche maye soone come, wyl I prepare, not lytel welles, but great fountaynes of holy doctrine: and in playne felde and lowe places, spyrges and fountaynes: that the lame or mouthfull shall have no excuse, but that all the churche may come to the worde of lyfe.

b. I fume the wyldernes in to ryuers. &c. That is: I make the doctrine of truch to generall and for alye to all men, that wher as were before waste wyldernes (by whiche vnderstande the erreours of the Beatchen wherwith they haue made all vnfruitfull: and dyce) shal now be by the grace of the holy ghost, be ryuers of the water of verite. Wher all was ful of Idolatre, of abhominacion and of synckynge erreours: there shal the heres of the chosen be watered with godlye wysdome, thowge the gospel, and gladd tydynges: and shal be indued with fayth, wherby they maye bothe profyt them selues and other: and so shal they be fruitfull. Wyldernes is often thus taken, as before in the. xlv. a.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The conyng of Chast and his baptyme.

Behold now therfore, * this is my seruante whome I wil kepe to my selfe: myne electe, In whome my soule shal be pacified. I wyll geue him my spirite, that he maye shewe forth the iudgements and equyte amonge the Gentyles. He shall not be an outcrysper, nor an hye mynded person. His voyce shall not be harde in the stretes. A blessed rede shal he not breake, & the smokynge flaxe shal he not quenche: but faithfull ye and truly shal he geue iudgemente. He shal nether be ouersene nor haspye, that he maye restore righteousnes vnto þe earth: and the Gentiles also shall kepe his lawes. * For thus sayeth God the Lorde vnto him (euen he þe made the heauens, and spred them abroad and set forth the earth with her increase: whiche geueth breath vnto the people that is in it, and to them that dwel therein.) I the Lorde haue called the by righteousnesse, and led the by the hande. * Therfore wyll I also defende the, and geue the for a conyng of the people, and to be þe light of the Gentyles. That thou maist open the eyes of the blinde, * let our the prysoners, and them that lyt in darckenesse, out of þe donges house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lorde, * which geue my power to none other, nether myne honoure to the Goddes: shew you these newe tydynges, and tell you them or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

* Synge therfore vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thanckes geuyng, blowe out his prayse vnto þe ende of þe worlde. They that be vpon the sea, and all that is therein, prayse him, the Isles and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernes with her cityes lyfte vp her voyce, the townes that be also in Cedar. Let them be glad that lyt vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hye mountaynes: ascribyng a l mightyness vnto the Lorde, and magnifyng hym amonge the Gentyles. The Lorde shall come forth as a gyaunte, and take a stomacke to hym lyke as a freshe man of warre. He shal roare and crye, and ouercome his enemyes.

I haue longe holden my peace (saith the Lorde) shoulde I therfore be stil, and kepe silence for euer? I wyll crye lyke a traueylng woman, and once, wil I destroye, and deuoure. I wyll make waste bothe mountayne and hyll, and dyce vp euery grene thyng that groweth thereon. I wyll dyce vp the fountaynes of water, and drynke vp the ryuers. I wil bring the blinde in to a strete, that they knowe noi: and lede them in to a fote path, that they are ignoraunte in. I shall make darckenesse lyghte before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyghte. These thynges wil I do, and not forget them. * And therfore let them conuerte, and be ashamed earnestlye, þe hope in Idoles, and saue to fashyoned ymages: ye are oure goddes.

Hearce, O ye deafe men, and sharpen your sightes to se (O ye blynde, *) But who is blynde, then my seruante? O so deafe, as my messengers, whome I sente vnto them: for who is so blynde as my people, and they that haue þe rule of them? They are lyke, as yf thou vnderstodest muche, and keptest nothing: or yf one herde well, but were not obedyente. The Lorde be mercyfull vnto them for his righteousnesse sake, that his word might be magnified & praised.

But it is a myscheuous and wycked people. Theit younge men belonge all to the snare, and shalbe put into pylson houses. * They shalbe carped awaye captiue, and no man shal losse them.

They shalbe trodden vnder fote, and no man shal labour to byng the againe.

* But who is he amoge you, that poudreth this in hys mynde, that considreth it, and taketh it for a warnynge in time to come?

* Who suffred Jacob to be trodden vnder fote, and Israel to be spoyled? Dyd not the Lorde? Now haue we synned againt him, and haue had no delite to walke in his wayes, nether bene obedyent vnto his lawe. Therefore hath he poured vpon vs hys wrathfull displeasure, and stronge batell, which maketh vs to haue to do on euery syde, yet wyl we not vnderstande: He burneth vs vp, yet syncketh it not in to ouerbertes.

a. Messaungers. He meaneth the hye prieskes, and those had cure of the people. Those shoulde haue taughte the other, but they were blinded of all, as Christ declarcth in the gospel. Such there be at al tymes, and shalbe vnto the worldes ende.

The. xliii. Chapter.

God promyseth to sende his Christ, whiche shal deliure his people, he forgoeth synnes for his owne sake.

But now, the Lorde that made the Jacob, and he that fashyoned the Israel, sayeth thus: * Feare not, for I wyl defende the. * I haue called the by name, thou arte myne owne.

* When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the strouge floudes shoulde not plucke the awaye. * When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kinde vpon the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy Sauoure. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Assyrians and the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my syght, and because I set by the, and loued the. I pyllid all men for the, and deliuered vp all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was with the. * I wyl bynge thy sede from the East, and gather the together from the West. I wyl saue to the North, let go. And to the Southe, kepe not backe: * but bring me my sonnes from farre, & my daughters from the endes of the worlde: Namely, all those that be called after my name: for them haue I created, fashyoned, and made for myne honoure.

* Bynge forth that people, whether they haue eyes or be blynde, deafe or haue eares. * All nations shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge ponder goddes shal declare suche thynges, and tel vs what is to come? Let them bynge thei wytnesses, so shall they be fre: for then men shal heare it, and saye, it is trueth. But I bynge you wytnesses (sayeth the Lorde) euen those that are my seruantes, who I haue chosen: to the intente that ye myghte be certifyed and geue me faith, full credence: yea and to conspyde, that I am he, before whome there was neuer any God, and that there shalbe none after me. I am onely the Lorde, * and without me is there no Sanyoure. I geue warnynge, I make whole, I teach you that there shoulde be no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde muste ye beare me your selues (sayeth the Lorde) that I am God. And euen he au I from the begynnyng, * and there is none that can take any thyng out of my hande. And what I do can no man chaunge.

Thus sayeth the Lorde the holy one of Israel your redemer: * For your sake I wyl sende to Babelon, & bynge all the strongest of them from thence: Namely, the Chaldees that doost them of their hyppes: Euen I the Lorde your holy one whiche haue made Israel: and am your kynge. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde, * euen he that maketh a waye in the sea, and a footpath in the myghtye waters: whiche * byngeth forth the charrettes and hoxles, the host and the pomen, that they maye sal a slop and neuer vyle, and be extincte, like as towne is quenched.

Ye remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde nothyng that is past: * Therefore beholde, I shall make a new thyng, and whetseps shall it appeare: ye shall well knowe it, I tolde it you afore, but I wil tel it you againe. I wil make stretes in y desert, & cytyes of

a. Therefore beholde, I shall make a newe chynge et. I meaneth that he wyl forsake the Jewes whiche were his owne people, for their offences: and cal the Gentyles I were Idolaters, whome he vnderstandeth by the deserte and wyldernes:
as before in the. xxxv. a. and. xli. e.

b. The wyld beastes shal worshyppe me the dragon. et. Under the name of these beastes signifyeth he also the Heathen, whiche were wyld, rude and beastly, concerning godly knowledge.
These sayeth he that he wyl tame by the preaching of the gospel (whiche chynge he signifyeth by waters and streames) so that they shal not here after do hurte in the churche, but shal put ruled with the lawe of charitie.

c. To shewe forth the prayse of the Lord, is, to preache the redemption of synnes, and the deluerance from death and hell, and the geuynge of euerlastynge lyfe by the mercede of God, for Chris-

For the Jewes (whiche are signified by Jacob) woulde not do it, but put their confydence in keedyd neuer set great lyfe by them, nor great lyfe rethe saythe and the deuotion of the geuers was awaye. The hope of thy burnt offerynges broughtest thou not vnto me, nether dydest thou glorifie me with thy sacrifices, but dydest onely sacrifice thyne owne superstitions. I compelled the not to worshyp me with thyne offerynges, but because thou so redely offeddest suche thynges vnto Idoles after the maner of the Heathen, I commaunded I they shoulde not be offred vnto other gods:

Lorde, and geue hym selfe vnder þ name of Israel.

Boreouer, thus hath the Lord spoken: euen the Kyng of Israel, and hys auenger, the Lorde of Hostes: * I am the fyrste and the laste, and without me is there no God. For what is he, that e-uer was lyke me, whiche am from euer, lastyng. Let him shewe his name, and do where thowme he maye be lykened vnto me. Let him tel you for the planely thynges, that are passe and for to come:
yea, and þ without any feare or stoppe.
For haue not I euer tolde you hyther, to, and warned you? Ye can beate me recorde youre selues. Is there any god excepte me, or any maker, that I should not knowe hym.

Wherefore all caruers of Idoles are but bayne, and their labour losse. They musse beate recorde them selues, that (sepyng they can nether se nor vnderstande) they shalbe confounded. * Who shoulde nowe make a God, or fashyon an Idole, that is profitable for nothyng.
* Beholde, all the felowshyppe of them must be brought to confusio. Let al the workemasters of them come and stande together from amonge them: they muste be abashed & confounded one with another. The smythe taketh pyon, and tempereth it with hoate coales, and fashy-neth it with hammers, and maketh it with all the strength of his armes: yea, sometyme he is saynte for very hunger, and so thurstye, that he hath no more power. * The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh measure of þ tymbre: & spy-deth for the hys line: he marketh it with some colour: he playneth it, he ruleth it, and squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man, and accordyng to the bewtpe of a man: that it maye stande in the temple.

Boreouer, he goeth oute to helme downe Cedre trees: he bynggeth home Elmes and Okes, and other tymbre of the wod. Or els the fyre trees whiche he planted hym selfe, and suche as the rayne hath swelled, whiche wod serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth him selfe withal: he maketh a fire of it to bake bread. And afterwarde maketh a God therof, to honour it: and an Idole to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre, with another he rosteth fleshe, that he maye eate coste hys belve full: with the thyrde he warmeth hym selfe, and sayeth: I ha, I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the resydue he maketh hym a God, and an Idole for hym selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshypeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayeth: deliuer me, for thou arte my God.

* Yet men nether consydre nor vnderstande, because their eyes are stopped, that they can not se: and their her-tes, that they can not perceaue. They poundre not in their myndes, for they haue nether knowledge nor vnderstandige, to thyncke thus: I haue bryte one pece in þ fyre: I haue baked bread with the coales therof, I haue roasted fleshe with all, and eaten it: Shall I nowe of the resydue make an abhomy nation, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wod? The keepyng of duste, and foly-nesse of herte hath turned them a syde:
so that none of them can haue a fee conscience to thyncke: maye not I erre?

Consydre this (O Jacob and Israel) *
For I art my seruaunte. I haue made the that

I ppye them awaye lyke the cloude, and thy synnes as the mist. Turne the agayne vnto me, and I will delyuer the.
Be glad ye heauens, whome þ Lord hath made, let al that is here beneth vp on the earth, be ioyfull. Retoyse ye mountaynes and woddes, with al þ trees that are in you: for the Lorde shal redeme Jacob, and shewe his gloire vpo Israel. For thus sayeth the Lorde thy redemer, euē he that fashioned the from thy mothers wombe: * I am the Lorde, whiche do all thynges my selfe alone. I only haue spredde oute the heauens, and I only haue layde the foundaciō of the earth. I destroye the tokens of the witches, & make the Soothsayers go wroꝝg.
As for the wyse, I turne them backe: warde, and make theyr conynge fo-lyshnesse.

But I set vp the purpose of my ser-uautes, and fulfylld the counceyl of my messengers. I saye to Ierusalem: turne agayne: And to the ciities of Iuda, be ye buylded agayne: and I repayre their decayed places. I saye to the grounde: be drye. And I drye vp thy water foun-
tes. I saye to Cypus: thou arte myne herdman: so that he shal fulfyll all thin-ges after my wyl. I saye to Ierusalem: be thou buylded, and to the temple: be thou faste grounded.

The Notes.

a. For I shal powre waters vpon the. &c. By the water and ryuers, vnderstande the grace of god:
and by the drie grounde and the thyrste, the gentiles and heathen, whiche had not bene rylled and watered with the worde of God. Suche a lyhe sentenc is there before in the. lliii. c. I will make freates in the desert. &c.

b. One will saye. &c. As who shoulde saye: here and there, and all the worlde ouer are therof the Lordes people, yea, euē amongst the heathen.

c. Let the christen here note howe lyuelye þ mo-phete payureth oute the vanitie of ymages. For it is to be feared that oure supersticion, concei-nyng suche thynges, passeth and exceedeth þ su-persticion of the Jewes. Ones euident it is, that the Jewes in oure tyme can in no wyse be perswaded to become Christen, so longe as we fall dolpne and kucle before ymages. Their answer is, that they and we bothe (yf we be of GOD) shoulde in no condicion do any thyng that is openly and in so many places forbydden of God.

The Turkes & Saracenes also moche vs therfore. The honour of God (saye they, and truely it is)ought we to seke, & to speke by his worde: and not to adde thereto, nor take awaye, neither to swaue to the ryght hande or to the lefte: but truely to stande by that whiche is commaunded, and forsake that whiche is forbydden. God graunte vs Christen a better trade and conversation of lyfynge, then that we shoulde with oure example be an offence either to Jew or Saracen, and an occasyon to kepe them from the faythe of Christe: And geue the symple, eyes to se and perceyue the falsheed of the suttel, whiche for lurre augment their byndnes, and exhorde the to such supersticion. So be it.

d. That is their preachynge where with they counsell the people.

The. xlv. Chapter.

The delyneraunce of the people by Cyrus. The cōmyng of Christ and callynge of the Gentyles.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto I Cyrus his anoynted, whō he ledeth by the ryght hāde: that the people maye fall downe before hym: * I will lowse the gyrdle of kynge: that they shal open the gates before thy face, and not to shut their dor-res. I will go before the, and make the croked streyght, I shal breake the bra-sen doores, and burste the yron barres. I shal geue thee the hyd treasure and the thyng whiche is secretlye kepte: that thou mayest knowe, that I the God of Israel haue called þ by thy name: * and that for Jacob my seruautes sake, and for Israel my chōsen. For I called the by thy name, & ordened the or euer thou knewest me: * Euen I the Lorde, before whō there is none other: for without me there is no god. * I haue prepared þ or euer þ knewest me: þ it might be knowē from the ryllynge of the sunne to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothyng withoute me. For I am þ Lord, and there is els none. It is I þ created the light & darknes, I make peace and trouble: yea, euē I the Lorde do al these thynges. * The heauens aboue shal droppe downe, and the cloude shal rayne ryghteousnes. The earth shal open it selfe, and bynge for the healtie, and therby shal righteoulnes flopye.
Euen I the Lorde shal byng it to passe.

* Wo be vnto hym that chydeth with hys maker, the pottherde with the potter: Sayeth the claye to the potter:
What makest thou? or thy worcke serueth for nothinge? Wo be vnto him, that sayeth to his father: Why begetteth thou? And to his mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayeth the Lorde, euē the holy one and maker of Israel: Aske me of thynges for to come, concernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraunce.

sprede foz the heauen, and geuen a commaundement foz al the host therof. I shall wake him vp with ryghteounesse, and order al hys wayes. * He shall buijde my cytie, and let oute my prisoners: and that nether foz gyfte nor rewardes, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes.

The Lorde hathe sayde mozeouer:
The occupiers of Egypt, the marchaun-tes of the Moziars and Sabres, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shall be thyne, they shall folowe the, and go with cheynes vpon their sete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplication vnto the. foz God (without whom there is none other God) shall be w the.
* Howe profounde arte thou O God, thou God & Sauoure of Israel. Confounded be ye, and put to dyshonoure:
go hence together with shame, al ye that be workemasters of erreure: (that is worshyppers of Idols.) But Israell shall be saued in the Lorde, which is the euerlastyng saluacion: They shall not come to shame nor confusion, worlde without ende.

fz thus sayeth the Lorde: * eue he that created heauen, the God that made the earthe, that fashioned it, and set it fozth: I haue not made it foz noughte, but I made it to be enhabited: Euen I the Lord, without whom there is none ther in darcke places of the earthe. It is not foz noughte, that I said vnto the sede of Iacob: seke me. I am the Lord, whiche when I speake, declareth p this that is ryghteous and true. Let the be gathered and come together, let them drawe nye hyther, that are escaped of the people: * Haue they any vnderstandyng, that set vp the stockes of their Idols, and praye vnto a God, that can not helpe them: Let men drawe nye, let them come hyther, and aske counsel one

The prophete sayeth that hyge Cyrus maye come, and helpe the people of Israel, vnder Cyrus the kynge of Persia, and vnder Israel & Chri-ste. As though he shoulde saye: would God the heuenly powers would so geue their grace, as the earthly would not refuse to receyue it: so here after our heauen be not of brasse, for oure synnes sake. Deuter. xxxiii. b. but that by goddes grace, the raine of saluacion would fall on vs, & ryghteousnes droppe downe from heauen, to make our herdes fertile and fructifull: that Christ oure sauoure, whiche is the ryghteousnes of the chosen, wolde come forth of the earthe, and bring forth the blossomes of saluacion. This pericion dothe the Lorde promise to performe, sayinge: Eue I the Lorde shall byngne it to passe.

Consider this wel, and be ashamed. Go into your owne felues (O ye rugges). Remembre the things which are passe, sence the beginning of the world: That I am God, and that there is els no God, yea, and that there is nothinge lyke vnto me. In the begynnyng of a thinge, I shewe the ende therof: And I tel before, thinges that are not yet come to passe. With one worde is my deuple accomplished, and fulfilleth al my pleasure. * I call a byrde oute of the East, and all that I take in hande, oute of farre countreys, as soone as I commaunde, I byrge it hither: As soone as I thynke to deuple a thynge, I doe it.

The Notes.

a. Bel and Babel were poples of the Babilonians. These sayeth the prophet shalbe ouerthrowen by the hoste of Cyrus.

b. To go in to them felues, is, to take good aduysment and cal to remembrance.

c. He meaneth byrge Cyrus, which shoulde come swiftlye as a byrde flyeth & destroye Babilon, & set the Israelites at libertye. He shoulde fulfyll that whiche the Lorde had deuyled and decreed. In him is figured Christ, which with the lpyghte of his word purgeth the whole world of errorres and pholacrye, and settyth the consciences at peace and libertye. He flyeth swiftlye of the east, that is, out of heauen: wherupon he is called the daye springe from on hye. Luke. i. g.

The. xlvii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst Babilon.

BUt as for thee (O daughter thou Virgin Babilon.) Thou shalt lye in the duste, thou shalt lye vpon the grounde, and not in a trone (O thou mayden of Chaldea) thou shalt no more be called tender and pleasaunte. Thou shalt byrge forth the querne and grinde wele, put downe thy stomacher, make bare thy knees, and shalt wade through the water ryuers. * Thy name shall be discouered, and thy prynces shalbe seene. For I wyll auenge me of the, and no man shall lette me: Sayeth our redeemer, which is called the Lorde of hostes, the holy one of Israell.

Sitte still, holde thy tongue, and gette the in to some darcke corner, O daughter Chaldea, for thou shalt no more be called Lady of kyngdomes. I was so wrothe with my people, that I punished myne inheritance, and gaue them into thy power. * Auer the lesse, thou sheweddest them no mercye, but euen the verye aged men of them, byddest & oppresse right soore with thy yock, and thou thoughtest thus. I shall be Ladye for euer. And beside all that, thou hast not regarded these thynges, neyther caste what shoulde come after. Heare nowe therfore, thou wyful, that sittest so carelesse, and speakest thus in thyne hearte: * I am alone, and without me there is none: I shall neuer be wydowe, nor desolate agayne. And yet bothe these thynges shall come to thee vpon one daye in the twinklyng of an eye. * Namelye wydowehead and desolacion. They shall myghtelye fall vpon thee, for the multitude of thy witches, and for the greates heape of thy conjurers. For thou hast comforted thy selfe in thy disceatfulness, and hast sayde: * No man seeth me. Thyne owne wyfedom and conynge hath disceaued the. In that thou hast sayde: I am alone, and without me there is none, therfore shall trouble come vpon the, and thou shalt not knowe from whence it shall aryse. Mischefe shall fall vpon the, whiche thou shalt not be able to put of. A soden miserte shall come vpon the, or euer thou be aware.

Nowe goe to thy conjurers, and to the multitude of thy witches, (whome thou hast bene acquaynted withall frome thy yowthe) yf they maye helpe the, or strengthen thee: Thou hast hitherto had manie councelles of them, so let the heauygalers and beholders of the starres come on nowe and deliuer the: Yea, and let them shewe, when these newe thynges shall come vpon the. a. To syt in the daskis, to be brought lowe, to be poorly arayde and desked, to sit without pompe, and to fall from her estate and degre, as it is said Iona. iii. r. The prophet here describeth the destruction of Babilon vnder the figure of a proude quene which was deliuouslye & verryly brought by, and after fell into extreme pouerte, miserie, and wretchednes.

The xlviii. Chapter.

The prophesie of the Jewes is reuolued. The Lorde alone will be worshipped, whiche hath chosen vs, and whiche succoureth vs for hys owne sake.

Hearke this, O thou house of Jacob: Ye that are called by the name of Israel, and are oute of one stocke with Iuda: whiche swere by the name of the Lorde, and beare witnesse by the God of Israel (but not with truely and ryghte) which are called * free men of the holy citie, as they y loke for confor in the God of Israel, * whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

The thinges that I shewed you euer sence the beginninge: haue I not broughte them to passe, immediatlye as they came oute of my mouthe, and declared them. And they are come. Howe be it I knewe that thou arte obstatinate, and that thyne necke hath an yron beyne, & that thy browe is of bras. Neuertheles I haue euer sence the beginninge shewed thee of thinges for to come, and declared them vnto the, or euer they came to passe: That thou shouldest not saye: Myne Idoll hath done it, my carued or caste ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consyder all these thynges whether it was ye that prophesied them: But as for me, I tolde the before at the beginninge, newe and secrete thinges, that thou knewest not of: * And some done nowe not of olde tyme, whereof thou neuer heardest before they were brought to passe: That thou canste not saye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be some whereof thou haste neither heard nor knowen, neyther haue they bene opened vnto thyne eares as yet tyme. For I knew that thou wouldest malyciouslye offende, therefore haue I called the a trangressoure, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my names sake, I haue withdrawen my wrathe, and for myne honoures sake I haue quensene the, so that I haue not rooted the oute.

Behold, I haue pouerged the, and not for inoneye. * I haue chosen the in the fyre of pouerte, & that onely for myne owne sake, for I geue myne honoure to none other, that thou shouldest not despise me. Herken vnto me O Jacob, and Israel whom I haue called. I am euen he that is, I am the fyrste and the laste. My hande is the foundacion of the earthe, and my right hande spanneth ouer the heauens. As soone as I called them they were there. Gather you all together, and herken: whyche of ponder Goddes hath declared this, that the Lorde will doe by the kynge of Babilon, (whome he loueth, and fauoureth) & by y Chaldee his arme: I my self alone haue told you thys before. Yea, I shall call hym and bynge hym forth, and geue him a prosperous iourneye. Come nye and heare this: haue I spoken anye thyng darckelye sence the beginninge: when a thinge beginneth, I am there.

Wherefore the Lorde God with his spirite hath sente me, and thus sayeth the Lorde God thyne auenger, the holpe one of Israel: * I am the Lorde thy God, whiche teacheth the profitable thynges, and leade thee the waye, that thou shouldest goe. Yf thou wylte nome regarde my commaundemente, thy welthines shalbe as the water streame: and thy righteousness as the waues flowig in the sea. Thy seede shalbe lyke as the sade in the sea, and y fruite of thy body, lyke the grauell stones thereof: Thy name shall not be rooted oute, nor be stroped before me. * Yeshall goe awaye frome Babilon, and escape the Chaldee with a merie boyce. Thys shall be spoken of, declared abroad, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde: so that it shall be sayde: The Lorde hath defended hys seruaunte Jacob, that they suffred no thurst, when they tra-

b. Some reade: Beholde, I haue purified the: but not as silver: I haue chosen the out of the furnes sake haue I done this: For lyke whome woulde they polure me: Truly I wyll not geue my glorie to anye other: Hecken. &c. The same expound it thus. I woulde not suffer the wholy to perishe: for yf I had proued and purified the as gold and silver is proued and purified, from which al maner of dross is cleanted, these woulde nothynge haue remained in the: but yf fewe, yea, none shuld haue bene saued. But I brought the vnder, & proued the in the fourncelle of affliction, that is, I wapped the in captiuite and bondage in Egipt, from which I afterwarde deliuered the. And this haue I done for myne owne sake, that is, onely for myne owne name and gloire, of myne owne

The. xlii. Chapter.

Thyke shall gather together al nations be they ne uer so farre of.

* Yhesu, hecken vnto me, and take hede ye people from satre: The Lorde hath called me fro my byrth, and made mention of my name fro

my mothers wombe: * He hath made my mouthe: lyke a sharpe swerde, vnder the shadowe of his hande hath he defended me, and hyd me in his quiete, as a good arrowe, and sayde vnto me: Thou arte my seruaunte Israell, * I wyll be honoured in thee. Then answered I: I shall lese my labour, I shall spende my strengthe in bayne. Neuer-theless, I wyll commit my cause and my woorkes vnto the Lorde my God.
And now sayeth the Lorde, euen he that fashioned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruaunte, that I maye bring

Jacob agayne vnto hym: Howe be it, Israell wyll not be gathered vnto him agayne. In whole spghte I am great, whiche also is my Lorde, my God and my strengthe. Lette it be but a small thyng, that thou arte my seruaunte, to set vp the kindredes of Jacob, and to restore the destruction of Israell: * yf I make the not also the lghte of the Gentiles, that thou mayst be my health vnto the ende of the worlde.

Howeouer thus sayeth the Lorde the auenger and holpe one of Israell, bycause of the abhorryng and despisynge amonge the Gentiles, concer-ninge the seruaunte of all them that beate rule: kynges and prynces shal se, and arise and worshyp, bycause of the Lorde that he is saythful: and bycause of the holpe one of Israel, whiche hath chosen the.

And thus sayeth the Lorde: * In the tyme apoynted wyll I be presente with the. * And in the houre of healthe wyll I helpe the, & deliuer the. I wyll make the a pledge for the people, so that thou shalte helpe vp the earthe agayne, and chalenge agayne the scatered he-ritages: * That thou mayest say to the prisoners: Go forth, and to them that are in darckenesse: come into the lght, that they maye fede in the hye wayes, and gette their lpyng in all places.
* There shal neither hungre nor thurst, heate nor Sunne hurte them. For he that sauoureth them, shal leade them, and geue them dryncke of the springe welles. I wyll make wayes vpon al my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shal be exalted. And beholde, they shall come frome satre: Lo, some frome the North and Weste, some frome the Southe.
* Reioyse ye heauens, and singe pray-ses thou earthe: Talke of lope ye hylles, for God wyll comforte his people, and haue mercye vpon hym, that be in trouble.

Then shall Syon saye. * God hath forsaken me, and the Lorde hath forgotten me. * Doeth a wife forget the childe of her wombe, and the sonne whom she hathe borne? And thoughe she doe forget, yet wyll not I forget the. Behold, I haue written the vp vpon my handes,

As truelpye as I liue (sayeth the Lorde) thou shalt put them all vpon thee, as an apparell, and gyde them to thee, as a vyde doeth her Jewelles. As for thy lande that lyeth desolate, wasted and destroyed: It shall be to narrowe for them, that shall dwell in it. And they that wolde deuour the, shall be farre awaye. <sup>c</sup> Then the chyldre whome the baren shall bynge forth vnto thee, shall saye in thyne eare: this place is to narrowe, lyfte nye together, that I maye haue room. Then shalt thou thinke by thy selfe: Who hath begotten me these? Seynge I am baren and alone, a captiue and an outcaste: And who hath nourished them by for me? I am desolate and alone, but frome whence come these?

And therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wil stretche oute myne hande to the Gentyles, and sette by my token to the people. They shall bynge the thy sonnes in their lappes, and carrie thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kinges shall be thy nouryng fathers, and Quenes shall be thy nouryng mothers. They shall fall before the wyth their faces flat vpon the earthe, and lycke by the duste of thy feete: That thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lord. * And who so putteth hys truste in me, shall not be confounded. Who spoyleth the gyaunte of hys praye? Or who taketh the prysoner frome the myghtye? And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: The prisoners shall be taken from the gyaunte, and the spoyle deliuered from the violent: For I will maynteyne thy cause agaynst thine aduersaries, and saue thy sonnes. And will fede thyne enemyes wyth their owne flesh, and make them drinke of their owne bloude, as of swete wine. And all fleshe shall knowe (O Iacob) that I am the Lorde thy Sauoure, and stronge auenger.

He hath geuen me the spirite, of sharpe and pythie speache, so that my wordes shall cut a sonder (as it were) the heartes of the chosen whiche heare me, and bring them to repentance, and declare the offences of the wicked to be without excuse. This doeth the spirite of prophete of true preachinge of the worde. Apoc. xix. c. c. Dothe a wife forget the childe of her wombe. & cetera. As who saye, naye: And no more will I doo thee.

¶ The Jews are reproved and also called.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: I * Where is the byll of your * mothers deuorcement, that I sent vnto her, or who is the surer, to whome I solde you? Beholde, * for youre owne offences are ye solde: And because of youre transgression, is your mother forsaken. For why woulde no man receaue me, when I came? And when I called, no man gaue me answer. * Was my hande cleane smitten of, that it myghte not helpe? Or had I not power to deliuer: Lo, * at a worde I drinke by the sea, * and of water floudes I make drye lande: So that for wante of water, the fishe corrupte and dye of thurst. * As for heauen I cloth it with darckenes, & put a sacke vpon it.

* The Lorde God hath geuen me a well learned tongue, so that I can conforte them which are troubled, yea, and that in due season. He waked mine eare by by tymes in the morninge, (as the scolemasters doe) that I myghte hearken. * The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not say nay: nor withdraue my selfe, * but I offer my back vnto the smiters, and my chekes to the nippers, * I tourne not my face frome shame and spittinge, for the Lorde God helpeth me, therfore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face lyke a flint stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to confusion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who who wyl then go with me to lawe. Let vs stande one agaynste another: If there be anye that wyl reason with me, lette hym come here forth to me. * Beholde, the Lorde God standeth by me, what is he that can condemne me. Lo, they shalbe all lyke as an olde clothe, which the mothes shal eate vp.

Therefore who so feareth the Lorde amonge you let him heare the voyce of his seruaunte. Who so walketh in darkness, and no light shineth vpon him, lette him hope in the Lorde, and holde hym by his God. But take hede, ye haue all kindled a fyre, & gyrded youre selues with the flame: Ye walcke in the glistyng of youre owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kindled. Thys commeth vnto you fro my hand, name: Ipe that ye shall slepe in sorowe.

The notes

a. God was not the cause why the congregacion of the Jewes (whiche is vnderstande by mother, and was ones his spouse) was deuorced and forsaken: but their owne offences deuorced them, & was the cause why they were solde to the vicer and geuen ouer into the handes of the Gentiles, or Heathen, and sparkled amongest the Medians, Persians, Babilonians, Grecians, and Romaynes.

b. As who say: ye your selues, haue kindled the fyre of my vengeance, with your offences: I was no causer thereof: ye must therefore suffer the punishment thereto belonging. For it commeth of your owne deservynge that I shal lape my hande vpon you and punishe you.

The li. Chapter.

Consolacion and comforte is promysed vnto the Iosophall.

I Erken vnto me, ye that holde of ryghteousnesse, ye that seke the Lorde. Take hede vnto the stone, wheroute ye are hewen, and to the graue where oute ye are dygged. Consyder * Abraham your father, and Sara that bare you: howe that * I called hym alone, prospered hym well, and increased hym: howe the Lorde comforted Sion, and repayred all her decaye: Wapynge her deserte as a Paradise, and her wyldernes as a garden of the Lorde. Whiche and ioye was there, thankesgeuyng & the voyce of prayse. Have respect vnto me the, o my people, vnto my lawe, & lay then eare to me: for a law & an ordinaunce shal go forth from me, to lychten the Gentyles. It is harde by, that my healthe and my righteousnesse shal goe forth, and the people shall be ordered wth myne arme.

The Ilandes (that is the Gentyles) shall hope in me, and put their truste in myne arme. Lyfte vp youre eyes toward heauen, and loke vpon the earth beneth. * For the heauens shall vanishe awaye lyke smoke, and the earthe shall teare lyke a clothe, and they that dwell therein shal perishe in lyke maner. But my healthe endureth for euer, and my righteousnesse shall not cease. Therefore herken vnto me, ye that haue pleasure in righteousnesse, thou people that * bearest my lawe in thyne hearte, * feare not the curse of men, be not a frayde of their blasphemies and reuylnges: * For wormes and mothes shal eate them by lyke clothe and woll. But my righteousnesse shall endure for euer, and my sauynge healthe frome generation to generation. Wake vp, wake vp, and be stronge: O thou arme of the Lorde: wake vp, lyke as in times past, euer and sence the worlde beganne.

* Arte not thou he, that haste wounded that proude Lucifer, and hewen the dragon in peces: * Arte not thou euen he, whiche hast dyled by the depe of the sea, which hast made playne the sea grounde, that the delpyered myght goe thorow: * That the redemed of the Lorde, whiche turned agayne, myghte come with ioye vnto Sion, there to endure for euer: * That myght and gladnesse myghte be with them: That sorow and woe myghte flee from them: * Yea I, I am euen he, that in al thynges geueth you consolacion. What arte thou then, that fearest a mortall man, the chyld of man, which goeth awaye as doeth the floure: And forgettest the Lorde that made the, that spred out the heauens, and leyde the foundation of the earthe. But thou arte euer astrayde for the syghte of thyne oppressour, whiche is readye to doe harme: Where is the wrathe of the oppressoure: It commeth on faste, it maketh hast to appeare: It shal not perishe, that it shoulde not be able to destroye, neither shall it fayle for

I consolation and comfort to the people of God.

Where Sion by, take thy strength vnto thee: put thou on thyne honest caprice. O Jerusalem, thou citye of the holie one, for frome thys tyme forth, there shall no vncircumcised nor vncleane person come in thee. Shake the from the duste, arise and stande by, O Jerusalem. Plucke out thy necke from the bonde, O thou captiue daughter Sion. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Ye are solde for noughte, therefore shall ye be redeemed also without any monye.

For thus hath the Lorde sayed. my people wente downe afore tyme in to Egypte, there to be straungers. \* Afterwarde byd the kynge of the Assyrians oppresse them, for noughte. And now what profite is it to me (sayeth the Lorde) that my people is frelye carryed awaye, and broughte into heuynesse by their cruelars, and my  $\hat{\text{a}}$  \* name euer still blasphemed? Sayeth the Lorde. But that my people maye knowe my name, I my selfe will speake in that day. Enclype your eares, & come vnto me, take hede, and your soule shall lyue. \* for I wyll make an euerlastyng couenaunt with you, euē the sure mercyes of Dauid.

Beholde, I shall geue him for a witness amonge the folke, for a p̄phete & Captayne vnto the people. Doe, thou shalt call an vnknown people: and a people that had no knowledge of thee, shall runne vnto thee: Because of the Lord thy God, the holy one of Israel, which glorifieth the. Seke the Lord, while he maye be founde, and call vpon him while he is nye. * Let the vngodly man forsake his wayes & the vnrightheous his imaginaciōs, & tourne agayne vnto & Lord: so shall he be mercyfull vnto him: & to our God. * for he is ready to forgeue. for thus sayeth & Lord: my thoughtes are not your thoughtes, & your wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyper then the earthe, so farre doe my wayes exceede yours, and my thoughtes yours.

And

* And like as the rayne, & snowe cometh downe fro heauen, & returneth not thyrer agayne, but watereth þe earth, maketh it fruitful and grene, that it maye geue corne and bread vnto the sower:

So the worde also that cometh out of my mouth shall not turne agayne void vnto me, but shall accompyse my wyl and prospere in the thyng, whereto I sende it. * And so shall ye go forth wyth ioye, and be led with peace. The moun-taynes and hylls shall synge with you for ioye, and al the trees of the felde shall clappe their handes. For thornes, there shall growe fyre trees, and þe myrre tree in the stead of byrtes. And this shall be done to the prayse of the Lorde, and for an euertlasting token, that shall not be taken awaye.

The notes.

a. Of these waters ye haue in the psal. xlii. a
b. The worde of God is called wyne and mylch: Wyne because it reioyseth the hert, in that it pa-cyfieth the conscience, & setteth it at rest, milche because it nurysheth & increaseth the lytelones & pongones in the fapth, as ye haue in .i. pet. ii. a And as new borne babes desyre & restablie milch se. c. To call here, is, by preacheinge to bringe to the fapth. By the unknowne people vnderstande the heathen.

The. lvi. Chapter.

In exhortacion to iudgement & rightousnes, and to the spirituall keepinge of the Sabbath, agaynst shepherdes that deuour their flocke.

Thus saith the Lorde: * Kepe equite, & do ryghte, for my saunge health shall come hoztly, and my ryghteousnes shall be opened. Blessed is the man þe doth thys, and þe mans childe which kepeth the same. * He that taketh heede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabboth (that is) he that kepeth hym selfe þe do no euil. Then shall not the straunger, which cleaueth to the Lorde, say: * Alas the Lorde hath shut me cleane out from his people: Nether shall * the gelbes man say: lo, I am a dyre tre. For thus saith the Lorde, fyrst vnto the gelbes that kepeth my Sabbath: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thyng that pleaseth me, and kepeth my couenaunt: vnto them wyl I geue in my household & wythin my walles, a better herpitage and name then ye they had bene called lounes and doughters. * I wyl geue them an euertlastyng name, that shall not perpe. Agayne, he saith vnto the straungers that are dysposed to stycke to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue hys name: * That they shall be no bonde men. And all they, which kepe them sel-ues, that they vnhalowe not the Sab-both, namely, that they fulfyll my couenaunt: Them wyl I bringe to my holy mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnt offrynges and sacrificees shall be accepted vpon myne aulter, * for my house shall be an house of prayer for all people.

Thus saith the Lorde God which gathereth together the scatted of Israell: I wyl bringe yet another congrega-cion to him. All the beastes of the felde, & all the beastes of the wod, shall come to deuoute him. * For his watchmen are all blynd, they haue all together no vnderstandyng, they are all domme dogges, not beyng able to barcke, they are sleper: sloughly are they, & lye snoztynge:
they are shameles dogges, that bene uer satysfied. The sheperdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandyng, * but euery man turneth his owne way, euery one after his owne couetousnesse with all his power. * Come (say they) I wyl fetch wyne, so shall we fyl our sel-ues, that we maye be drounken. And do to morowe, lyke as to daye, yea, and muche more.

The Notes.

a. By these blynde watchmen, vnderstande the the chiefe priestes, the scribes, & pharisees, &c. which were the preterites and deplacers of the lawe of God. These forspylth iudges take abolyshed the true seruice of god: and were the chiefe causers of the forsakynge of Israel. They were sloughly, and sought not that whiche was for the edificacyon of the people, and for the glory of God: but that whiche was for theyr own priuate profyt & pleasure. They were slouthful to roote out vice and to plant vertue, and dyuyn in to þe profounde and depe slepe of ygnorance, of vnde-lyneste, of lecherousnesse, and of pryde. As oft as the prelars of the people, wylshoppes, Abbates, &c. they that auanture theym selues, for celygious be-such: there hangeth a great scourge ouer þe whole Rocke of Christ.

righteous is conueyed away thorow the wicked: that he himselte myghte be in rest, lye quietly vpon his bed, & lye after his owne pleasure. Come hyther therfore ye charmers children, * ye sonnes of y<sup>e</sup> aduouter & the whoze: wher in take ye your pleasure: vpon whome gape ye with your mouth, & bleate oute your tonge: Are ye not children of aduoutre. And a sede of dissimulacion: Ye take your pleasure vnder the oakes, and vnder all grene trees, & chylde be- yng slayne in the valleys, and demes of stone. Thy part shalbe with stony rockes by the ryuer: Yea, euē these shall be thy parte. for there thou hast powred meat & drinkoffinges vnto the. Shuld I ouerle that: Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaines, thou wentest by thither, & there hast thou slayne sacryfices. * Behynde the dozes and postes, hast thou set by thy remembraunce.

When thou haddest dyscouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wētest downe & made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou didest carue the certayne of ponder Idols, and louedest theyr couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest strenght to kynges with * oyle and dyuers opyntmentes (that is) thou hast sente messangers farre of, and yet arte thou fallen into the pyt therby.

Thou hast had trouble for y<sup>e</sup> multitude of thine owne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I wyll leaue of. * Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or health) of thy selfe, and therfore thou beleuest not that thou art sycke, for when wilt thou be abashed or feare seying thou hast broken thy promise, and remembreth not me, nether haste me in thyne hert. Thinkest thou, that I also wyll holde my peace (as afore time) that thou fearest me not. Yea, verely I wyll declare thy goodnes & thy workes, but they shall not prosyte the whē thou cryest, let thy chosen heape delouer the. But the wynde shall take the all away, and carry them into the ayre. * Neuertheles, they that put theyr truste in me, shall inherit the land, and haue my holy byll in possession.

And therfore thus he sayeth: * Make redye, make redye, and clense the strete, take vp what ye can out of the way that leadech to my people. for thus sayeth the hye and excellent, euen he that dwelleth in euerlastyngnesse, whose name is the holy one: * I dwel hie aboue & in the sanctuary, & with him also, that is of a contryte & humble sprite: & I may heale a troubled mynde, & a contrite hert. * for I chide not euer, & am not wrothe with out ende. But the blasfynge goeth frome, though I make the breath. I am wroth with him for his couetousnesse & luste, I smyte hym, I hyde me, and am angrie, when he turneth him selfe, & foloweth the by waye of hys owne herte, But if I may se his ryght way agayne, I make him whole. * I leade him, and restore him vnto them whom he maketh to y<sup>e</sup> full, and that were soye for him. I make the frutes of thankesgeuyng. I geue peace * vnto them that are fatte of, and to them that are nye, save I the Lorde, that make him whole. But the wycked are lyke the ragynge sea, & can not rest, whose water someth wyth the myze and grauel. Euen so the wycked haue no peace, saith my God.

The. lviij. Chapter.

The Lorde (by the mouth of the Prophete) cryeth vnto the people for theyr falsynges, which was ful of hypocryse.

And therfore * crye now, as y<sup>e</sup> loude as thou canst. Leane not of, lyft vp thy voyce lyke a trompet, & shewe my people their offences, & the house of Jacob their synnes. for they seke me daylye and wil knowe my waies, euen as it were a people that dyd ryghte, and had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They argue wth h me concernyng right iudgement, and wyll pleate at the same wyth their god. * wherfore fast we (say they) and thou seist it not: we put oure luyes to strytenesse, and thou regardest it not.

* Beholde, when ye * fast, your luste remaineth styll: for ye do no lesse byolence to your betters: lo, ye fast to strife and debate, and to smyte him with your fist that speaketh vnto you. Ye fast not (as some tyme) that your voyce myght be hearde aboue. * Thyucke ye thus fast pleaseth me, that a man shoulde chasten him selfe for a daye, and to wythe his head about lyke an hoke in an deers ry cloth, and to lye vpon the earth.

Shulde

shulde that be called fasting, or a day that please the Lorde: But this fasting please not me, till the tyme be thou * lowse hym out of bondage, that is in thy daunger: that thou breake the oath of wycked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go free, and take from them all maner of burthens. It plea-seth not me, till thou * deale thy bryd to the hongry, and bryng the poze fatherlesse home into thy house, when thou se-est the naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thyne own fleshy.
* Then shall thy lyghte breake forth as the moonyng, and thy health flourish ryght shortly: thy ryghtuousnesse shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

* Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall answere the: yf thou cryest, he shall say: here I am. Yea, yf thou layest away thy burthens, and holdest thy fyngers, and cease from blasphemous talking, * yf thou hast compassyon vpon the humyle, and refresthest the troubled soule: Then shall thy lyght sprynge out in the darknesse, and thy darknesse shall be as the noone daye. The Lorde shall e-uer be thy gyde, and satisfye the desyre of thyne herte, and fyll thy bones with marry. Thou shalt be lyke a freshe watered garden, * and lyke the founteyne of water, that neuer leaueth runnyng.
* Then the places that haue euer bene walte, shall be buylded of y: there shalt thou laye a foundacyon for many kyn-redes. Thou shalt be called the maker of hedges, and the buylder agayne of the way of the Sabboth.

Yea, yf thou tourne thy fete from the * sabboth, so that thou do not the thing whiche please thy selfe in my holpe daye: then shalt thou be called vnto the pleasur, holy, and glorious sabboth of y Lorde, where y shalt be in honoure: so that thou do not after thyne owne ymagynacyon, nether seke thyne owne wyll, nor speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in y Lorde, whiche shall carpe the hye aboute the earth, and seide y with y heritage of Jacob thy father: for y LORDES owne mouth hath so promysed.

The Notes.

* This fast remaineth yet among the Children for true challyng of the bodye and absteynyng from vice will we get nether vnderstand nor heare of: but Gyltyncke with the Jewes both that we do God a great pleasure when we faste, and also y we then fast, when we absteyne from one thyng, & fylour helpe with another. And verely in this thyng doeth our supersticious excede the supersticious of the Jewes. For we neuer reade that they euer toke it for a fast to absteyne from fleshe, and eate ether fleshe or whitt meate (as they call it.)

The. lix. Chapter.

The Lorde is myghty to saue, and ready to heare our requestes.

Behold, * the Lordes hand is not so shortened that it can not helpe, nether is his eare so stopped y it maye not heare.
But * youre mydedes haue separated you from your God, and youre * synnes hyde his face from you, that he heareth you not. For youre handes are bespyled with blod, and your fyngers with vnrighthousnesse: Your lyppes speake lyes, and your tonge setteth oute wyckednesse. No man regardeth ryghtuousnesse, and no manne iudgeth truely. Every man hopeth in vayne thynges, and ymagyneth dys-create, * conceaueh weepnes, and bryn-geth forth euell. They * brede sockeatrice egges, and weue the spyders web.
* Who so eateth of theire egges, dyeth.
* But yf one treade vpon theym, there commeth vp a serpent. * Their webbe maketh no clothe and they may not couer them with theire labours. * They dedes are the dedes of wickednes, & the worke of robbery is in theire handes.
* Their fete rune to euill, & they make hast to shed innocent blod. Their coun-cels are wycked counceles, harme and * destruction are in their wayes. But the way of peace they knowe not. In theire goynges is no equite, their way-es are so crooked, that whosoener goeth therin, knoweth nothyng of peace.

And this is the cause that equite is so farre from vs, and that ryghtuousnes commeth not nye vs. * We loke for lyghte, lo, it is darknesse: for the mo-onyng thyne, se, we walcke in the darck.
* We grope lyke the bynd vpon y wal, we grope euen as one that hath none eyes. We stumbe at the none daye, as though it were towarde nyghte: in the fallonge places, lyke men that are halfe deade. * We roare all lyke

Am. ii.

Beetes

Beeres, and mourne still lyke doves.
We loke for equyte, but there is none: for health, but it is farre from vs. for our offences are many before the, & oure sinnes testifie against vs. Yea, we must confesse that we offend, and knowledge that we do amysse: Namely transgresse and dissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fal away fro our God: blyng presumptuous & traitorous ymaginations, and castyng false matters in our hertes.
And therfore is equyte gone asyde, and ryghtuousnes standeth farre of: * truth is fallen down in the strete, and þ thing that is platine and open, may not be the-
wed. Yea, the trueth is layde in pyson, and he that refrayneth hym selfe fro euell, must be spoyled.

When the Lorde saw this, it dyspleased him soze, that there was no where any equyte. He saw also, that there was no man, which had pitie thereof, or was grieved at it. And he helde him by hys owne power, & cleued to his owne righ-tuousnes. * He put ryghtuousnes vpon him for a brest plate, and set the helmet of health vpon his heade. He put on wraethe in steade of clothyng, and toke gelousy about him for a cloake: (like as when a man goeth forth wroufullpe to recompence hys enemyes, and to be auenged of his aduersaries.) Namely, that he myght recompence and reward the Ylandes wherthowhe the name of the Lorde myght be feared, from the ri-syng of the Sunne: and his magestye, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

for he shall come as a violent wa-terstreame, whiche the wynde of þ Lorde hathe moued. * But vnto Syon there shall come a redemer, and vnto them in Jacob that tourne from wyckednesse, sayth the Lorde. I will make thys couenant with them (saith þ Lorde): My spete that is come vpon the, & the wodes whiche I haue put in thy mouth, shall neuer go out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy childers chyldre, fro this tyme forth for euer moze.

The Notes.

a. To byde cockatrice egges, is, to go about that which is myscheuous and wycked. And to woe the spyders webbe, is, to go about bayne & trye-lyng chynge, whiche are of no nature: although they seme neuer so excellent vnto the deare.
b. As he that eareth of a cockatrice egge dyeth, so they that delpte in euyl workes, or that consente vnto them, shall perishe.

c. And if a man at uniuerses tread on thers eyes and so presse out the cockatrice and be touched, he shal be kyled of her: euen so shall thoughtes of euyl bryng them to death.

d. As no manne maketh clothes of the spyders web, so shall wycked workes enriche no man, nor profyte him on the daye of iudgement, when he must go in vnto the feast in the wedding garnde Mat. xxii. b

e. By the deades of wyckednesse vnderstande gylefull and crafty deades. And by the deades of robbery, by violent, and tyraunious deades. The re-saryeth that their deades are the deades of robberye, because they helpe no man with their handes.
But do rather robbe and begyle the poore: so are they without charitie, yea forsaue they not what charite requyret on them.

the sea shall be couerted vnto thee (that is
is) when the strengthe of the Gentyles shall come vnto the. The multitude of Camels shall couer the, the dromedaries of Madia & Epha. * All they of Saba shall come, bryngyng gold & incense, and shewing þ prayse of the Lorde. Al the ca-tell of Cedar shall be gathered vnto the,
the rames of Babaioth shall serue the, to be offred vnto myne aulter, * whiche I haue chofen, & in the house of my glory whiche I haue garnished. * But what are these þ be here lyke the cloudes, and as the doves flyng to their windowes.

The Yles also shall gather them vnto me, and specially the shippes of the sea:
that they may bryng the sonnes farrs, and theyr syluer and theyr golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy GOD, vnto the holpe one of Israell, that hath glorified the: * Straine gers shall builde by thy walles, and thy kynges shall do the seruice. For when I am angry, I smyte the: and when it pleaseth me, I pardon the. * Thy gates shall stande open styl both day and nyght, and neuer be shut: that the hooke of the Gentyles maye come, and that they kynges maye be brought vnto the. For every people and kingdom that serueth not the, shall perishe, and be destroyed with the sword. The glory of Libanus shall come vnto the: The fyre trees, Boxes and Cedres together, to garnyshe the place of my Sanctuarie, for I will glorifie the place of my fete.

Moreover those shall come knelynge vnto the, that haue bered the: and all they that despyled the, shall fall downe at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the cytie of the Lord, the holy Syon of Israel. Because thou hast bene forsaken and hated, so that no man went thorow the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, and ioyfull thorow out all posterities. Thou shalt sucke the mylke of the Gentyles, and kynges bresses shall fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lord am thy Sauour and defender, I myghtie one of Jacob. For brasse, will I geue the golde, and for yron syluer: for wod brasse, and for stones yron. I will make peace thy ruler, and ryghtuousnes thyne offycer. Violence and robbery shall neuer be herd of in thy lād, neyther harme and destruction whin thy borders. Thy walles shall be called health, and thy gates the prayse God. * The Sunne shall neuer be thy day lyght, and the lyght of the Moone shall neuer shine vnto the: but the Lord him selfe shall be thyne euerlastyng lyght, and thy God shall be thy glory.

* Thy Sunne shall neuer go downe, and thy Moone shall not be taken away, for the Lord hymselfe shall be thy euerlastyng lyght, and thy sorowful dayes shall be rewarded the. Thy people shall be all godly, and possesse the lande for euer: the flour of my planting, the worke of my handes, whereof I will reioyce. The pongest and leest shall growe in to a thousand, and the symplest into a strong people. I the Lord shall shortly bringe this thyng to passe in his tyme.

The Notes.

a. In these wordes is the readynes and promptnes of them that obey the worde of God declared. As though he shoulde saye: Euen as faste as the cloudes come and go, and as swyftly as doves flye to their nest so roundly will the faythful leaue all, and couple them selues to the church, at the voyce of Christ and of his teachers.

b. By the fyre trees and suchelike are signyfied princes and rulers that gouerne the people, as before in the. ii. c. As who shoulde saye: euen I most excellent men shall be adioyned vnto church and helpe muche to the furtheraunce thereof.

The. lxi. Chapter.

The propheth that Christ shall be annointed, and sent to preache.

I the spirite of the Lord God is with me, for the Lord hath anointed me, and sent me, to preache good tydings vnto the poore, that I myghte bynde by the wounded hertes, * that I myghte preache deliuerance to the captiue, and open the pylow to them that are bounde: that I myghte declare the acceptable yere of the Lord, and the day of the vengeance of our God: that I myghte comfort all them that are in heuynesse, that I myghte geue vnto them I mourne in Syon, betwixt in the steade of ashes, ioyful oymmet for sighyng, pleasaunt raymente for an heuie mynde: That they myghte be called excellent in ryghtuousnesse, a planting of the Lord for him to reioyce in.

They shall buylde the longe rougher wyldernesse, and set by the olde deserte. They shall repayre the wast places, and suche as haue bene voyde thorow oute many generacions. Straungers shall stande and fede your catel, and the Aleauntes shall be youre plowmen and reapers. * But ye shall be named I priestes of the Lord, and men shall cal you the seruauntes of our God. Ye shall entore the goodes of the Gentyles and triumphe in their substance. For your great reprofe and shame, shall they haue ioy that ye may haue part with them. For they shall haue double possession in theyr lande, and euerlastyng ioye shall be with them. For I the Lord, which loue right and hate robbery (thoughe it were offered me) shall make their workes ful of faithfulness, and make an euerlastyng conuenance with them.

and amonge the people. All they that se them, shall knowe that they are the hye blessed seede of the Lorde. And therfore
I am ioyfull in the Lorde, and my soule reioyseth in my God. * for he shall put vpon me the a garment of health, & couer me with the mantle of ryghtuousnes. * He shall decke me lyke a bydegrome, and as a byde that hath hir apparel vpon her. for lyke as the ground bringeth forth frute, and as the garden shuteth forth seede: So shall the Lorde God cause rightuousnes, & the feare of God to flourish forth before al the hethē.

The notes

a. The garment of health is faith that worketh charitie: which is called the wedding garment. Math. xxii. b. This garment (saith the prophere) shall Christ put vpon the church. For al that beleue in God, shall be saued thorow Christ, and be hys beloued children by electyon, and iustified by his bloude. Ephe. i. b

The lxii. Chapter.

Of the prophecies of the coming of Christ.

I will not hold my tōge, for Ierusalem sake I wil not cease: until their ryghtuousnesse breake forth as the hyssynge lyght, & their health as a burning lampe. Then shall the Gentyles se thy ryghtuousnes & all kynges thy glory. Thou shalt be named in * a new name, whiche the mouth of the Lorde shall shew. Thou shalt be a crowne in the hand of Lord, and a glorious garlande in the hand of thy God. fro this time forth thou shalt neuer be called the forsaken, & thy land shall no more be called the wyldernes. But thou shalt be called a Bephrabah, & thy lande Beula: for the Lorde loueth the, and thy lande shall be inhabited. * And like as a ponge man taketh a doughter to maryage, so shall God mary him selfe vnto thy sonnes. And as a bydegrome is glad of his byde, so shall God reioyce ouer the.

I will set watchmen vpon thy walles (O Ierusalem) which shall nether cease daye nor nyght to preach the Lord. And ye also shall not kepe him close, nor leaue to speake of hym, vntill Ierusalem be set by & made the prayse of the world. The Lorde hath sworn by hys ryght hande and by his stronge arme, that fro hence forth he will not geue thy rogne to be meate for thyme enemyes, nor thy hyne (wherin thou hast laboured) to be drinke for the * straungers.

But they that haue gathered in the corne, shall eat it, and geue thankes to the Lorde: and they that haue borne in the hyne, shall dryncke it in the court of my Sanctuary.

Stand backe, and depart a lunde, ye & stand vnder & gate: make rowme people, repayre the strete, and take away the stones, & set out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lorde proclameeth in the endes of the worlde: * tel the doughter Sion: see, thy saluacion cometh, behold, he bringeth his treasure with him, and his workes go before him. For they whom the Lorde deliuereth, shall be called & * holy people: and as for the, thou shalt be named & greatly occupied, and not the forsaken.

The notes.

a. That is, my pleasure in her.

b. That is, the married. For the church is spouse of the Lorde.

The lxiii. Chapter.

Of the redemption promysed to the people

What is he this, & cometh from Edō, with stayned read clothes of Bofra: (whiche is so costly cloth) and cometh in softly in al his strength: I am he that teacheth ryghtuousnes, & am of power to helpe. wherfore then is thy clothing read, & thy rayment lyke his that treadeth in the wyne presse. I haue trodden the presse my selfe alone, and of all people, there was not one with me. Thus haue I troden downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and set my fete vpon them in my indignacion: And their bloude sprang vpon my cloothes, and so haue I stayned all my rayment. * For the day of vengeance & I haue taken in hand, & the peate of my deliuerance is come. I looked aboute me, & there was no mā to shew me any helpe, I fel downe, & no man helde me vp. Then I helde me by myne own arme, and my seruantes susteyned me. And thus haue I troden downe the people in my wrath, and dashed the in my displeasure: In so much that I haue shed their bloude vpon the earth.

* I will declare the goodnesse of the Lorde, yea, & the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geueh vs, for the greate good that he hath done for Israell:

which he hath giuen them for his owne fauoure, and accoꝝdyng to the multy-tude of his lounge kyndnesse. for he sayde: These no doubte wyl be my people, and no thynckynge chyldren, and to he was their sauour. In their troubles * he forsoke them not, but the aun-gell that went forth from hys presence C deliuered them: Of very loue and kind-nes that he had vnto them, redemed he them. He hath borne the, and caried the by euer, sence the world began. But after they prouoked hym to wrathe & vexed his holy mynde, he was their enemy, and fought agaynst them him selfe. Yet remembred he the olde tyme of Moles and his people: * Howe he brought the from the water of the sea, as a shepherd * doeth with his shepe: howe he had geuen his holpe sprete amonge them: how he had led Moles by the ryghte hande with his glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (whereby he gatte hym self an euerlasting name) howe he ledde the in the depe, as an horse is ledde in the playne, that they shoulde not stoumble. The sprete of the Lorde led them, as a tame beast goeth in the fælde.

D Thus (O God) hast thou led thy people, to make thy selfe a glorious name with all. * Loke downe then from heuē, and beholde the dwellynge place of thy sanctuary and thy gloꝝy. How is it, that thy gelousye, thy strength, the multitud of thy mercyes and thy lounge kyndenesse, wyl not be entreated of vs. Yet arte thou * oure father: for Abraham knoweth not vs, neyther is Israell acquaynted wth vs. But thou Lorde art oure father and redemer, & thy name is euerlastyng. O Lord, * wherfore hast thou led vs oute of thy waye: wherfore hast thou hardened our hertes, that we feare the not: * Se at one wth vs again, for thy seruauntes sake that are of the generacion of thyne heretage. Thy people hath had but litle of thy Sanctuary in possession, for oure enemyes haue taken it in: And we are become euen as we were from the begynnyng: but thou art not they: Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

The prophete (vnder the person of the Jewes) bes wyleth the they: cryl: and banishment. Whanne they say they are as a cloth fylled with the honours of a woman.

That þ wouldest cleaue A the heuen in sonder, and come downe: that þ mōst carnes myghte melte as way at thy presence, like as at an hote fyre: and that the malicious inight boyle, as the water doeth vpon the fyre: wherby thy name myght be knowen amonge thyne enemyes, & that the gentiles might treble before thee. That þ mightest come downe wth thy wonderous straunge woꝝkes, then shoulde the hylles melt at thy presence. * for sence the begynning of the worlde there was none (excepte thou O God) that hearde or perceaued, * nether hath anye eye sene what thou doest for the, that put theyꝝ trust in thee.

Thou helpest him that doeth ryghte B wth cherefulnesse, & them that thyncke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou art angrye, for we offend, and haue bene euer in synne, * and there is not one whole. Rom. iii. 12 We are all as an vncleane thyng, & all our ryghtuousnesse are as the clothes stapned wth the floures of a woman:
we fall euerychone as the leafe, for oure synnes carpe vs awaye lyke the wynd.
There is no man that calleth vpon thy name, that standeth vp to take holde by the. Therfore hydest thou thy face from vs, and consumest vs, because of oure synnes.

But nowe O Lorde, thou father of oures: * we are the claye, and thou arte our potter, & we all are the woꝝke of thy handes. * Be not to sore dyspleased (O Lorde) & kepe not our offences to longe in thy remembraunce, but consydeꝝ that we all are thy people. The ctytes of thy Sanctuary lye waste. * Syon is a wil-dernesse, and Ierusalem a deserte. Our holy house whiche is our bewtye, where our fathers praysed the, is bꝛēt vp: yea all our commodities and pleasures are wasted awaye. Wilt thou not be intrea-ted (Lorde) for all this: wilt thou hold thy peace, and scourge vs so sore?

The city of Jerusalem, and the calling of the Heathen.

* They shall seeke me, that hitherto haue not asked for me, they shall fynd me, that hitherto haue not soughte me. The which I say vnto diuinely to the people I neuer called vpon my name: I am here, I am here. For thus long haue I euer holden oute my handes to an vnfaithfull people, that go not the ryghte waye, but after their owne imaginacions: To a people is e-uer despyng me to my face. * They make their oblacions in gardens, and their smoke vnto aulter of bricke, they lurk amonge the graues, & lye in the dennes all nyght. * They eate swynnes fleche, and vncleane brothe is in their vessels. If thou comest nye them, they say: touche me not, for I am holier then thou.

All these menne when I am angrie, shall be turned to smoke and * fyre, that shall burne for euer. Behold, it is wrytten before my face, & shall not be forgotten, but recompensed. * I shall rewarde it them into their bosome: I meane your mysdedes, & the mysdedes of your fathers together (sayeth the Lorde) which haue made their smokes vpon the mountaynes, and blasphemed me vpon the hilles: therefore will I measure their olde dedes into their bosome agayne.

Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde: * like as when one wold gather holy grapes, men say vnto him: breake it not of, for it is holy: * Euen so will I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I will not de-stroye them all. But I will take a sede out of Jacob, and oute of Iuda one, to take possession of my hylle. My chosen shall possesse these thynges, and my seruauntes shall dwell there. Saron shall be a shepfold, and * a valley of Achor shall geue the stalling for the cattell of my people, that feare me. * But as for you, ye are they, that haue forsaken the Lorde, and forgotten my holy hylle. Ye haue set vp an aulter vnto fortune, and geuen ryche dryncke offerynges vnto treasure. Therefore will I numbreye you with the swearde, that ye shall be destroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me answer: when I spake, ye hearkened not vnto me, but vnto wykednes before myne eyes, and chose the thyng that pleased me not.

kednes before myne eyes, and chose the
thyng that pleased me not.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, my seruauntes shall eate, but ye shall haue hunger. Beholde, my seruauntes shall dryncke, but ye shall suffer thirst. Beholde, my seruauntes shall be merie, but ye shall be confounded.
Beholde, my seruauntes shall reioyce for very quietnesse of herte: But ye shall crye for sorowe of herte, and complayne for vexacion of mynde. Your name shall not be sworne by amonge my chosen, for God the Lorde shall save you, and call his seruauntes by another name. * Who so reioyleth vpon earth, shall reioyse in the trewe God: And who so sweareth vpon earth, shall sweare in the trewe God. For the olde enmitie shall be forgotten, and taken away oute of my syght. * For lo, I shall make a newe heauen, and a newe earth. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, nor kepte in mynde: but men shall be gladde and euermore reioyse, for the thynges that I shall do.

For why: Beholde, I shall make a topfull Jerusalem, yea I my selfe will a reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: * And the voyce of wepyng and waylyng shall not be hearde in her from thence forth. * There shall neuer be childe nor olde man, that haue not their ful dapes. But when the child cometh to an hundred yere old, it shall dye. * And yf he that is an hundred yere of age do wronge, he shall be cursed.

* They shall buylde houses, and dwell in them: they shall plant bynepardes, and eate the frute of theym. They shall not buylde, and another possesse: they shall not plante, and another eate: * But the lyfe of my people shall be lyke a tre, and so shall the worcke of theyr han-
des.

My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, nor begette with trouble: for they are the hie blessed seed of the Lorde, and their frutes with the.
And it shall be that o euer they call, I shall aunswere theym. While they are yet but chynnyng home to speake, I shall heare them. * The wolfe and the lambe shall fede together, and the Lyon shall eate haye lyke the bullock.

But

But earth shall be the serpent's meat.
There shall no man hurt nor slay a nother, in all my holpe byll, sayeth the Lorde.

The notes.

a. God is counted to reioyce, when the people reloweth his mynde and wyll, and that he therefore doeth them good, and geueth them hys benefyts.
A lyke sayinge haue ye in Ieremye. xxxii. g. I wyll haue a luste and pleasure to do them good et.

b. There shall neither be chyld nor olde man. et.
The meanynge is: There shall no man be delited in the vayne hope of this mortall lyfe. They that be but euen younge of age, that haue profyted in faythe and holpe worches, and that loue nor this present lyfe, shall thynke them selues olde ynough. And that for the contemplacion, and desyre of the lyfe to come, which they knowe right wel shall be much better.

c. Some read: He shall be counted younge.

d. And yf he that is an hundred yere of age, et. The prophet meaneth hereby that although he the wicked come to an exceedinge greate age, yet thynke they that they haue not liued ynough, so that their damnacion be the greater.

e. The wolfe and the lambe shall fede togerher, et. The meanynge is, that the moste wicked and euell men shall at the comynge of Christ agree with the good and peacable: And that the Gentyles (which for their beastlye lyfynge, are often signified vnder the name of beastes) shall be at vnyte with the faythefull, and the one lyue louynge with the other withoute dyspse. The psepe same sayinge haue ye before in the xi. a. b.
f. But earth shall be the serpent's meate, that is,
with earth shall the serpente be content, and neither dyspse manne, nor hurt hym with her beuome.

The. lxi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mans handes.
He despyeth sacrifices done without mercy and saythe, God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. In among the Capittes, the Sabboth is continually.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Heauen is my seat, and the earth is my fote stole. * Where shall now the house stande that ye will buyde vnto me. And where shall be the place, that I will dwel in? As for these thynges, my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayeth the Lorde. * Which of them shall I the regarde. Euen hym that is of a lowlye troubled spirite, and standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ore for me, doth me so greate dishonour, as he that killeth a man. He that killeth a shepe for me, choketh a dogge. He that byngeth me meate offerynge, offereth swynes bloude: who so maketh me a memorial of incense, prayseth the thing that is vnrighte. Yet take tehy suche wayes in hand, and theyr soule delytreth in these abominacyons.

* Therefore wil I also haue pleasure in laughig them to scozne, and the thing that they feare, will I bringe vpon the.
* For when I called, no man gaue aunswere: when I spake they woulde not heare: But dyd wickednesse before mine eyes, & chose the thynges that displease me. Heare the worde of God all ye, that feare the thyng which he speaketh.
Youre brethren that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye: Lette the Lorde magnifye himselfe, that we may se your gladnesse: and yet they shall be confounded.

* For as touchyng the cpyte and the temple, I heare the voyce of the Lorde, that will rewarde, and recompence hys eneymes: lyke as when a wyfe bringeth forth a man childe, or euer she suffre the payne of the byrthe and anguysh of the trauayle. Whoeuer hearde or sawe suche thynges: dothe the ground beare in one daye: or are the people bozne all at once, as Syon beareth her sonnes.
For thus sayeth the Lorde: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my selfe? * Am not I he that beareth, and maketh baren: sayeth thy God. Re-ioyce with Ierusalem, and be glad with her, all ye that loue her. * Be ioyfull with her, all ye that mourned for her.
For ye shall sucke comforte oute of her brestes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, and haue delyte in the plenteousnesse of her power. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I will let peace in to her, lyke a water floude, and the myghte of the Hebthen lyke a flowyng streame. Then shall ye sucke, ye shall bee bozne vpon her sides, and be ioyfull vpon her knees for lyke as a chyld is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you, & ye shall be comforted in Ierusalem. And when ye se thys, your hearte shall re-ioyce, * and your bones shall flozyshe lyke an herbe.

Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowen among hys seruauntes, and his indignacion amonge hys eneymes.
For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyr, and his charret shall be like a whyle wynde, that he maye recompence his vengeance in his wraathe and his indignation

nacion with the flame of fyre. For the LORD shall iudge all fleshe with the fyre and wyth his sword, and there shall be a greate nombze slayne of the Lorde. Suche as haue made them selues holpe and cleane in the gardens, and those þ haue eaten swine fleshe, myce, and other abhomynacions, shall be taken awaye together, sayeth the Lorde. For I wyll come to gather all people and tonges with their workes and imaginacions: these shall come, and se my glozpe. Unto them shall I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be deliuered) amonge the Gentylles: in to Celycia, Africa and Libya (where menne can handle bowes) in to Italye also and Greke lande.

* And I shall take oute certayne of them for to be preeftes and leupres, sayeth the Lorde. For lyke as the new heauen and the newe earthe whiche I wyll make, shall be faste stablyshed by me: (sayeth the Lorde.) So shall youre sede and youre name contynue and there shall be a new Moone for the other, & a new Sabbath for the other, and al flesch shall come to worship before me (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the carjons of them þ haue transgressed agaynst me. * For theyr wormes shall not dye, nether shall their fyre be quenched, and al fleshe shall abhorre them.

The ende of the booke of the Prophete Esay.

The notes.

a. Where shall now the house stande, &c. As who shoulde saye: Wherto make ye me a temple of mans hand? whiche rule the whole worlde? Whereto haue I suffered the temple, to kepe you Jewes in a certayne maner of instructyon, and o-bedicker: and chose you one place for your temple, to saynten it that ye shoulde not fall to the foolles of the Gentylles. But now wyll I haue all Idoles banished, and for I wyll I charge vnto me the whole worlde, for one people all the dwellers vpon the earthe, whiche shall be my worshippers in spirite and in tructh. Amen. I wyll not be superstitious ye worshipped with sacrifices and ceremonies in the temple, but with rightuousnes, with faythe, and with the spirite. The same songe that the prophete here syngeth in the latter ende of his Prophecye, sang he before in the begynnyng, each in the fyfte Chapter. Let the christen note these two Chapters (I meane the fyfte, and laste) well, and then shall they perceyue, how greatye God abhorreth suche hypocrytish workes done without fayth, although they seeme & apere outwardly to be most godlye.

b. That is, there shall be a perpetuall feaste and a perpetuall rest. They shall not then kepe the Sabbath after the maner of the Jewes, nor make difference betwene daye and day, but they shall kepe a contynual Sabbath, and neuer do seculer workes, that is synnes. Then shall they alwayes bee in the temple, that is, alwayes shall they prayse God, in spirite and tructh, as well in aduersitie as in prosperitie. They shall neyther cunne vnto Idoles nor anye creatures, but shall worshippe the Lorde onelye.

The booke of the Prophet Ieremye.

The fyfte Chapter.

The stocke of Ieremy, and in what tyme he prophesied. We cense him selfe and woulde reasse the office of a prophete, because he is young and vncircumcised. He is taught of the Lorde, and becometh hold, God opyneth vnto him, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babylonians, is at hande. Ieremy is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

These are the Sermons of Ieremy the sonne of helkiah the preeft, one of the that dwelt at Anathoth in the lande of Benjamin: when the Lord had first spoken wyth him, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amou kinge of Iuda, in the .xiii. yeare of his kingdome: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kinge of Iuda, * and vntyll the .xi. yeares of zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda wer ended: when Ierusalem was taken, euen in the fift Moneth. The worde of the Lord spake thus vnto me: * Before I fashioned the

in thy mothers wombe, I did know the.
 And oꝛ euer thou wast borne, I sanctified the, and ordeyned the, to be a pro-phete vnto the people. Then sayde I:

* Oh Lorde God, I am vnmete, for I am yet but younge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to younge. * For thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, * and whatsoeuer
 I commaunde the, þ shalt thou speake.
 Be not afraid of theyr faces, for I will be to the, to deliuer the, sayth the Lorde.

* And with that, the Lorde stretched out his hand, & touched my mouth, and sayd moꝛeouer vnto me. Behold, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and this daye do I sette the ouer the people and kingdomes: that thou maiest roote out, breake of, destroy, & make waste: That þ mayst build vp a plant. After this, þ Lorde spake vnto me, saying: Jerempe, what seest thou? And I sayd: I se a wakyng rod. Then sayd þ Lorde: thou hast sene right, for I wyl watch diligentlpe vpon my worde, to perfoꝛme it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me againe, and sayde:
 What seest thou? And I sayde: I do se a seethinge * pot, lokyng from oute of the noꝛthe hytherwarde.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the noꝛthe shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyl cal al the officers of the kingdomes of the noꝛth (sayeth the Lorde.) And they shall come, and euery one shall sette hys seate in the gates of Ierusalem, and in all theyr walles round aboute, and tho-rowe all the cyties of Iuda. And tho-row them shall I declare my iudgement vpon all the wyckednesse of those men, that haue forsaken me: that haue offred vnto straunge goddes and worshipped the workes of theyr owne handes.

* And therefore gyꝛde vp thy loꝛnes, arpe, and tell them all, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not,
 I wyl not haue the to be afraid of the.
 * For beholde, this daye do I make the a stronge fenced towne, an yron ppyler, and a wall of stele agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghtie men of Iuda, agaynst the pꝛeestes and people of the lande. They shall fyght a-gaynst the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the: for I am with the, to de-lyuer thee, sayeth the Lorde.

The Notes.

a. It is a necessary thinge to the vnderstandynge of the prophetes, to know the booke of the times, wherein they prophesied. The booke of Ieremy impꝛesynge ye haue in the fouthe of the hynges, from the xxi. Chapter to the ende of the booke: & in the seconde of the Chronicles, from the xxi. chapter to the ende also. He prophesied aboute, xli. yeres.

b. I sacrificed the. sc. That is, I dedicated, chose, appoynted, and prepared, and set the asyde, to be a prophete vnto the people. So in Iohn. p. g. Say ye then vnto him, whome the father hath sanctified. sc. That is, hath chosen. sc.

c. For a prophet or teacher to gyde by hys loꝛnes, is boldelye and constantly, to resyst the false opinion, and doctrine of the wycked, and euen to empynte in them the worde of trouth (which en-gendꝛeth hate) whether they wyl or no: and that not ouer oꝛ wyse, but vntyll suche tyme as they cyther amende, oꝛ elles wasc angꝛe and furpous with it. Yea, and then to sette more by the com-maundemente of the Lorde, then by the power and tyrannye of this worlde: and not to let by the thyrmynges of rulers, which can do nothyng but that whiche God pꝛeempterly and suffereth them: therefore are they not to be feared of an obedient & faithful seruaunt of the Lorde.

The. ii. Chapter.

God reherceth hys benefites done vnto the Jewes.
 Agaynst pꝛeestes and prophetes, oꝛ pꝛachers that contemne and despyse God. The Jewes are destroyed, because they forsake God, and because they ran a whor huntynge after Idoles.

Moreouer, the word of þ Lorde commaunded me thus: Go thy waye, erpe in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre the for the kyndnesse of thy youthe, and because of thy stedfastte loue: in that thou folowest me thorowe the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Thou Israel wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and so was his tyzte scutes. * All they that deuoured Israel, offended: my fortune fell vpon them, sayeth the LORDE. Heare therfore the worde of the LORDE, O thou house of Iacob, and al þ generacio of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnfaithfullnesse founde your fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye from me, falling to lyghtnesse, and beynge so bayne? They thoughte not in their hertes: Where haue we left and a deaulye lande, yea, a lande that no manne had gone thowowe. and whet in no man had dwelte. * And when I had brought you into a pleasaunt well buylded lande, that ye myght enioye f frutes and al p commodities of p same: ye wente forth and defyled my lande, and broughte myne herptage to abhominacion.

The preestes them selues sayde not once: where is the Lorde? * They that haue the lawe in their handes, knowe me not. The shepherdes offende against me. The Prophetes do serupce vnto Baal, and folowe suche thinges as shal bypnyng them no profyte.

Wherefore, I am constrayned (sayth the Lorde) to make my complaynte bp on you, and vpon youre chyldren. Go in to the fles of Cethim, and loke well: sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede: & se, whether suche thinges be done there, whether the Gentyls them selues deale so falslye & vnturlye with their Gods, *(whiche yet are no goddes in dede.) But my people hathe geuen ouer their hie honour, for a thinge that maye not helpe them

Be astonished (O ye heauens) be as frayde, and abashed at suche a thinge, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hathe done two euels. They haue forsaken me the * well of the water of lyfe, and digged them pyttes, yea, byle and broken pyttes, that holde no water. * Is Israell a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholder? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roare and crye then vpon hym, as a lyon? They haue made his lande wast, his * cyties are so bzent bp, that there is no manne dwellinge in them. Yea, the chyldren of a Roph and Taphnes haue defyled thy necke.

* Commeth not thys vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lord thy God euer sence he led the by the waye. And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypte? to dyncke soule water of Nilus? Ether, what makest thou the waye to Assiria? To dyncke water of the floude? * Thyne owne wickednesse shall reprove the, and thy turnynge a way shal condemne the: that thou mayest knowe and vnderstande, howe euell and hurtfull a thyng it is, that thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, and not feared him, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes.

* I haue euer broken thy poche of olde, and burste thy bondes: yet sayest thou, * I wyl no more offende, but (like an harlot) thou runnest aboute vpon all hye hylls, and amonge all grene trees: where as I planted the oute of noble grapes and good rotes. * Howe art thou turned then into a bytter, vnfruteful & straunge graper? Yea, and that so sore: that thoughe thou walsh the with * Altrus, and make thy self to sauoure with that swete smellynge herbe of Bzith: yet in my sight thou arte stayned with thy wickednesse, sayeth the LORD thy God.

Saye not now: I am not vnclene; and I haue not folowed the Goddes. * Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the wooddes, balleyes and denues: so shalt thou know, what thou hast done. Thou arte lyke a swyfte Dromedarye, that goeth easelye his waye: and thy wayes is lyke a wyld Ass, that blyeth the wyldernes, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his wyl. Who can tame the all they that seke the, shall not saye, but fynd the i thine owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy fote from nakednesse, and thy throte frome thyrst, and thy necke thus in thy selfe: tusthe I wyl take no sorow, I wyl loue the straunge goddes, and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a thefe that is taken with the dede cometh to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the comen people, their kinges and rulers, their preestes and prophetes. * For they sape to a stocke, thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotte me: yea, they haue turned their backe vpon me, and not their face. * But in p tyme of their trouble, when they sape: stands bp, and helps vs, I shall answer them: where are now thy goddes, that thou hast made the? byd them stande bp, and helpe thee in the tyme of neede. * For loke howe many cities thou hast (O Iuda) so many goddes hast p alle.

Wherefore then wyl ye goo to lawe with me, saynge ye all are synners as gaynst me, sayeth the Lord. It is but lost labour, that I smyte your chyldren for they receaue not my correccion.

* Pource owne swerde destroyeth pource prophetes, lyke a deuouringe lyon, If ye be the people of the Lorde, then hearken vnto hys wordes: Am I then become a wilde nelle vnto the people of Israell: or a lande that hath no lyghte? Whenfore sayeth my people then: we are fallen of, and we wyll come no more vnto the: Both a maiden forget her raiment, or a brude her stomacher: And both my people forgette me so longe: Why bookest thou thy wayes so hyllie (to vntayne fauoure therthorow) when thou hast pettyned them with blasphemies.

Upon thy wynges is founde * the bloud of pooze and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes only, but openlye in al these places. Yet darrest thou saye: I am gyltlesse: Tylle, his wrath can not come vpon me. Behold, I wyll reason with thee because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. O howe euell will it be for the, to abyde it: when it shal bee knowen, how ofte thou hast gone backward: for thou shalt be confounded, as well of Egypte, as of the Assyrians: yea, thou shalt geue thy waye frome them, and smyte thyne handes together vpon thy heade. Because the Lorde shall bring that confydence and hope of thine to nought, and thou shalt not prosper with all.

The .iii. Chapter.

God beinge mercifull calleth vnto repentance hys people which he had forsaken for their whoredome with Abolis. He reprocheth Israell vnto repentance prouyng in the wordes that should haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israell vnto God, consistinge in repentance.

Omenlye * when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and he goeth from him, and marieth with another, then the question is: shoulde he resorte vnto her anye more after that? Is not hys selde then defyled and vncleane? * But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with manye louers, yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lorde. Lyst vp thyne eyes on euery hyde, and loke, yf thou bee not defyled.

Thou hast wanted for them in the streetes, and as a murderer in the wilde: nesse. Thowow thy whoredome and shameful blasphemies, is the lande defiled. * This is the cause, that the rayne and euenynge dew hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an whores forehead, and cast not be ashamed. Els woldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp, and led me from my youthe: wyle thou then put me awaye, and caste me of for euer? Or wyle thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane from me? Nevertheless, thou speakest such wordes, but thou arte euer doinge worse and worse.

* The Lorde sayde also vnto me: in the tyme of Josiah the kyng: Hast thou sene what that shrinkinge Israell hath done: howe he hath ruine by vpon al the hylls, and amouge al thycke trees, and there played the harlot: hast thou sene also (when he had done all thys) howe I sayde vnto her: that she shoulde turne agayne vnto me, & yet she is not returned? * Juda that vnfaithfull sister of hers also sawe thys: Namelye, that after I had well sene the aduourte of that synnocking harlotte Israell, I put her awaye, and gaue her a byll of detourment.

For all this, her vnfaithfull cyster Juda was not ashamed, but went back and played the whore also. Yea, and the noyle of her whoredome hath defiled the whole lande. For she hath commytted her aduourte with stones and stockes.

Nevertheless, her vnfaithfull cyster Juda is not * turned vnto me agayne with her whole herte, but saynedlye, sayeth the Lorde. And the Lorde sayde vnto me: * The backslider Israell is more righteous, then the vnfaithfull Juda: & therefore goo preache these wordes towarde the northe, and say: Thou shrinkinge Israell, turne agayne (sayeth the Lorde) and I wyll not turne my face from you, for I am mercifull, sayeth the Lorde, and I wyl not alwaye beare displeasure against the: but on this condicion, that thou know thy great blasphemie: Namelye, that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lorde thy God, and haste made thy selfe partaker

The. iiii. Chapter.

The true rep: nance of returnynge to God. He reborteth to the circumcysion of the herte. The destruction of Ieruz is prophesied, for the malice of their hertes

Israell, if thou wylte turne the, then turne vnto me, saith y lord
And if thou wilt put away thyne abhominacions oute of my syght, thou shalt not be moued: * And shalt swear: The Lorde lyueth: in truth, in equitie & rightuous-nesse: and all people shall bee fortunable and ioyfull in him. for thus saith the Lorde, to all Iuda and Ierusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not among the thornes.

* Be circumcysed in the Lorde, and cut awaye the foreskyne of your her-tes, al ye of Iuda, and al the indwellers of Ierusalem: * that my indignacion bryake not oute like fyre and kyndle, so y no man may quench it, because of the wickednes of your ymaginacions.

* Preache in Iuda and Ierusalem, crie oute and speake: blowe the trumpet tes in the land, cry that euery man may heare, and saye: Gather you together, & we wyl go in to strong cyties. Set vp the token in Sion, speede you & make no tarryng: * for I wyl bzing a great plage & a greate destruction from the north. for the spoyler of the Gentylles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that he maye make the lande waste, and destroye the cities, so that no man may dwel therein. wherefore gyde your selues aboute with sacke clothe, mourne

a mourne and wepe, for þe fearful wzath of the Lorde shall not bee withdrawen from you.

At the same tyme (sayeth the Lord) the hert of the kynge and of the princes shall be gone, the prestes shall be astonied, and the prophetes shall be sore affected. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, haste thou then disceaued this people and Jerusalem, sayenge: * ye shall haue peace, and now the swearde goethe thorow their luyes. Then shall it bee sayde to the people and to Jerusalem: <sup>b</sup> there cometh a warme wind from the north thorow the waye of my people, but neither to saue, nor to cleanse.

After that shall there come vnto me a strong winde, and the wil I also geue sentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh downe lyke as a cloude, and his charrettes are lyke a storme wynde: his horsemen are swifter then the Eagle. Wo vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Jerusalem, * washe thyne herte frome wyckednesse, that thou mayest be helped. How longe shall thy noisom thoughtes remaine with thee?

For a voice from Dan and from the hill of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruction. Beholde, the Hea: then geue Jerusalem warnynge, and preache vnto her, that her destroyers are commynge frome farre countrees. They tell the cyties of Iuda the same also, they shall geue them warnynge in euery place, lyke as the watche men in the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wzath, sayeth the Lorde.

* Thy waies and thy thoughtes, haue broughte the vnto this, this is thyne owne wyckednesse and dysobedience, that hath possessed thyne herte: Ah my belye, ah my belye, (shalt thou cry) how is my hearte so sore: my hearte panteth within me, I can not be styl. for I haue herde the cryng of the trompettes and peales of warre.

They crye murther vpon murther, the whole lande shall perysh. Immediatly my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges, in the tyncklynge of an epe. Howe longe shall I see the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes.

Nevertheless this shall come vpon them * because my people is become foolyshe, and hath vterlye no vnderstandinge. * They are the chylde of folyshnes, and wythout any discrecion. To do euell, they haue wytte ynoughe: but to do wel, they haue no wysdome. I haue looked vpon the earthe, and se, it is waste and voyde. I looked towarde heauen, and it had no myne.

I behelde the mountaynes, and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I looked aboute me, and there was no bode, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea, all theyr citiees were broken downe at the ptesence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wzathe.

For thus hath the Lord sayde: The whole lande shall be desolate, yet wyll I not then haue done. And therfore let the earthe mourne, and let the heauen be sorrye aboue: for the thyng that I haue purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repente me, and I wyll not go from it. The whole lande shall fle: for the noyse of the horsemenne and bowmen: they shall runne in to denues, in to woddes, and clymme vp the stonye rockes. All the cyties shall be voyde, and no man dwellynge therein.

What wyllt thou nowe do, thou beinge destroyed? * for thoughe thou clothest thy selfe with scarlet, and deckest the with golde: * though thou paintest thy face with colours, yet shalt thou tryue thy selfe in bayne.

For those that hitherto haue bene thy greate fauourers, shall abhorre thee, & go about to slay the. For (me thincke) I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauelyng, or one labourynge of her fyrste chylde: euen the voyce of the doughter Syon, that casteth oute her armes, and soweth, sayng: Ah wo is me, howe sore vexed and faine is my herte, for them that are slayne.

The. v. Chapter.

In Jewrye is there no ryghtwysse or faythfull man found, ether amongst the people or the rulers, for whiche sake the Lord shoulde spare the cytye wherfore Jewrye is destroyed of the Assyrians.

Loke thou now Jerusalem, be holde and see: Seke thou where her stretes also wythyn, yf ye can fynde one man, that doth equal and ryght, or that laboureth to be faythfull: and I shall spare him (sayeth the Lord) * for thoughe they can save: the Lord lyueth, yet do they sweare to dysceau: Where as thou (O Lord) * lokest onlye vpon faythe and trueth.

Thou haste scourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correccion. They made their faces harder then any stone, and wolde not amende.

* Therefore I thought in my selfe: per aduenture they are so simple and folish, that they vnderstande nothyng of the Lordes waye, and iudgementes of our God. Therefore wil I go vnto their hea des and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the Lord, and the iudgementes of our God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the yock, & hurste the bandes in sonder.

* Wherefore a lyon out of the wodde shall hurte them, and a wolfe in the eueryngge shall destroye them. The cat of y mountayne shall lye lurking by their cyties, to teate in peces all them, that come therout. for their offences are manye, and their departing away is great. Should I then for this haue mercye vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forsaken me * and swozne by them that are no goddes. And albeit they were bounde to me in maryage, yet they fell to aduoutrye, and haunted harlottes houses.

In the desyre of vncleynesse luste they are become lyke the stoned horse: every man neyeth at his neyghbours wife: * Should I not correcte thys, sayeth the Lord.

Should I not be auenged of euery people, that is lyke vnto thys? Clime by vpon their walles beat them downe, but destroye the not vterly: cut of their braunches, because they are not the Lordes. for vnfaythfullye hathe the house of Israel and Iuda forsaken me, sayeth the Lord. * They haue denyed the Lord, and sayd: it is not he. * Cush, there shall no misfortune come vpon vs, we shall se neyther swearde nor hunger. * As for the warnynge of the Prophetes, they take it but for wynde, yea, there is none of these, whiche will tell them, that suche thynges shall happen vnto them.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord God of Hostes: because ye speake suche wordes, beholde. * The wordes that are in thy mouthe will I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wod, that if maye consume them.

* Lo, I will brynge a people vpon you from farre, O house of Israel (sayeth the Lord) a myghtye people, an olde people, a people whose speache thou knowest not, nether vnderstandest what they saye. Their arrowes are so dayne deathe, yea they them selues bee berpe giauntes. Thys people shall eat by thy frute and thy meate, yea they shall deuoure thy sonnes and thy doughters, thy shepe and thy bullockes.

They shall eat by thy grapes and pygges. As for thy stronge and wel fenced cyties, wherein thou dydest truste, they shall destroye them with the sword.

* Neuertheles I will not then haue done with you, sayeth the Lord. But if they saye: wherefore dothe the Lord our God al this vnto vs.

Then aunswer them: * because, that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge goddes in youre owne lande, euen so shall ye serue other Goddes also in a straunge lande. Preache this vnto the house of Jacob, and crye it out in Iuda, and saye thus: Heare this (thou foolyshe and vndiscrete people) * ye haue eyes, but ye se not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

feare ye not me, sayeth the Lorde: feare not ashamed, to loke me in the face: whiche bynde the sea to the lade, so that it can not passe his boundes: for though he it rage, yet can it do no thyng, and though he the waues therof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer.

But this people hath a false and an obstinate heart, they are departed and gone awaye fro me. They thyncke not in their heartes: O let vs feare y Lorde oure God, that geueth vs raynedearly and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth euer still the hartest for vs pearly.

* Neuertheles your mysdedes haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you herof. For among my people are founde wycked personnes, that pruely laye snares & wayte for men, to take the and destroye them. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are their houses ful of that which they haue gotten with falschod and dysceate. Herof cometh their greate substaunce and ryches, herof are they fat & welthy, and are runne awaye fro me with shamefull blasphemies. * They minyster not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherles cause, they iudge not the poore accordyng to equite.

* Should I not punishe these thynges, sayeth the Lorde: should I not be auenged of all such people, as these be: horrible and greuous thynges are done in the lande.

The Prophetes teache falselye, and the priestes folow them, and my people hath pleasure therein. What wyl come therof at the laste.

The. vi. Chapter.

The synnes for which Ierusalem is afflicted. Vncircumcised eares. Couetousnes. Discepte. The Lorde reioys in the sacrifice of the Jewes. The commynge of the Babylonians is prophesied agayne.

Some oute of Ierusalem, ye stronge chyldren of Ben Jamin: blowe vp the trompettes ye Tecuytes, set vp a tobe unto Bethcaraim, for a plage and a greate myserye pepeth oute from the Northe.

I wyl lpyken the doughter Syon to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shall come the shepherdes with their flockes. Their tentes shall they pitche rounde aboute her, and euery one shall fede them that are vnder his hande.

Make battel agaisht her (shal they saye) Aryse, let vs go by, while it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, and the night shadowes fal downe: Arise, let vs go by by nyghte, & destroye her stronge holdes, for thus hathe the Lorde of hostes commaunded.

Hew downe her trees, and set by bulworkes agaynst Ierusalem. This is the ctye that must be punished, for in her is all malyciousnes. Lyke as a condyte aboundeth in water, euen so this ctye aboundeth in wickednes. Robberie and vncyghteousnes is hearde in her, sorowe and woundes are euer there in my syghte. Amende the (O Ierusalem) lest I withdrawe my hearte from the, and make the desolate: & thy lande also, that no man dwel in it. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: The residue of Israel shalbe gathered, as the remnaunte of grapes.

And therfore turne thyne hande agayne in to the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whome shall I speake, whome shall I warne that he may take hede: * Their eares are so vncircumcised, that they may not heare.

Beholde, * they take the worde of God but for a scozne, and haue no luste therto. And therfore I am so full of thyne indygnacion (O Lorde) y I may suffre no longer. Shede out thy wrath vpon the chyldren that are withoute, and vpon al yonge men. Yea, the man must be taken prisoner with y wyfe, and the aged with the crepel. Their houses with their landes and wyues shall be turned vnto straungers, whē I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitours of this lande, sayeth the Lorde. * For fro the leest vnto y most, they hange al by on couetousnes: & fro y prophet vnto y priest, they go al about in falschod & lies.

* And belyde that, they heale the hurte of my people with swete wordes, sayinge: peace, peace, when there is no peace at all. Therfore they muste be ashamed, for they haue commytted abominacion. But howe shoulde they be ashamed, when they knowe nothyng, nether of shame nor good nurtoure.

*And therfore they shal fall amonge the dayne, and in the houre when I shal byset them, they shal be broughte downe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: go in to the streetes, conspyde and make inquisicio for the olde waye: and yf it be the good and right waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for youre soules. But they saye: we wyll not walcke therin, and I wyll set watchemen ouer you, and therfore take hede vnto the voyce of the trompet. But they saye: we wyll not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentyles, and thou congregacion shalte knowe, what I haue deuyled for them. Heare thou earthe also: beholde, I wyll cause a *plage to come vpon this people, euen the frute of theyr owne ymaginacions.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes and to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherefore, * bringe ye me incense from Saba, and swete smellyng Calamus from farre countrees: Your burnt offerynges dysplease me, and I receiue not in youre sacrifices.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyl make this people fall, & there shal fall from amonge the the father with the childe, one neyghboure shal perseye with another.

Moreover thus sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, there shal come a people from the North, and a great people shal aryse from the endes of the earthe, with bowes and dartes shal they be weaponed: It is a rough and scarce people, an vnmercifull people: their voyce roareth lyke the sea, they ryde vpon horses wel appointed to the battel against the, O daughter Sion. Then shal this crye be herde: Our armes are feble, heuyenes and sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelynge with childe. No man go forth in to the felde, no mā come vpon the hie strete: for the swearde and feare of the enemye shal be on euery syde.

Wherefore, gyste a sacke cloth about the (O thou doughter of my people) spynke thy selfe with ashes, * mourne and wepe bytterly, as vpon thy onely beloued sonne: for the destroyer shal suddenly fall vpon vs. The haue I set for a prouer of my harde people, to seke out and to trye their wayes. * For they are all vnfaithfull and fallen awaye, they hange vpon fylthye lucre, they are cleane brasse and yron, for they hurte and destroye euery man. The bellous are bryt in the fyre, the leade is consumed, the melter melteth in bayne, for the euell is not taken awaye from them. Therfore shal they be called naughtye spluer, because the Lord hathe caste them oute,

The Notes.

- a. By the preachinge of the word shal the chosen be gathered vnto Christe, although the nombre of them be but very fewe.
- b. That is, I cannot but powre oute the heauye sentence of thy worde agaynst them.

The. vii. Chapter.

Jeremye is commaunded to shewe vnto the people the worde of God, which trusteth in the outwardes for wyce of the temple, that healeth nothyng. The reason that shal happē to the Jewes for the despylyng of these Prophetes. Sacrifices both not of Lord chiefly requyre of Jewes, but of they should obey his word. Copeth.

These are the wordes that god spake vnto Jeremye: * Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes house, & crye oute these wordes there, w a loude voyce, & saye: Heare the word of the Lord al ye of Iuda, & go in at this doore, to honour the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. * Amende your wayes & your counceils, and I wyll let you dwell in this place. Trust not in false lyngne wordes, sayinge: here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord, here is the temple of the Lord.

* For yf ye wyl amende your wayes, and counceils, yf ye wyll iudge ryghte betwyxte a man and his neyghboure: yf ye wyll not oppresse the straunger, the fatherles and the wyddowe: yf ye wyll not thede innocēte bloude in this place: yf ye wyll not cleue to straunge goddes to youre owne destruccio: then wyll I let you dwell in this place, yea, in the lande that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede, yea, truste in counceils, that begyle you and do you no good. For when ye haue stollen, murthered, commytted aduou-trie, and perjurye: when ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowinge straunge and vn-knowne goddes: Then come ye, & stāde before me in this house, (* whiche hath my name geuen vnto it, & saye: Tushē, we are absolved quite, though we haue done all these abhominacions.

* What thynke you this house that beareth my name, is a denne of theues:

* And these thinges are not done priue-ly, but before myne eyes, sayeth ȝ Lord.
Go to my place in * Siloh, wherunto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke wel: what I dyd to the same place for the wyckednes of my people of Israel.

And now, though ye haue done al these dedes (sayeth the Lorde) and I my selfe rose vp euer by times to warne you and to commen with you, yet woulde ye not heare me: * I called, ye woulde not an-swere. * And therfore euen as I haue done vnto Siloh, so wyll I do this house, that my name is geue vnto (and that ye put youre trust in) yea, vnto the place that I haue geuen to you & youre fathers. And I shal truste you oute of my syght, as * I haue caste out all your brythren the whole sēde of * Ephraim.

* Therfore thou shalt not praye for this people, ȝ shalt nether geue thākes, nor byd prayer for thē: thou shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wyse wyll I heare the. Seyst thou not what they do in the cytyes of Iuda, and without Jerusalem: * The chyldre gather stīckes, the fathers kyndle the fyre, the mothers kneade ȝ dowghe, to bake cakes for the quene of heauen.

They powze oute drynke offringes vnto straunge goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath: Howe be it they hurte not me (sayeth the Lorde) but rather confoude, and shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, my wrath and my indig-nacion shalbe poured oute vpon this place, vpon men & cattel, vpon ȝ trees in thefelde and all frute of the lande, and it shall burne so, that no man maye quenche it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel: * Ye heape vp youre burnte offringes with youre sacrifices, and eate ȝ fleshe. * But whē I brought your fathers out of Egypte, I spake no worde vnto thē of burnte offringes and sacrifices: but this I comaunded them, sayng: * herken and obey my voice, and I shall be youre God, and ye shal be my people: so that ye walcke in al ȝ wayes, whiche I haue commaunded you, that ye maye prospere.

* But they were not obedyent, they in-clyned not theyr eares there vnto, but wente after their owne imaginacions and after the mocions of their owne wilked herte, and so turned them selues a-wayne, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, from the time that your fathers came out of Egypte, vnto this daye.

* Neuertheles, I sent vnto them my seruauntes al the prophetes: I rose vp early and sente them worde, yet woulde they not herke, nor offre me theyr eares, but were obstynate and worse then their fathers. And thou shalt nowe speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare thee: thou shalt crye vpo thē, but they shal not answere the. Therfore shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the people, that nether heareth the voyce of the Lorde theyr God, nor receaueth his correction. * Faythfulnes and trueth is cleane roted oute of their mouth.

Wherfore cut of thyne heere, & caste it awaye, take vp a complaynte in the whole lande for the Lorde shall caste a-wayne, and scatre the people, ȝ he is dys-pleased withal. For the chyldren of Juda haue done euil in my syghte, sayeth the Lorde. * They haue set vp their ab-hominacions, in the house that hath my name, and haue despyled it. They haue also buylded an auter at * Topheth, which is in the balley of the chyldren of Hennō: ȝ they might burne their sonnes & daughters, which I neuer comaunded thē, nether came it euer in my thought.
And therfore beholde, ȝ dayes shal come (sayeth ȝ Lord) ȝ it shal no more be called Topheth, or the balley of ȝ chyldre of Hennō, but ȝ balley of ȝ slayne, * for in Topheth, they shall be buryed, because they shal els haue no rowme. * Yea, the dead bodie of this people shal be eaten vp of ȝ foules of ȝ ayre & wilde beastes the Lorde: Do men fall ſo, that they aryle not vp agayne? And turne they ſo farre awaye, that they neuer conuerter?

Wherfore thē is this people and Ieruſnot againe. They are euer the longer the more obſtynate, and wyl not be conuer-

Exod. xi. c

For I haue looked, and conſydered: * but there is no man that ſpeaketh a good word: there is no man þ taketh repentaunce for his ſynne, & wyl ſo much as ſaye: wherfore haue I done thys?

But every man (as ſoone as he is turned backe) runneth forth the ſtyll, lyke a wyld horſe in a battayle. The Storke knoweth hys apoynted tyme, the Turtle doue, the Swalowe and the Crane conſpyre the tyme of their trauayle: but * my people wyl not knowe the tyme of the punyſhmente of the Lorde. Howe darre ye ſaye thē: we are wyſe, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs.

Beholde, the vyſceatful penne of the ſcrybes, ſetteth forth lyes: therfore ſhall the wyſe be confounded, they ſhal be a-frayed and takē: for lo, * they haue caſt oute the worde of the Lorde: what wyſe dome can then be amonge them? Wherfore, I wyll geue theyr wyues vnto a-leauentes, and theyr ſeldes to deſtroy-ers.

* For from the loweſt vnto the hyeſt, they ſolowe all fylthye lucte: and from the prophete vnto the prieſt, they deale all with lyes. * Neuertheles, they heale the hurte of my people with ſwete wodes, ſayinge: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all.

I ſwe for ſhame, howe abhominable thynges do they: and yet they be not aſhamed, yea, they knowe of no ſhame.

* Wherfore in the tyme of their viſi-tacion, they ſhall fall amonge the deade bodies, ſayeth the Lorde.

* Moreouer I wyll gather them in (ſayeth the Lorde) ſo that there ſhal not be one grape vpon the vyne, nether one fygge vpon the fygge tre, and the leaues ſhal be plucke of.

Then wil I cauſe them to departe, and ſaye: why prolonge we the tyme?
Let vs gather our ſelues together, and go in to the ſtronge cytie, there ſhall we be in reſt: for the Lord oure God hath put vs to ſylence, and geuen vs water mixte with gal, to dryncke: becauſe we haue ſynned agaynſt him.

* We looked for peace, and we ſare not the better, we wayted for the tyme of health, and lo, here is nothyng but trouble.

Then ſhal the noyſe of his hoſes be hearde from Dan, the whole lande ſhal be afrayed at the neyenge of his ſtroge hoſes: for they ſhall go in, and deuoure the lande, withall that is in it: the city-es, and thoſe that dwel therein. More-ouer, I wyll ſende Cockatryces & ſerpentes amonge you (whiche wyll not be charmed) and they ſhall byte you.

you, sayeth the Lorde.

Sorrowe is come vpon me, and heynnes bereth my hert: for lo, the voyce of the cryinge of my people is herde fro a farre countre: Is not the Lorde in Silon? Is not the kynge in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (halp Lorde saye) with their ymages and foolyshe straunge fashyons? The haruest is gone, the Sommer hath an ende, and we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of the hurte of my people: I am heuy and abashed, for there is no more cryacle at Gilead, & there is no Phisicion, that can heale the hurte of my people.

The notes.

a. For outcote I wyl gather them in. &c. The meaning is: I wyl gather the Jewes from all partes of Jewrye vnto Ierusalem. There shall no fygge, grape, or other fruite remaine in the byllages or feldes: and so shall they haue no luste to abyde there, but shall be fayne to flye to the cite. Wherby caused be them to flye, and there also sampted them and delpycted them into theyr enemyes handes. Suche punishment had theyr synnes deserued.

b. Bath geue vs water myrte with gal to dryncke, that is, bath wrapped vs in misery and wretched thraldome.

c. I wyl sende Cockatrices and serpentes. &c. That is, I wyl bynge amonge you a ferece companye of scouldyars, with whose deadlye arrowes and dartes, and erpe halbe slayne euē as though ye should perishe with the strokes of vnenomous byrnnges of Cockatrices and serpentes.

The .ix. Chapter.

The complaine and bewaylynge of the Prophete, for the malice of the people. In the knowledge of God ought we onely to reioyce. The vncircumcised of herte.

Who wil geue my head water inough, & a wel of teares for myne eyes: that I maye wepe night and daye, for the slaughter of my people? Would

God that I had a cotage some where farre from folcke, that I myghte leaue my people, and goe from them: for they be all aduourtrers and a chynckynge sorte. They bende their tungen lyke bowes, to shote out lyes: As for the truth, they maye nothyng a waye withal in the worlde. for they go fro one wyckednes to another, and holde nothyng of me, sayeth the Lorde.

* Yea, one muste kepe him selfe from another, no man maye safely truste hys owne brother: * for one brother vndermpneth another, and one neyghboure begyleth another. Yea, one dyssembleth with another, and they deale wth no truth. * They haue practised theyr tuges to lye, and take great paynes to do mischief. They haue set their stole in the myddest of disceate, and for very dissimblynge falshe they wyl not know me, sayeth the Lorde.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: beholde, I wil melte them, and trye them, for what shoulde I els do to my people: * Their tungen are lyke sharpe arrowes, to speake dysceat. With their mouthe they speake peaceably to their neyghboure, but pruely they laye wayte for him. * Should I not punishe them for these thynges, sayeth the Lorde? Should I not be auēged of any such people as this? Upon the mountaynes wyl I take vp a lamentacion and sorrowfull crye, and a mournynge vpon the fayre playnes of the wildernes: Namely, howe they are so bzente vp, that no mā goeth there any more: Yea, a man shall not heare one beast crye there.

Byrdes and cattel are all gone from thence: * I wyl make Ierusalem also an heape of stones, & a denne of venymous wormes. And I wyl make the cityes of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? Or to whome hathe the Lorde spoken by mouthe, that he maye shewe this, and saye: * O thou lande, why perishest thou so? Wherfore arte thou so bzente vp, and lyke a wilderness, that no man goeth thorow? Yea, the Lorde him selfe tolde the same vnto the, that forsoke his lawe, and kepthe not the thinge that he gaue them in commaundement, nether lyued thereafter: * but forlowed the wyckednes of their owne hertes, & serued straunge goddes, as theyr fathers taughte them.

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes, the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl fede this people with wormewood, and geue them gall to dryncke. * I wil scatter them also amonge the Heathen, whome nether they nor their fathers haue knowne: * I wil sende a swearde amonge them, to persecute them, vntyll I bynge them to noughte. Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes: loke that ye call for mournynge wyues, and sende for wyse women: that they they come hostly, & synge a mournynge songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of oure eyes, and that oure eye lydes maye gush out of water.

F For there is a lamettable noyle hearde of Sion: O howe are we so soze destroyed: O howe are we so pyteouslye con-founded: We muste forsake oure owne natural countre, and we are shut out of oure owne lodgynges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women) and let poure eares regarde the wordes of hys mouth: that ye maye lerne your doughters to mourne, and that euery one maye teache her neyghboure, to make lamentacion. Namely thus: Deathe is clymynge bp in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to our houses, to destroie the chylde before the doze, and the yong man in the strete.

G But tel thou playnely, thus sayeth the Lorde: * The deade bodys of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as þ donge vpon the felde, and as the heye after the mow, and there shalbe no man to take them bp. Moreouer, thus sayeth þ lord: Let not the wyse man reioyse in hys wysedome, nor the stronge man in hys strengthe, nether the ryche man in hys ryches: * But who so wyll reioyse, let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth, and knoweth me: for I am þ Lord, whiche do mercede, equyte and ryghteousnes vpon the earth. * Therfore haue I pleasure in suche thynges, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the time commeth (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyll byset a all them, whose foreskynne is vncircumcised. The Egipcians, the Jewes, þ Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, * and the shauen Madianites, þ dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcised in the fleshe, but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised in the herte.

The notes

a. All (that is) as well the Jewes as the Gentyles: for the one is as free as the other. The Jewes are cyples as well as the Heathen, as touchynge the herte, although they be circumcised, as touchynge the fleshe. Therefore are they here reckened amonge the vncircumcised.

The .x. Chapter.

The constellacions of þ starres are not to be feared. Of the weaknes of Idoles, and of the power of God. Of euill curates.

Heare the worde of the Lorde, that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel: Thus saith the Lorde: * Ye shall not learne after the maner of the Heathen, and ye shall not be afrayed for þ tokens of heauen: for the Heathen are afrayed of suche: yea, all the customes & lawes of the Gentyles are nothyng, but vanityte. * They hewe downe a tree in the wod with the hādes of the worcke man, and fasten it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it in nayles and hammers, þ it moue not. It standeth as styfe as the palme tree, it can nether speake nor go, but must be borne. * Be not ye afrayde of suche, for they can do nether good nor euell. But there is none lyke vnto the, O Lorde, and greate is the name of thy power. Who woulde not feare the? O what kynge of the Gentyles woulde not obeye the?

For amonge all the wyse men of the Gentyles, and in all their kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lyckened vnto the. They are all together vnlearned and vnwyse. All their conynge is but vanityte: namely, wod, syluer, whiche is brought out of Charis, and beaten to plates: and golde fro Ophir, * a worcke that is made with the hande of þ craftsman and the caster, clothed in yelow sylcke and scarlet: euen so is þ worcke of theit wyse men all together. But the Lorde is a true God, a liuynge god, and an euerlastynge kyng. * If he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gentiles maye not abyde his indignacion.

* As for their goddes, it maye wel be sayde of them: they are goddes, that made nether heauen nor earth: therfore shal they perishe from the earthe, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for oure God) he made the earthe with hys power, and with hys wysedome hathe he synned the whole com- passe of the worlde, with hys dyscrecyon on hathe he sprede oute the heauens. At hys voyce the waters gather toge- ther in the ayre, * he draweth bp the cloudes from the vttemoste partes of the earthe: he turneth lyghtenynge to rayne, and byngeth forth þ wyndes out of their treasures: his wysedome maketh all men fooles. And confounded

*The bayne craftesmen in their wor-kes, that they in their banpte haue made, shall peryshe one with another in the tyme of visytacion. Neuertheles, Jacobs porcion is not suche: but it is he, that hath made all thynges, and Israel is the rodde of hys inheritaunce: The Lorde of hostes is his name. Put awaye thyne vnclemesse out of þ lande, thou that arte in the stronge cityes. For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wil nowe thruste oute the inhabitours of this lande a great waye of, and trouble them of suche a fashion, that they shall no more be founde.

Alas, howe ain I hurter. Alas, howe paynefull are my scourges vnto me:
for I consydre this sorowe by my selfe, and I must suffer it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my coardes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to sprede out my tente, or to set vp my hangynges. For the herdmen haue done folyshe, þ they haue not soughte the Lorde. Therfore haue they dealte vnwysely with their cattel, and all are scattered abrode. Beholde, the noyse is harde at hande, and greate sedycio out of the north: to make the cityes of Iuda a wyldernes, and a dwellinge place for Dragons. * Nowe I knowe (O Lord) that it is not in mas power to order his owne wayes, or to rule hys owne steppes and goynges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O lord, but with fauoure * and not in thy wrathe, byynge vs not vtterly to noughte. * Poure oute thyne indignation rather vpon the Gentyles, that knowe the not, and vpon the people that cal not on thy name: * And that because they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Jacob, and haue rote out hys gloire.

The .xi. Chapter.

I curse of them that obey not the word of Goddes promyse. The people of Iuda folowynge the steppes of they fathers, worshipped straunge Goddes. The lord sayeth that he wyl not heare the Jewes, and forbyds both also Jeremie to praye for them.

This is another Sermon, a whiche the Lorde commaunded Jeremie for to preache: sayinge: Heare the wordes of the couenaunt, and speake vnto all Iu-da, and to all them that dwell at Ieru-salem. And saye thou vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: * Cursed be euery one that is not obedynt vnto the wordes of this couenaunt: which I comaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them out of Egypt, from the * yro forname, sayinge: Be obedyente vnto my voice, and do accordyng to al that I comaunde you: so shal ye be my people, and I wyl be your God, and wyl kepe my promyse, * that I haue sworne vnto your fathers: Namelye, that I would geue them a lande which floweth with mylke and hony, as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this daye. Then answered I, and sayde. Amen. It is esuen so Lorde, as thou sayest.

Then the Lorde sayde vnto me as gayne: preache this in the cittes of Iu-da and rounde aboute Ierusalem, and saye: Heare the wordes of this coue-naunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted your fathers, euer sence the tyme that I broughte them out of the lande of Egypte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnynge by tymes, sayinge: herken vnto my voyce: * Neuertheles, they woulde not obey me, nor enclpne their eares vnto me, but folowed the wycked ymagina-cions of their owne hertes. And therfore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this coue-naunt, that I gaue them to kepe, which they (not with vnderstandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is founde out, þ whole Israel and al these citezens of Ierusalem are gone backe.
They haue turned the selues to þ blas-phemies of their forefathers, which had no lust to heare my word. Eue lyke wise haue these also folowed straunge god-des, & worshipped the. The house of Israel & Iuda haue broke my couenaunte, whiche I made with their fathers.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: Be-holde, I wyl sende a plage among you, whiche ye shall not be able to escape:

The. xii. Chapter.

¶ The Prophete marvelleth greatly at the prospertye of the wicked, although he confesse GOD to be righteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh against Carates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde thynketh destruction unto the nation s he bordered upon Jewrye, which troubled & vexed it.

Lord, thou art more ryghteous, then that I shoulde dispute w
the: Neuertheles, let me talke with the in thynges reasonable.

* How happeneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so perilous: and that it goeth so well with them, which (without any shame) offende and lyue in wyckednesse: (Thou platest them, they take rote, they growe, and brynge forth frute. They booste muche of the, yet doest thou not punyſhe them. But thou Lorde (to whome I am well knowne) thou that hast sene, and proued my herte, * take them a waye, lyke as a flocke is caried to the slaughter house, and appoynte them for the daye of slaughter.

Howe longe shal the lande mourne, 3e *and al the herbes of the selde perishe, for the wyckednes of them that dwell therin.

The cattel and the byrdes are gone, & yet saue they: * tū the, God wyl not destroye vs utterly.

Seynge thou arte weery in run-then runne with hoxles: In a peaceable wylte thou do in the furious pryde of Jordan: for thy brethē & thy kynred haue all together despyed thee, & cryed out vpon the in thine absence. * Seleue them not, thoughe they speake sayre wordes to the. As for me (say I) I haue forsaken myne owne dwellinge place, and lette myne heritage. My lyfe also that I loue so well, haue I geuen into the handes of myne enemies. * Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a Lyon in the wod. It cryed oute vpon me, therfore haue I forsaken it. Myne heritage is vnto me, as a speckled hyrde, a hyrde of diuerse coloures is vpon it. Goe hence, and gather all the beastes of the felde together, that they maye cate it vp.

* Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my vineyarde, and troden vpon my porcion. Of my pleasaunte porcion, they haue made a wyldernes and deserte. They haue layde it waste: And now that it is waste, it sigheth vnto me. Yea, the whole lande lyeth waste, and no man regardeth it. The destroyers come out the heeth euerye waye, for the swerde of the Lorde shall consume frome the one ende of the lande to the other, and no fleshe shall haue reste. They shall sow wheate, and reepe thornes. They shall take heritage in possession, but it shall doe the no good. And ye shall be confounded of youre owne winnynges, because of the greate wrath of the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde vpon all myne euell neyghbours, that laye hade on myne heritage, whiche I haue geuen my people of Israell: Beholde, I wyll plucke them (namelye Israell) out of their lande, and put out the house of Iuda frome amonge them. * And when I haue rooted them oute, I wyll be at one with them agayne, and wyll haue mercye vpon them: And bringe them agayne, euerye man to hys owne heritage, and into his lande. And yf they (namelye that trouble my people) wyll learne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name: The Lorde lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shall they be rekened among my people. * But yf they wyll not obey, then wyll I rote out the same folke, and destroye them, sayeth the Lorde.

The notes.

* Thus spake the wicked of the prophete by the map of rebuke. As thoughe they had sayde by a parable. When thou wast but in a litle towne thou couldest not beare the persecution of thyn owne citetins, and housholde folkes: how wyllst thou then beare the princes and chiefe ruelars of Iuda, and the nobles of Ierusalem? And after, by the peasable sure lande is vnderstande Anathoth, and by the pride of Iorda Ierusalem. The litle riuer of Anathoth is not to be compared to the greate flowinge streames of Iordan. If he were despised of hys owne auditoures howe shoulde he be hearde of other, and those greater and excellenter.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes is pychegured, and their sparkynge abode. Why Israel was receaued to be the people of God, and why they were forsaken.

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: Goe thy waye, and get the a linnen breeche, and gyrd it aboute thy loynes, and let it not be wete. Then I got me a breeche, accordynge to the commaundemente of the Lorde, and put it aboute my loynes. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me agayne: Take the breech that thou hast prepared and put it aboute the, and get thee vp, and goe vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the rocke. So wente I, and hydde it, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde spake vnto me. Up, and get thee to Euphrates, and fet the breeche frome thence, whiche I commaunded thee to hyde there. Then wente I to Euphrates, and dygged vp, and toke the breeche from the place where I had hyd it: and beholde, the breeche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothyng.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Euen so wyll I corrupte the pryde of Iuda, and the hye mynde of Ierusalem. This people is a wicked people, they wyl not heare my worde, they folow the wycked imaginations of their owne heart, and hange vpon straunge Goddes, them haue they serued and wurchypped: and therfore they shall be as this breeche, that serueth for nothyng. For as straitlye as a breeche lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so straitlye dyd I bynde the whole house of Israell, and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, sayeth the Lorde: That they myghte be my people: That they might haue a glorious name: that they myght be in honoure: But they woulde not obeye me. Therfore laye thys rydle before them, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Every pot shall be fylled with wine. And they shal saye: Thynckest thou we knowe not, that every pot shalbe filled with wine. Then shalt thou saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I shall fylle all the inhabitoures of thys lande with dronckenes, the kynges that sytte vpon Dauids stole, the Priestes and Prophetes, with all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I wyll shute them one agaynst another, yea, the fathers agaynste the sonnes, sayeth the Lorde.

I wyll not pardon them, I wyll not spare them, nor haue pitye vpon them: but destroye them. Be obedyente, geue eare, take no disdayne at it, for it is the Lorde hym selfe that speaketh. Honour the Lorde youre God herein, or he take hys lyghte frome you, and or euer your fete stamble in darkenesse at the hylle: leste when ye loke for hys lyght, he tourne it into the shadowe and darkenesse of deathe. But yf he wyll not heare me, that geue you secrete warnynge, I wyll mourne fro my whole hearte for youre stubburnesse. * Witte you wyll I wepe, and the teares shall gush out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shalbe carryed awaye captiue. Tell the kyng and the ruelars: Humble youre selues, sette you downe lowe, for the crowne of youre glorie shal fall frome youre heade. The cryes toward the South shalbe shut vp, and no man shal open them. All Iuda shalbe carryed awaye captiue, so that none shal remayne.

Lyfte vp youre eyes, and beholde them, that come from the North: Lyke a fatte flocke shal they fall vpon thee.
* To whome wyllte thou make thy moone, when they come vpon thee? for thou hast taught them thy selfe, and made them maysters ouer thee. Shall not sorowe come vpon thee, as on a woman trauaplynge with childe? And yf thou wouldest saye then in thine heart: Wherfore come these thynges vpon me? * Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemies, shall thy hynder partes and thy fete be discovered. For lyke as the man of Iude maye chaunge hys skynne, and the catte of the mountayne her spottes: So maye ye that be exercesed in euell, doe good. Therfore wyll I scatter you, lyke as the stubble that is taken awaye with the Southe wynde.

Thys shal be youre porcion, and the porcion of youre measure, wherewith ye shall be rewarded of me, sayeth the Lorde: Because ye haue forgotten me, and put youre truste in deceitfull thin-ges. * Therfore shall I tourne thy clothes ouer thy heade, and discover thy thyghes, that thy pryncples maye be sene, thy aduoutye, thy deadly malice, thy beastlinesse and thy shameful whor-dome. for vpon the felde and hylles I haue sene thy abominacions. Woe be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wyllte thou euer be clesed anye more?

The. xliii. Chapter.

Of the darthe that shoulde come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people askynge: merce of the Lorde. The unfaythfull people are not heard. Of prayer, sayynge and of false prophetes that seduce the people.

In the woordes of the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremye, I concernynge the darthe of the frutes. Iuda shal mourne, men shal not goe muche more thorow hys gates: The lande shalbe no moore had in reputacion, and the crye of Jerusalem shal breake oute. The lordes shall sende their seruauntes to fetch water, and when they come to the welles, they shal fynde no water, but shal carie their vesselles home empty. They shall be ashamed and confounded, and shall couer theyre heades. * For the grounde shalbe dryed vp, because there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowe-men also shalbe ashamed, and shal couer their heades. The wynde shal forsake the ponge sawne, that he bringeth forth in the felde because there shal be no grasse. The wyld Asses shal stande in the Masse, and drawe in their wynde like y<sup>e</sup> Dragons, their eyes shal faile for wante of grasse.

Doutles oure owne wickednesse re-warde vs: But Lorde doe thou accordunge to thy name, though oure transgressions and synnes be manye. * For thou arte the conforzte and helpe of Israell in the tyme of trouble. Why wyllte thou be as a straunger in the lande, and as one that goeth ouer the felde

felde, and cometh in onely to remayne for a nyghte: why wylt thou make thy selfe a coward, and as it were a Gyaunte that yet maye not helpe: for thou arte ours (O Lorde) and we beate thy name, therfore forsake vs not.

Then spake the Lorde, concerning thys people that haue pleasure to goe so nygblly with their fete, and leaue not of, and therfore displease the Lorde: in so muche, that he wyl nowe byngge agayne to remembraunce all their misdedes, and punyssh all their synnes. Yea, euen thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: *Thou shalt not praye to doe this people good. * for though they faste, I wyl not heare their prayers. And though they offer burnt offerynges and sacrifices, yet wyl I not accepte them. for I wyl destroy them with the swerde, hunger and pestilence. Then answered I: O Lorde God, the *prophetes saye vnto them: Tyshe, ye shal see no swerde, and no hunger shal come vpon you, but the Lorde shal geue you continual rest in this place.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me. The Prophetes preache lyes vnto them in my name. I haue not spoken with the, neither gaue I them anye charge, neither dyd I send the: yet they preach vnto you false visions, charmyng vanitie, and disceatfulnesse of their owne heart. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: As for those prophetes that preache in my name (whome I neuertheless haue not sent) and that saye: fytte, there shal neither battell nor hunger be in thys lande: * With swerde and with hunger shal those prophetes perishe, and the people to whome they haue preached shal be caste oute of Ierusalem, dye of hunger, and be slayne with the swerde (*and there shal be no man to burye them) bothe they and their wyues, their sonnes and their daughters. for thus wyl I powze their wickednesse vpon them. This shalte thou saye also vnto them: * Myne eyes shal wepe without ceasinge daye and nyghte. for my people shal be destroyed wth great harme, and shal perishe wth a great plage. for yf I goe into the felde, lo, it lyeth all full of slayne men: If I come into the citie, lo, they be all famished of honger.

Yea, theyre prophetes also and priestes shal be ledde into an vnknewen lande.

Haste thou then bitterlye forsaken Iuda: (sayde I) doest thou so abhorre Ston: Or haste thou so plagued vs; that we can be healed no moore: * Wee looked for peace, and there cometh no good: for the tyme of healthe, and loe, here is nothyng but trouble. Wee knowledg (O Lorde) all oure misdedes, and the synnes of oure fathers, that we haue offended the. Be not displeased (O Lorde) for thy names sake, * forget not thy lounge kyndenes: remembre the trone of thyne honoure, breake not þ couenaunte, that thou haste made with vs. * Are there any amonge the Goddes of the Gentyles, that sende rayne or geue the Showers of heauen: Doest not thou it (O Lorde oure God) in whome we truste: Yea, Lorde, thou doest al these thynges.

The Notes.

a. Why wylt thou be as a straunger. &c. As whos saye. Thou behauest thy selfe vnto vs as a straunger, or as a wayfaringe man: for thou settest not by vs, nor disposeth thy strengthes to helpe vs.
b. Some read, but thou, O Lord, art in þ middell of vs: and thy name is called on, of vs.

The .xv. Chapter.

The Lorde wyl not heare Moyses or Aarons, if they pray for þ people, but wyl wrappe them in manye miseries. The cause of suche great mysteries.

Then spake the Lorde vnto me, & said: * though Moyses and Samuell stode befoze me, yet haue I no hearte to thys people. Dwyue them awaye, that they may go out of my syght. And yf they saye vnto the: whyther shal we goe: Then tell them: The Lorde geueth you thys answer: * Some vnto deathe, some to the swerde, some to hunger, some into captiuite. for I wyl byngge foure plagis vpon them sayeth the Lorde. The swerde shal strangle them, the dogges shal deuoure them, * the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earthe shal eat them vp, and destroye them. shall beweepe them, no man shall clyppe or haue hym selfe for them.

There shall not one viset another, to mourne with them for the dead, or to comforte them. One shall not offer another the cuppe of consolacion, to forget their heynesse for father and mother. * Thou shalt not goe into theyr feast house, to sytte downe, muche lesse to eate or dryncke with them. For thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: * Beholde, I shal take awaye out of thys place, the voyce of myrthe and gladnesse, the voyce of the byrde: grome and of the byrde: Yea, and that in youre dayes, that ye maye se it.

Howe when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they saye vnto thee: * Wherefore hath the Lorde deuyled all thys greate plage for vs?
What is the offence and synne, that we haue done agaynste the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them thys an-swere: * because your fathers haue forsaken me (sayeth the Lorde) and haue cleued vnto straunge Gods, whom they haue honored and worshipped: But me hauesthey forsaken, & haue not kepte my lawe. * And ye with youre shamefull blasphemies, haue exceded & wickednesse of youre fathers. For euery one of you foloweth the frowarde & euell ima-ginacion of his owne hearte, and is not obedient vnto me.

* Therefore wyll I caste you oute of thys lande, into a lande that ye and youre fathers know not: And there shal ye serue straunge Goddes daye and nyghte, there wyll I shewe you no fa-uoure. * Beholde, therfore (sayeth the Lorde) the dayes are come, that it shall no moore be sayde: The Lorde lyueth, whiche brought the children of Israel oute of the lande of Egypte: But (it shall be sayde) the Lorde lyueth, that broughte the children of Israel frome the North, and from all landes where I had scatted them. For I wyll bringe them agayne in to the lande, & I gaue vnto their fathers.

Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll sende out manye & synners to take the,
and after that wyll I sende oute manye hunters to hunte them oute, frome all mountaynes and hylles and out of the caues of stones. For myne eyes beholde all their wayes, and they can not be hyd fro my face, neither can their wicked dedes be kepte close oute of my syghte.

But first wyll I sufficientely rewarde their shamefull blasphemies and syn-nes, wherewith they haue despyled my lande: Namelye, with their stynckynge Idols and abominacions, wherewith they haue fylled myne heritage. * O Lorde, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto thee frome the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verelye oure fathers haue cleued vnto lyes, their Idolles are but bayne and vn-profitable. Howe can a man make those hys Goddes, whiche are not able to be Goddes. And therfore I wyll once teach them (sayeth the Lorde) I wyll shewe them my hande and power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

The Notes.

a. The maner of the Prophetes commence, is, first vnto to condemne, and after to releace and conforte the faythfull, as Jeremie doeth here in this chapter, and as it is vnto the whole scripture thorowe.

b. By these sisters are vnderstand the hostes, by whom the Lorde scourged the Jewes, and fished awaye their euyls. At foure sondre draughtes were foure of their kynnes taken, and at euery tyme some of the cheaf people withal. But at the last in the tyme of zedekiah was al the rest of the people hunted out, of those cruel hunters & Chaldees. iiii. Reg. xlv. a. b. Read the note in the xlvii.

The xlii. Chapter.

The frowardnesse of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put theyr confydence in man, and those blessed that trust to God. Manne heart is wycked, God is the searcher of the heart. The yuyng waters are forsaken. The holowynge of the Saboth is commaunded.

Yure synne (O ye tribe of Iuda) is written in the table of youre heartes, and grauen so vp on the edges of youre aulters with a penne of yron, and with an adamant clawe: that youre chyldren also maye thynke vpon youre aulters, woddes, thycke trees, hye hylles, mountaynes, and felde.

* Wherefore, I wyll make all your substaunce and treasure be spoyled, for the great sinne that ye haue done vpon your hye places thorowe out all the coastes of youre lande. Ye shalbe caste out also frome the heritage, that I gaue you. And I will subdue you vnder the he-uye bondage of your enemyes in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue mynystred lyke to my indignacyon, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Cursed be the man that putteth hys truste in man, and that taketh fleshe for hys arme: And he whose hearte departeth frome the Lorde. He shall be lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thinge that is for to come, he shall not see it: But dwell in a drye place of the wyldernes, in a salte and vnoccupied lande. * Blessed is the man that, putteth hys truste in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lord him selfe. * for he shall be as a tree, that is planted by the water syde: whiche spreadeth oute the rote vnto moystnesse, whō the heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leaues are grene. And though there grow but lytle frute because of drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer lea-ueth of to bynge forth fruite. Amonge all thynges- lyuynge, man hath the the mooste disceatfull and vnserchea-ble hearte.

Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lorde searche oute the grounde of the hearte, and trye the reynes, and re-warde euerye man accordynge to hys wayes, and accordynge to the fruite of his councelles.

* The disceatfull maketh a nest, but byngeth forthe no yonge: He commeth by ryches, but not ryghteouslye.
 In the myddest of his life must he leaue them behynde hym, and at the laste be founde a verie foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose trone is mooste glorious, excellent and of mooste antiquite, wherche dwellest in the place of oure holpe rest: Thou arte the comforte of Israel.
 All they that forsake thee, shall be confounded: All they that departe frome thee, shall be written in earth. * for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very con-dite of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me (O Lorde) and I shall be whole: saue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou arte my prayse. Beholde, these men sape vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lorde? Let it come, where as I neuerthelesse ledynge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by violence. For I neuer desired any mans death, thys knowest thou well. My wordes also were ryght before thee. Be not nowe terryble vnto me, O Lorde, * for thou arte he in whome I hope, whē I am in perel. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be astrayde, and not me. Thou shalt bynge vpon them the tyme of their plage, and shalt destroye them right soze.

Agayne, thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Goe and stande vnder the gate, where thozowe the people and the kynges of Iuda goe oute and in, yea, vnder al the gates of Jerusale, and say vnto the: heare y worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, & al thou people of Iuda, & all ye citezins of Jerusalem that goe thozowe thys gate: Thus the Lorde commaundeth: * take hede of your lyues, y pe carpe no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bynge it thozowe the gates of Ierusalem: Ye shall beare no burthen also out of your houses in the Sabboth. * Ye shall doe no labour therein, but halowe the Sabboth, * as I commaunded your fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, neither hekened they vnto me: But were obstinate and stubburne, and neither obeyed me, nor receaued my correccion. Neuertheles, yf ye will heare me (sayeth the Lorde) and beate no burthen in to the citie thozowe thys gate vpon y Sabboth. If ye wyl halow the Sabboth, so that ye doe no woorkes therein: Then shall there goe thozow the gates of this citie, kynges and princes, that shall syt vpon the stole of Dauid:
 They shall be carped vpon charettes, and ryde vpon horses, bothe they and their wynces. Yea, whole Iuda, and al the citezins of Ierusalem shall goe here thozowe, and thys cytye shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also frome the cities of Iuda, frome aboute Ierusalem, and from the lande of Ben Iamin, from the playnefeldes, frome the mountaynes and from the wyldernes: whiche shall bynge burnt offerynges, sacrifices, oblacyns, and incense, and offer by chancelgeyunge in the house of the Lorde

The notes

a. Thattaket hys for his arme, that is, that putteth his trust in anye thinge but in the Lord. b. Ye shall do no labour therein, but halowe the Sabbath, as I commaunded your fathers. c. The foundation of the saythe, is, to beleue Goddes promyses, and that made the whole worlde, and doeth also gouerne it: And further that he knoweth and wyl iudge all thynges. ecc. These thynges byd the lawe require in keppinge of the Sabbath, to confesse bothe with worde & signe: and to geue diligence heade to the hearynge and interpretinge of the lawe, to thincke of the glory of God, and to relieue the faythful soule with the fodder of the word, to minister occasion also vnto the simple that they lykewyse might attempte suche thynges in their houses amongst their household folkes, to be pitifull ouer the werynes of suche neyghbours as laboured sore al y weeke longe, and relace them, to attende and geue hede to the exerceyses of the spirite and to the consolation and comfortinge of their neyghbours: That onelpe to abstayne from outwarde woorkes, and fulfill their appetites & lustes, for that byd the Loide forbyd. The Sabbath shoulde be applyed to y leafull seruinge of God, not to synfullnes and wantones. It is commaunded to be sanctified, not to be pelured and defiled with noughtynesse. To God alone muste we also kepe it, and call on his name: other goddes or goddes felowes oughte we not to enquire of, nor fall downe vnto them. But when such occasions come as turne our rest into occupation and labour, then oughte we to remember that the Sabbath was ordeyned for man, not man for the Sabbath. Mat. ii. d. so that in the meane season, the feare of God and y chaite toward our neyghbour whiche are the cheefe and principall thynges in the obseruation of the Sabbath, be not lightly regarded.

The. xliii. Chapter.

God sheweth by the example of a potter, that it is in his power to destroye the despyers of his word, and to helpe them agayne when they amende. The conspiracye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremie, hys prayer agaynst his abusers.

Thys is another communicacyon, y God had with Jeremie, sayinge: Arise, and goe downe into y potters house, and there shal I tell thee moore of my mynde. Nowe when I came to the potters house, I founde hym making his woerke vpon a whele. The vessell that the potter made of claye, brake amonge hys handes: So he beganne a newe, and made another vessell, accordyng to hys mynde. Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: * May I not do w you, as thys potter doeth, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Loide: Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hande, euen as the claye is in the potters hande.

* When I take in hande to rote out, to destroye, or to waste away any people or kyngedome, & yf that people (agaynst whome I haue thus deuyled) conuert from their wickednes: I immediately, I repent of y plage that I deuyled to bringe vpon them. * Agayne: When I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kyngedome: yf the same people doe euell before me, and heare not my voyce: I immediately, I repente of the good, that I deuyled to doe for them.

Speake nowe therefore vnto whole Iuda, and to them that dwell at Ierusalem: Thus saith the Loide: beholde, I am deuylyng a plage for you, and am takynge a thyng in hande agaynst you.

* Therefore let euerye man turne fro his euell waye, take vpon you y thyng that is good, and doe ryghte. But they saie: No moze of thys. * We wyl folowe oure owne ymaginacions, and do euerye man accordyng to the wylfulnesse of his owne mynde.

Therefore thus sayeth y Loide: aske amonge the heathen, yf any man hath hearde suche horrible thynges, as the daughter of Sio hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) moisten the feldes? Or make the sprynges of waters be so grauen awaye, that they runne no moze, geue moystnes, nor make fruitefull? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto bayne Goddes. And while they solowed their owne wayes they are come oute of the hye strete, and gone into a fote waye not bled to be troden. Where thorow they haue broughte their land into an euerlastynge wyldernesse and scozne: * So that who so euer trauayleth therby, shal be abashed, and wagge their heades. With an east wynde wyl I scatter the, before their enemyes. And when their destruction cometh, I wyl turne

The prophesy: of the destruction of Ierusalem, for the contempe and despyse of the worde of God.

Moreouer, thus said the Lord vnto Jeremie: Goe thy way, and bye the an earthen pytcher, and brynge forth the Senatours, and chiefe priestes into the valley of the children of Hennom, which lieth before the poozte that is made of bricke, & shewe them there the wordes, that I shal tell the, and saye thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and ye citezys of Ierusalem: * Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll brynge suche a plage vpon thys place, that the eares of al that heare it, shal glow. And I because they haue forsaken me, and vnhalowed thys place, and haue offred in it vnto straunge goddes: whom neither they, their fathers, nor the kynges of Iuda haue knownen. They haue fylled thys place also with the bloude of innocetes. * for they haue sette vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their children for a burnt offering vnto Baal, which I neither commaunded, nor charged the, neither thought ones ther vpon.

Beholde therefore, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that thys place shal no moore be called. * Topheth, nor the valley of I children of Hennom, but the valley of slaughter. For in thys place wyll I slaye the Senatours of Iuda & Ierusalem, & kyll them downe with the swerde in I sight of their enemies, and of the I seke their lyues. And their deede carcases wil I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the felde. And I wyll make thys cite to desolate, and despyled: * That who so goeth therby, shal be abashed and ieast vpon her, because of al her plages.

* In Topheth shal they be buryed, for they shal not haue none other place. Thus wyll I doe vnto thys place also, sayeth I Lorde, and to them that dwell therein: Yea, I wyll doe to this cite, as vnto Topheth (for the houses of Ierusalem & the houses of I kynges of Iuda are defyled, lyke as Topheth) because of al I houses, in whose parlors they did sacrifice vnto all the hoste of heauen, and poured out bryncke offerynges vnto straunge Goddes. And so Jeremie came fro Topheth, where the Lord had sent him to prophesy, and stood in the courte of the house of the Lorde, and spake to al the people: Thus sayeth the Lorde Loorde of hostes the God of Israell: Beholde, I will brynge vpon this cy-tie and vpon euery towne aboute it, all

Chapter.

Jeremy is smitten and cast into pylson, for vnto shynge of the word of God. He propheseth & captivity of Babyl. He complayneth & he is a motting stocke, for the word of God. He is rebulld by the sperte to preache & woide, well he will he not.

When Whaſhur p̄ priest, ſonne of Emmer, chief in the houſe of p̄ Lord, heard Jeremy preache ſo ſtedfaſtly: he ſinote Jeremy, & put him in p̄ ſtockes, that are by the hye gate of Beſamin, in the houſe of the Loorde. The nexte day folowynge Whaſhur brought Jeremy out of the ſtockes againe. The ſayde Jeremy vnto hym: The Loorde ſhall call the no moze Whaſhur (that is excellent and increaſynge) but Bagoz, (that is, fearful & afrayed) euery where.
For thus ſayeth the Loorde: beholde, I wyl make the afrayed, euē thy ſelfe, and all that fauour the: which ſhall perſe the with the ſwerde of their enemyes, euē before thy face.

And I will geue whole Iuda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, whiche ſhall carpe ſome vnto Babylon p̄ſoners, and ſlate ſome with ſweard.

Moreover, all the ſubſtaunce of this lande, all they p̄cious and gorgeous wykes, all coſtlyneſſe, and all the treasure of the kyngeſ of Iuda: wyl I geue into the handes of they enemyes, whych ſhall ſpoyle them, and carpe the vnto Babilou. But as for the (Wha-ſhur) thou ſhalte be caried vnto Babi-lou with all thyne houſholde, & to Ba-bilou ſhalte thou come, where thou ſhalt dye, and be buryed: thou and all thy fa-uourers, to whom thou haſte preached lyes. O Loorde, thou makeſt me weake, but thou reſtreſſeſt me, and makeſt me ſtronge agayne. All the daye long am I deſpyed, and laughed to ſcorne of euery man: becauſe I haue nowe preached longe agaynſt malp̄cious tyrannye, and ſhewed theym of deſtruction.

For the which cauſe they caſt p̄ word of the Loorde in my teeth, and take me euery to the word.

Wherefore, I thoughte from hence forth, not to ſpeake of hi, nor to preache any moze in hys name. But the worde of the Loorde was a very butynge ſyre in my hearte, and in my bones, whiche when I would haue ſtopped, I myght not. For why, I heard ſo many berſons and blaſphemys, yea, euē of myne owne compaynys, and of ſuche as were conuerſaunt with me: whych went about, to make me afrayed, ſayinge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to feare hym, & make him hold hys tonge:
that we maye ouercome him, and be auenged of him.

But the Loorde ſtoode by me, lyke a myghtye gyant: therfore my perſecu-ters fell, and coulde do nothyng. They ſhall be ſore confounded, for they haue done vnto wiſſely, they ſhal haue an euer-laſtyng ſhame. And nowe, O Loorde but patiently looked for the helpe of God. It is no new thing (ye may see) for Wythoppes to persecute the prophetes of the Lorde, for they preachyng of the trouth and constancie.

b. What is signified by cursyng of the day is shewed in Job. iii. a. Thys sentence and other lyke are not to be taken as examples of impacience in holy men, but as the confession of frailtye of man, complaynyng thus vnto hym & onely can helpe and comforte them.

The .xxi. Chapter.

The propheceth that zedekiah shall be taken, and the cite burned.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy, * what time as king zedekiah sente vnto hym pasur the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophoniah & sonne of Basaias priest, saying: * Take counsell at the Lorde (we pray the) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon besegeth vs, of the Lorde (peradventure) will deale with vs, according to his maruelous power, and take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremy. Geue zedekiah this answer. Thus sayeth & Lorde God of Israell: beholde, I will turne backe & weapons, that ye haue in your handes, wherewith ye syghte agaynst the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees, whiche besege you rounde aboute the walles, and I will bringe them together into the middelt of thys cite, and I my selfe wyl syght agaynst you, with an outstretched hande, and wyth a myghtye arme, in greate displeasure and terryble wrath: & wyl synpte them, that dwell in this cite: yea, both men & catell shall dye of the pestilence.

* And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shall deliuer zedekiah the kynge of Juda, and hys seruantes, hys people (and suche as are escaped in the cite, from the pestilence, swearde, and hunger) in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon: yea, into the handes of theyr enemyes, into the handes of those that solow vpon theyr lyues, whych shall synpte them wyth & swerd: they shall not ppyte them, they shall not spare them, they shall haue no mercye vpon them.

And vnto thys people thou shalt say: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * beholde, I laye before you the way of lyfe & death. * Who so abyrdeth in thys cite, shall peryshe: eyther wyth the swearde, with hunger, or with pestilence. But who to goeth out to hold on & Chaldees parte, that besege it, he shall saue his lyfe, and shall wyne his soule for a pray. * For I haue sette my face agaynst thys cite (sayeth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, and be spent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda, say thus: Heare the word of the Lorde (O & house of David) for thus sayeth the Lorde. * Whylste rightuousnes, and that soone, deliuer the oppressed from vyolent power: * or euer my terryble wrath breake oute lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quenche it, because of the wyckednesse of your ymaginacions. * Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl come vpon you, that dwell in the balleyes, rockes and felde, and saye: * Tylde: who wyl make vs astrayed: or who wyl come in to oure houses: for I wyl byset you (sayeth the Lorde) because of the wyckednes of your inuencionis, & wyl kindle suche a fyre in your wod, as shall consume al, that is about you.

The Notes.

a. Shall wyne hys soule for a praye, & is, shall escape danger: It is all one wyth that wyche goth before, he shall saue his lyfe. His soule, that is, his lyfe, shall be vnto him as a praye: because he shoulde vterly haue losse it, if he had bydden in Ierusalem: and by flyng vnto the Chaldees he shoulde wyne it, euen as a manne winneth a praye in battell.

The .xxii. Chapter.

The exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and rightuousnesse. Why Ierusalem is brought into captiuite. The death of Belshazzar the sonne of Nebuchadnezzar is prophesied.

Thus sayde the LORDE also: I Go downe into the house of the kynge of Juda, and speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the word of the LORDE, thou kynge of Juda that syttest in the kyngly seate of David: thou and thy seruantes and thy people, that go in and out at thys gate. Thus the LORDE commandeth: * kepe equite and rightuousnesse, deliuer the oppressed from the power of the vyolente: do not geue nor oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse nor the wyddow, and mede no innocent bloude in this place.

of this house knyges, to syt vpon Da-uids seate: they shall be caried in Char-rettes, and ryde vpon hoxses, bothe they and theyr seruauntes, & theyr people. But yf ye wyll not be obedyent vnto these commaundementes, * I sweare by myne owne selfe (sayeth the Lorde) this house shalbe wast. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vnto the kinges house of Iuda: Thou art the head, as Gilead is in Libanus: What wylt thou lay of it, if I make the not so wast (and thy citties also) þe no man shall dwell therin: I wyll prepare a destroyer wyth specyall Cedre trees, and to caste them in the fyre.

C And all the people that go by thys cytte, shall speake one to another: wherefore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytte? Then shall it be

& be not wo for the, but be soze for him that departeth awaye: for he commeth not agayne, and seeth his natyue coun-tre no more. For thus sayeth the Lorde, as touching * Selum þe sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, whiche raygned after hys father, and is caried oute of thys place: He shall neuer come hy-ther agayne, for he shall dye in þe place, wherunto he is led captiue, and shall se thys lande no more. * Wo worth hym, house, and gorgeous parlers: He causeth windowes to be hewen therein, and the syllynges and geastes maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth theim with zenober. Thinkest thou to raygne nowe, that thou prouokest me to wyath wyth the Cedre trees?

Wyd not thy father eate and drinke, and prospere well, as long as he dealt wyth equitye and ryghtuousnesse:

Yea, when he helped the oppressed and pooze to theyr ryght then prospered he well.

from whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lorde. Neuertheles, as for thine eyes and thynne hert, they loke vpon couetousnesse, to shede innocent bloude, to do wyronge and violence. * And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde agaynst Jeehoakim, the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda: They shal not mourne for him, (as they ble to do) alas brother, alas syter: Neither shal they saye vnto him:
Alas syr, alas for that noble prynce.
But as an Ass shall he be buried, corrupte and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clymme vnto the hyll of Libanus (O thou doughter Zion) lyft vp thy voyce vpon Baian, crye from all partes: for all thy louers are destroyed. I gaue the warnyng, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou saydest: I wyll not heare. And thys maner hast thou vssed from thy youth, that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmē shall be dryuen wyth the wynde, and thy darlynges shall be caried away in to captiuitie: Then shalte thou be broughte to shame and confusyon, because of all thy wyckednesse: thou that dwellest vnto Libanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedre trees. * O how greate shal thy mourning be, whē thy sorowes come vpon the, as a woman trauelyng with child.

* As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) though Conaniah the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Iuda were the sygnet of my ryghte hande, yet wyll I plucke him of: And I wyll geue the in to the power of them that seke to slaye thee, and into the power of theim that thou fearest: in to the power of Nabu-chodonosor the kynge of Babilon, and into the power of the Caldees. * More-ouer, I wyll sende the, and thy mother that bare the, into a straunge lande, where ye were not borne, & there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyll desyre to retorne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This manne Conaniah shall be lyke an ymage robbed and torne in peces, which pleaseth no man, for all his apparell.

Wherefore both he & his seide shall be sent away, and caste out into a lande, that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earthe: heare þe worde of the Lord: wyte this man amonge the outlawes, for no prosperite shall this man haue all hys lyfe longe. Neither shall any of his seide be so happye, as to sit vpon the seate of Dauid, and to beate rule in Iuda.

The Notes.

a. Some vnderstande here by Selum all the sonnes of Iosiah. And verely they were all taken prisoners with great shame, and dyed out of Ierusalem, yea, out of the lande of Israel, & were buried without honour due vnto kyniges. First Jehoahaz (who many thinke to be properly signified by Selum) was brought into Egypt, and there he dyed. iiii. Reg. xxi. g. And his brother Eliakim, which came in his stead, was taken of Nabuchodonosor, & fettered & brought to Babylon. ii. Para. xxi. a. Whose successor Jehoachin was also brought to Babylon, & his murder to. iiii. Reg. xxiii. c. At the laste his vncle Zedekiah through his falshe both to God & man, betrayed the whole kyngdome, and was also brought to Babylon, and there had his own childes name before his face, and his owne eyes put out. iiii. Reg. xxx. b. All this whole lamentable busynesse shoulde Ieremye seme to note here in fewe wordes. If any man thinke this prophecye to belonge only to Jehoahaz, with him say I not stryue. b. Otherwise, Jehoachin. iiii. Reg. xxiii. b. and also Jeroniah. Math. i. b.

Ch. xxiii. Chapter.

He speaketh against euil covetes that make haue of the flocks of the Lord. Of the uersacion of the remnant of the Jewes to the faith. The coming of the new shepherde. Christ is prophesied. Against false prophetes. Whil a prophete preacheth the worde of God. God conuertyth the heresies of the hearers. Against prophetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The myracles of false prophetes.

Whe * vnto the shepherdes, that destroye, & scatte my focke, sayeth the Lord. Wherefore, this is the commaundment of the Lord God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes þe seide my people: Ye scatte & thruste out my focke, & loke not vpon them. Therefore now wyll I byset þe wickednes of your imaginacions, sayth the Lord. And wil gather together the remnant of my focke, from all landes that I had dyuen them vnto, & wil byng the agayne to theyr pastures, that they may grow and increafe. I wyll set shepherdes also ouer the, which shall fede the. They shall no more feare & dreye, for there shall none of the be lost, sayth the Lord. & behold, the time cometh, sayeth the Lord, þe I wyll tapte by the ryghteous brache of Dauid, & whiche shall beate rule, and discusse matters with wisdom, and shall set vp equite and ryghteousnesse agayne in the earth.

In his tyme shall Iuda be saued, and Israel shall dwell wythout feare. And this is the name that they shall call him: * euen the Lord oure ryghteous maker. * And therefore behold, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lord, that it shall no more be sayd: the Lord hath lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israel out of the lande of Egypt: But the Lord lieth, which brought forth, and led the seide of the house of Israel, oute of the North lande, and from all countrees where I had scattered them, and they shall dwell in their owne land agayne.

Wherette breaketh in my hode because of þe false prophetes, al my bones shake: I am become lyke a bronchen man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for I see feare of the Lord, and of hys holpe wordes: Because the lande is ful of aduouterers, where therto we it is destroyed and mourneth, & the pleasaunte pastures of the deserte are dyed vp. Yea, the waye that men take, is wicked, and their gouernance is nothing lyke the holpe worde of the Lord. For the prophetes and the priestes them selues are polluted with iniquities, and theyr wickednesse haue I founde in my house, sayth the Lord. Wherefore, theyr way shall be slippery in the darcknes, wherein they maye staker and fall. For I wyll bynge a plage vpon them, euen the yeare of theyr dyspaccon, sayeth the Lord. I haue sene folp amonge the prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baal, and dyceaued my people of Israel.

I haue sene also amonge the prophetes of Ierusalem foule aduoutery, and presumptuous lies. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, & tynge them, so that they can not retourne from theyr wickednesse. Wherewith their ceterfins are vnto me, as Sodas, and as the inhabitants of Gomorrah.

Wherof

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes concerning the prophetes: * Beholde, I will fede them with worme: wood, and make them dryncke the water of gall. for from the prophetes of Ierusalem is the spycknes of ypocrisie come into all the lande.

D And therefore the Lorde of Hostes geueth you this warnyng: * Heare not the wordes of þe prophetes, that preach vnto you, and dysceau you: for they speake the meanyng of their owne hert, and not out of the mouth of the Lorde.

* They saye vnto them, that despyse me: The L O R D hath spoken it: Tylke, ye shall prospere ryghte well.

And vnto all them, that walcke after þe lust of theyr owne hert, they say: Tylke, there shall no myffortune happen you. for who hath sytten in the counsell of the L O R D, that he hath hearde and vnderstande, what he is aboute to do?

Who hath marked hys deuyce, and hearde it? * Beholde, the storme wher of the Lorde (that is, his indignacion) shall go forth, and shall fall downe vpon the head of þe vngodly. And the wrath of the Lorde shall not tounne agayne, butt he perfourme and fulfyll the thought of his herte. * And in þe latter daies ye shall knowe his meanyng.

I haue not sente these Prophetes (sayeth the Lorde) and yet they ranne.

* I haue not spoken to them, yet they preached: But yf they had contynued in my counsell and hearde my wordes: they had turned my people from their euill wayes and wycked ymagynacyons. * Am I then God that seyth but the thyng, whiche is nye at hande, and not that is farte of? sayeth the Lorde.

May any man hyde him selfe so, that I shall not see hym? sayeth the Lorde.

Do not I fulfyll heauen and earth? sayeth the L O R D.

I haue heard wel ynough: what the prophetes say, that preache lyes in my name, saying: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. Howe longe will this contynue in the prophetes hertes, to tel lies, and to preache þe craftye sotilte of theyr owne herte? whose purpose is (with the dreames þe euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as they forsaithes did, wher Baal came vp. The pro-phete þe hath a dreame, let him tel it: * he that vnderstandeth my worde, lette hym shewe it saythfully.

for what hath chaffe and wheate to do together? sayeth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I will vpon the prophetes, þat steale my worde pryuely from euery man. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynste the prophetes, that take vpon theyr tungen to speake: The Lorde hath the sayde it. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynste those prophetes, that dare prophesye lyes, and dysceau my people wth theyr vanyties, and myracles, whome I neuer sent, nor commaunded them. They shall do this people great harme, sayeth the Lorde.

If this people, eyther any prophete or priest aske the, and saye: what is the burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto them: What burthen? Therefore will I cast you fro me (sayeth the Lorde) because ye poure selues are a burthen. And the prophet, priest or people that bleseth this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) hym will I vyset, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to another: What answere hath the Lorde geuen? Or, what is the Lordes commaundemente? And as for the burthen of the L O R D, ye shall speake no more of it: for euery mans owne worde is hys burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the sayynge God, the Lorde of Hostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuen the? Or, what sayeth the Lorde. And not once to name þe burthen of þe Lorde. Therefore thus saith þe Lorde: for so muche as ye haue bled this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) where as I notwithstanding sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therefore, I will repute you as a burthen, & will cast you out of my presence: yea, & the cytye also, & I gaue you & your fathers: & wil bring you to an euerlasting confusion, and into such a

The Lord shewed me a vision: Beholde, there stode two maundes of fygges before the Temple of y Lord, after that * Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon had led awaye captiue Iechoniah the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Iuda, the myghtye men also of Iuda, with the workmasters, and conynge men of Ierusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen like as those that be first ripe. In the other maund were very naughtie fygges, whiche myghte not be eaten, they were so euill. Then sayde the Lord vnto me: what seyst y Jeremy? I sayd; * fygges, wherof some be very good, and some so euill, that no man may eate them.

B Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayth the Lord God of Irael: lyke as thou knowest the good fygges, so shall I knowe the men ledde awaye, whome I haue sente ouer of thys place into the lande of the Caldees, for theyr profite: and I wyl set myne eyes vpon them for the best, for I wyl bypunge them as gayne into thys lande: I wyl buylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I wyl plant them, & not rote them out.

C * And I wyl geue the an hert, to knowe, howe that I am the Lord. They shall be my people, and I wyl be their God, for they shall retourne vnto me with theyr whole herte.

* And lyke as thou knowest the naughtie fygges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so euell: Euen so wyl I (sayeth the Lord) let zedekiah the king of Iuda, (yea and all his prynces, and the residue of Ierusalem that remaine ouer in this lande, and theym also that dwell in Egypte) to be vexed and plagued in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyl make them to be a * reprofe, a commen by worde, a laughyng stocke and hame, in al y places, where I shall scatter them. I wyl sende the swerde, hunger, and pestilence amonge them, vntill I haue cleane consumed the out of the lande, that I gaue vnto the and theyr fathers.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Because, ye haue not hearkened vnto my word, lo, I wyl sende out, and call for all the people, that dwell in the North, sayeth the Lorde, and wyl prepare Nabuchodonosor the kynge of * Babylon my seruante, and wyl byng them vpon this lande, & vpon al that dwel therein, & vpon al the people that are about the, & wyl vterly rote them out. I wyl make of the a wyldernes, a mor-
C hage, and a continually deserte.

* Wherefore, I wyl take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the byrdgrome and the byrde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the cressettes: and this whole lande shall become a wyldernes, and they shal serue the sayde people and the kynge of Babylon, threescore yeres and ten. * When the threescore and ten yeres are expired, I wyl byset also that wyckednes of the kynge of Babylon and hys people sayeth the Lorde: yea, and the lande of the Caldees; and wyl make it a perpetual wyldernes, and wyl fulfyll al my wordes vpon that lande, which I haue deuyled agaynst it: yea, all that is wytted in this booke, whiche Jeremie hath prophesied of all the people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto dyuerse nationes and greate kynges, * for I wyl recompense them, accordyng to theyr dedes and workes of their own handes.

for thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take thys * wyne cuppe of indignacyon fro my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people, to whome I sende thee, for to drynke of it: that when they haue drunken thereof, they may be madde, and out of theyr wittes, when the swearde cometh, that I wyl sende amonge them. Then take I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all the people drynke thereof, vnto whom the Lorde had sent me.

But first the ctyte of Jerusalem, & all the ctytes of Iuda, theyr kynges and prynces: to make them desolate, waste, despyed and cursed accordyng as it is come to passe thys daye. Yea, a pharao the kynge of Egypt, his seruantes, his prynces, and his people altogeth with another, and al kynges of that lande of hus; all kynges of the philistines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Accaron and the remnant of Alood, the Edomites, the Moabites and the Ammonites: all the kynges of Tirus and Sidon: the kynges of the Isles, that are beyonde the sea: Dedan, Thema, Buz and * the Hauen Ismaelites: all the kynges of Assyria, and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the deserte: all the kynges of Hamir, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of the Medes, all kynges toward the North, whether they be farre or nye, euery one with hys neyghbours: Yea, and all the kingdom that are vpon the whole earth. The kyng of Sezach, sayde he, shall dryncke with them also.

And saye thou vnto them: Thus is the commaundement of the LORD of hostes the God of Israel: Dryncke and be drunken, spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryl: and that thorowe the swearde, whiche I wyl sende amonge you. But if they wyl not receaue the cup of thy hand, and dryncke it, then tel the: thus doeth the LORD of hostes threaten you: drynke it ye shall, and that shortly. For lo, * I begynne to plage the ctyte, that my name is geuen vnto: thynke ye the, that I wyl leaue you unpunished? Ye shall not go quite. For why, I call for a swearde vpon al the inhabytours of the earth, sayeth the LORD of hostes.

Wherefore tell them all these wordes, and saye vnto them: * The Lorde shall crye from aboue, and let hys voyce be hearde from his holy habitacion. With a great noyse shall he crye fro his court regall. He shal geue a great voyce (like the grape gatherers) and the sounde thereof shall be hearde vnto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hath a iudgemente to geue vpon all people, and wyl holde his courte of iustice with all fleshe and punishe the vngodlye, sayeth the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Beholde, a myserable plage shall goe from one people to another, and a great stormy water shall aryls from all the endes of the earth. And the same daye shall the LORD him selfe slay

The xxvi. Chapter.

Jeremye mooued the people to amendment. He is taken of the Ieremyes and priests, and brought to iudgement. He beynge accused before the Ieremyes and priests, that he had preached onely the wordes of God. The rulers of the people deliuered Jerem. agaynst the willes of the priests & Ieremyes: after the example of Ieremye, whiche hadde deliuered Michah, that had preached the same thynges that Jerem. had preached. Michah the Ieremye is killed of Iehoiakim, contrarie to the will of God.

In the begynnynge of the reygne of Iehoiakim sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came this word fro the Lord, sayynge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake vnto al them which (out of the cyties of Iuda) come to do worshyppe in the Lordes house, al the wordes that I commaunde thee to say. * Loke that thou kepe not one word backe, yf (peraduenture) they will hearken, and turne every man fro his wycked waye: * that I maye also repente of the plage, whiche I haue determed to brynge vpon them, because of theyr wycked inuencionys.

Jer. vii. a and xvi. b.

Deute. 4. a and 12. b.

Jer. 18. a and 3. b.

And after this maner shall I speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: yf ye will not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruantes the prophetes, whome I sent vnto you, to synge by tyme, and still sendynge: I ye will not folow them (I say) then will I do to this house, * as I dyd vnto Siloh, and will make this cytie to be abhorred of al the people of the earth. And the priests, the prophetes and all the people hearde Jerem. preache these wordes, in the house of the Lorde.

Now when he had spoken out al the wordes, that the Lorde commaunded him to preache vnto all the people, then the priests, prophetes and al the people toke holde vpon hym, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darrest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyd vnto Siloh: and this cytie shall be so waste, that no manne shall dwell therein.

And when all the people were gathered aboute Jerem. in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Iuda heard of this rumoure, and they came soone out of the kynges palace into the house of the Lorde, and sette them downe before the * newe doore of the Lorde. Then spake the priests and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people, these wordes: * This manne is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst this cytie, as ye your selues haue hearde with your eares.

Then sayde Jerem. vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cytie all the wordes that ye haue hearde. Therefore amende your wayes, and your abusermentes, and be obedyent vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he had deuyld agaynst you. Howe as for me: I am in youre handes, do with me, as yethynke expediente and good. But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to deathe, * ye shall make your selues, this cytie and all the inhabytours thereof, gyltye of innocent bloude. For this is of a truth: yf the Lorde hath sent me vnto unto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people unto the pzeestres and prophetes: This man maye not bee condemned to deathe, for he hath preached unto vs in the name of the Lorde our God. The Elders also of the lande stode vp, and sayd thus unto all the people: * Whiche as the Mozaithite, whiche was a prophete vnder Hezekiah kynge of Iuda, spake to all the people of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: * Ston Mal be plowed lyke a feld, Ierusalem Mal be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house Mal be turned to an hye wod. Wyd Hezekiah the kynge of Iuda and the people of Iuda put hi to deathe for this: No betelye, but rather feared the Lorde, and made their prayer vnto him. for the whiche cause also y Lorde repented of the plage, that he had deuysed agaynst them. Shoulde we then do such a shamefull dede agaynst our soules? Ther was a prophete also, that preached stylye in the name of the Lorde, called Aziah the sonne of Bemeiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also agaynst this cytie and agaynst this lande, accordynge to al as Jerempe sayeth. Nowe when * Jehoakim the kynge with all the estate and princes had herd his wordes, the kynge wente aboute to slay him. * Achē Aziah perceaued that, he was afrayed, and fled, and departed into Egypte.

Then Jehoakim the kynge sent seruantes into the lande of Egypte, Namely: Elnathan the sonne of Achaboz, and certayne meyne wyth hym into Egypte, whiche fetchyd Aziah out of Egypte, and brought him vnto kynge Jehoakim that slew him with the swerde, and caste his deade bodye into the comen peoples graue. But Ahikam the sonne of Saphan helped Jerempe, that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

Jerempe, at the commaundment of the Lord, sturth bondes to the kynge of Iuda, and to the other kynges that were nye, to wether they art myghed to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and the kinges and rulers, that they shoulde not falslye prophetes.

In the begynning of y reigne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came this worde vnto Jerempe from the Lord, which spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and chaynes, and put them about thy necke, sende them to the kynge of Edom, the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Ammon, the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sydon: and that by the messaungers, which shal come to Ierusalem vnto Zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and byd them saye vnto their masters: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell, speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he that made the earth, the menne, and the cattell that are vpon the grounde, with my greate power and outstretched arme, and haue geue it vnto whome it pleased me. * And now wyll I deliuer al these landes into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, * my seruante. The beastes also of the feld shal I geue him to do him seruyce. * And all people shal serue him, and his sonne, and his chylde chylde, vntyl the time of the same land be come also: yea, many people and greate kinges shal serue him.

Moreouer, that people and kynge doine whiche wyll not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyll not put their neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon: the same people wyll I byset with the swerde, with hunger, with pestilence, vntyll I haue consumed them in his handes, saith the Lorde. * And theye forsolewe not your prophetes, sothe sayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wyches, whiche saye vnto you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon, for they preach you lies: to bring you farre from your lande, and that I myghte caste you out, and destruy you. But the people that put their neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serue him, those I wyll let remaine styll in their owne lande (sayeth the Lorde) and they shal occupy it, and dwell.

C All these thynges tolde Izedekiah the king of Iuda, and sayd: * But your neckes vnder the yoke of the kynge of Babilon, and serue him and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wilt thou and thy people perishe with swerde, with hunger, with pestilence: lyke as the Lorde hath deuyded for all people, that will not serue the kynge of Babilon.

* Therefore geue no eare vnto those prophetes (that tell you: Ye shall not serue the kynge of Babilon) for they preach you lyes, neyther haue I sente them, sayeth the Lorde: howe bee it they are bolde, falselye to prophesy in my name: that I myghte the sooner dreyne you oute, and that ye myghte perishe with your preachers. I spake to the pree-stes also, and to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Heare not the wordes of those prophetes, that preach vnto you, and saye: Beholde, the vessels of the lordes house shall shortly be brought hyther agayne from Babilon: for they prophesy lyes vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babilon, that ye maye lyue. Wherefore will ye make this cite to be destroyed? But if they be true prophetes in very dede and if the worde of the Lorde be comitted vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnaunt of the ornaments (which are in the house of the Lorde, & remaine yet in the house of the kynge of Iuda and at Ierusalem) be not carped to Babilon also. For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concernynge the pylles, the lauer, the seate and the resydue of the ornaments that yet remaine in this cite, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kinge of Babilon toke not. * when he carped away Iehoniah the sonne of Iehoakim kynge of Iuda, with all the power of Iuda and Ierusalem, from Ierusalem vnto Babilon, captiue.

Yea, thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell spoken, as touching the resydue of the ornaments of the lordes house, and of Ierusalem: * They shall be carped vnto Babilon, and there they shall remaine, vntyl I byset them sayeth the Lorde. * Then will I bringe the hyther agayne. And this was done in the same yere: euen in the begynnyng of the reigne of Izedekiah king of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The false prophecye of Hananiah the prophete. Ieremy sheweth that the prophecye of Hananiah is false, by the example of the other prophetes. He beinge inspired of the Lord reproceth Hananiah, prophesyng his death.

In the fourth yere of the raygne of Izedekiah kynge of Iuda, in the fyfthe Moneth, It happened, that Hananiah the sonne of Assur the prophete of Gaboon, spake to me in his house of the Lorde, in the presence of the pree-stes and of all the people, and sayde. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babilon, * and after two yere will I bringe agayne into this place, all the ornaments of the lordes house, that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon carped awaye frome this place vnto Babilon. Yea, I will bringe agayne Iehoniah the sonne of Iehoakim the kynge of Iuda hym selfe, with all his prisoners of Iuda (that are carped vnto Babilon) euen into this place, sayeth the Lorde, for I wil breake the yoke of the kynge of Babilon.

Then the prophete Ieremy gaue answer vnto the prophete Hananiah, before his priestes & before all his people that were present in his house of the Lord. * And the prophete Ieremy sayde: Amen, the Lord do that, and graunt the thyng, which thou hast propheted: that he maye bringe agayne all the ornaments of the lordes house, and restore all the prisoners from Babilon into this place. Neuertheles, hearken thou also, what I will saye, that thou and all the people maye heare: The prophetes that were before vs in tymes past, which propheted of warre, or trouble, or pestilence eyther of peace, vpon many nations and greafe kinges:

domes, were proued by this (yf God had sende the in very dede) * when the thing came to passe, whiche that prophet told before.

C And Hananiah the prophete toke the chayne frome the Prophete Jeremys necke, and brake it and with that sayde Hananiah, that all the people myghte heare: Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Cuen so wyl I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, frome the necke of all nations, yea, and that within this two yeaere. And so the prophete Jeremy went his way. Now after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne from the prophet Jeremys necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophet Jeremy, sayinge: God, and tell Hananiah these wordes: Thus sayeth the Lorde: Thou hast broken the chayne of wood, but in steade of wood thou shalt make chaines of yron. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I wyl put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they may serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, yea, and so shall they do. And I wil geue him the beastes in the felde. Then sayde the prophet Jeremy vnto the prophet Hananiah: * Heare me (I praye the) Hananiah: The Lord hath not sent the, but thou bringest this people into a false belefe. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: be holde, I wil sende the oute of the lande and within a yeaere thou shalt dye because thou hast falsely spoken against the Lord. So Hananiah the prophete died the same yeaere in the seuenth moneth.

The xxix. Chapter.

The pyle of Jeremie, sente vnto them that were in captiuitie in Babilon. He propheseth they shal returne from captiuitie after .lxx. yeaeres. He propheseth the destruction of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Ierusalem. He threatneth ii. prophetes that seduced the people. The deathe of Semeiah the Rebelaunt is prophesed.

This is the Copie of the lettre, that Jeremie the prophete sente frome Ierusalem vnto the prissoners: the Senatours, preestes, prophetes, and all the people, whome Nabuchodonosor had led vnto Babilon: after the tyme that kyng Iechoniah, a yong Queene, his chābrelaines, & princes of Iuda, & Ierusalem, the workmaisters of Ierusalem, were departed thither. Whiche lettre Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Samaria the sonne of Iseltah dyd beare, whome zedekiah the kynge of Iuda sente vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jeremys lettre.

Thus hath the Lord of hostes the God of Israell spoken vnto all the prisoners, that were led from Ierusalem, vnto Babilon: * buyde you houses to dwell therein: plante you gardens, that ye maye enioye the frutes therof: * take you wiues, to beare you sones, & doughters: proude wiues for youre sonnes, and husbandes for youre doughters, that they may get sonnes & doughters, and that ye maye multiplye there. Labour not to be few, but seke after peace and prosperitie of the cytie, wherein ye be prisoners, * and praye vnto God for it. For in the peace thereof, shall your peace be. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: * Lette not those prophetes and sothsayers that be amonge you dysceau you: and beleue not your owne dreames. For why, * they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sente them, sayeth the Lorde.

But thus sayeth the Lorde: * When ye haue fulfilled .lxx. yeaeres at Babilon, I wyl bynge you home, and of myne owne goodnes I wyl carpe you hither agayne vnto this place. For I know what I haue deuised for you sayeth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (which I geue you al redie) and that ye myght haue hope agayne. * Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shal goo and call vpon me, and I shall heare you. * Ye shall seke me and fynde me. Yea, if so be that ye seke me with your whole herte, I wyl be found of you (sayeth the Lorde) and wyl deliuer you oute of prision, and gather you together agayne out of all places wherein I haue scatted you sayeth the Lorde: and wil bringe you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be cattied away captiue.

But where as ye saye, that a God hath raised you by prophetes at Babilon Ion: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerninge the kynge that sitteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the people that dwell in this cytie, your brethren* that are not gone wyth you into captiuitie.) Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lorde of hostes, beholde, I wil sende a sword, hunger and pestilence vpon them, and will make them lyke vntimely bygges, that may not be eatē for bitterness. And I wil persecute them with the swearde, with hunger and death.

I will deliuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scozne, and put to confusion of all the people, amonge whome I haue scattered them: and that becaue they haue not bene obediente vnto my commaundementes (sayeth the Lorde) whiche I sente vnto them by my seruantes the prophetes.* I rode vp earlye, and sent vnto them, but they would not heare, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therefore the worde of the Lorde, all ye prysoners, whome I sente from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hath the Lord of hostes the God of Israell spoken, of Ahab the sonne of Colaiab, and of Zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, which prophecye lyeth vnto you in my name: Beholde, I will deliuer them into the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before your eyes. And all the prysoners of Iuda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them this terme of cursynge, and saye: Howe God do vnto thee, as he dyd vnto Zedekiah and Ahab, whome the kynge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they synned shamefully in Israell.

For they haue not only despyled their neyghbours wyues, but also preached lyinge wordes in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded them. This I testifie, and assure, saith the Lord. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamite thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name, vnto al the people that is at Ierusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preeste, yea, and sent them to al the priestes: wherein thou wyrttest thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordained the to bee preeste in steade of * Jehoiada the preeste, that thou shouldest be the chel in the house of the Lord aboute all prophetes, and preachers, and that thou mightest put them in prison, or in the stocks. Howe happeneth it then, that thou hast not repproued Jeremie of Anathoth, whiche neuer leaueh of hys prophecying. And besyde al this, he hath sente vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playne, that our captiuite shall longe endure: that we shoulde buyde vs houses to dwel there in, and plante vs gardens, that wee myght enioye the frutes therof. Which lette Sophoniah the preeste dyd rede, and let Jeremie the prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Send word to al the that be in captiuite, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerninge Semeiah the Nehelamite: * Because that Semeiah hath prophesied vnto you without my commission, and brought you in to a false hope, therefore thus the Lorde dothe certify you: Beholde, I will viset Semeiah the Nehelamite, and his sede: so that none of his shall remayne amonge thys people, and none of them shall see the good, that I will do for thys people, sayeth the Lorde. For he hath preached falselye of the Lorde.

The Poete.

a. Suche prophetes as preached vnto them the thynges whiche they were despyous of, dyd they greatlye allowe: yea, euen after they came to Babylon. In them they reioyced, as though they had benefite of the Lorde, and yet were they in dede false prophetes. But Ezechiel the true prophet of the Lorde, whiche preached the contrarye, dyd they persecute. By the false prophetes they sayd: God hath sente vs prophetes, and the doctrine dyd they heare and folow. But the true prophete dyd they mocke and laugh to scozne: and would neuer beleue his doctryne, nor geue eare vnto it.

The xxx. Chapter

The returne of the people from Babylon. God by hys chaunge sheweth that the people is synfull. The destruction of the remaynes of Israell.

THESE are the wordes, that the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayeth the God of Israell: * wyrttest thou vnto al the people, that I haue spoken vnto thee, in a booke. For lo, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that that I wyl bring agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel and Juda, sayeth the Lorde: for I wyl restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to theyr fathers, and they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde, concernynge Israel and Juda: Thus sayeth the Lorde: We heate a terrible crye, feare and disquietnesse, for what elles dothe this signifie, that I se. Namelye, that all stronge men smyte, euery manne his hande vpon his loynes, as a womā in p paine of her trauaile. Who euer sawe a manne trauaile with childe. Enquyre thereafter, and se. Yea all their faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this daye, which is so dreedfull, that none maye be lyckened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, frome the which he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyl take hys pocke frome of thy necke, and breake thy boundes. They shall nomore serue straunge Goddes vnder hym, but they shall do seruyce vnto God their Lorde, and to * Dauid their kyng, whome I will raise vp vnto the. * And as for the, O my seruaunt Jacob, feare not (sayeth the Lorde) and be not afrayed, O Israel. For so, I will helpe the also frome farre, and thy scde from the lande of theyr captiuite.

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, & no man shall make hym afrayed. For I am with the, to helpe thee, sayeth the Lorde. * And though I shall destroy al the people among whom I haue scattered the, yet wyl I not destroy thee, but correct the, * and that with dysceccion. for I knowe, that thou arte in no wyse without faute. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: I am sorry for thy hurte and woundes. There is no man to medle w thy cause: or to bynde by thy woundes: there may no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothinge for thee. For I haue geuen thee a cruell stroke, and chaunced the rough lyfe: and that for the multitude of thy mysdoes, for thy synnes haue had the ouerhande. Why makest thou more for thy harme? I my selfe haue pytie of thy sorowe, * but for the multitude of thy mysdoes and synnes, I haue done thus vnto thee.

* And therefore all they that detourne the, shall be deuoured, and all thine enemies shall be led into captiuitie. All they that make the waste, shall be wasted the selues: and all those that robbe the, wyl I make also to be robbed. For I wyl geue the thy healthe agayne & make thy woundes whole, sayeth the Lorde: because they reuyled the, as one cast away and dyspised, O Syon.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde I wil sette vp Jacobs tentes agayne, and defende hys dwellinge place. The crye shall be buydded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their righte foundation. And oute of them shall go thankesgeuyng, and the voyce of lope.

I wyl multiply them, and they shall not inuynthe: I shall endue them with honoure, and no manne shall subdue them. Their chyldren shall be as a foretyme, and their congregacyon shall continue in my sight. And al those that bere them, wyl I bisee.

* A captayne also shall come of them, and a prince shall sprynge out from the myddest of them: him wyl I chalenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me.

* For what is he, that geueth ouer hys herte to come vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. * Ye shall be my people also, and I wyl be your God. * Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrathe of the Lorde breake oute as a stormy water, as a mighty whyrle winde, and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly.

The terrible dyspleasure of the Lorde shall not leaue of, vntyll he haue done, and perfourmed the intent of hys hert, * which in the later dayes ye shall vnderstaude. At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde) shall I be the God of al the generacions of Israel, and they shall be my people.

And when it is tyme, the watch men vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye:
* Arise, let vs go vp vnto Sion to oure Lorde God, for thus sayeth the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnes because of Jacob, crye vnto the head of the Gentiles: speake oute, synge, and saye: The Lord shall deliuer his people, the remnaunte of Israell, and make them whole. Be-holde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them frome the endes of the worlde, with the blonde and lame that are among them, with the women that bee greete with chylde, and suche as be also deliuered:
and the companie of them that come a-gayne, shall be greete.

They departed from hence in heunes, but with ioye will I bringe them hyther agayne. I will leade them by the riuers of water in a straight way, wher they shall not stumbe: * For I will be Israells father, and Ephraim shalbes my fyrste borne.

Hear the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentylles, preache in the Iles, that I ye farre of, and saye: he that hath scatted Israell, shal gather hi together agayne and shall kepe hym as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lorde shal redeme Jacob, and rid him from the hand of the vyolente. And they shall come, and reioyce vpon the hyll of Syon, and shal haue plenteousnes of goodes, whiche the Lorde shal geue them: Ramelpe, wheate, wyne, oyle, pynge shepe and calues. And their conseruance shalbe as a wel watted garden, for they shal nomore be hongrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yea, bothe yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorowe into gladnesse, and will comforte them and make them ioyfull, euen from theyr her-tes. I will powre plenteousnes vpon the herdes of the preestes, and my people shalbe satysfied with good thynges sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the Lorde: * The voyce of heupnes, weppynge and lamentacon came bp into heauen: euen of Rachell mourninge for her chyldren, and would not bee comforted because they were awaye.

But nowe sayeth the Lorde: leaue of frome weppynge and crynge, withholde thynne eyes from teares, for thy labours shalbe rewarded, sayeth the Lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the land of their enemyes: yea, euen thy posterity shal haue consolacion in thys (sayeth the Lorde) that thy chyldren shall come agayne into theyr owne lande.

Moreover I herde Ephraim, that was led awaye captiue, complayne on thys maner: O Lorde thou hast corrected me, and thy chastenynge haue I recea-ued, as an vntamed calfe. * Conuerte thou me, and I shalbes conuerted, for thou arte my Lorde God: yea, as soone as thou turnest me, I shal reioyce in my selfe: and when I vnderstand, I shal asmyte vpon my thygh. For betes I haue comyncted shamefull thyn-ges: O let my youth beate this reproche and confusyon.

Vpon this complaynte, I thought thus by my selfe: * Is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the chylde, wth whome I haue had all my tyme and pa-tymer? For sence the tyme that I fyrste commened with hym, I haue him euen in remembraunce: therefore my very heart, dwyeth me vnto hym, gladlye and lo-uynglye will I haue mercy vpon him, sayeth the Lorde. Get the watchmen, prouyde teachers for the, set thine herts vpon y right waye, that thou shouldest walke, & turne agayne (O y daughter) of Israel) turne agayne to these cyties of thyne. Howe longe wilt thou go astray, O thou strykinge daughter: for the Lorde will worke a newe thing vpon earth: <sup>b</sup> A woman shall compasse a manne.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: It will come there to, that whā I haue brought Iuda out of captiuitie, these wordes shalbe herde in the land and in his cyties: The Lorde which is the sayre* bydegrome of righteousness, make the frutefull O thou holpe byll: And there shall dwell Iuda, and all her cyties, the shepherdes and husbāde men: For * I shall fede the hongry soule, and resteth al faynt heret. When I herde thys I came agayne to my selfe, and mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a swete slepe.

Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) the dayes come, that I will solue the house of Israel and the house of Iuda, with men and with cattell. * Yea, it shal come therto, that lyke as I haue gone about in tymes past to rote them out, to scatce them, to breake them downe, to destroye them and chasten them: Euen so will I also go diligently about, to buyld them by agayne and to plante them, sayeth the Lorde.

* Beholde, the dayes come (sayth the Lorde) that I will make a newe couenaunte with the house of Israel & with the house of Iuda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hande, and led them out of the lande of Egypt: whiche couenaunte they brake, wherfore I put vnder them soze, sayth the Lorde: * But thys shall be the couenaunt that I will make with the house of Israel after those dayes, sayeth the Lorde: * I will plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in their hertes, * and wylbe their God, and they shalbe my people.

And from thence forth shall no man teach his neighbour or his brother, and saye: knowe the Lorde: But they shal al knowe me, from the lowest into the highest, sayth the Lorde. For I will forgue their mysdoes, and will neuer remembre their synnes anye more. Thus sayeth the Lorde * whiche gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the day, and the moone and starrs to shyne in the nyght: which moueth the sea, so that the floudes ther of waxe scarce: his name is the Lorde of hostes. Lyke as thys ordynance shall neuer bee taken oute of my sight, sayeth the LORDE: So shal the seide of Israel neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: like as the heauen aboue can not bee mesured, and as the foundations of the earth beneth maye not be soughte out: * So wyl I also not caste oute the whole seide of Israel, for that they haue committed, sayeth the LORDE. Beholde, the dayes come sayeth the Lorde, that the cytie of the Lorde shalbe enlarged from the towre of Hananeell, vnto the gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the ryghte measure bee taken before her vnto the hyll toppe of Gareb, and shall come aboute Gaath, * and the whole valley of the dead karcaises, and of the ashes, and all Ceremoth vnto the brooke of Cedron: and from thence vnto the corner of the horsagate towarde the Caste, where as the Sanctuarie of the Lorde also shal be sette. And when it is now buylded, and sette by of thys fashion it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe anye more.

The Notes.

a. To smyte vpon the thighe is a token of greefe. He meaneth that when the Lorde geueth him vnderstanding, he shal come to repentance and fortheincke his euyl conuersacion.

b. This do they commensle expounde of the redemption of Israel, by the similitud of a woman searchyng her husbande. As though the prophet had sayde: The people of Israel, after they haue of longe tyme forsaken their spouse God, shal yet at the laste retorne and embrace him with the armes of fayth, charitie and obedience, &c. Some expounde it of the byrgin Mary. And some of the church the spouse of Christe.

The xxxii. Chapter

Jeremy is cast into myson, because he prophesied that the cytie should be taken of the kyng of Babylon. By the selfe that Jeremy bought at the commaundement of the Lorde, is signified that the people should come agayne to their owne possession. The people of God are his seruantes, and he is their their Lorde. To feare God is Goddes gift, to thyntence that synnes may be eschued.

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Ieremye, in the tenth yeare of zedekiah kyng of Ju da, whych was the xviij. yeare of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hoste layd seige vnto Ierusalem. But Ieremye the prophete laye bounde in the court of the prison, whiche was in the kyng of Judaes house: where zedekiah the king of Iuda caused him to be laied, because he had prophesied of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, I will de lyner this cite into the handes of the kyng of Babilon, whiche shall take
it. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, he shall not bee able to escape the Cal dees, but surely he shall come into the handes of the kyng of Babilon: which shall speake with him mouthe to mouth and one of them shall loke another in the face. And zedekiah shall be caried vnto Babilon, and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I byset hym, say eth the Lorde. But yf thou takest in hand to fight against the Caldees, thou shalt not prosper.

And Ieremye sayde: Thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Beholde, Ha naneell the sonne of Selum thyne un cles sonne shall come vnto thee, and re quyre the to redeme the land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: * for by rea son of kynred it is thy parte to redeme it, and to bye it oute.

And so Hananeel myne vncles sonne came to me in the court of the prison (according to the worde of the Lorde) and sayd vnto me: Bye my land (I pray the) y lieth in Anathoth in the countre of Beniamin: for by heritage thou hast right to lowse it out for thy selfe, ther fore redeme it. Then I perceaued, that this was the commaundemente of the Lorde, and so I lowsed the lande from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne, and weyed hym there the money:
euen seven syckles, and ten spinner pens.

I caused him also to make me a wri tynge, and to seale it, and called re corde therby, and weyed him there the moneye vpon the waightes. So I toke the euidence with the cople (when it was orderly sealed and red ouer) and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Neria the sonne of Maasiah in the syghte of Hananeel my colen, and in the presence of the witneses, that be named in the euidence, and before all the Jew es that were therby in the court of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them, saying: The Lorde of hostes the God of Israel commaundeth the, to take this sealed euidence with the cople, and to laye it in an erthen vessel, that it may longe contynue.

For the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel hath determined, that houses, feldes and bynepardes shall be possessed again in this lande.

Nowe when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Ne ria, I besought the Lorde, saying: O Lorde God. * It is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and hye arme, and there is nothyng to harde for the. * Thou shewest mercy vpon thousandes, thou recompencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bo some of the chyldren that come after them.

Thou arte the greates and myghtye God, whose name is the Lord of hostes: greates in counsell, and insynpte in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, * to rewarde euerye one after hys waye, and accord yng to the frutes of his inuencions: * Thou hast done greates tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israel and vpon those men: to make thy name greates, as it is come to passe this daye: Thou hast broughte thy people of Is raell oute of the lande of Egypte, with tokens, with woundes, with a mygh tye hand, with a stretched out arme, and with greates terryblenes: and hast ge uen the this land, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto theyr fathers: Namely, that thou wouldest geue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honny.

* Nowe when they came therein, and possessed it, they folowed not thy voyce, * walcked not in thy lawe: * but al that thou

thou commaundest them to do, that haue they not done; & therefore come al these plagues vpon them.

Beholde, there are bulleworckes made now agaynst the cite; to take it: and is shalbe worne of the Caldees that beseege it, with twearde, with hono- ger, and deathe; and take what thou haste spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, all thynges are present vnto the: Yet saiest thou vnto me (O Lord God) and commaundest me, that I shal loose a peece of lande bryd wyf, and take wyfenes thereto: & yet in a meane season, the cite is deliuered into the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lord God of all flesh, is there any thyng then to haue for me? Therefore thus sayde the Lord: Beholde, I shall deliuer this cite into the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabu chodonosor the kynge of Babilon, that shal take it in: For the Caldees shall come, and wyfne this cite, and set fyre vpon it, and burne it with the goy- gous houses, in whose paters they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and poured dryncke offeringes vnto strange Goddesses, to prouoke me vnto wrath.

For seyinge the childen of Ierusalem, and the children of Iuda haue wrought wyckednes before me euer from theyr yowth vp; what haue they els done, but prouoked me with the workes of theyr owne handes? sayeth the Lord.

O, what hath this cite bene els; but a prouokynge of my wrath, euen since the daye that I brylde it, vnto this houre: wherein I caste it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemies of the chyldren of Israel and Iuda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me: yea they, their kynges, their priuies, theyr prestes, their prophetes, whole Iuda, and all the cytyens of Ierusalem.

* When I stode vpon the wall, & taughte them and instructed them, they turned their backs to me, and not theyr faces.

* They woulde not heare to be refo- rmed and correcte. They haue seene the Goddesses in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to deyle. They haue brylde hye places for Baal in the bal- ley of the children of Beniamin, to bowe theyr sonnes and daughter vnto Moloch: whiche I neuer commaunded them, nether came it euer in my thoughte, to make Iuda synne with suche abhomi- nation.

Wherefor thus hath the Lord God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite, which (as ye pouer scheres con- fesse) shalbe deliuered in to the hande of the kynge of Babilon, when it is worne with the twearde, with hunger, & with pestilence. Beholde, I wyll gather them togethar from all bandes, wherein I haue scatered them in my wrath, in my fearful and greates displeasure: and wyll brynge them agayne vnto thys place, where they shall dwel safely. And they shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God.

* And I wyll geue them one herte and one waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes of theyr lyfe, that they and theyr chyldre after them maye prospere. * And I wyll set vpon euery lastynge co- nenaunte with them, namelye: that I wyll neuer cease to do them good, and that I wyll put my feate in their her- tes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me.

* Yea, I wyll haue a luste and plea- sure to do them good, and saythfullye to plante them in this lande with my whole herte, and with all my soule.

So sayeth the Lord: I like as I haue broughte all this greate plage vpon this people, so wyll I also brynge vpon the all the good, that I haue pro- mysed them. And men shall haue theyr possessions in this lande, wherof ye saie now, that it shall nether be inhabited of people nor of catel, but be deliuered in to the handes of the Caldees: Yea, lande shall be bought for money, and eu- idences made there vpon and sealed before witneses in the countre of Ben- Jamin, and rounde aboute Ierusalem: in the cities of Iuda, in the cyties that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth, yea, and in cities that are in the deserte. For I wyll brynge theyr pyloners hyther agayne, sayeth the Lord.

And the voice of gladness shall be heard again:
the voice of the harp, the voice of the organ,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,
the voice of the organ, the voice of the harp,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,
the voice of the organ, the voice of the harp,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,
the voice of the organ, the voice of the harp,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,

Moder the word of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie in this manner: * whe he was yet boyde in the courte of the p[ri]nce: Thus sayeth the Lorde, whiche fulfilled the thinge that he speaketh: the Lorde whiche perfourmeth thinge that he taketh in hande: euen he, whose name is the Lorde: thou haste * cryed vnto me, and I haue hearde thee: I haue shewed great and hye thinges, whiche were vnknewen vnto a p[ri]nce.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concerning the houses of this citty, and the houses of the kinges of Juda: that they shalbe broken thorowe the ordynauce and weapons: when the Caldees come to besiege them: and they shalbe fylled with the deade carcasses of men, to whom I will saye in my wrath, and wyl pleasure: when I turne my face from this cite, because of all her wyes kednes. Beholde, (sayeth the Lorde) I wil heale their woundes and make them whole: I will open them the treasure of peace and truth.

And I will returne the captiuitie of Juda and Israel: and wyl see them agayne, as they were afore: * from all myrdes (wherin they haue offended agaynst me) I will cleanse them: And at their blasphemies whiche they haue done agaynst me, when they regarded me not, I wil forgewe them.

And this shall get me a name, a praise and honoure, amonge all people of the earthe, whiche shall heare all the good that I wyl shewe vnto them: yea, they shall be afraied and a stomped at all the good deedes and benefytes that I wyl do for them.

Whereouer, thus sayeth the Lorde: In this place, wher of ye saye that it shall be a wyldernes: wherin neither people nor cattell shall dwel: in lyke manner in the ctytes of Ju da and withoute Jerusalem, whiche also shall be so boyde, that neither peo ple nor cattell shall dwell there: I shall the voice of gladness be heard again:

the voice of the harp, the voice of the organ,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,
the voice of the organ, the voice of the harp,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,
the voice of the organ, the voice of the harp,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,
the voice of the organ, the voice of the harp,
the voice of the lute, the voice of the psalter,

In the lande of Benjamin, in the feldes of Jerusalem, and in the ctytes of Juda shall the shepe be nombred ag ayne, vnder the hande of him, that tel leth them, sayeth the Lorde: * Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, that I wyl perfourme that good thing, whiche I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Juda. In thos dayes, and at the same tyme, I wyl bringe forth vnto Dauid, the braunche of righteousnes, and he shal do equyte and righteousnes in his lande.
In thos dayes shall Juda be helped,
* and Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her is euen: * And to pure righteous maker. For thus the Lorde promyseth: * Dauid shall neuer wante one, to sit vpon the stole of the house of Israel: * neither shall the priestes, and Leuites waite one to offer alway before me burnt offerings, to kydle, & meate offerings, & to prepare the sacrifices:

And the word of the Lorde came vnto to Jeremie after this manner: Thus saye the Lorde: I haue made the covenante which I haue made with daye and nyghte be broken, that there shoulde not be daye and nyght in due season: Then maye my covenante also be broken: whiche I made with Dauid my seruante, and so he not to haue a sonne to regne in his Troye: * So shall also the priestes and Leuites neuer faile, but serue me: * for lyke as the starres of heauen maye not be nombred, neither the lande of the sea measured: so wyl I multiplye the seede of Dauid my ser uaunte

name, and of the Leuites my ministers.
Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, sayinge: Considrest thou not what this people speaketh?
Two hundredes (saye they) had I Lord chosen, and those same two hath he cast awaye. For so farre is my people come, that they haue no hope to come together any more, and to be one people as gaine. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde:
If I haue made no couenaunte with daye and nyghte, and geuen no statute vnto heauen and earth: then wil I also caste awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte: so that I wyll take no prince oute of his side, to rule the posterite of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. But yet I wyll turne agayne their captiuite, and be merciful vnto them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The treateneth that the cytie, and kynge zedekiah also, shal be gyven in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebuketh them that broughte such of the cytye in to captiuite, as were pardoned to go at their lyberte.

THese are the wordes whiche the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie, * what time as Nabuchodonosor for the kyng of Babylō, and all his hostes (oute of all the kyngdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people, foughte agaynst Ierusalem and all the cyties therof. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: Go, and speake to zedekiah the kyng of Iuda, and tell him: The Lord sendeth the this worde: * Beholde, I wyll deliuer this cytie in to the hande of the kyng of Babylon, he shal burne it, and thou shalte not escape his han-des, but shalte be lead awaye prisoner, and deliuered in to his power. Thou shalte loke the kyng of Babylon in the face, & he shal speake with thee mounthe to mounthe, and then shalte thou goe to Babilon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, O zedekiah thou kyng of Iuda: Thus sayeth the Lord vnto the: Thou shalt not be slayne with the swearde, but shalte dye in peace. * Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges, thy progenytours, were bzente: so shalt thou be bzente also,
and in the mornynge they shal saye: oh Lorde. For thus haue I determyned, sayeth the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremie the prophet all these wordes vnto zedekiah kyng of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kyng of Babylons hoste beseged Ierusalem, and the remnaunte of the cytyes: Namely, Lachis & Azekah, whiche yet remayned of the * stronge defended cyties of Iuda.

2 Par. xi.

These are the wordes that the Lord spake vnto Jeremie the prophet, when zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Ierusalem, that there shoulde be proclaimed * a lyberte: so that euery man shoulde let his seruaunte & hande: mayde go fre, Hebrue and Hebruelle, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had consented, euen so they were obedyente, and let them go fre. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruauntes and handemaydens, whome they had let go fre, and so made them bonde agayne.

Deu. xv. a

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie from the Lorde him selfe, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel: * I made a couenaunte with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egypte, (that they shoulde no more be bondmen) sayinge: * When seuen yeares are oute, euery man shall let his boughte seruaunte an Hebrue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syxe yeares. But your fathers obeyed me not and herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, and dyd ryghte before me, in that ye proclaimed,

Moreover I wyl laye the cytyes of Iuda so waste, that no man shal dwel therein.

The. xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabites, and thereby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites, he threatneth punishment vnto the rebellious Jewes, he prayseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for theyr obedyence vnto their father,

4. Reg. 5. c

a The wordes, which the lord spake vnto Ieremy, in the raigne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, are these: Go vnto the house of * the Rechabites, and cal them oute, and brynge them to the house of the Lorde in to some comodious place, and geue them wyne to dryncke. Then toke I Iazaniah the sonne of Ieremy the sonne of Habaziniyah, and his brethren and al his sonnes, and the whole household of the Rechabites: and brought them to the house of the Lord, in to the closet of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the mā of God: whyche was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasiyah the sonne of Selum, whiche is the cheafe of the treasure. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto them: Dryncke wyne. But they sayde: we dryncke no wyne, for Ionadab the sonne of Rechaboure father commaunded vs, sayinge: * ye and youre sonnes shall neuer dryncke wyne, buylde no houses, sowe no seede, plante no bynes, yea, ye shall haue no bynepardes: but for all youre tyme ye shal dwel in tentes, that ye may lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be strangers.

Thus haue we obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab the sonne of Rechaboure father, in all that he hath charged vs, and so we dryncke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, oure sonnes and oure daughters. Neither buylde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs nether bynepardes, nor cozne lande to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, and do accordynge vnto all, that Ionadab oure father commaunded vs.

But nowe that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylons came by in to the lande, we sayde: come, let vs go to Ierusalem, that we maye escape the host to the Caldees and the Assirians: and so we dwell nowe at Ierusalem. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ieremy, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Go and tell whole Iuda and all the inhabitants of Ierusalem: wyl ye not be resourmed, to obey my wordes: sayeth the Lorde. The wordes whiche Ionadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shoulde dryncke no wyne, are faste and surelye kepte: for vnto this day they dryncke no wyne but obeye their fathers commaundement. But as for me, * I haue stande by earlye, I haue spoken vnto you, and geuen you earnest warnynge: and yet haue ye not bene obedyente vnto me. Yea, I haue sente my seruauntes, all the prophetes vnto you, I rose by earlye, and sente you worde, sayinge: Turne you, euery man from his wycked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyppe them: that ye maye continue in the lande, lande, whiche I haue geuen vnto you and your fathers, but ye woulde nether heare me, nor folowe me.

The children of Ionadab Rachabs sonne haue stedfastly kept their fathers commaundement, that he gaue the, but this people is not obedyente vnto me.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will brynge vpon Iuda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynste them.* For I haue spoken vnto the, but they woulde not folowe: I haue called vnto the, neuertheles they woulde geue me no answere.

Jeremy also spake vnto the houtholde of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: For so muche as ye haue obeyed the commaundemente of Ionadab your father, and kepte al his preceptes, and done accordynge vnto all y he hath bydden you:*

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Ionadab the sonne of Rechab shall not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

¶ The xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wyrteth (as Jeremy endyrteth) the boke of the curse agaynste Iuda and Israel. He is sente with the boke vnto the people, and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, and readeth it before the also. The rulers shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a litle of it, and after caldeth it in the tyme. There is another wyrtten at the commaundement of the Lorde.

In the fourthe yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came the word of y lord vnto Jeremy, sayinge:

* Take a boke, & wyrteth therein all the wordes, that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Iuda, and to all the people, from the tyme y I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Iuda heareth of the plage, whiche I haue deuysed for them, they maye peraduenture* turne, euery man from his wycked waye, that I may for geue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremy call Baruch the sonne of Neriah,* and Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremy, al the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto him. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, sayinge: I am in pryson, so that I maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou hast wyrtte at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lorde, and rede the in the Lordes house vpon the fastinge daye: that the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out the cyties, maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye mekelpe before the face of the Lorde, and turne euery one from his wycked waye. For greate is the wrathe and dyspleasure, y the Lorde hath taken agaynste this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd, accordynge vnto all that Jeremy the prophete commaunded hym, readdyng the wordes of the Lorde oute of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfthe yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, in the. ix. moneth* when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shoulde faste before the Lorde, and they also that were come from the cities of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremy oute of the boke within the house of the Lorde, oute of the treasury of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scrybe, whiche is besyde the hyer losse of the* newe doze of the Lordes house: that al the people might heare. Nowe when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Sepha had hearde all the wordes of the Lorde oute of the boke, he wente downe to the kynges palace in to the Scrybes chambze, for there all the prynces were set: Elisama the Scrybe, Dalaiash the sonne of Seimei, Elnathan the sonne of Achboz, Gamariah the sonne of Saphan, zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, with al the prynces. And Micheah tolde them all the wordes, that he hearde Baruch reade oute of the boke before the people.

Then all the prynces sente Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thyne hande the boke, wherout thou hast red before al the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in hys hande, and came vnto them. And they sayde vnto him: Syt downe, & rede the boke that we may heare also. So Baruch red, that they myghte heare. Now when they had hearde all the wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, and said vnto Baruch: We wyl certyfy the kynge of all these wordes. And they examined Baruch, saying: tel vs, howe dydest thou wypte all these wordes out of hys mouth? Then Baruch answered them: he spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, & I alone was with him, & wrote them in the boke.

Then said the Princes vnto Baruch: Go thy waye, and hyde the w<sup>ch</sup> Jeremey, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they wente in to the kynge to the courte. But they kept the boke in the chambze of Elisama the Scribe, & tolde p<sup>r</sup> kyng al the wordes p<sup>r</sup> he might heare. So the kyng sent Jehudy to fetch him p<sup>r</sup> boke, whiche he brought out of Elisama the Scribes chambze. And Jehudi red it, that the kyng & al the Princes, whiche were about him, might heare. Now the kynge sat in p<sup>r</sup> wynter house, for it was in p<sup>r</sup>. ix. Moneth, and there was a good fyze before him. And when Jehudi had red thze oz foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, & cast it into p<sup>r</sup> fyre vpo the hearth, vntyll the boke was all bzente in the fyze vpon the hearth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, oz rente his clothes: nether the kyng him selfe, nor his seruautes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuerthelesse Elnathan, Dalaiah, and Samariah besoughte the kynge, that he woulde not burne the boke: not withstandynge the kynge would not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah the sonne of Cysel and Selamiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremey the prophet: but p<sup>r</sup> Lorde kepte them out of sight. After now that the kynge had bzente the boke, and the sermons whiche Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremey: The word of p<sup>r</sup> Lorde came vnto Jeremey, sayinge: Take another boke, and wypte in it al the forsaide sermons: that were writen in the fyrste boke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda hath bzente.

And tel Jehoakim the kynge of Juda: thus sayeth the Lord: p<sup>r</sup> hast bzente the boke, and thoughtest win the selfe: why hast thou wypten therin, that the kynge of Babilon shall come, and make this lande waste, so that he shall make bothe people and cattel to be out of it. Therefore thus the Lord sayeth of Jehoakim the kyng of Juda: * There shall none of hys generation syt vpon the thzone of David. * His dead corse shall be caste out, that the heate of the daye, and the frost of the night may come vpon him. And I wil byset the wyckednes of him, of hys seide, and of his seruautes. Moreouer all the euil that I haue promysed the (though they hearde me not) wyl I byynge vpon them, vpo the inhabytoures of Ierusalem, and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremey another boke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremey: all the sermons that were in the fyrste boke, whiche Jehoakim the kynge of Juda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them manye mo sermons, then before.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Jeredekiah succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremey to praye for hym. Jeremey goinge in to the lande of Ben Iamin, is taken, he is beaten, and put in prison. He is deliuered by kynge zedekiah.

Zedekiah p<sup>r</sup> sonne of Josiah, * whiche was made kyng thorow Nabuchodonosor king of Babilon, reigned in the lande of Juda, in p<sup>r</sup> steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoakim. But nether he, nor his seruautes, nor the people in the lande woulde obey p<sup>r</sup> wordes of the Lord, whiche he spake by p<sup>r</sup> prophet Jeremey. * Neuerthelesse zedekiah the kyng sent Jehucal the sonne of Shelemiah and Sophontiah the sonne of Maasiah the priest to the prophet Jeremey, saying: O praye p<sup>r</sup> vnto the Lord our God for vs. Now Jeremey walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. * Pharaohs hooft also was come out of Egypte: whiche when the Caldees that beleaged Ierusalem perceaued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto unto Jeremye þe Prophet, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel, this answer shall ye geue to the kyng of Iuda, that sente you vnto me for counsel: * Beholde, Pharaos hoste whiche is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypt in to his owne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, & fyght againste this cite, wyne it, and set fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lord: * A dysease not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: thus, the Caldees go nowe their waye from vs: No, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slaine the whole hoste of the Caldees, that bessege you, and euery one of the slayne lay in his tente, yet shoulde they stande by, and set fyre vpon this cite. Now when the hoste of the Caldees was broken by from Ierusalem, for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremye wente out of Ierusalem towarde the lande of Beniamin, to do certayne busynes there amonge the people. And when he came vnder Beniamins porte, there was a porter, called Ieriah, the sonne of Selemlah the sonne of Hananiah, which fel vpon him, and toke him, sayinge: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. The sayde Jeremye: It is not so, I go not to þe Caldees. Neuertheles Ieriah would not beleue hym, but broughte Jeremye bounde before the prynces. Wherefore the prynces were angry with Jeremye, causynge hym to be beaten, and to be layed in pryson in þe house of Ionathas the scribe. For he was the ruler of the pryson. Thus was Jeremye put in to the dongeon and pryson, and so laye there a longe tyme. * Then zedekiah the kyng sente for him, and called him, and asked him quietly in hys owne house, saying: thinkest thou this busynes (that nowe is in hande) cometh of the Lord? Jeremye answered: yea, that it doth: & thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered in to the kyng of Babylons power.

Moreouer, Jeremye said vnto kyng zedekiah: What haue I offended againste the, againste thy seruantes, or againste thys people, that ye haue caused me to be put in pryson? * Where are your prophetes whiche haue prophesied vnto you, and sayde, that the kyng of Babilon shoulde not come agaynst you and this lande. And therfore heare nowe, O my Lord the kyng: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me nomore into the house of Ionathas þe Scribe, that I dye not there. Then zedekiah the kyng commaunded to put Jeremye in the fore entree of the pryson, and dayly to be geuen him a cake of bread, and els no dighte meate, vntyl all the bread in the cite was eaten by. Thus Jeremye remayned in the fore entree of the pryson.

The. xxxviii. Chapter.

By the mocyon of the rulers Jeremye is put in to a dongeon. At the request of Achimelech the Chauncellor layne the kyng commaundeth Jeremye to be broughte forth of the Dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kyngs howe he myghte escape death.

Aphatiah the sonne of Nathan, Godoliah the sonne of Shashur, Iushal þe sonne of Selemiah, and Shashur þe sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremye had spokē vnto al the people, namely on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lord: * Who so remayneth in this cite, shall perishe ether with the swearde, with hunger, or with the pestilence: But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape, & wyngynge his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lord. This cite (no doute) must be deliuered in to þe power of the kyng of Babilon, and he also shall wyne it. Then sayde the prynces vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseech you let this man be put to death. For thus he dyscourage the handes of the soudyers that be in thys cite, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh suche wordes vnto them. This man verely labourereth not for peace of the people, but myschefe. zedekiah the kyng answered and sayde: lo, he is in your your hands, for the kynge may denye you nothyng. Then toke they Jeremey, and cast him in to the dongeon of Melchiah the sonne of Hamlech, & dwelt in the fore entrey of the pylson. And they let downe Jeremey with coardes in to a dongeon, where there was no water, but myze. So Jeremey stakke fast in the myze. Now when Abedmelech the Moztian beyng a chamberlayne in the kynges court, vnderstode, that they had cast Jeremey in to the dongeon: he wente out of the kynges house, and spake to the kynge, (whiche then sat vnder the poorte of Beniamin) these wordes: My lord the kynge, where as these men medle with Jeremey the prophet, they do him wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in pylson, there to dye of hunger, for there is no moze breade in the cytpe. Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Moztian and sayde: Take from hence xxx. men whome thou wylte, and drawe by Jeremey the prophet oute of the dongeon, before he die. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of Amlech, and there vnder an almyr he gate olde ragges & worne cloutes, and let them downe by a coarde, in to the dongeon to Jeremey.

And Abedmelech the Moztian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremey: I put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, betwyxte them and the coardes: And Jeremey dyd so. So they drew by Jeremey with coardes and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entrey of the pylson. Then * zedekiah the kynge sente and caused Jeremey the prophet be called vnto hym, in to the thyrde entrey, & was by the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayde vnto Jeremey: I wil aske the some what but hyde nothyng from me. Then Jeremey answered zedekiah: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wylte cause me suffre death: yf I geue the counsell, thou wylte not folowe me. So the kynge swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremey, sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I wyl not slaye the, nor geue the in to the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

Then sayde Jeremey vnto zedekiah: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * If case be, & thou wylte go forth vnto the kynge of Babilons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this cytpe shall not be brente, yea, both thou and thy household shall escape with youre lyues. But yf thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babilons princes, then shall this cytpe be deliuered in to the handes of the Caldees which shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape them. And zedekiah said vnto Jeremey: I am afrayde for the Iewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in their handes, and so they to haue me in derision.

But Jeremey answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseeche the) whiche I speake vnto the, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wylt not go forth, the Lorde hath tolde me thus planely: Beholde, al the wemen that are leste in the kynge of Iudaes house, shall go out to the kynge of Babilons princes. For they thynke, that thou arte diseased: and that the men in whose thou dydest put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, and set thy fete faste in the myze, and gone theyr waye from the. Therefore all thy wyues with their chyldren shall fle vnto the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kynge of Babilons prisoner, and thus cytpe shall be brente. Then sayde zedekiah vnto Jeremey: loke that no bodye knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes perceaue, that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, sayinge: O speake, what sayde the kynge to the: hyde it not from vs, & we wil not put the to death. Tel vs (we praye the) what sayde the kynge to the: Se thou geue the this answer: I haue humbly besought the kynge, & he wyl let me lie no moze in Jehonathas house, that I dye not there: Then came al the princes vnto Jeremey, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge bad hym. Then they helde their peace, for they perceaued nothing. * So Jeremey abode styl in the fore entrey of the pylson, vntyll the daye that Jerusalem was wonne.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Abuchodonosor belegeth Jerusalem. zedekiah speaketh

And he is taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slayne. His eyes are shutt oute. Jeremye is prouided wth Abedmelech is deliuered from captiuitie, because of the confidence that he hath in God.

Nowe when the citie of Ierusalem was taken (for in the .ix.
yeare of zedekyah kyng of Iuda in the tenth Moneth, came Nabuchodonozor k
kyng of Babilon and all his host, and beseged Ierusalem. And in the .xi. yere of zedekiah in the fourthe Moneth the .ix. daye of the Moneth, he brake into the citie). Then all the Princes of the kyng of Babilon, came in, and sate them downe vnder the porte: Neregel, Sarezer, Samegarnabo, Sarlachim, Rabsaris, Neregel, Sarezer, Rabmag, with all the other Princes of the kyng of Babilon. And when zedekyah the kyng of Iuda with his souldiers sawe them, they fledde, and departed oute of the ctyte by nyghte thorow the kynges garden, and thorowe the porte that is betwene the two walles, and so they wente toward the wyldernesse.

But the Chaldee hooste folowed faste after them, and tooke zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and broughte him prisoner to Nabuchodonozor the kyng of Babilon vnto Reblath, that lyeth in the lande of Hemath where he gaue iudgement vpon hym. So the kyng of Babilon caused the chyldren of zedekiah & al the nobles of Iuda to be slayne, before his face at Reblath. And made zedekiahs eyes to be putte oute, and boude hym wth chaynes, and sent him to Babilon.

C Moreover, the Chaldee brente vp the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnant of the people that were in the citie, and suche as were come to helpe them (what so euer was left of the commen sorte) Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne carped them to Babilon. But Nabuza-tadan the chiefe captayne let the raseall people (those that had nothyng dwell in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes and corne felde at the same tyme. Nabuchodonozor also the kyng of Babilon gaue Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne a charge, concer-ninge Jeremye, sayinge: Take and che-ryshe hym, and make muche of hym: see thou do him no harme, but intreat him after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chiefe captaine, Nabusalban the chiefe cham-berlayne, Nergalsareser the treasurer and all the kyng of Babilons lordes, sent for Jeremye, and caused hym to be set oute of the fore entyre of the pry-son, and committed hym vnto Sodoliah the sonne of Shikam the sonne of Saphan: That he shoulde carye hym home, and so he dwelt amonge the people. Nowe whyle Jeremye laye yet bounde in the fore entyre of the pryson, the worde of the Lorde came vnto him, sayinge: Goe, and tell Abedmelech the Morian: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuised for this citie, wyl I bring vpon them, that thou shalt see it: but I wyl deliuer thee (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in to the handes of those men, whome thou fearest. For doutles I wyl saue thee, so that thou shalt not perishe with the swearde: but thy lyfe shalt be saued, and that because thou hast put thy truste in me, sayeth
the Lorde.

C The .xl. Chapter.

Jeremye hath licence to goe whether he wyl. He dwelleth wth the people that remayneth at Ierusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth, Iohanan prophete eth death vnto Godoliah.

This is the maner howe the Lorde intreated Jeremye, when Nabuza-tadan the chiefe captayne had let hym goe from Ramah, whither he had led hym boude amonge all the prisoners, that were carped from Ierusalem and Iuda vnto Babilon. The chiefe Captayne called for Jeremye, and said vnto hym: The Lorde thy God spake myghtelie befoze of the miserie vpon this place: Nowe the Lorde hath sente it, and perfourmed it as he had promy-sed: for ye haue synned agaynst the Lorde, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therefore commeth this

4. re. xxv. c

If thou canst not be content to dwell alone, then remayne with Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam, the sonne of Saphan:

* Whome the kyng of Babilon hath made gouernoure ouer þ cities of Iuda, and dwell with hym amonge the people, or remayne where so euer it pleaseth thee. So the chiefe Captayne gaue hym his expences with a reward, and let hym go. * Then went Ieremye vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Hazpah, and dwelte there with him amonge the people that were left in the lande.

Nowe when the Captaynes of the hooſte of Iuda (whiche with their felowes were scatred abroad on euery syde in the lande) vnderſtoode that the kyng of Babilon had made Godoliah, the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure in þ land, and that man, wyfe and chylde, yea, & the poore me in the land (that were not led captiue to Babilo) shulde be vnder his iurisdiction: they came to Godoliah vnto Hazpah: namely, Iſmael þ ſone of Nathaniah, Iohana and Ionathah the ſonnes of Careah, Sareah the ſone of Thanhometh, the ſonnes of Ophai the Netophathite, Iſaniah the ſonne of Maachati, with their companions. And Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam, the ſonne of Saphan, ſwoze vnto them & their felowes on thys maner: * Be not afrayde to ſerue the Chaldees, dwel in the lande, ſo do the kyng of Babilon ſeruyce, and ſhall ye proſpere. Beholde, I dwell at Hazpah to be an officer in the Chaldees behalfe, and to ſatiſſye ſuche as come to vs. Therefore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe the in your ware houſes, and dwel in your cities that ye haue in keepynge.

4. re. xxv. c

Yea, all the Jewes alſo that dwelte in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea and in al the countreyes, when they hearde, that the kyng of Babilon had made Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam the ſonne of Saphan, gouernoure vpon them that were leſte in Iuda: All the Jewes (I ſaye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: And came into the lande of Iuda to Godoliah vnto Hazpah, and gathered wyne and other ſcutes, and that very muche.

Moreouer, Iohanan the ſonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hooſte, that were ſcatred on euery ſyde in the land, came to Godoliah in Hazpah, and ſayd vnto him: knoweſt thou not that Baalis kyng of the Ammonites hath ſente Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, to ſlaye thee? But Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam beleued them not. Then ſayde Iohanan the ſonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Hazpah theſe wordes ſecretlye: Lette me goe, I pray thee, and I will ſlaye Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah, ſo þ no body ſhal knowe it. Wherefore will he kyll thee, that all the Jewes whiche reſorte vnto thee, myghte be ſcatred, and the remnaunte in Iuda perith? Then ſayde Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam to Iohanan the ſonne of Careah: Thou ſhalte not doe it, for they are but lyes, that men ſay of Iſmael.

¶ The. xli. Chapter.

Iſmael killeth Godoliah ſecretlye, and manye other with hym. Iohanan foloweth after Iſmael.

It in the ſeuēth moneth it happened, * þ Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah the ſonne of Eliaſima (one of the kynges bloude) came with them that were greateſt aboute the kyng, & ten men that were ſwozne with him: vnto Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam to Hazpah, and ate there together. And Iſmael the ſonne of Nathaniah with thoſe ten men that were ſwozne to him, ſtarte vp, and ſmote Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam the ſonne Saphan with the ſwearde, and ſlewe hym, whom þ kyng of Babilon had made gouernour of the lande. Iſmael alſo ſlewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Hazpah, and all þ Chaldees that he ſoude there waytynge vpon hym.

The nexte daye after that he had ſlayed flayne Godoliah (the matter was yet unknownen) there came certayne men frome Sichem, frome Siloh and Samariah, to the nombre of lxxx. whiche had haueu there beards, rente their clothes, and were all heye, bringyng meate offerynges, and incense in their handes, to offer it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismaell the sonne of Rathaniah went forth to Hazpah, wepyng, to mete them. Nowe when he met them, he sayde: Goe youre waye to Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam. And when they came in the myddest of the cite, Ismaell the sonne of Rathaniah (with the that were sworne vnto hym) slew them, euen at the myddest of the pyt. Amonge these lxxx. me were there ten, that sayde vnto Ismaell: Oh flaye vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of wheate, barleye, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slue them not with their brethren. Nowe the pyt, wherein Ismaell dyd cast the dead bodies of the men (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had kynge Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israel, and the same pyt dyd Ismaell fyll wyth flayne men. As for the remnaunt of the people, the kinges daughters and all the people that were yet left at Hazpah, vpon whom * Nabulardan the chiefe captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismaell the sonne of Rathaniah carped them a waye prisoners towards the Ammonites. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah and all they whiche had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoste with hym, heard of al the wyckednesse that Ismael the sonne of Rathaniah had done: * They tooke their copanions, & went out for to fight wyth Ismael the sonne of Rathaniah, and founde hym by the waters of Rabim in Gibeon. Nowe when al the people, whome Ismael led captiue, sawe Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the other captaynes of the hoste, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had carped a waye fro Hazpah, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismaell the sonne of Rathaniah fledde frome Johanan wyth eyghte of hys sworne compayons, and wente to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste that were wyth hym, tooke the remnaunte of the people, whom Isma-el the sonne of Rathaniah had led away (when he had flayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whome they also had rescued from hym: fightyng men, we-men and childzen, and gelded men, who they broughte agayne frome Gibeon:

And wente from thence, and sette them downe at Geruth Camaam, whiche lyeth belyde Bethlehẽ, that they myght goe into Egypte for feare of the Chaldees: Of whome they were afrayde, because that Ismael the sonne of Rathaniah had flayne Godoliah Ahicams sonne, * whome the kynge of Babilon had made gouernoure in the lande.

The .xlii. Chapter.

The Captaynes aske counsell of Jeremye what they ought to doe. Jeremye admonyssheth the remnaunte of the people not to goe into Egypte.

All the ruelars, and Johanan the sonne of Careah, Iesaniah the sonne of Osatah came wyth al the people from the leste vnto the moſte, and sayde vnto Jeremye the prophete: * We heare our peticio, that thou mayſt praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, and for the remnaunte, wherof there be verye fewe leste of manye, as thou seist vs: That the Lorde, thy God maye shewe vs a waye to goe in, and tell vs, what we shoulde doe. Then Jeremye the prophete sayde vnto them: I haue hearde you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto God youre Lorde, as ye haue required me: And loke what answer the Lord geueth you, I shall certyfyce you thereof, and kepe nothyng backe from you.
And they sayde vnto Jeremye: * The Lorde of trueth and faythfulnesse be out recorde, that we wyl doe al, that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euell. We wyl hearken vnto the voyce of oure Lorde God to of the Lorde vnto Jerempe. Then called he Iohanan the sonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the people that were wyth hym: Yea, and all the people from the leste to the moſte, and layd vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Israell vnto whome ye ſent me, to laye forth your prayers before hym: * If ye wyll dwell in thys lande, I ſhal buyd you vp, & not breake you downe: I ſhal plant you, and not rote you out: For I am pacified, as concernynge the trouble that I haue done to you. Feare not the kynge of Babilon, of whome ye ſtand in awe: He be not aſcayde of hym, ſayeth the Lorde: For I wyll be wyth you, to helpe you, and deliuer you fro thys hande. I wyll pardon you, I wyll haue mercy vpon you, and bynge you agayne into youre owne lande.

Jer. xxi. b.

C Neuertheles, yf ye purpoſe not to dwell in thys lande, nor to ſolowe the voyce of the Lorde your God: but wyll ſaye thus, we wyll not dwell here, but goe into Egypte: where we ſhall neyther ſee warre, heare the noyſe of batell, nor ſuffre hongre, there wyll we dwell. Wherefore heare nowe the worde of the Lorde, O ye remnaunte of Iuda. * Thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Israell: If ye be wholly purpoſed to goe into Egypte, and to be there as ſtraungers; * the ſwearde that ye feare, ſhall ouertake you in Egypte: & the hunger whereof ye be here aſcayde ſhall hange vpon you into Egypte, and there ye ſhall dye. For all they, that of ſet purpoſe vndertake to goe into Egypte, there to eaſe them ſelues of their miſerpe, ſhall perſhe wyth the ſwearde, wyth hunger and peſtilence: Not one of them ſhall remayne, there ſhall none eſcape the plage, that I wyll bynge vpon them.

Jer. xxvii. a.

Jer. xli. c.

For thus ſayeth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Israell: Lyke as in my wrathe and indygnacyon is come vpon the inhabitours of Ieruſalem, ſo ſhall my diſpleaſure goe forth vpon you alſo, yf ye goe into Egypte: For there ye ſhall be reuyled, abhorred, broughte to ſhame and confuſion: And as for thys place, ye ſhall neuer ſee it moore. The Lorde ſorbyddeth you (O ye remnaunte of Iuda) that ye ſhal not goe in to Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly thys day, els ſhal ye begyle your ſelues. * For ye ſent me vnto the Lorde your God, and ſayde: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: And loke what anſwere the Lorde our God geueth thee, that bynge vs agayne, and we ſhal doe there after. Nowe haue I ſhewed, and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lorde your God, for the whiche cauſe he hath ſent me vnto you. * If ye wyll not ſolowe it, be ſure, that ye ſhall perſhe wyth the ſwearde, with hunger and peſtilence: Euen in the ſame place, where your luſt was to goe and dwell.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Iohanan carpeſh the remnaunte of the people into Egypte, contrarie to the mynde of Jerempe. Jerempe prophecyeſh the deſtruction of Egypte.

Nowe when Jerempe had ended al the wordes of the Lord God vnto the people (for their ſakes to whom God had ſente hym)

Azariah the ſonne of Oſiah, and Iohanan the ſonne of Careah wyth all the proude perſones, ſayd vnto Jerempe: * thou lyeſt, O Lord our God hath not ſent thee to ſpeake vnto vs, that we ſhoulde not goe into Egypte, and dwell there. But Baruch the ſonne of Neriah prouoketh thee agaynſt vs, that he myghte bynge vs in to the captiuite of the Caldees: that they myght ſlaue vs, and cary vs away pryſoners vnto Babilon.

So Iohanan the ſonne of Careah, and al the captaynes of the hoſte, and all the people ſolowed not the commaundemente of the Lorde: Namelye, to dwell in the lande of Iuda: But Iohanan the ſonne of Careah, and all the captaynes of the hoſte, carped awaye all the remnaunte in Iuda, * that were come together agayne from al the heyes then (amonge whom they had bene ſcattered) to dwell in the land of Iuda: men, women, chyldren, the kynges daughters: All thoſe that Nabuzaradan the chefe captaine had lefte with Godoliah the ſonne of Ahicam. They carped awaye alſo the Prophet Jerempe, Baruch such the sonne of Aetiah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Chaphnis.

And in Chaphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremy, saying: Take great stones in thynne hande, and hyde them in the hycke wall, vnder the doze of Pharaos house in Chaphnis, that all the men of Iuda may see, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl sende a cal for Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon my seruante, and wyl sette hys seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd, & he shall sprede hys tent ouer them.

And when he commeth, he shall smyte the lande of Egypt with slaughter, wyth pysonmente, and wyth the swearde. He shall sette fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians Gods, and burne them by, and take them selues pysoners. Moreouer, he shall araye hym selfe wyth the lande of Egypt, like as a shepheard putteth on hys cote, and shall departe hys waye frome thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the Sunne that is in Egypt: Shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

The. xliiii. Chapter.

We reponeth the people for theyr ydolatre. They that settyng by the theatynge of the Lorde, are charged. The destruction of Egypt and the Jewes therein is prophesied.

This is the worde that I was shewed to Jeremye concerninge all the Jewes which dwelte in Egypt: At Magdal, at Chaphnis, at Mephis, & in the lade of patures. Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Ye haue sene all the misery, that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon all the ciyties of Iuda: So that thys daye they are desolate, and no man dwelling therein: And that because of the great blasphemes, whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger: In that they wente backe to doe sacrifice, and wythpyppe vnto straunge Goddes: whom neither they, nor ye, nor youre fathers haue knowen. Howe be it, I sente vnto the my seruantes al the prophetes: * I rose by earlye, I sente vnto them, and gaue them warnynge: O doe no suche abhomyable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they woulde not folowe nor herken, to tourne frome theyr wyckednes, and to do no moze sacrifice vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore myne indignacion and wrath was kyndled, and it burnt by the cytyes of Iuda, thefeldes with the stretes of Ierusalem so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Howe therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it, that ye doe so greute euell vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, chyldren and babes of Iuda: So that none of you is lefte, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath, wyth the wyckes of youre owne handes: When ye offre vnto straunge Goddes in the lande of Egypte where as ye begonns to dwell: That ye myghte utterlye perishe, and that ye myghte be reupled and shamefullye entreated of all nacyns.

O haue ye nowe forgotten the wyckednesse of youre forefathers, the wyckednes of the kynges of Iuda, and their wyues, the wyckednes that ye your selues and youre wyues haue done in the lande of Iuda, in the citie and in the land of Ierusalem.

Yet are ye not sorre thys daye, ye feare not, neyther walcke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israel: I amstedfastlye aduysed and determined, to punishe you, and to roote oute all Iuda. * As for the remnaunte of Iuda that purposelye wente into Egypte, there to save them of their myserye: I wyl take them* and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypte shall they perishe, bringe consumed with the swearde and wyth hunger. For from the least vnto the mooste, they shall perishe wyth the swearde and wyth hunger. Moreouer they shall be reupled, abhored, shamed, and confounded. For I wyl biset them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue be-

syted Jerusalem: wyth the swearde, with hunger and with pestilence: So that none of the remnaunte of Juda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypt shal be leste to come agayne into the lande of Juda al though they thinke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. for none shal come agayne, but such as are fled awaye.

D Then all the men whiche knewe that their wiues had offered vnto straunge Goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, yea, and all the people that dwelt there in Egypt in the cite of Patures, answered Jeremie, and sayde: as for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of y Lord, we wyl in no wise heare them: But whatsover goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that wyl we doe: We wyl doe sacrifice, and offre oblacions vnto the Quene of heauen: * lyke as we and our forefathers, our kynges, and our hea- des haue done in the ctytes of Juda, and in the stretes and feldeg of Jerusalem. for then had we plenteousnesse of byracles, then were we in prosperite, & no misfortune came vpon vs.

Jer. vii. b

E * But sence we leste to offer, and to doe sacrifice vnto the Quene of hea- uen, we haue had scarcenes of all thin- ges, and perished with the swearde and hunger. Then sayde Jeremie vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke, whiche had geuen hym that answer: * Dyd not the Lord re- membze the sacrifices that ye, poure forefathers, your kynges and ruelars (with al the people) haue offered in the cities of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem: and hath he not consi- dzed this in his mynde: In so muche, y the Lord myghte no longer suffer the wickednes of your inuenciōs, & the ab- hominable thinges which he dyd: * Is not your lāde desolate & voyde, yea, & abhorred, so y no man dwelleth therein any more as it is come to pas this day: Dyd not al thys happen vnto you, because ye made such sacrifice, & smedd agaynst the Lord, * ye haue not follo- wed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yea, this is the cause, that al mis- fortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this day. Moreover, Je- remy spake vnto al y people & to al the women: Heare the worde of the Lord al Juda, yethat be in the lande of Egypt: Thus sayeth the Lord of ho- stes the God of Israell: Ye and your wiues haue spokē w your own mouth, the thinge y ye haue fulfilled in dede.

* Yea, thus haue ye sayd: we wyl not sayle, but doe y thing y pleaseth vs: we wyl do sacrifice & powre out drynck of- feringes to the Quene of heauen. But, possye haue ye set by your owne good meanynge, and hastely haue ye fulfill- led your owne intente. And therefore, heare y worde of the Lord al Juda, ye that dwel in the lande of Egypt.

Behold, * I haue sworne by my great name (sayeth the Lord) that my name shal not be rehearsed thowme any man- nes mouth of Juda, in all the lande of Egypt: To saye: The Lord God ly- ueth, for I wyl watche, to plage the, and not for their wealth. * And all the mē of Juda y be in y lād of Egypt, shal perish w the swerde & with hunger, vntyl they be bitterlys destroyed.

Neuertheles, those that fled awaye for y swearde, shal come agayne into the lande of Juda, but there shal be ver- ry fewe of them. And al the remnant of Juda, that are gone into Egypt, there to dwell, shal knowe whose wordes, shal be founde true. Theyrs oz myne. Take thys for a token, y I wyl bisekt you in thys place (sayeth the Lord) & that ye maye knowe, howe that I (with oute doute) wyl persfourwe my pur- pose vpon you to punyche you. Behold, sayeth the Lord, I wyl delpyet Pharao Hophrea Kyng of Egypt into the handes of hys enemyes, that seke after hys lyfe: * Euen as I gaue zedekiah the Kyng of Juda in to the handes of Nabuchodonozor Kyng of Ba- bilon whiche soughte after hys lyfe.

These are þe wordes that Jeremye þe prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Neriah, * after that he had written these Sermons into a booke at the mouth of Jeremye, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim þe son of Josiah kyng of Iuda.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel vnto the, O Baruch: In so muche as thou thoughtest thus (when thou wast wyrtynge. Wo is me, the Lorde hath geuen me payne for my trauaile: I haue weeped my selfe with sighinge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therefore tell hym, O Jeremye, that the Lorde sayeth thus: Beholde, the thyng that I haue buylded, wyll I breake downe agayne, and rote oute þe thyng that I haue platted yea, this whole lande. And sekest thou yet promocioun? Looke not for it, and desyre it not. For I wil bryge a miserable plage vpon all flesh sayeth the Lorde: * But thy lyfe wyll I geue the for a praye, wher soeuer thou goest.

The prophesie the destruction of Egypt. Deliares came in promysed to Israel.

Here folowe the wordes of the Lorde to the prophete Jeremye, whiche he spake vnto þe Centyles. These wordes for to tynge preached he to the * Egyptians concerninge the hooste of Pharaos kyng of Egypt: * when he was in Charraimis besyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon slewe hym, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim þe sonne of Josiah, kyng of Iuda.

Ye make redy buckler and thyld, ye goe forth to fyght. Ye harnessse your bowes, and set your selues vpon them. Let your salettes fast on, ye bynge with speares, ye scoure your swerdes, and put on your best plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, that I see you so afrayde. Why? whynke ye backe? wherefore are your worthyes layne? Yea, they runne so faste awaye, that none of them loketh behynde hym. Fearfulnes is falle vpon euerychone of them, sayeth the Lorde. The lyghtest of foote shall not flee awaye, and the worthyes shall not escape.

Toward the North by the water of Euphrates, they shall stumbe & fall. But what is he thys, that swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe & raginge, like þe streames of water? It is Egypte that ryseth vp lyke þe floude, & casteth out the waters with so greates noyse.

For they saye: we wyll goe vp, & wyll couer the earthe: we wyll destroye the ctytes, with the that dwell therein. Get you to houle backe, role forth the Charettes, come forth ye worthyes: ye Morians, ye Libeans with your bucklers, ye Libeans with your bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lorde God of hostes, a daye of vengeance, that he maye avenge hym of his enemyes. The swerde shall deuoure, it shall be satisfied & bathed in their bloude: * for the Lorde God of hostes shall haue a daye offerynge toward the North, by the water of Euphrates. Goe vp (O Cilcad) and bynge tryacle vnto the daughter of Egypte.

But in bayne shalte thou goe to surgerie, for thy wounde shall not bee stopped. The hepten shall heare of thy shame, and the lande shall be full of thy confusion: for one stronge man shall stumbe vpon another, howe then shulde they not fall both together.

* These are the wordes that þe Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremye, concerninge the hooste of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, which was sente to destroye þe lande of Egypt: preach out thorow þe lande of Egypt, & cause it be proclaimed at Magdol, Memphis, and Thapnis, and say: Stande stil, make the redy, for the swerde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it that thy myghty worthyes are fallen? why stode they not fast? Euen because þe Lorde thrust them downe. The slaughter was great, for one fell euer styl vpon another. One cryed vpon another: Up, let vs goe as gayne to our owne people, and to oure owne natural coultre, fro the swerde of oure enemye.

Crys euen there: O Pharaos kyng of Egypte, the tyme wyll bynge sedition. As truely as I lyue (sayeth the kyng, * whose name is the Lorde of hostes) it shall come as the mounte of Yea, I wyl deliuer the in to the handes of those, that seke after their lyues. Namely, into the power of Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babilon, and into the power of his seruantes. And after al these thynges it shalbe inhabited as a fore tyme, sayeth the Lorde.

But be not thou afrayde, O my seruante Jacob feare not thou, O Israell. For so, I wyl helpe the from farte, and thy sede from the lande of thy captiuite. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in rest: he shalbe cryche, and no man shal do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruante) sayeth the Lorde, for I am with the: and wyl destroye all nacions, amonge whome I haue scatered the. Neuerthelesse I wyl not consume thee, but chastene and correcte the: yea, and that with discrecion: neither wyl I spare thee as one that were faultlesse.

The notes

as the Chaldeaes killed the Egyptians, at the of Suphrates, whiche was towards the North, where as yet their hoste was wonderous great, and their hostes and charrettes many. But the greater their host was, the more cruel was their slaughter: so dyd the Lord punishe their wickednes, gruinge them into the handes of the Chaldeaes: and therefore called the prophete the daye of their laughter the daye of the Lordes vengeance, and them a daye offering of the Lord. As though he sayd. Hitherto (O Egypte) thou bene as a goodly fayre calfe, for thine habodance of cyches. Therefore as bullockes and oxen are stonge with hornes and pricked forward with goades (or as some cal them gaddes) so shal the Babilonians stinge and pricke the, and bringe the to flighte and ouerthrowe thee. By him that shoulde come out of the North, is vnderstande the kyng of Babilon and his hoste. Her wagged souldiers, see. The meaning is, that the byrd hoste of the Egyptians gathered derhe roades that bordered thereon, shoulde be fearful and weake, and more deuyt & delicious, then stronge and manfull, as men fattened y the stal fed open: so that they shoulde also be worth the Egyptians, when their mischance shoulde come, when the daye of their visitacion and punishment shoulde come.

The xliii. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lorde agaynste the Philistines. These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Ieremie the Prophete agaynst the Philistines, before that pharao smote the cite of Ashdod. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, there shall waters aryse oute of the North: and shall growe to a great floudde, runnyng oute and couerynge the lande: the egyptes, and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, & all they that dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse & stampyng of their stronge batted horses, at the shakynge of their charrettes, and at the combyng of the wheles. The fathers shall not looke to their chyldren, so feable and werpe shal their handes be: at the same tyme, when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. He shall make waste bothe Tirus, Sidon and all, yether that are sworne vnto them.

For the Lorde wyl destroye all palestina, and the other Iles, that be ded wydded from the countrie. Salomone is come vpon Ashdod, Alcala with her, yether balleys shal kepe her peace.

Howe longe wylt thou slape, O thou swearde of y Lord: Cuene agayne vnto thy sheeth, rest, and leaue of. But howe can it cease, when the Lorde him selfe selfe hath geuen hym a charge agaynst Hiclon, & rayled it vp agaynst the cy-ties of the sea coast.

The. xlviii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

THUS sayeth the Lord of Hostes ꝑ God of Israell agaynst Moab: wo be to the cyrie of Rabo, for it shall be layed waste, brought to confusyon and take.
Yea, thy stronge cyrie of * Mariathiarim shall be brought to shame, & astrayed: Moab shall no more be had in honour: wycked counsell shall be taken vpon Hesebon. Come (shal they say) let vs rote them out, that they maye be no more amonge the nombze of the Gentyles, yea, that they maye no more be thought vpon: Thus the sword shal persecute the: A voyte shall crye from Ho-ronaim: With great wasting & destruction, is Moab made desolate.

And this crye shalbe herde in all her cytyes. At the goynge vp vnto Luth there shall aryse a lamentacyon: and downe to watde Horonaim, there shall be herbe a cruell and a deadly crye: Get you awaye, saue your lyues, and be like vnto the heeth in the wyldernesse.

* for because thou haste trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure, thou shalt be taken a Chamos with hys pyrestes, and prynces shall go awaye into captiuities.

The destroyer shall come vpon all cyties, none shall escape. The valleys shalbe destroyed, and the feldes shalbe layed waste: lyke as the Lorde hath determined.

Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedelye: for her cytyes shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein. Cursed be he that doeth the worcke of the Lorde negly-gentelye, and cursed be he that kepeth backe hys * swearde from Meddynge of bloude.

Moab hath euer bene trych and cate-lelle from her pouth vp, she hath lytton and taken her ease with her treasure.
She was neuer yet put out of one bessell into another (that is) she neuer went awaye into captiuite, therefore her talt remayneth, and her sauoure is not yet chaunged.

But so, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde, that I shal sende her trusters to truste her vp, to prepare and season her vessels: yea, her tancherdes rattell and shake to and fro. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, like as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherein she put her truste.

Wherfore do ye thynke thus: we are myghtye, and stronge men of warre: Moab shall be destroyed, and her cities brente vp: her chosen yong men shall be slayne, sayeth the Kinge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neighbours shall indurue for her, and all they that knowe her name, shal saye: O how happeneth it, that the stronge state and the goodlye rodde is thus broken? And thou doughtet Di-bon, come downe from thy glorie, and lyt in pouerte. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to thee also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroet, get the to the strete, and loke aboute thee: aske them that are fled and escaped, and saye: what thinge is happened? O, Moab is confounded and overcome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Ar-non, that Moab is destroyed. And mytery shall come vpon the playne landes namely, vpon Holon, and Jabazah: vpon Dephath and Dibon, vpon Rabo and the house of Deblathaim, vpon Ca-riathiarim & Bethgamul, vpon Beth-maon & Carioth, vpon Bozrah & all the cytyes in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The hozne of Moab shall be smytten downe, and her arme broken, sayth the Lorde. Make her dyoncken, for she magnified her selfe aboute the Lord, that men maye clappe their handes at her vomitte, & that she also may be laughed to scozne. O Israel, shalt ꝑ not laughe him to scozne, when he is taken among theues? * Yea, because of thy wordes that thou hast spokē agaynst him, thou shalt be dryuen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cytyes, and dwell in rockes of stone, & become lyke dows ues, that make theyr nestes in holes.

* As for Moabs pyrde, we haue heard

2 Reg. 11. 6.

Rom. 1. 6.

2 ap. 16. 6.
Act. 4. 9.

hearde of it, she is very hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnesse, her boastyng, her arrogancy and þe pride of her stomacke, sayeth the Lorde: for her furiousnesse may nether vpholde her wth strenght nor dede. Therefore shall their mournyng be made for Moab, and euerye man shall cry for Moabs sake: a lamentacyō shall be made to the men that stand vpon the wall. So wyl I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the, o thou bynepard of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the sea, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto þe sea: the destroyer shall break into thy haruest and grape gathering: Myrrh and cheare shall be taken awaye from the tymbre felde, & from the whole lande of Moab.

There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the treader shall haue no stomack to crye, yea, there shall be none to crye vnto him: which afore tyme were herd from Hesebon to Eleale and Jihaz, whiche lyfted vp theyr voyce from zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullock of thre yere olde. The waters also of Shimitim shall be dreyed vp.

I More ouer I wyl make Moab cease (sayeth the Lorde) from the offeringes & censyng that she hath made vnto her goddes in hye places. Wherefore my hert mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mennes sake of the byrke wall my hert mourneth also, euen as a pype that ppyeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all beerdes clypped of: all handes bounde, and all loynes gyrded about with sack cloth. vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shall be mournyng: for I wyl breake Moab like an vnprofitable vessel sayeth the Lorde. O howe fearfull is she: O howe mourneth she: O howe doeth Moab hang down her head, and is ashamed. Thus shall Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them, þe be rounde aboute her.

Deut. 28. c.
Jer. xliij. d

* For thus sayeth the Lorde: Behold, the enemy shall come vponge as an eagle, and sprede his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clymme ouer the walles, and wyne the stronge holdes. Then the myghtie mens hertes in Moab shall be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with childe.

And Moab shall be made desolate, late, that she shall no more be a people, because she hath set vp her self against the Lorde. * feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayeth the Lorde. who so escapeth the feare, shall fall in the pyt: and who so getteth oute of the pyt, shall be taken in the snare.

For I wyl bringe a yere of visytacyon vpon Moab, sayeth the Lorde. They that are able to fyre, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon. for there shall go a fyre out of Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, both before and behynde.

Woe be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe: yea, thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captiue. Yet at the last wyl I bring Moab out of captiuite agayne, sayeth the Lorde. Thus farre of þe plage of Moab.

The Notes.

a. Chamos is the name of the Idole and God of the Moabites.

b. After the Breke. Some reade: Geue a Rower: or, wynges.

c. The Hebr. expound this of the Chaldees, that they should haue to destroy the whole kyngdome of the Moabites: as though the rexe should meane thus much: Cursed be he that negligently performeth the vengeance of the Lorde, that spareth these moste wycked Moabites, & that withholdeth his swerde from weddyng of theyr bloude.

The .xliij. Chapter.

The wordes of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Iouma, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

And concerninge the Ammonytes, thus the Lorde sayeth: Hath Israell no chyldren, or is he without an heire? Why hath he poure kyngdom then taken Gad in: wherefore doeth his people dwell in hye cyties? Beholde therefore, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde) that I wil bring a nople of watre in to Rabah of the Ammonytes. Lahell shall be desolate, and her cytyes brente vp: and the Israelytes shall be lordes ouer those that had theym in possession afore, sayeth the Lorde. Hesebon shall mourne, for

It shalbe rote out of þe ground, saith the Lorde. The cyties of Rabah shall crye out, and grynne them selues with sacke clothe: they shall mourne, and runne about the walles: for theyr kyng shall be led away prisoner: yea, his pryuelles and prynces with him.

B Wherfore trustest thou in the water streames that flowe to and fro, O thou fearce daughter: and thynkest thou that thou arte so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no man shall come to the-

Beholde, I wyll byynge a feare vpon the, sayth the Lorde God of hostes, fro all those that be aboute the: so that ye shall be scattede euery man from another, and no man shall gather them together agayne that be fled. But after that, I wyll byynge the Ammonites also out of captiuite agayne.

A Upon the Edomites hath the Lord of hostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no more wysdom in Themar? Is there no more good counsell amonge his people? Is their wysdom then turned cleane to naught? Get you hence, turne your backes, crie down into the depe, O ye cytezens of Dedan.

For I wyll byynge destruction vpon Esau, yea, and þe day of his visitacion.
If the grape gatherers came vpon the,
should they not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon the, should they not take so much as they thought were ynough?

C But I wyll make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. Hys sede shall be wasted away, yea, his brethren and hys neighbour, and he hym selfe shall not be left behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherles children behynde the, and I wyll kepe the,
and thy wydowes shall take theyr comfort in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Beholde, they þe men thought were ynmete to dryncke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrst: & thynkest thou then to be fre?

No, no: thou shalt neither be quyte nor fre, but thou must dryncke also: for why, I haue swozne by my selfe (sayeth the Lorde) that Bozrah shall become a wyldernes, an open shame, a laughing stocke and cursyng: and her citie shall be a contynual desert.

For I am perfectly informed of the Lorde, that he hath sent a message all ready vnto the heathen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them:
make you ready to the battayle, for lo:

* I wyll make the but small amonge the hethen, & lytle regarded among men.

* Thy hys stomacke and the pryde of thy hert haue disceaued þe, because thou wylt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hys mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles though the thy nest were as hye as the Eagles, yet wyll I cast the downe, sayeth the Lorde. More-ouer Idumea shall be a wyldernes:

* who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, & wonder at all her myserable plagues.

* Like as Sodome, Gomor, and the cities that laye there about, were turned vpon lyde downe (sayth the Lorde) so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habytacion there. Be-holde, lyke as the Lyon cometh vpon from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Etha, so wyll I dryue him, & make him runne agaynst her. But who is the yong man that I wyll ordeyne thereto? Who is lyke vnto me? What is he, that wyll stryue wyth me? What shepherde maye stande in my handes?

* Therfore heare the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and his purpose, that he hath de-uyled vpon the cytezens of Theiman:
The least of the flocke shall teare them in peces, & loke what fayre thyng they haue, they shall make it wast, and them selues also. At the noyse of their sal the earth shall quake, the crye of theyr voice shall be heard vnto þe redde sea. Behold, the enemye shall come & slye vpon hither, lyke as it were an Eagle, and sprede his wynges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the wythyes in Edom be as the hert of a woman traueling of child.

* Upon Damascus, Hemath and Ar-phad shall come confusyon, for they shall heare euill tydynge: they shall be tossed to and fro lyke the sea that can not stande still. Damascus shall be sore afrayed, and shall slye, trembling shall come vpon her. Sorow and paine shall quettake her as a woman trauelynge of childe. But how should so worshipp full and glorious a cytye be forsaken?

Heare therfore: her ponge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be taken away in that tyme, sayeth the Lorde of Hostes. I will kyndle a fyre in þe walles of Damascus, which shall consume the place of Benhadad.

Ezay. u. 1

* As for Cedar and the kyngedome of Hazor, whom Nabuchodonozor þe king of Babylon smote downe, the LORD hath spoken thus vpon them. Arise, & get you by vnto Cedar, and destroy the people towarde the east. Theyr tentes and theyr flockes shall they take away, yea theyr hangynges and theyr vessell.
Theyr Camels also shall they carpe away with them. They shall come about them on euery syde with a fearful crye.

Arise, get you soone away, crepe into caues, that ye maye dwell there: O ye inhabytours of Hazor sayeth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonozor the kinge of Babylon hath holden a counsell concerning you, and concludeth his deuice against you. Arise, and get you by agaynste ponder ryche and carelesse people (sayeth the Lorde) whiche haue nether gates nor doore barres, and that dwell not together. Their Camels shall be stollen, and the droues of theyr catell dzyuen awaye.

Moreouer, these that be shauen wil I scatter towarde all the wyndes, and byynge them to destruction: yea, & that thorowe theyr owne samplers, sayeth the Lorde. Hazor also shall be a dwelling for dragons, and an euerlastyng wil-dernes: so that no bodye shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there hys habytacyn.

Ezech. 12. 1
Am. 5. 2

These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremy concernyng Clam, in the begynnyng of the raygne of Zedekiah kyng of Iuda.

Thus sayeth the Lorde of Hostes: Be-holde, I will breake the bolue of Clam, and take away theyr strength: and vpon Clam I will byynge the fourte win-des from the fourte quarters of heauē, and will scatter them agaynste the same fourte wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Clam shall flye vnto them.

For I will cause Clam to be a feared of theyr enemies, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and will byynge vpon the the indignacyon of my wrathe, sayeth the Lorde. And I will persecute them with the swearde so longe tyll I haue brought them to noughte. I will sette my stole in Clam, I will destroy both the kyng and the prynces from thence, sayeth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme, I will byynge Clam out of captyuite agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

The Notes.

a. By this ponge man, do some vnderstand Alexander the great conquerer, which ouercame al landes.

b. The Clamptes were good men in battell: and therfore is theyr name prophesied to be broken.
c. By whiche is meant that they shoulde be o-uercome in battell of theyr enemyes, and scattered abroad vnto the fourte coastes of the earth.

c. That is (as some thynke) Alexander the great conquerer, that wanne Clam.

The I. Chapter.

The propheteth the destruction of Babylon, & the deliuerance of Ierusalem, whiche was in captiuite.

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Jeremy, concernyng Babylon, and the lande of the Caldees: * preach among the Gentyles, let your voyce be heard, make a token: cry out, kepe no sylence, but saye: Babilon shall be wonne, * Bel shall be confounded, and Merodach shall be overcome.

* Yea, theyr goddes shall be brought to shame and their ymages shall stande in feare. For out of the north there shall come a people agaynste her, whiche shall make her lande so waste, that no body shall dwell therein: nether man nor beast, for they shall flye and depart fro thence.

* In those dayes and at that tyme sayeth the Lorde, the chyldren of Israell shall come, they and the chyldren of Iuda, wepyng and makinge hast, and shall seke the Lorde theyr God. They shall aske the way to Sion, thither shall they turne theyr faces, and come & haue vpon the, in a couenaunte that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a lost & stocke, my shepherdes haue dysceaued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hylls. They haue gone from the mountayns to the litle hyll, and forgotten their folde. All they þe came vpon the, haue

haue deuoured them: and their enemies said: we haue made no fault agaynst the,
for they haue displeased the Lord, yea, even the Lord which is the bewtpe of their rightiounesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye fle from Babylon, and departe oute of the lande of the Caldees, and ye shall be as the rammes that go before the flocke. * For lo, I will wake vp an hoost of people fro the northzen land, and bringe them vp on Babilō: these shall lay sege to it, and winne it: Theyr arrowes shall not misse, like as a connyng archer smyteth not wronge. And the Caldees shall be spoy-led, and all they that spoyle them, shall be satysfied, sayeth the Lord: * because ye were so cherefull and glad, to treade down mine heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grasse: and triumphed ouer them like the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorie.
Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame. She shall be the leste set by amonge the nacions, boyde, waste, and dried vp. No man shall be able to dwel there, for the feare of the Lord, but she shall be whole desolate. * All they that go by Babilon, shall stande styll, and be abashed, and shall wondre at all her plages.

Go forth in your aray agaynst Babylon round about, al ye that can handle bowes: shote at her, spare no arowes, for she hath synned agaynst the Lord. Crye oute: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde about: she shall yeld her selfe, her foundacions shall fall, and her walles shall come downe, for it shall be the vengeance of the Lord. Yea, vengeance shall be taken of her, * and as she hath done, so shall she be dealt withall. They shall rote out the sower from Babylon, and hym that handleth the sicke in haruest. For feare of the sword of the enemye, euery man shall get hym to his owne people, & euery mā shall fle to his owne lande. Israell is a scatted flocke, the Lyons haue dyspersed the.
* For the kynge of the Assyrians de-uoured them, * last of all this Nabu-chodonosor kynge of Babylon hath bowed all theyr bones.

Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell: beholde, I will vsset the kynge of Babylon and his kynngdoine, * as I haue vsited the kynge of the Assyrians: and will bring Israell agayne to his pleasaunte pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charnel and Basan, and be satysfied vpon the mount of Ephraim and Gilead. * In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayeth the Lord) of the offence of Israell he sought for, there shall none be found:

If men enquire for the synne of Iuda, there shall be none: for I will be mercyfull vnto theym, whome I sutfre to re-mayne ouer.

Go downe (O thou auenger) into the enemies lande, & vsset them that dwel therin: downe with theym, and smyte them vpon the backes, sayeth the Lord: do accordynge to all, that I haue commaunded the. There is gone about the lande a crye of a slaughter and greate murther, namely on this maner: Howe happeneth it, & the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sonder? Howe chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wyldernesse amonge the heathen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed waite for thee, and thou arte taken: vnawares arte thou trapped and snared: for why, thou hast prouoked the Lord vnto anger: The Lord hath opened his house of ordy-nauce, and brought forth the weapes of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lord of hostes worke

These thynges shall come vpon her

Therfore shall her ponge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her menne of warre shall be rooted out in that daye, sayeth the LORD. Beholde, I speake vnto the (O thou proude) sayeth the Lord God of Hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitacion. And the proude shall stumbe and fall, and no man shall helpe hym vp. I will burne vp the cyties with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about hym.

I Thus sayeth the Lord of Hostes: The children of Israell and Juda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captiuite, kepe them faste, and will not let them go: but they reuenger and redemer is myghtie, whose name is y<sup>e</sup> Lord of Hostes: he shall magnifye theyr cause, he shall make y<sup>e</sup> land, shake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another. The swearde shall come vpon the Caldees, saith y<sup>e</sup> Lord, vpon theym that dwell in Babylon, vpon theyr pynces, and vpon theyr wise men: The swearde vpon theyr sothsayers, as for those (they shall become fooles.) The swearde vpon theyr workers, so that they shall stande in feare: The swearde vpon their horsemen and charrettes, and vpon all the common people that dwell vnder them: so y<sup>e</sup> they shall all become lyke women: The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stollen away: The sweard vpon theyr waters, so that they shall be dried vp: for the lande worshippeth ymagines, and delyteth in straunge wondres, full thynges. Therefore shall wilde beasts, fowles, and Estriches dwell therein: for there shall neuer man dwell there, nether shall any man haue hys habitacion there for euermore. Like as god* destroyed Sodom and Gomorre, wyth the cyties that laye there about, sayeth the Lord: So shall no man dwell there also, neyther shall any man haue there hys habytacyon.* Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, wyth a greate bonde of men, and manye kynnes shall stande vp from the endes of the earth: They beare bowes and bullets, cruel are they and vnmercyfull.

Theyr voyce roareth lyke the raginge sea, they ryde vpon horses, and come weaponed to fyght agaynst the: O Babylon. As sone as y<sup>e</sup> King of Babylon heareth tell of the, his handes shall waxe feable: Sorowe and heuines shall come vpon him, as a woman traueling with childe.* Beholde, lyke as the Lpō cometh vp from the pleasaunte meadows of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so will I dryue theym forth, & make them ruine agaynst her. But whom shall I chole out, and ordene to suche a thyng? for who is like me, or who will strepue wyth me? Or what Shepherd may stand agaynst me? Therefore heare the counsell that the Lord hath geuen vpon Babylon, and the deuysce that he hath taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The least amonge the people shall teare them in peces, & loke what pleasaunt thyng they haue: they shall laye it wast. The noyse at the winnyng of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the crye shall be hearde amonge the Gentyles.

The li. Chapter.

Thus hath the Lord sayd: beholde, I will rayse vp a people, a glorious wynde agaynst Babilon, and her cytezens, that beare euell will agaynst me. I will sende also into Babilon fanners, to fanne her out, and to destroy her lande: for in the day of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde: Moreover, the Lord hath sayd vnto the bowe men, and to theym that clymme ouer the walles in best plates: Ye shall not spare her yong mē, kil downe al her host. Thus y<sup>e</sup> flaine shall fall downe in the land of the Caldees, and y<sup>e</sup> wounded in the stretes.* As for Israell & Juda, they shall not be for sake of their god, of y<sup>e</sup> Lord of hosts, of y<sup>e</sup> holione of Israell: no, though they haue filled al their lād ful of sin.* Fly away from fro Babilō, every mā saue his lyfe. Let no man holde his tonge to her wyckednes, for the tyme of the Lordes vengeance is come, yea, he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath beire in the Lordes hande, a * golden cuppe, that maketh all landes droncken. Of her wyne haue all people droncken, therfore are they out of theyr wyttes. * But sodenly is Babylon fallen, and destroyed.

Wourne for her, byng plasters for her woundes, yf she maye peradventure be healed agayne. We woulde haue made Babilon whole (say they) but she is not recouered. Therfore wyll we let her alone, and go euerye man into his owne countre, for her iudgement is come in to heauen, and is gone by to the cloudes. And therfore come on, we wyll shewe Syon the woꝝke of the Lord our God.

Make sharpe the arrowes, and fylle the quyuers: * for the Lord shall rayse by the sprete of the kynge of the Medes, whiche hath already a desyre to destroye Babylon. This shalbe the vengeance of the Lordes, and the vengeance of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make poure watche stronge, set your watche men in aray, yea, hold preynt watches; and yet for al that shal the Lord go forth with the deuyce, which he hath taken vpon them & dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the greate waters, O thou that hast so great treasure and ryches, thyue end is come: and the rekenyng of thy wynnynge.

* The Lord of hostes hath sworn by himselfe, that he wyll ouerwhelme the with men lyke grethoppers in nombre, which with a corage shal crye Alarum, Alarū, agaynst the. * Yea, euen & Lord of hostes, that with his wysedome prepared the rounde worlde, and with his discrecyō spred out the heauens. As soone as he letteth his voyce be hearde, the waters in the ayre waxe scarce: * He draweth by the cloudes frome the endes of the earth. He turneth the lyghtenynge to rayne, he byngeth the wyndes out of theyr secreete places. By the reason of wysedome, all men are become fooles.

* Confounded be all the casters of images: for the thyng that they make is but disceate, and hath no breaethe. Wayne is it and woꝝthe to be laughed at: and in the tyme of vpsitacyō it shal perishe.

Neuertheles, the porcyon of Jacob is none suche: but he that made all thynges, whose name is the Lord of hostes, he is the godde of his enherytance. Thou breakest my weapons of warre, and yet thou the I haue scattered the nacjons and kingdomes: Thou the haue I scattered horse and horseman, yea, the charrettes, and suche as sat vpon them: Thou the I haue scattered man and woman, olde & yonge, bachelor and mayden. Thou the I haue scattered the shepherde and his flocke, the husbonde man & his catell, & princes & the rulers. Therfore wyll I rewarde the cytie of Babilō, and al her cytezens the Caldees, with all the euyl whiche they haue done vnto Syon: yea, that ye pour selues shall se it, sayth the Lord. Beholde, I come vpon thee, (thou b nopsome hyll) sayeth the Lord, thou that destroyest all landes. I wyll stretch out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stonye rockes: and wyll make the a brent hyll, so that neyther the corner stones, nor pynacles, nor foundacyon stones shall be taken any moze out of the, but wast and desolate shalt thou lye for euermoze, sayeth the Lord.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes among the heithen, prouoke the nacjons agaynst her, call the kingdomes of Ararat, Menni, and Accanes agaynst her: nombroute Caphsar agaynst her, bynge as greate a fozte of horses agaynst her, as yf they were grethoppers. Prepare agaynst theym the people of the Medes with theyr kynges, princes, and all theyr chiefe rulers, yea, and the whole lande that is vnder them.

The land also shall shake and be a frayd, when the deuyce of & Lord shall come forth agaynst Babylon: to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any moze therein. The woꝝthyes of Babylon shall leaue the batell, and kepe theim selues in stronge holdes, theyr strength hath fayled the, they shall be lyke weimen. Theyr dwelling places shall be brent vp, theyr barres shall be broken. One pursuauant shall mete another, yea, one poste shall come by another, to bryng the kynge of Babilon tydynges: þ his citie is taken in on euery side, þ footes occupied, the fenns bryt vp, & þ souldiers soze afraied.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: the doughter of Babylon hath bene in her tyme lyke as a cheschyng flooze, but shortly shall her hartest come. Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessel. He swallowed me vp lyke a dragon, & fylled his belly w my delicatyes: he hath cast me out, he hath taken my substance away, and the thing that was left me hath he caried vnto Babylon, sayeth the doughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea, and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll defende thy cause, & auenge thee: I wyll drynke vp her sea, and drye vp her water springes.

Esa. 21. c

* Babylon shall become an heape of stones a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnesse and a wondyrng, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lyons, and as þ yong Lyons when they be angrye, so shall they bende theym selues. In theyr heate I shall set dryncke before them, & they shall be droncken for ioye: * Then shall they slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lorde. I shall carrie them downe to be flaine lyke shepe, lyke wethers and goates: O, how was Selach wonner. O, how was the glory of the whole lande taken: howe happeneth it, that Babilon is so wōdred at among the heathen: The sea is rysen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her w his great waues. Her cytyes are laped wast, the land lyeth vnbuylde & boide: it is a lande where no manne dwelleth, and where no man traueleth thozowe.

Moreouer, * I wyll byset Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shall I plucke out of his mouth. The Gentyles also, shall runne no more vnto hym, yea, and the walles of Babylon shall fall.

O my people, * come out of Babylon, that euery man may saue hys lyfe, from the fearfull wrathe of the Lorde. Be not faynte herted, & feare not at euery rumoure that shall be hearde in the lande: for euery yeaure bryngeth newe tidinges, yea, straunge wyckednes and lordshyppe. And lo, the tyme commeth that I wyll byset the ymages of Babylon, and the whole land shall be confounded, yea, and her name shall lye in the myddest of her. Heauen and earth with all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babylon, when þ destroyers shall come vpon her from the North, sayeth the Lorde.

* Lyke as Babylon hath beatē downe & slayne many out of Israell, so shall there fall many, and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swerde, haste you, stande not still, remembre the LORDE a farre of: and thyncke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heate the blasphemyes: our faces were couered w shame, because the straunge aleaunters came into the Sanctuary of the Lord. Wherefore beholde (sayeth the Lord) the tyme cometh, that I wyll byset the ymages of Babylon, and thozowe the whole lande they shall mourne and fall. * Though Babylon climmed vp into heauen, and kepte her power an hye: yet shall I send her destroyers, sayeth the Lorde.

A piteous crye shall be heard from Babylon, and a great mysery from the lande of the Caldees: when the Lorde destroyeth thelm, and when he dryueth oute the hye stomacke and proude boasting, wherewith they haue bene as surpous as the waues of greate water floudes, and made greate crackes with theyr wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babylon) whyche shall take her worthyes, and breake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auenge him selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them.

Yea (sayeth the LORDE) I wyll make theiir prynces, theyr wyse men, theiir chiefe rulers & al theyr worthyes, droncken: * so that they shall slepe an euerlasting slepe, and neuer wake: Thus sayeth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde

Lord of Hostes.

Moreover, thus saith the Lord of Hostes: The thicke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her proude gates shall be brent vp. And the thyng that the Gentyls and the people haue wrought wyth greate trauaile and labour, shall come to naught and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the sonne of Netaniah, the sonne of Maasiah, when he went toward Babylon with Zedekiah king of Juda, in the.iiii. yere of his raigne. Nowe this Saraiah was a peaceable Prince. Jeremy wrote in a booke all the myserye that should come vpon Babylon, yea, and all these sermons that bee wyrtten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraiah this charge: When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade all these wordes, and saye: O Lord, thou arte determined to roote oute this place, so that neyther people nor cattell shall dwell there anye more, but to lye waste for euer: and when thou haste redde oute the booke, bynde a stone to it, and caste it in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye: * Euen thus shall Babylon syncke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble, that I will bringe vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp againe. Thus satre are the preachinges of Jeremy.

The. lii. Chapter.

He rehereth the takinge of Zedekiah. Jerusalem is taken of the Chaldees, Zedekiahs sonnes are kylled before hys face, and his eyes put out. The cytie is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were left in Jerusalem are caried to Babylon. King Jehoakim is brought forth of prison, and fed lyke a henge.

Zedekiah was. xxi. yere old, when he was made king, and he raygned. xi. yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremies doughter of Lobnah. He lyued wickedly before the Lord euen as Jehoakim dyd. Wherefore the Lord was angrie at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had caste them oute of his presence. And Zedekiah fell from the kynge of Babylon. * But in the. ix. yere of his raygne in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the Moneth, it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon with all hys hoste came before Jerusalem, and beseged it, and made them bulwarkes rounde aboute it. And this beseginge of the cytie endured vnto the. xi. yere of kynge Zedekiah.

* And in the fourth Moneth, the. ix. daye of the Moneth, there was so great hunger in the cytie: that there were no more vitayles for the people of the lande. So all the souldyers brake awaye, and fledde oute of the cytie by nyghte thorow the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Now the Caldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet wente these men their waye toward the wilderness.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Jerycho, when hys hoste was runne frome him. So they caried the kynge awaye prisoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgemente vpon hym.

The kynge of Babylon also caused Zedekiahs sonnes to be slaine before his face, yea and put all the princes of Juda to deathe at Reblath. Moreover he put oute the eyes of Zedekiah, caused him to be bounde with cheynes, to be caried vnto Babylon: and let him lye in prison, til he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fythe Moneth in the. ix. yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, Nabusaradan the chefe captayne and the king of Babilons seruantes came vnto Jerusalem, and brent vp the house of the Lord. He brent vp also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgeous buyldynges in Jerusalem. And the whole hoste of the Caldees that were wyth the chefe Captayne, brake downe all the walles of Jerusalem round aboute.

folke as yet was left in the cite, whiche also were fallen to the kyng of Babylon, yea, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chiefe Captaine caried them awaye prisioners. But the pooze people of the countrey, dyd Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne leaue in the lande, to occupie the vineyardes and feldes. The Caldees also brake the brasen pylers that wer in the house of the Lorde, yea, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caried all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, Shouels, fleshe hokes, spynglers, spones, and all the brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruice: with the basens, colepannes, spynglers, pottes, candellstyckes, spones and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, & some of syluer.

C The chiefe Captayne toke also the two pylers, the lauer, & xii. brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate, which kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all bevell contened so muche mettall, that it myght not be weyed. For euery piler was xlii. cubites hie, and the rope that wente aboute it, was xli. cubytes, and four: spynners thicke and rounde: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hie: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and pomegranates rounde about of cleane brasse.

After this maner were both the pylers fashioned with the pomegranates, wherof there wer an hundred and xvi. which hanged vpon the whopes round aboute. The chiefe Captayne also toke

He toke oute of the cite a chamberlayne whiche was a captayne of the souldiers, and seven menne that were the kynges seruantes, whiche were founde in the cite: and Sepher a Captayne that bled to muster the menne of warre: with .xx. menne of the countrey that were taken in the cite. These Nabuzaradan the chiefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kyng of Babylon vnto Beblath: and the kyng of Babylon caused them so bee put to deathe at Beblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Iuda was ledde awaye captiue, oute of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whome Nabuchodonosor ledde awaye captiue.

In the seventh yere of his raigne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, thre thousand and thre and twenty. In the xviij. yere Nabuchodonosor caried awaye frome Jerusalem eighte hundred and xxii. personnes. In the xxiii. yere of Nabuchodonosor Nabuzaradan the chiefe Captayne, toke awaye seven hundred and xlv. Jewes prisioners. The whole summe of all the prisioners, is four thousand and fyve hundred.

* In the xxxvii. yere after that Jehoiachin the kyng of Iuda was caried away in the .xv. day of the .xii. moneth Evilmerodach kyng of Babylon (the same yere that he reigned) gaue Jehoiachin the kyng of Iuda his pardon, and let him out of prision, and spake lownglye to him. And set his throne about the trones of the other kynges that were with him in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prision, yea, and he ate with hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a continuall spynge geuen hym of the kyng of Babylon, euerye daye a certayne thyng alowed hym all the dayes of his lyfe, vntill he dyed.

Beth.

The Lord hath caste downe all the glory of Jacob without anye fauoure: all the stronge places of the doughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and

throwen them downe to the grounde: his kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended.

Simell.

In the wrath of his indignacion he hath broken al the * horne of Israel: he hath with drawen his right hand from the enemye: yea, a flame of fyre is kindled in Jacob, and hath consumed by all rounde aboute.

Daleth.

He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemye, he hath fastened his righte hande as an aduersary: and euery thyng that was pleasaunt to se, he hath smitten it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

He.

The Lord is become lyke as it were an enemye, he hath caste downe Israel and all his places: yea, all his stronge holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled the doughter of Juda with muche sorowe and heupnesse.

Uau.

* Her tabernacle (which was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solempne feastes hath he putte downe. The Lord hath broughte it so to passe, that the hye solempne feastes and Sabbathes in Syon, are cleane forgottē. In hys heup displeasure hath he made the kynge and priestes to be despyled.

Zain.

The Lord hath forsaken his owne altier, and is wrothe with his owne Sanctuarie, and hath geuen the walles of their towres into the handes of an enemye. Their enemies made a noyse in the house of the Lord, as it had bene in a solempne feast daye.

Heth.

The Lord thought to breake downe the walles of the doughter Syon, & he spred out his lyne, and drew not in his hande, tyl he had destroyed them. There fore mourne the turrets and the broken walles together.

Teth.

Her portes are casten downe to the grounde, her barres are broken & smitten in sonder: * her king and princes are caryed caried away to the gentyls. They haue nether lawe nor prophetes, nor yet any bysion from the Lorde.

Jod.

The Senatoures of the doughter Syon sate vpon the grounde in silence: they haue strowed ashes vpon their heades, and gyrded them selues with sacke cloth. The maidens of Ierusalem hang downe their heades to the ground.

Caph.

Myne eyes begynne to fayle me tho:
rowe weppinge, my body is disquieted my luer is pouted vpon the earthe, for a great hurte of my people, seing a chil: dren a babes dyd swoone in the stretes of the cytie.

Lamed.

Euen when they spake to their mo: thers: where is meate and drinke, for whyte they so sayde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cytie, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

Mem.

What shall I saye of thee, O thou doughter Ierusalem, to whome shall I speaken the. To whome shall I compare the, O thou doughter Sion, to comfort the withall. Thy hurte is like a mayne sea, who maye heale the.

Fun.

Thy prophetes haue looked out vaine and folyshe thinges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wyckednesse, to kepe the from captiuite: but haue ouer:
laden the, and thozowe falsshed scatred the abrode.

Samech.

All they that go by the, clappe theyr handes at the: hissinge and waggyng their head vpon the doughter Ierusa: lem, a say: is this the cytie that men cal so faire, wherethin the whole lande reioy: seth.

Aln.

All thine enemyes gape vpon thee, whispering and byttinge their teth, say:
inge: let vs deuoute, for the tyme that we looked for, is come: we haue founde a fewe it.

Phē.

The Lorde hath fulfilled the thyng, that he was purposed to doo: and per:
tourmed that he had deupsed longe a go: he hath destroyed, and not spared: he hath caused thine aduersarye to triumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thine enemye.

the fyrste wathe of the night, poure out thine herte lyke water before the Lord: lyfte vp thine handes, for the lyues of thy yonge chyldren, that dye of hunger in the stretes.

Res.

Beholde, O Lorde, and conspyre, why hast thou gathered me vp so clene: *Shal the women then eate their owne frute, euen chyldren of a spanne longer.
Shall the preestes and prophetes bee slaine thus in the Sanctuary of the Lord.

Syn.

tes vpon the ground, my maydens and yonge men are slaine with the swearde: whome thou in the day of thy wrathfull indpnygation haste put to deathe: yea, euen thou hast put them to deathe, and not spared them.

Thau.

My neyghbours that are rounde a: bout me, hast thou called, as it were to a feast daye: so that in the dape of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was any left behinde. Those that I had Alph.

I

I am the man, that (tho-row the rod of his wrath haue experience of mis-erye.

He droue me forth, and led me: yea, in to darcknesse, but not into light.

Against me only he turneth his hand, and lapeth it euer vpon me.

Beth.

My fleshe and my skynne hathe he made olde, and my bones hathe he brysed.

He hathe buylded rounde about me, and closed me in with a gall and tra-uayle.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

Gymel.

He hathe so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath lated heuy linckes vpon me.

Though I crie and cal piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped by my wayes with four square stones, and made my pa-thes croked.

Daleth.

He laieth wayte for me like a Beere, and as a Lion in a hole.

He hathe marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, he hathe layed me wast altogether.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marcke to shot at.

He.

The arrowes of his quier hathe he shot, euen into my reines.

* I am laughed to scozne of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe.

He hathe fylled me with bytternesse, and geuen me wormwod to drinke.

Vau.

He hath smytten my teth in peces, & roled me in the dust.

He hathe put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thinges.

I thought in my self: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde.

Zain.

O remembre yet my mysery and my trouble, the wormwod and the gall.

Yea, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth away in me.

Whyle I consydre these thinges in my hart, I get a hope agayne.

Beth.

Namely, that the mercyes of the Lorde are not cleane gone, and that his louig kyndnesse ceaseth not.

His faythfulnes is greate, and re-uueith it selfe as the mournynge.

* The Lorde is my porcyon, sayeth my soule, therfore wyll I hope in him.

Teth.

O how good is the Lorde vnto the,
that put their truste in hym, and to the soule that seeketh after him.

O how good is it with stylnesse to wayte and tarpe, for the healthe of the Lorde.

O how good is it for a man, to take the pocke vpon him from his youth vp.

Jod.

He sitteth alone, he holdeth him styl, and dwelleth quyetly by him selfe.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope.

He offreth his cheke to the smyter, he wyll be content with reproues.

Caph.

For the Lorde wyll not forsake for euer.

* But though he do caste of, yet ac-cordinge to the multitude of his mer-cyes, he receaueth to grace agayne.

For he doth not plage, and cast oute the chyldzen of men from his hart.

Lamed.

To treade all the prisoners of the earthe vnder his fete.

To moue the iudgement of man before

Lordes commaundement.

Out of the mouth of the most highest goeth not euell and good.

Wherfore then murmureth the mynne manne: let him murmure at his owne synne.

Aun.

* Lette vs loke well vpon our owne mapes, and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde.

Let vs lyfte vpon our hertes with our handes vnto the Lord that is in heauen. We haue bene dyssemblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not bee in- treated?

All our enemyes gape vpon vs. feare and snare is come vpon vs, yea dispite and destruction.

* Whole ryuers of water gush oute of myne eyes, for the great hurte of my people.

Phe.

Myne eyes runne, and can not cease, for there is no rest.

O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and conspyder?

Myne eye breaketh my herte, because of all the doughters of my cytie.

Zade.

Myne enemyes hunted me out that pelye, lyke a byrde, yea, and that with- oute a cause.

They haue put downe my lyfe into a pitte, and layed a stone vpon me.

They poured water vpon my head, then thought I: now am I vndone.

Koph.

I called vpon thy name, O Lorde, oute of the depe pytte.

Thou hast herde my voyce, and hast not turned away thine eares fro my sighinge and cryinge.

Thou haste enclyned thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and haste sayde: feare not.

Res.

Thou (O Lorde) haste mayntened the cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe.

O Lorde, thou haste sene my blasphemies take thou my cause vpon the.

Thou haste well conspyred how they go aboute to do me harme, and that all their councelles are against me.

Sin.

Thou haste herde their despytfull wordes (O Lorde) yea, and all their ima- ginacions against me.

The lyppes of myne enemyes, and their deuises that they take agaynste me, all the daye longe.

Thou seyst also their sittinge downe and their risinge vp, they make theyr songes of nothing but of me.

Thau.

Reward them (O Lorde) according to the workes of theyr handes.

Geue them the thing, that their owne heart is afrayed of: euen thy curse.

Persecute them (O Lord) with thine indignacion, and rote the out from vnder the heauen.

The Notes.

a. Gal. for sorowfulness: as in the psalme. lxxv. e. They gaue me gall to eate. &c. That is, they that should haue comfort of me yd me more greefe, and augmented my sorowes, as yt one should geue bytter meates to hym that is hungrye. Howbeit that prophete was also fulfilled in oure sa- uour Christ, of whom Dauid was therein a figure, as. S. Mat. teacheth in the xxvii.

b. By this it is manifest that al aduersity (which men call euell) is sente of God: althoughe he suf- fre no suche euell (as we call it) but that whiche he knoweth to bee necessarye and needefull, and wherout he sucketh some good thing. ### The fyrste Chapter.

The tyme wherein Ezechiel prophesyed, and in what place. Wyse of spyng: and office. The vyssion of the foure beastes. The vyssion of the wheles. The vyssion of the thron, and of the Image about the thron.

I chaunfed in the. xxx. yere the fyfthe daye of the. iiii. Moneth, that I was amonge the prissoners by the ryuer of Cobar, where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vyssion of God. Nowe the fyfthe daye of the monethe made oute the fyfth yere of kyng Iosacins captiuytie. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the Prieste, in y lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lord came vpon hym.

And I loked, and beholde a storme wynde came oute of the Northe with a great cloude full of fyre, which with his glystre lyghtened all rounde aboute. And in the myddest of the fyre it was al cleare, and as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, which were fashyoned like a man: sayunge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Theiſ legges were streyghte, but theiſ fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystered, as it had bene sayre scoured metall. Under theiſ wynges vpo al y foure corners they had mennes hādes. Theiſ faces & theiſ winges were towarde y foure corners: yet were y winges so, y one enet touched another. Whe they wente, they turned the not aboute: echone wente streyghte forwarde.

* Upon the ryghte syde of these foure, theyſ faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the leste syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Eggle. Theiſ faces also and theiſ wynges were sprede oute aboute: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another, and with the other they couered theiſ bodye. Exch. x. c. they wente,* and turned not aboute in theyr goynge.

D The fashyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hoate coales of fyre, euen as thoughe burnynge cressets had bene amonge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystre, and oute of the fyre there wente lychtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde and backwarde, one woulde haue thoughte it had lychtened. Nowe when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worcke of wheles vpon the earthe with foure faces also lyke the beastes.

The fashyon and worcke of þe wheles was lyke the sea. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde, they went al foure, and turned them not about in their goynge. They were large, greate and horryble to loke vpon. Their bodyes were full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. When the beastes wente, the wheles went also with them: And when the beastes lyfte them selues vp from the earthe, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whither soeuer the spirite wente, thither wente they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of life was in þe wheles. When the beastes wente forthe, stode styll, or lyfte them selues vp from the earthe: the wheles also wente, stode styll, and were lyfte vp, for the breth of lyfe was in the wheles.

Above ouer the heades of the beastes there was a fyrmamente, whiche was fashyoned as it had bene of þe most pure Chyrtal, and that was spredde out above vpon their heades: vnder þe same fyrmament were their wynges layed as brode, one towarde another, and two wynges couered þe bodie of euery beast. And when they wente forthe, I hearde the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke þe noyse of great waters, as it had bene þe voyce of the greate God, and a rushynge together as it were of an hoste of men. And when they stode styll, they let downe theyr wynges. Nowe when they stode styll, and had letten downe theyr wynges, it thondred in the fyrmamente that was above their heades. Above the fyrmamente that was ouer theyr heades, there was the fashyon of a seate, as it had bene made of Sapphir. vpon the seate there satte one lyke a man. I behelde hym, and he was lyke a cleare lychte, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpwarde.

And beneth when I looked vpon hym vnder the loynes, me thoughte he was lyke a shynynge fyre, that geueth lychte on euery syde. Yea, the shyne and glystre that lychtened rounde aboute, was lyke a raynbowe, whiche in a raynye daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the similitude, wherein the glorie of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, & hekened vnto the voyce of hym that spake.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The Prophete beynge fedde wryth the worde of god and wryth the constante boldnesse of the spirite sente vnto the people that were in captiuyte. The punishment of a curate that sheweth not p people theyr synnes.

After this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, * eate that, whatsoeuer it be: yea, eate p closed boke & go thy waye, and speake vnto the chyliden of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate, & sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belye shall eate, and thy bowels shall be fylled wryth the boke, that I geue the. Then dyd I eate the boke, * and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, * get the soone vnto p house of Israel, and shewe them the wordes, that I commaunde thee: for I sende p not to p people p hath a straunge, vnknowe, or harde speache, but vnto the house of Israel: Not to manye nations, whiche haue dyuerse speeches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. * Nevertheless, p I sent the to those people, they woulde folowe the: But the house of Israel wyll not folowe the, for they wyll not folowe me: yea, all the house of Israel haue styfe foreheades and harde hertes. * Beholde therefore, I wil make thy face preuayle agaynste their faces, and harden thy foreheade againste their foreheades: so that thy foreheade shall be harder then an * Adamante or stynt stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayde of them, for they are a frowarde housholde.

He sayde mozeouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take dyligente hede wryth thine eares, to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thyne hearte: and go to the pylsoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus the Lord God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. Wryth that the spirite toke me bp. And I hearde the noyse of a greates rushynge and remouynge of the moste blessed gloze of the Lord oute of his place.

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that rushed one agaynste another, yea, and the ratlyng of the wheles, that are by them, whiche rushynge and noyse was very greates.

* Nowe when the spirite toke me bp, and carped me awaye, I wente wryth an heuye and a sorowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryghte soone.

And so in the begynnynge of the moneth Abid, I came to the pylsoners, * that dwelte by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were: And so contynued I amonge them seuen dayes, beynge very sorowe.

And when the seuen dayes were expyred, the Lord sayd vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made p a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therefore take good hede to the wordes, and geue them warnynge at my commaundement.

If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man, that (withoute doute) he muste dye, and thou geueste hym not warnynge, uoz speakest vnto him, that he maye turne from his euell waye, and so to lyue: Then shall the same vngodly man dye in hys owne vntygheousnes: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hande. Neuertheles, p thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynesse: then shall he dye in his owne wickednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Nowe

Ezech. 18. a

* Nowe ys a ryghteous man go fro his righteousness, & do the thyng that is euil: I wyl laye a stomblynge blocke before him, & he shall dye, because thou hast not geuen him warnynge: yea, dye shall he in hys owne synne, so that the vertue, whiche he dyd before, shall not be thoughte vpon: but hys bloude wyl I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuerthelesse, ys thou exhortest the ryghteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lyue, because he hath receaued thy warnynge, and thou haste dyscharged thy soule. And there came the hande of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go in to the felde, that I maye there talke with the.

Ezech. 1. a

So when I had rylen vp, and gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the glory of the Lorde stode there, * lyke as I saw it afore, by the water of Cobar.

Ezech. 11. a

* Then fel I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came in to me, which set me vp vpon my fete, and sayd thus vnto me: So thy waye, and sparte thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bynde the withal, so that thou shalt not escape oute of them. And I wil make thy tunge cleue so to the rofe of thy mouthe, that thou shalt be domme, and not be as a chyder, with them: for it is an obstynate houtholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wil not, let him leaue: for it is an obstynate houtholde.

The Notes.

a. By this watchman are figured byshoppes, priestes, and preachers, whiche muste take the occasion of their speaunge and exhortynge at the mouthe of God, and speake not in their owne, but in his name.

b. Somer tyme: thou shalt hearken vnto the word of my mouthe, and shalt monishe them from out of me.

The. liii. Chapter.

The besyge of the cite of Jerusalem is signified. The longe contynuaunce of the captiuitie of Israel. In hunger is prophesied to come in the captiuitie.

S Thou sonne of man: * take a tyll stone, and laye it before the, and describe vnto it the cite of Jerusalem, howe it is besyged, howe bulwarkes and stronge dyches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, and an hooste of men rounde aboute it.

Moreouer, take an yron panne, and set it betwyxe the & the cite, in steade of an yron wall. Then set thy face towarde it, besyge it, and laye ordinaunce agaynste it, to wynde it. This shalbe a toke vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy lefte syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beare the synnes. * Neuerthelesse, I wil appoynte the a tyme (to put of the synnes) and the nombre of the dayes: Thre hundredeth and .xx. dayes muste thou beare the wyckednesse of the house of Israel. When thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe againe, and slepe vpon thy ryghte syde. xl. dayes, & beare the synnes of the house of Iuda.

* A daye for a yeaere, a daye (I saye) for a yeaere, wyl I euer laye vpon the. Therfore set nowe thy face against that besyged Jerusalem, and dyscouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophesye agaynste it.

Beholde, I wyl laye chaynes vpon thee, that thou shalt not turne y fro me one side to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege.

Wherefore, take vnto the wheate, C barley, beanes, growel sede, Millium and fyches: and put these together in a vessel, and make the loauies of breade therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou must lye vpon thy side: that thou mayest haue breade to eate, for thre hundredeth and .xx. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatst, shalt haue a certayne wayght appointed: namely twentye cycles euery daye. This apoynted meate shalt thou eate daylye, from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalt dryncke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the syxte parte of an hin shalt thou dryncke daylye from the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barley cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrste strake them ouer with mans donge, that they maye se it. And with that sayde the LORDE: * Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israel eate their despyled breade in the myddest of the the Gentyles, amonge whome I wyl scatce them.

Then sayde I: Oh Lord God. Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned: for fro my youth vnto this houre I did neuer eate of a dead carcase, or of that whiche was flayne of wyld beasts, nether ca there euer any vncleane fleshe in my mouth.

Where vnto he answered me, and sayde: Well than, I wyl graunte the to take cowes donge, for y donge of a man, and to strake the bread ouer with al, besyde them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde, thou sonne of man, * I wyl mynyshe al y prouision of bread in Jerusalem, so y they shall wepe their bread, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a very lytle measure therof, to dryncke. And when they haue no more breade nor water, one shall be destroyed with another, and sampe the awaye for their wyckednesse.

The notes.

a. This is a prophesie done by an outwarde sygne, as in Ieremye. xiii. a. When the people are unworthie of the worde of God, the are y prophetes commaunded to vse suche visyble sygnes: as here to paynte out Jerusalem and the bessegeunge therof in a stile stone.

The. v. Chapter.

The rebelle of the heartes, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of the anger of God towards the people. The Lord dyscloseth the rebelle of the heartes.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a rasoure. Take that, and haue the heere of thy head and beard:

Then take y scales and the waight, and deuyde the heere a sunder. And burne the thyrde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cytye, and cut the other thyrde parte in peces with a knyfe. * As for the thyrde parte that remaineth, cast it in the winde, and then shewe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtely of it, and caste it in the myddest of the fyre: and burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shal goe a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel. Moreouer, thus sayde the Lord God: This same is Jerusalem. I set her in the myddest of the heathen and naci-ons: that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despyed my iudgementes more then the Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacions, that lye rounde aboute her: for they haue caste oute myne ordinaunces, & not walcked in my lawes. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: * For so muche as ye with youre wyckednesse farre excede the heathen, that dwell rounde aboute you: (for ye haue not walcked in my lawes, nether haue ye kept myne ordinaunces.) Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God.

I wyl also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the wyl I syt in iudgement, in the syght of the heathen, and wyl handle the of suche a fashion, as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wil do from that tyme forth, and that because of all thyne abhominacions. * For in thee, fathers shall be sayne to eate theyr owne sonnes, & the sonnes their owne fathers. Suche a courtte wyl I kepe in the, and the whole remnaunte wil I scatce in to al the wyndes.

Moreouer as truly as I lyue (saith the Lord God) I seynge thou hast despyed my Sanctuarie, with all maner of abhominacions and with al thy shameful offenses: for this cause wyl I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouer se the, nether wil I spare the.

* One thirde parte within the, shall dye of the pestilence and of hunger: Another thyrde parte shall be flayne downe rounde aboute the, with the swearde: The other thyrde parte that remaineth, wyl I scatce abroad towarde all the wyndes, and drawe oute y swearde after them. Thus I wyl perfourme my indignacion and set my wraethe agaynst them, and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lord, whiche with a feruente gelousye haue spoken it. Moreouer I wyl make the waste and abhorred, before all the heathen that dwel about the, and in the syghte of al them, that go by the: so that when I punyshe the in my wraethe, in myne anger, and with the plague of my whote displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame, a gasynge and wondring stocke, amonge the heathen that lye aboute the. Euen I the Lorde haue spokē it, and it shal come to passe, when I shute amonge them the perious dartes of hunger, whiche shalbe but death: Yea, therfore shall I shute them, because I wyll destroye you. * I wyll encrease hunger, and mynythe all the prouision of bread amonge you.

Plages and myserie wil I sende you, yea, and wyld beasts also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudshedynge shal come vpon you, and the swerde wyll I brynge ouer you. Euen I the Lorde, haue sayde it.

The. vi. Chapter.

The sheweth that the people shalbe plagued for synne of Idolatre. He propheseth the repentance of the remnant of the people, and their deliuerance. The destruction of the frowarde is prophesied.

AND the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophesye vnto them, and saye: Heare the word of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to ye mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I wyll brynge a swerde ouer you, and destroye your hye places: I wyll caste downe your aulters, and breake downe your temples. Your sayne men wyll I laye before your goddes, and the deade carcasses of the chyldren of Israel wyll I caste before their ymages, your bones wyll I destroye rounde aboute your aulters, and dwellynge places.

The cyties shalbe desolate, the hyl chapels layed waste: your aulters destroyed, and broken: your goddes caste downe, and taken awaye, your tēpels layde eauen with the grounde, your owne workes cleane rotte oute.

Your sayne men shal lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to know, how that I am the Lorde. * Those that amonge you haue escaped the swerde, wyll I leaue amonge the Gentyles, for I wyll scatte you amonge the nations. And they that escape from you, shall thyncke vpon me amonge the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie.

As for that worshyp and vnfaithfull herte of theirs, wherewith they runne awaye fro me, I wyll breake it: yea, and put out those eyes of theirs, that comytte fornicacyon with theyr Idols.

Then shall they be ashamed, and dyspleased with theyr selues, for the wyckednesses and abhomyacions, whych they haue done: and shal learne to knowe, howe that it is not in vayne, that I the Lorde spake, to brynge suche miserie vpon them.

The Lorde sayde more ouer vnto me: Smyte thyne handes together, and stampe with thy fete, and saye: Wo worthe all the abhominacions & wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perishe with the swerde, with hunger and with pestilence. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perishe with the swerde: and the other that are beseged, shall dye of hunger.

Thus wyll I satysfye my wroth, full dyspleasure vpon them. And so shal ye learne to know, that I am the Lord, when your sayne men lye amonge your goddes, and aboute your aulters: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places, where they dyd sacrifyce to all their Idols. I wyll stretche myne hande oute vpon them, and wyll make the lande waste: So that it shal lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Desblathah forth, thow we all theyr habitacions: to learne them for to know, that I am the Lorde.

The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shal be shewed. The cause of the destruction therof. The propheta is commaunded to shewe the summe of the euilles that are at hande.

THE worde of the Lord came vnto me on this maner: The I call, O thou sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the lande of Israel: The ende commeth, yea, verely the ende commeth vpon al the four corners of the earth.

But now shall the ende come vpon the: for I wyll sende my wrath vpon the, and wyll punishe the: accordynge to the thy wayes, & rewarde thee after al thy abominacions. * Myne eye shall not ouersee the, nether wyll I spare the: but rewarde the, accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thy abominacions. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Be-holde, one myserye and plage shall come after another: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) þ wayteth for the, is come al ready, the houre is come against the,
that dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedycion is harde by, and no glad tidin-ges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore, I wyll shortly poure oute my sore dyspleasure ouer the, and fulfyll my wrath vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy ab-ominacions.

* Myne eye shall not ouersee the, nether wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shewe thy abho-minacions, to learne you for to knowe, howe that I am the Lord that smytheth.
Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, þ houre is runne oute, a the rodde smytheth, wyfulnesse waxeth grene, malycious byolence is growne vp, and the vngodlye waken to a staf. Yet shall there no complaynte be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall come of these thynges.

The tyme commeth, the daye draweth nye: * Who so byeth, let hym not reioyce: he that selleth, let him not be sory: for why? * Trouble shall come in the myddest of all þ rest: so that þ seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for nether of them bothe shall lyue. For the vis-sion shall come so greatly ouer all, that it shall not be hyndered: No man also with hys wyckednesse shall be able to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shall be blowe, and make you all readye, but no man shall goe to the battel, for I am wrothe with all the whole multitude.

The swearde shall be withoute, pe-silence and hunger within: so that who so is in the felde, shall be slayne with the swearde: and he that is in the cite, shall perishe with hunger and pe-silence.

And suche as escape and fle from amonge them, shall be vpon the hylls, lyke as the ddues in the felde: euery one shall be afrayde, because of hys owne wyckednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, and al knees shall be weake as the water: they shall girde them selues with sacke cloth, feare shall fall vpon them. Their faces shall be confounded, * and their heades balde: their siluer shall lye in the stretes, and their golde shall be despyled: * Yea, theyr syluer and golde maye not deli-uer the, in the daye of the fearful wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satysfye their hon-gre soules, nether fyl theyr empty be-lyes there with: for it is become their owne decaye thow theyr wyckednes:
because * they made therof not onely costlye Jewels for their pompe & pryde, but also abhomynable ymages and idoles. For this cause wyll I make them to be abhorred. Moreover, I wyll geue it into the handes of the straun-gers to be spoyled: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. My face wyll I turne from them, my treasure shall be despyled: for the theues shall go in to it, and suspende it. I wyll make clene ryddaunce, for the lande is whole despyled with vnrpyghteous iud-gement of innocente bloude, and the cite is ful of abominacions. Wherefore, I wyll byynge the moost cruel tyrantes from amonge the heathen, to take their houses in possessio. I wil make þ pompe of the proude to cease, and they shall take in their Sanctuarye. When this trouble commeth, they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One myschefe and sorowe shall folowe another, & one tumoure shall come after another:

* Then shall they seke visyons in bayne at their prophetes. The lawe shall be gone from the priestes, and wyldome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, þ princes shall be clothed with heuynesse, and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I wyll do vnto the after their owne way-es, and accordynge to their owne iudgementes wil I iudge them: to lerne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The. viii. Chapter.

An apperance of the symplitude of God. Ezechiell is broughte vnto Jerusalem in the spiryte. The Lorde sheweth the prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and chastity of the Priests.

It happened, that in the fyrte yere the fift day of fyrte moneth I sat in my house, and f. Lozdes of the counceyl of Iuda with me: and f. hande of the Lorde God fell euen there vpon me. And as I loked by, * I sawe as it were a lycknesse of fyre from his loynes downewarde, and from his loynes hywarde it shyned maruelous cleare.

* This symplitude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heartye lockes of my heade, and the spirite lyfte me by betwyxte heauen and earth: and god broughte me in a byllion to Jerusalem, into the entrepe of the <sup>a</sup> inner porte that lyeth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whome he hath all thynge in his power, was very wrothe.

And beholde, the gloze of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, O lyfte vp thyne eyes, and loke towarde the north. Then lyfte I by myne eyes towarde the north, and beholde: belyde

f. porte northewarde, there was an aulter made vnto the ymage of prouocation in the very entyrnge in. And he sayde further moze vnto me: Thou sonne of man, seist thou what these do? Seist thou the greate abhominacions that the house of Israell commytte in thys place: whiche oughte not to be done in my sanctuarie? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And with that broughte he me to the courte gate: and when I loked, beholde, there was an hole in the wall.

Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, dygge thozowe the wall. And when I dygged thozowe the wall, beholde, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, & loke what wycked abhominacions they do there. So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were al maner images of womes and bestes, all Idoles and abhomy-nacions of the house of Israel paynted euery one rounde about the wal. There stode also before f. images. * Ixx. lozdes of the counceyl of the house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Iazaniah the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of them had a censoure in his hade, & out of the incense, there wente a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the Senatours of f. house of Israel do secretlye, euery one in hys chymbre? * for they saye: Cusch, f. Lord seyth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayde vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se the greate abhominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lozdes house, towarde the north. And beholde, there sat women mournynge for <sup>b</sup> Thamuz. Then sayde he vnto me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions. And so he broughte me in to the inwarde courte of the Lozdes house: & beholde at f. porte of f. Lozdes house, betwyxte the fore entrepe and the aulter, there were fyue and twentye men, that turned theyr backes by the temple of the Lorde, and their faces toward the easte, and these worshypped the sunne.

And he sayde vnto me: haste thou sene this, thou sonne of man? Thinketh the house of Israel, that it is but a trespase, to do these abhominacions here? Shoulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and undertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yea, and purposely to caste by their noles vpon me? Therefore wyl I also do some thynge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouerse them, nether wyl I spare them. * Yea, and thoughe they crye in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The Notes.

a. The hill Sion was walled rounde about and that wall which compassed it was called f. outwarde wal: About the temple was there another wal, that was called the inwarde wall, which although it were outwarde from the temple, yet was it inwarde from the wal which compassed the hill. The space betwene the inwarde wall, and the temple, was called f. inner courte. Therin were many portes, & in the north porte thereof

Some saye that it was an ymage, whiche was made to wepe by crafte. Before this ymage dyd women also bewaile their separation frome their louers, and reioysed when they obtayned hem agayne.

The. ix. Chapter.

The destruction of Idolaters, and y conuersacion of the ryghteous. They th y halbe saued: re marked. They that are ymarked are saynt. A complaunt of the prophete to the destruction of the people.

I cryed also wyth a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come here ye euylars of the ctyte, euerye man wyth hys weapened hande to the slaughter. Then came there lyxe men out of the strete of the vpper port towarde the North, and euerye man a weapen in his hande, to the slaughter. There was one amongst them, that had on hym a linnen raymente, and a wyrters yncke horn by hys syde.

These went in, and stode besyde the braken diller: for the glozpe of y lord was gone awaye frome the Cherub, and was come downe to the thresholde of the house, and he called the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters ynckehorne by hys syde, and the lord sayde vnto hym: Goe thy waye thowome the ctyte of Ierusalem, and set thys marke Chai vpon the foreheades of them, that mourne and are sorre for all the abhominacions, that be done therein. And to the other he sayde that I myghte heate: Goe ye after hys thowome the ctyte, slaye, ouerle none, spare none: kylle and destroye bothe olde men and younge, maydens, chyldezen and wyues.

But as for those, y haue thys marke Chai vpon them: Se that ye touche them not, and begynne at my sanc- tuarie. Then they beganne at the Elders, whiche were in the temple, for he sayde vnto them: When ye haue despyled the temple, and fylled the courte wyth the slayne, then goe your waye forthe. So they wente oute, and slewe downe thowome the ctyte. Howe when they had done the slaughter, and yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayinge: O Lorde, wilt thou then destroye all the residue of Israel, in thy sore displeasure, that thou haste powzed vpon Ierusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israel & Iuda is verye great: So that the lande is ful of bloude, and the ctyte full of vnfaythfulnesse: For they say: Cusch, the Lorde regardeth not the earthe, he seyth vs not. Therefore wyll I vpon them, myne eye shall not ouerle them, neither wyll I spare them, but wyll recompense their wyckednesse vpon their heades. And beholde, the man y had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters ynckehorne by hys syde: Tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde, as thou haste commaunded me, so haue I done.

The. x. Chapter.

Of the man that toke whote burninge coales oute of the myble of the wheles and of the Cherubyns, in token of the burninge of Ierusalem. A reheatall of the vision of the wheles, of the beastes of the Cherubyns.

As I looked, beholde, in the firmamente that was aboue the Cherubyns there appeared the similitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them. Then sayde he that sat therein, to him that had the linnen rayment vpon him: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thynne hande full of hoate coles oute from betwene the Cherubyns, and caste them ouer the ctyte. And he crepte in, that I myghte see.

Howe the Cherubyns stode vpon y ryghte syde of the house, when the man went in, and the cloude filled the innermer courte. But the glozpe of y lord remoued from the Cherubyns, & came vpon the thresholde of the house: So that the temple was ful of cloude, and the courte was full of the smoke of the

Lordes gloze. Yea, and the sounde of the Cherubyns wynges was hearde into the fore court, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the al myghty God, when he speaketh. Now when he had bydden the man y was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hoat coales from the myddel of the wheles, whiche were vnder the Cherubyns: he went & stode besyde the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forth his hande frome vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubins and toke thereof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the linnen raymente in his hande: whiche toke it, and went oute. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, there appeared the lyknesse of a mannes hande: I sawe also foure wheles besyde the Cherubyns, so that by euery Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to looke vpon) after the fashion of the peryous stone of Charlis: yet, (vnto the syghte) were they fashyoned and lyke, as yf the one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wente all foure together, not turnynge about in their goynge: But where the fyrste wente, thither wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goynge. Their whole bodyes, their backes, their handes and wynges, yea, and the wheles also were all ful of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles, Galgall (that is) a rounde boule. * Euerye one of them had foure faces: So that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a Lyon, the fourthe of an Egle, and they were lyfited vp aboue. Thys is the beast, that I saw at y water of Cobat. Now when the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente wyth them, and when the Cherubyns shoke their wynges to lifte them selues bpwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were wyth them also. Shortely, when they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfte bp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

D * Then the gloze of the Lorde was lyfte bp from the thersholde of the tem: ple, and remayned vpo the Cherubins: And the Cherubyns flattered wyth their wynges, & lyft them selues vpo the earthe: So that I sawe when they wente, and the wheles wyth them. And they stode at the East syde of the porte, that is in the house of the Lorde. So the gloze of the Lorde was vpon the. Thys is the beast that I sawe vnder the God of Israell, by the water of Cobat. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euerye one had foure faces, and euerye one foure wynges, and vnder their wynges, as it were mennes handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobat, and so was the countenance of them: Euerye one in his goynge wente straghte forwarde.

Who they were that serued the people of Israell. Agayne these he prophesyeth, shewing them how they shal be dyspatched abode. The remynge of the hearts cometh of God, otherwyle can we not make in his commandementes. He threatneth them that leane vnto theyr owne counccilles.

Moreouer, the spirite of the Lorde lyfte me vp, & brought me vnto y Cit poorte of the Lordes house. And behold, there were .xxv. me vnder the doze amonge whome I sawe Jaazani-ah the sonne of Azur, and Sheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, the ruelars of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: These men ymagyn mischiefe, and a wycked counsell take they in this cytye, sayinge: Truly, there is no destruccions at hande, lette vs buylde houses: Thys Jerusalem is the cauldron, and we be the flesh. Therefore shalte thou prophesye vnto them, yea, prophesye shalte thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And wyth that fell the spirite of the Lorde vpon me, and sayde vnto me: speake, thus sayeth the Lord: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israell) and I knowe the ymagynacions of youre heartes. Manye one haue ye murdered in this cytye, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layde on the grounde in this cytye, are the flesh, and this cytye is the cauldron: But I wyll bypunge you oute of it: * ye haue drawen oute the swerde, euen so wyll I also bypunge a swerde ouer you, sayeth the Lorde God. I wyll bypue you oute of thys cytie and delyuer you into your enemyes hande, and wyll condemne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the coastes of Israell, I wyll be auenged of you: To learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thys citie shall not be your cauldron, neither shall ye be the fleshe therein: But in the coastes of Israell wyll I punishe you, that ye may knowe, that I am the Lorde: In whose commaundementes ye haue not walcked, nor kepte hys lawes: * But haue done after the customes of the heathen, that I haue rounde aboute you.

Nowe when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wylte thou then utterly destroye al the remnaunte in Israell? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on thys maner: Thou sonne of man: Thy brethren, thy kynnsfolke, and the whole house of Iuda, whiche dwell at Ierusalem, saye: They be gone farre frome the Lorde, but the lande is geuen vs in possession. Therefore tell them, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you farre of amonge the Gentyles, and scatter you amonge the nations, and I wyll haue lowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shall come. Tell them also, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne oute of the nations, and bypunge you frome the countreyes where ye be scattered, and wyll geue you the lande of Israell agayne: And thither shall ye come. And as for all impedimentes, and all youre abhominacions: I wyll take them awaye.

* And I wyll geue you one hearte, and I wyll plante you a newe spirite within your bowels. That stony heart wyll I take oute of youre bodye, and geue you a fleshepy heart: That ye maye walcke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordinaunces, and doe them: That ye maye be my people, and I your God. But looke, whose heartes are disposed to folowe theyr abhominacions and wycked lyuinges: Those mennes dedes wyll I bypunge vpon their owne heades, sayeth the Lorde God. After thys dyd the Cherubyns lyfte vp their wynges, and the wheles wente wth them. * So the gloze of the Lorde went vp from the myddest of the citie, and stode vpon the mounte of the citie towarde the East. * But the wynde tooke me vp, and in a vision (whiche came by the spirite of God) it broughte me agayne into Chaldea amonge the prisoners. Then the vision that I had sene, banished awaye frome me. So I spake vnto the prisoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had shewed me.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere redye to flyte, and goe forth by sayre daye lyghte, that they maye see. Yea, euen in their syghte shalte thou goe frome thy place to another place: If peraduenture they will consider, that they be an vnobedient household. Thy gere that thou haste made redye to flyt withall, shalte thou beate oute by sayre daye lyght, that they maye see: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euen in thys syght, as a man doeth when he flytteth. Dygge thowowe the wall, that they maye see, and beate thowow it the same thyng, that thou tookest vp in their sight. As for thy selfe, I shalte goe forth in the darcke. Hyde thy face that thou see not the earth, for I haue made thee a shewetoken vnto the house of Israell. Nowe as the Lorde commaunded me, so I dyd: The gere that I had made redye, brought I oute by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thowow the wall with myne hande: And when it was darcke

C Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man: with a fearfull tremblynge shalt thou eate thy breade, with carefulnesse and sorowe shalt thou dryncke thy water. And vnto the people of the land, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and to the lande of Israell: Ye shall eate youre breade with sor-owe, and dryncke youre water with heynesse: Yea, the lande with the fulnes thereof shalbe layde waste, for the wykednesse of them that dwell therein. And the cittyes that now be wel occupied, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate:
That ye may know, howe that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, whiche ye vse in the lande of Israell, sayinge: Tush, * seynge that the day-es are so slacke in comynge, all the visions are of none effecte: Tell them therefore: Thus saith the Lorde God:
I wyl make that byworde cease, so that it shall no moze be commonly used in Israell.

But saye this vnto them: the dayes are at hande, that euerye thyng which hathe bene prophesied, shalbe fulfilled.
There shall no vision be in bayne, neither anye prophecye sayle amonge the children of Israell: for it is I the Lorde, that speake it: And what soeuer I the Lorde speake, it shall be performed, and not be slacke in comynge.

Yea, euen in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) wyl I deuyse some thinge, and byynge it to passe, sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israell saye in this maner: Tush, as for the vision that he hathe sene, it wyl be manye a daye or it come to passe: Is it farre of yet, the thyng that he prophesyeth. Therefore saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: All my wordes shall no moze be slacke: Loke what I speake, that same shall come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

C The. xiii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord agaynst false prophetes, whiche teache the people the councelles of their owne heartes.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: I Thou sonne of man, Speake, prophecye a-gaynst those prophetes, that preache in Israell:
and saye thou vnto them that prophesie oute of their owne heartes: heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Wo be vnto those folish prophetes, that folowe their owne spi-rite and speake where they se nothyng.
* O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the fores vpon the drye felde: for they stande not in the gappes neither make they an hedge for the house of Israell, that

that men myghte abyde the parell in the day* of the Lorde, wayne thynges they see, and tell lyes, to maynteyne their preachynges withall. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in verite dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Wayne visions haue ye sene, and spoken false propheties, when ye saye: The Lorde hath spoken it where as I neuer sayde it.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Bycause your wordes be wayne, and ye seke out lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde. Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that lye out wayne thynges, and preache lyes: They shall not be in the counsell of my people, nor written in the booke of the house of Israel, neyther shall they come in the lande of Israel: That ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde God. And that for thys cause; They haue disceaued my people, * and tolde them of peace, where now was. One setteth by a wall, and they dawbe it with lowse claye. Therefore tell them which dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. * For there shall come a greate hower of rayne, greate stones shall fall vpon it, and a soore soyme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall it not then be sayde vnto you: Where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll breake oute in my wrathful displeasure with a storme wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a myghty hower of rayne, and hayle stones in my wrath, to destroye withall.

As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it euen with the ground: So that the foundation thereof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yea, and ye your selues shall perishe in the midst thereof: To learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wal is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israel, whiche prophesie vnto the cite of Ierusalem, and looke oute visions of peace for them, where as no peace is, sayeth the Lorde God. Wherefore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face agaynst the daughters of thy people, whiche prophesie oute of their owne heartes: And speake thou prophesie agaynst them, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, that sowe pylowes vnder al arme booles, and bolsters vnder the heades both of younge & olde, to catche soules with al. * For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in your captiuite, ye promysse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people, for an handfull of barley, and for a peece of breade: When ye kyll the soules of them, that dye not, and promysse life to them, that liue not: Thus ye dissemble with my people, & beleueth your lyes.

Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll also vpon the pylowes, wherewith ye catche the soules in synge: Them wyll I take frome your armes, and lette the soules goe, that ye catche in synge. Your bolsters also wyll I teare in peaces, and deliuer my people out of your hande: So that they shall come no moore in your handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Seynge that with your lyes ye discomforte the hearte of the righteous, whome I haue not discomforted: Agayne: for so much as ye corage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not tourne frome hys wycked waye, and lyue: Therefore shall ye spyce oute no moore banite, nor prophesie your owne gessynges: For I wyll deliuer my people out of your hande, & ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

The Notes.

The. xv. Chapter.

D As the vnpromysable wod of the vyne tree is cut to the tyre, so sayeth he that Jerusalem shalbe burnt. The

The word of  $\text{p}$  Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: What cometh of the vine among al other trees: and of  $\text{p}$  vine stocke amonge all other timbre of  $\text{p}$  groue: Doe men take wodde of it, to make anye worcke with all: Or maye there a nayle be made of it, to hange any thyng vpon: Beholde, it is caste in the fyre to be bzente, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the myddest is bzente to ashes. Is it mete then for anye worcker: No.

Seynge then,  $\text{p}$  it was mete for no worcke, beinge whole: muche lesse may there anye thinge be made of it, when  $\text{p}$  fyre hath consumed and bzent it. And therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Lyke as I caste the vine into the fyre for to be bzente, as other trees of the wod. Euen so wyl I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynst them: They shall goe oute from the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. \* Then shal ye know,  $\text{p}$  I am the Lord, when I set my face agaynst the, and make the lande waste, because they haue so sore offended, sayeth the Lord God.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The  $\text{p}$  prophete enternynge to speake of the abhominacions of Jerusalem: doth first shewe the benefites of God towarde it. Jerusalem is reproboued of vnkynndnes, for her foulyncappon wylth Idoles. He iustifyeth the wylchynnes of other people in comparison of the wylchynnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhominacions ins to which the widdowmytes selle. Wherbye is promysed to the repentante.

Gayne,  $\text{p}$  worde of the Lord spake vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, shewe the citie of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and sape: Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny & hired came oute of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethyte. In the daye of thy byrthe when thou wast bozne, the stringe of thy  $\text{p}$  nauell was not cut of: Thou wast not bathed in water to make the clene: thou wast neither rubbed with salt, nor swedled in clout: No man regarded the so much, as to do anye of these thinges for the, or to shewe the sucke saupur, but thou wast vtterly cast out vpon the felde yea, despised was thou in the daye of thy byrthe.

Then came I by the, and saue thee troden downe in thyne owne bloude, & sayde vnto the: Thou shalt be pouged from thyne owne bloude, frome thyne owne bloude (I sape) shalt thou be clen- sed. * So I planted the, as the blossome of thy felde: Thou arte growen vp, and wares greates: thou hast gotten a mar- uelous pleasaunt beutie, thy bzestes are come vp, thy heere is goodlye growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Nowe when I went by the, & loked vpon the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yea, euen the tyme to bowe thee. Then spred I my clothes ouer thee, to couer thy dishonestie: yea, I made an othe vnto the, * and married my selie with thee (sayeth the Lord God) and so thou be- camest myns owne. Then washed I the with water, and pouged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue thee chaunge of raymentes, I made the shues of Carus lether: I girted the about with white sylke, I clothed the with kerchues, I decked thee with costly apparell, I put ringes vpon thy fyngers: A chayne aboute thy necke, spanges vpon thy foze heade, care rynges vpon thyne eares, and sette a beutiful crown vpon thine head. Thus wast thou decked with siluer & golde, and thy raimet was of fine white sylke, of nedle worcke and of diuers colours.

Thou diddest eate nothing but sim- nels, honte and oyle: Maruelous goodly wast thou & beutiful, yea, euen a very Quene wast thou. In so much, that thy beutye was spoken of amonge the heathen, for thou wast excellent in my beutye, whiche I put vpon thee sayeth the Lord God. But thou hast put con- fidence in thyne owne beutye, & played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou hast committed whor- dome, with al that went by the, and hast fulfyllled their desires: Yea, thou hast taken thy garmetes of diuers colours, and deckte thine aulters therw, wher vpon thou mightest fulfyl thyne whor- dome, * of such a fashion, as neuer was done, nor shalbe. * The goodlye orna- mentes and Jewels whiche I gaue the of my owne golde and siluer, hast thou taken, and made thee mennes Images therof.

Thy garmentes of diuers coloures hast thou taken, and deckte them therewith: myne oyle & incense hast thou set before them. My meate which I gaue thee, as sinners, oyle & honye: (to fede the withall) that hast thou sette before them, for a swete sauoure. And thys came also to passe, sayeth the Lorde God: * Thou hast taken thyne owne sonnes & doughters, whō thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vp vnto thē, to be their meate.

Is this but a smal whoredome of thine (thinckest thou) that thou slayest my children, and geuest them ouer, to be bzēt vnto them? And yet in all thy abominacions and whoredome, thou hast not remembred 7 dayes of thy yowthe, howe naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo, wo, vnto the, sayeth the Lorde) thou hast builded thy stewes and broddell houses in euerye place: yea, at the heade of euery strete hast thou builded the an altier. Thou hast made thy beautye to be abhorred, thou hast layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, & multiplied thyne whoredome. * Thou hast committed fornicacion with the Egyprians thy neigbours, whiche had much flesh, & thus hast thou bled thine whoredome, to anger me.

Beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer the, and * wyll minishe thy stoare of foode, and delyuer the ouer into the wylls of the Philistines thyne enemies, whiche are ashamed of thy abominable waye. * Thou hast played the whoore also wyth the Assirians, which might not satisfie the: yea, thou hast played the harlot, and not had ynoughe. Thus hast thou styl committed thy fornicacion fro the lande of Canaan vnto the Chaldees, & yet thy luste not satisfied. Howe shoulde I circumsise thyne heart (saith the Lorde God) seynge thou doest all these thynges, & precious whoore: building thy stewes at the heade of euerye strete, and thy broddell houses in all places? Thou hast not bene as another whoore, that maketh booke of her wynnynge, but as a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in steade of her husbaunde. Gyftes are geuen to all other whoores, but thou geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: and offerest them gyftes, to come vnto the out of all places, & to commit fornicacion with the. It is come to pas with thee in thy whoredomes contraye to the vse of other women: Yea, there hath no suche fornicacion bene committed after the, seynge that thou profrest gyftes vnto other, and no rewardes is geuen the: this is a contrary thinge.

Therefore heare the woorde of the Lorde, O thou harlot: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: for so muche as thou hast spent thy monye, and discouered thy name, thorowe thy whoredome with all thy louers, and with all the folles of thy abhominacions in the bloude of thy children, * whome thou hast geuen them: Beholde therfore, I wyll gather together all thy louers, vnto whō thou hast made thy selfe common: Yea, and all them whome thou fauourest, and euerpe one that thou hatest: And * wyll discouer thy name before them, & they al maye see thy fylthynes.

* Moreover, I wyll iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and murtherer, & recompence thee thyne owne bloude in wyathe and gelousye. I wyll geue thee ouer into their power, that shal breake downe thy stewes, and destroy thy broddell houses: They shal stripe thee oute of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beutiful Jewelles shal they take frome the, and so let the sit naked bare: * yea, they shal bringe the comon people vpon the, whiche shal stone the, & slaye the downe with their sweardes. They * shal burne by thy houses, and punishe thee in the sighte of manye women. Thus wyll I make thy whoredome to cease, so that thou shalte geue oute no moe rewardes.

Should I make my wyath to be still, take my gelousye from the, be content, and no more to be displeased? seynge & remembreth not the daies of thy yowth, but hast prouoked me to wyathe in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyll bringe thyne owne wayes vpon thyne heade, sayeth the Lorde God: Howe be it, I neuer dyd vnto thee, accordynge to thy wyckednesse and al thy abhoabhominacions. Beholde, al they that be comen prouerbes, shall vse thys prouerbe also agaynst the: suche a mother, such a doughter.

Thou art euen thy mothers owne doughter, that hath cast of hir husband and her chyldren: Yea, thou arte the syster of thy sisters, whiche forsoke theyr husbandes and thei chyldren. Your mother is a Cethyte, and your father an Amorite. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwel vpon thy lefte hande.

But thy yongest sister that dwelleth on thy ryghte hande, is Sodoma, and her doughters. Yet hast thou not walcked after theyr wayes, nor done after thei abhominacions: but in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupt the thy. As truly as I lyue, sayth the Lord God: * Sodoma thy syster with her doughters, hath not done so euill, as thou and thy doughters. Behold, * the syns of thy Sodoma were these: pride, fulnes of meate, aboundaunce & ydelnesse: these thinges had she & her doughters. Besydes that they reached not their hande to the pooze and nedp, but were proud, and dyd abhominable thinges befoze me: therfore I toke them awaye, when I had sene it. Nether hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea, thou hast exceded theym in wyckednesse: In so muche that in comparyson of all þ abhominacions which thou hast done, thou hast made thy sisters good women.

As for their captiuite, namely the captiuite of Sodoma and her doughters: the captiuite of Samaria and her doughters: I will bryng the agayne, so wyl I also bryng agayne thy captiuite amonge theym: that thou mayest take thyne owne confusyon vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done and to comforte theym. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her doughters: Samaria and her doughters with thy selfe & thy doughters, shall be brought agayne to your olde estate. When thou wast in thy pryde, and befoze thy wyckednesse came to lyght: thou wouldest not heare speake of thy syster Sodoma, vntill the tyme that the Syzians with all theyr townes, and the Phylis-tynes with all that lye rounde aboute them, brought the to shame and confusyon: that thou myghtest beate thyne owne sylthynes & abhominacion, sayth the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: I shoulde (by ryghte) deale with thee, as thou hast done. Thou hast despyced the othe, and broken the couenaunt. Neuertheles, I wyl remembre the couenaunt that I made wth the in thy youth, in so muche that it shall be an euerlasting couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yonger sisters, whō I wyl make thy doughters, & that besyde thy couenaunt. * And so I wil renue my couenaunt with the, & thou mayest know that I am the Lord: that thou mayest thincke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusyon no more: when I haue forgeuen the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lord God.

The Notes.

a. Wherefore he vpbreaceth vnto the Jewes the name of straunge nacions is befoze sayd in þ first chapter Chap. i.

b. Daniel may signifye the despyces and delectacions of man, whiche are healed by the worde & feare of God: as it is sayd prouerbes. iii. b. But feare the Lord and departe from euill, so shall thy nauell be whole. &c. The learned expounde this whole sentence of the tribulacion that Israel suffered in Egypt, and after among the Canaanites. After the death of Joseph, when pharaos knewe them not. Exod. i. were they most abieted and vile, and no man had compassion on them. Then was the daye of their birth. And in lyke case after the destruction of Ierusalem and in their imprisonment at Babylon. At both these tymes were they motherles and helpeles, concerning theyr owne strengthes: but were yet cared for of God and receyued by his mercy. The prophete boordeth his fashyon of speakynge of the manner of mothers, after the birth of their chyldren, which first dresse theyr nauelles and washe them with salt, and then swadde them. &c. Such helpe had Israel none in theyr aduersities in Egypt and Babylon, but lay ouerwhelmed in their sylthynesse & myseryes, and were regarded as bastards and vnmotherly intreated of al men.

There was no manne but onely God that toke thought for them or holpe them: and that he did only of his mercy, wout any of theyr deseruices. c. By thys bewtye are signified the gyftes, and graces that the Lord hath geuen to his people, whiche neuertheles was an Idolatrer and worshipped other Gods, or worshipped God after another maner and way then he had commaunded them: whiche thyng is signified by their fornicacion, as in Chap. i. vii. b. and after in the xxii. a.

God: There came a greates Regle w great wynges, yea, with myghtie long wynges, and full of fethers of dyuerse coloures, vpon the mount of Libanus, and toke a braunche from a Cedar tre,

Then dyd it growe, and was a greates

4. Re. 14. 8

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Speake to that froward household: know ye not, what these thynges do signifie? Tell theim: Beholde, the kynge of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kynge and his wynges, and ledde theym to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges seide, & made a couenaunt with him, and toke an othe of him: The princes of the lande toke he wyth him also, that the lande might be holden in subiectiō, and not to rebell, but kepe the couenaunte, and ful-fyll it. But he fell from hym, and sente his Embassytours into Egypte, that he myght haue hozles and muche people.
Shoulde that prosper? Should he be kept safe, that doeth suche thynges?
Or should escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As truly as I lyue sayeth the LORD GOD: He shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, that made him kyng: whose othe he hath despyled, and whose counaunte he hath broken. Neether shall Pharao wyth his great host and multitude of people, maynteyne hym in the warre: when they caste by dyches, and set by bulwarkes to destroy much people. For seyng he hath despyled the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hand there-vpon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: As truly as I lyue, I wyll byng myne othe that he hath despyled, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his owne heade. I wyll cast my net about hym, and cathe him in my parne. To Babylon wyll I carpe hym, there wyll I punyche him, because of the greates offence that he made me. As for those that flye from him out of the host, they shalbe slayne with the sword. The relyeue shalbe scatted towarde all the win-des: and ye shall knowe, that I þ Lord haue spoken it.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyll also take a braunche from an hye Cedre tree, and wyl set it, and take the bypermost twygge, that yet is but tēde, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Name-lye, vpon the hye hyll of Syon wyll I plante it: that it maye byng forth twygges, and geue fruite, and be a greates Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye byde in it, and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the selde shall knowe that I the Lord haue brought downe

downe the hye tree, and sette the lowe tree vp: that I haue dyed by the grene tree, and made the dry tree to floreye: Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The .xviii. Chapter.

The sheweth that every man shall beare his owne synne. To him that amendeth, is saluacion promysed. Death is prophesied to the ryghteous, whiche turneth backe from theyr ryght waye.

The word of the Lorde came vnto me, on this maner: what meane ye by this comen p<sup>r</sup>ouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israell, sayinge:

* The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, and the chyldrens teth are sette on edge: As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, ye shall vse this byworde no more in Israell.

* Beholde, al soules are myne. As ke as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also. The soule that synneth, shall dye. * If a man be godlye, and do the thynges that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpon the hylls: he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israell: he defyleth not hys neyghbours wyfe: he medleth with no monstrous woman: he greueth no body: he geueth his det<sup>r</sup>et hys pledge, agayne he taketh none other mans good by vyolence: he eateth his meate with the hongry: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth nothinge vpon vsury: he taketh nothing ouer: he withdraueth his hande from doyng wrong: he handleth faythfully betwixt man and man: he walcketh in my commaundementes, and kepeth my lawes, & perfourmeth the faythfully: * Thys is a ryghtuous man, he shall surely liue sayeth the Lorde God.

* If he now get a sonne, that is a mut<sup>r</sup>chur, a shedder of bloude: yf he do one of these thynges: (though he do not al) he eateth vpon hylls: he defileth hys neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore and nedry: he robbeth and spyleth: he geueth not p<sup>r</sup>etter his pledge agayne, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, and medleth with abhominable thynges: he lendeth vpon vsurye, and taketh more ouer. Shall thys man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seyng he hath done all these abhomy<sup>n</sup>acions, he shall dye his blood shall be vpon him.

* Nowe yf this man get a sonne also, that seyth al his fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nether doeth such lyk e: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lyfteth not hys eyes vp to the Idols of Israell: he defyleth not his neyghbours wyfe: he be<sup>r</sup>eth no man: he kepeth no mang pledge: he neyther spyleth, nor robbeth anye man: he dealeth his meate with the hungrye: he clothe<sup>t</sup>h the naked: he oppres<sup>s</sup>eth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, nor anye thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walcketh in my commaundementes: Thys man shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue wythout fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and dyd wyckedly among his people: lo, he is dead in hys owne synne. And yet say ye: Wherefore shall he should not this sonne beate hys fathers synne? Therfore: because the sonne hath done equite and ryght, hath kepte all my commaundementes, and done them: therfore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth, shall dye. * The sonne shall not beate the fathers offence, neyther shall the father beate the sonnes offence.

The ryghtuousnes of the ryghtuous shall be vpon him, and the wickednes of the wycked shall be vpon him selfe also. * But yf the vngodly wyll turne away from all hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thynges that is equall and right: doubtles he shall liue, and not dye. As for al his synnes that he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in his ryghtuousnes that he hath done, he shall liue. * For I haue no pleasure in the death of a synner, sayeth the Lorde God: but rather that he conuerte, and lyue.

Agayne: yf the ryghtuous turne away from hys ryghtuousnesse, and do iniquite, accordyng to all the abhomy<sup>n</sup>acions, that the wycked manne doth: shall he lyue? All hys ryghtuousnes shall be as a garment.

The Notes.

a. Shal not be thought vpon. The Sophisters haue a propie solucio for this text, and such like which rekkie that god so forgaueth that he wyl not after call agayne his forgouenes and punish. True it is (saye they) God forgaueth the synne, but not the punishment due vnto synne. Seuen peaces punishment (as they prate) must we abid in purgatory for euery synne, when it is forgaued. If this be not to mocke wryth God and his holy word, I wote not what is mockage. If God ca, and do (as they affirme) geue me punishment due vnto my syn, so þe nether geue me to muche nor to lytle payne therfor, and yet not once thynke on my synne, surely he hath a wonderfull remembrance. And that he wyl not thynke on it, the text doeth here openly asseyme. By this sophistrye myghte the kynge geue a man his pardon for thefe, and after hange him vp. For he might say: I forgaued you your thefe, but not your hanging whiche is due vnto your thefe. Suche pardon woulde they be lothe to haue that fynde imagined it. If the kynge whiche is but a man, be more saythfull, then to deale so with his prisoners, whome he forgaueth. What woulde God then whiche is our heuynly father, & whiche is our goodnes in selfe, haue suche a cōtrel sayned, and vnperfect forgouenes, that woulde after punish. But herof wyll I nowe speake no more, lest ye should happily smel that this solucio were imagined, to picke mens purples, thowgh wast pence, Dirige grotes, Trentalles, yea mundes, moneth mindes. &c. Because that although God can and may forgue the synne, yet muste suche thynges obtayne the forgouenes of the punishment due thereunto: Or that the goodnes benefytes were not sufficient for them to lyue on, wryth out suche pyllage, or yet that the poore people coulde by any other meane be milched from their thyng, wherwith they, theyr wyues, their household and children woulde lyue.

The xix. Chapter.

The captiuitie of Ichoabaz of Ichoaz is signified by lions whelpes, & by the lps. He setteth out the prosperitie of the cite of Ierusalem that is past, and the miserie thereof that is present.

But mourne þe for þe princes of Israel, and saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyonesse among the lyons, and nourished her yonges among the lions whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lion: it lerned to spole, and to deuour folke. The heathen heard of hym, and toke him in theyr nettes, and broughte him in chaynes vnto þe land of Egypte.

Nowe when the damme saw, that al her hope and conforth was awaye, she toke another of her whelpes, & made a lið of hym: which went among þe lyons, and became a fearchy Lyon: learned to spoile and to deuour folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made theyr cyties waste. In so muche that the whole land and euery thinge therein, were utterlye desolate, thowhe the very voyce of his roatinge.

Then came the heathen together on euery syde out of al countrees agaynst hym, layed their nettes for hym, and toke him in their pytte. * So they bounde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kynge of Babylon: whiche put him in pylson, that his voyce shuld no more be hearde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a hyne in thy bloud, planted by the water syde: her feutes and braunches are growen out of manye waters, her stalckes were so stronge, that men might haue made stauers thereof for officers: she grew so hye in her stalckes.

So when men sawe that she excedded the heighth & multitude of her braunches, she was roted out in displeasure, and cast down to the ground. The East wynde dyled by her frute, her stronge stalkes were broken of, wythered and brent in the fyre. But now she is planted in the wyldernesse, in a dyle and churche grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, whiche hath brente by her braunches and her frut:
so that she hath no mo strong stalkes, to be staves for offycers. This is a py-tous and miferable thynge.

Chc. xx. Chapter.

The Lord denieth that he will answere the whelthey pray, for the offence of unhyndnes, whiche he heretofore. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captivite. By the word he shoulde be brent is signified the burning of Jerusalem

In the vii. yere the. x. daye of p. v. moneth, it happened, that certayne of the Elders of Israell came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, and sette them downe by me. Then came p word of the Lorde vnto me on thys maner: Thou sonne of manne: speake vnto the elders of Israell, and say vnto theym: Thus sayeth the Lorde GOD: Are ye come hyther to aske any thyng at me?
As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde)
I will gyue you no answere. Wylte thou not reprove theym (thou sonne of man) wilt thou not reprove the? Shew the the abhominacions of the? forsathers, & tell them: Thus sayeth p Lord GOD: * In the day when I chose Israel, and lyst by myne hand vpon the sede of the house of Jacob, & shewed my self vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea, when I lyst by myne hand ouer them, and sayde: I am the Lorde your God, euen in the day that I lyst by myne had ouer the, to byng them out of the lande of Egypt, into a land that I had prou-dep for them, which floweth with milke and honye, and is a pleasaunte lande amonge all other: Then sayde I vnto them: * Cast awaye euery man the ab-hominacions that he hath before him, and desyle not your selues with the Idoles of Egypte, for I am the LORD your GOD.

But they rebelled agaynst me, and wold not folow me: to cast away euery man the abhominacions of his eyes, & to forsake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to powre my indignacyon ouer theym, and to satysfy my wra-the vpon them: yea, euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wold not do it, for my names sake: p it shoulde not be vnhalowed before the heathen, amonge whome they dwelt, and amonge whom I shewed my selfe vnto the, that I woulde byng them out of the land of Egypt. Nowe when I had caried theym oute of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them my commaundementes, and shewed them my lawes: * whiche who so kepeth shall lyue in theym. * I gaue theym also my holy daies, to be a token betwyte me and them, and thereby to know, p I am the Lorde, which haloweth the. * And yet the house of Israell rebelled agaynst me in the wyldernes, they wold not walcke in my commaundes-mentes, they haue cast awaye my lawes (which who so kepeth shoulde lyue in them) and my sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to powre out my indignacyon vpon the, and to consume them in the wyldernes. Yet I wold not do it, for my names sake: lest it shoulde be dishonoured before the heathen, fro the whiche I had caried them awaye.
But I swore vnto them in the wyldernes, that I woulde not byng them in to the lande, which I gaue them: a land that floweth with mylke and honye, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbthes, for they: hert was gone after they: Idoles. Neuerthelesse myne eye spared theym, so that I woulde not utterly slaye theym, and consume theym in the wyldernesse. Moreover, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernes: * walck not in the statutes of your forsathers, kepe not they: ordinaunces, and desyle not your selues with they: ydols, for I am the LORD your GOD.
But walcke in my statutes, kepe my lawes and do them, halowe my Sabbthes, * for they are a token betwyte me and you, p ye may know howe that

I am the Lorde. Notwithstandynge, Rum. 7. 5. a. * theyz sonnes rebelled agaynst me al-

Then I made me agayne to powze out my indygnacyon ouer them, and to sa-tisfye my wraoth vpon them in the wyl-dernesse. Reuerthelesse I wythdrew my hande for my names sake, lest it shoulde be vnhalowed among the hea-forth. I lyfte vp myne hand ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I woulde scatze theyn amonge the heathen, and strowe them amonge the nacjons: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commaundementes, vn-halowed my Sabbothes, and lyfte vp theyz eyes to theyz fathers ydoles.

Wherfore, I gaue them also commaun-

 I am the Lorde.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Besyde all thys, your forefathers haue yet blasphemed me moze, and greatly offended agaynst me: for after I had brought them into the lād, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euery hye hyl & all the thicke trees: they made there theyz offeringes and prouoked me with theyz oblaciōs, makynge swete sauours there, and pow-red out theyz dyucke offerynges.

Then I asked them: what haue ye to do wythall, that ye go thys way? And therfore is it called the hye place vnto thys daye. Wherfore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: ye are euene as vncleane as youre also with theyr abhomyacions. In all youre ydoles, wherunto ye byng your burne your chyldren: ye despyle your sel-ues, euē vnto this daye: howe dare ye then come, and aske any questio at me?

O ye householde of Israel

As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde

 for the thyng that ye go aboute, it shall not come to passe, where as ye saye: we wyll be as the heathen, and do as o-with a mightie hande, with a stretched out arme and wyth indygnacyon pow-to the wyldernesse of the people, & there I wyll reason with you, face to face.

 Lyke as I punished your forefathers in the wyldernesse, so wyll I punish you also, sayeth the Lorde God. I wyll bynge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder the bond of the couenante. The wyll I take from amonge you, & bring them out of the lande of your habitaci-

The Notes.

a. By the grene trees vnderstande the sayntes and holy ones, and by the drye, spinners: so that the godly shall by death escape captiuitie, and the wicked be sente vnto euerslaping payne.

b. From the south to the north, that is, from Jerusalem to Babylon.

The .xxi. Chapter.

Be threatheneth the swerde, that is to say, destruction to the cytie of Jerusalem. Be the-weth the fall of kynge zedekiah. He is commaunded to prophesye the destruction of the chylidren of Ammon. After the slaughter of other, at the laste the Lord threatheneth death vnto Nabuchodonosor him selfe.

The worde of the Lord came to me, saying: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophesye agaynst the lande of Israel, saye to the lande of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Be-holde, I wyll vpon the, and will drawe my sworde out of & sheath, and rote out of the both the ryghtuous & & wicked.
Seyng then that I wyll rote out of the both the ryghtuous & wicked, therefore shall my swerde go out of his sheath agaynst all fleshe from the north to the south: that all fleshe may knowe, howe that I the LORD haue drawen my swerde out of & sheath, and it shall not be put in agayne.

Mourne therefore (O thou sonne of man) that thy loynes cracke wythall, yea, mourne bitterly for theym: And yf they saye, wherefore mournest thou?

Then tell them: for the tpynges that commeth, at the whiche all hertes shall melt, all handes shall be letten downe, all stomackes shall faynte, and all knees shall waxe feble. Behold, it commeth & shall be fulfilled, sayeth the Lord God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, prophesye, and speake: Thus sayeth the Lord God: speake, the swerde is sharpened and wel scoured. Sharpe ned is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bryght. <sup>a</sup> O, the destro-yng & staffe of my sonne, shall bryng downe all woode. He hath put hys swerde to the dryghtyng, that good hold maye be taken of it. This swerde is sharpened and dryght, that it maye be geuen into the hande of the manslayer.

Crye (O thou sonne of man) a howle, for this swerde shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israel, which with my people shall be slayne downe to the grounde thozowe this swerde. Smyte & vpon thy thyghe, for wherefore should not the plage and staffe of iudgemente come? Prophecy thou sonne of man, and smyte thyne handes together: make the swerde two edged, yea, make it thre edged, that manslayers swerde, that swerde of the great slaughter, whiche shall smyte them, euen in theyr preuye chambres: to make them abashed and faynte at the hertes, and in all gates to make some of the fall. O howe bryghte and sharpe is it, howe well dryghte and mete for the slaughter. Get the to some place alone, eyther vpon the right hâde or on the lefte, whither so euer thy face turneth. I wyll smite my handes together also and satisfye my wrothfull in-dygnacyon: Euen I the Lord haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lord came yet vnto me agayne, saying: Thou sonne of man, make the two stretes, that the swerde of the kynge of Babylon may come. Both these stretes shall go oute of one lande. He shall sette hym by a place, at the heade of the strete shall he chose hym out a corner. Make the a strete, that the swerde maye come to-warde Babath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cytie of Jerusalem. For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turnynge of the wape, at the heade of the two stretes: to aske counsaile at the sothesayers, castynge the lottes wyth hys arrowes, to aske counsaile at the Idoles, and to loke in the lyuer.

But the sothesaying shall poynte to the ryghte syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre, to smyte it with a great noyse, to cry out Alarum, to set battelammes agaynste the gates, to graue vp dyches, and to make bul-wokes.

Neuerthelesse, as for the sothesaying, they shall holde it but for banitye, euen as though a test were tolde them:
yea, and they the selues remembre their wickednes, so that by ryght they muste be taken & wonne. Therfore sayeth the Lord God: for so moch as ye pour selned your wickednes, so that in all your wookes men maye se your synnes: yea, in so moche (I say) that ye pour selues haue made mencyon thereof ye shall be taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked gide of Israell, whose daye is come: euen þ tyme that wyckednesse shall haue an ende: Thus sayeth the Lord God: take awaye the myzre, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punnythe, punnythe, yea, punnythe them wyll I, and destroye them: and that shall not be fulfilled vntyll he come, to whome the Iudgement belongeth, and to who I haue geuen it. And thou (O sonne of forth alreedy to the slaughter, and scoured that it glysteth (because thou hast loked the out banities, and prophesy-ed lyes) þ it may come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodly, which be slayne: whose daye came, whan their wickednes was full.

Though it were put vp agayne in to the sheath, yet wyll I punnythe thee, in the lande where thou waste nozysed and bozne, and powze my indignacon vpon the and wyll blowe vpon the in þ fyr of my wzath, and deluyet the vnto cruell people, whiche are learned to de-stroye. Thou shalt fede the fyre and thy bloude shall be shedde in the lande, that thou mayest be put out of remembraunce.

Euen I the Lord haue spoken it.

The Notes.

a. Some reade: Shall we reioyce our selues. He despiset the staffe of my sonne, and all wood.
The calde reade: the tribe of my sonne: that is to say, the tribe of Iuda. Or shall the staffe of my sonne dyspyse all wood: that is, shall the tribe of Iuda dyspyse all the other.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The word of the Lord agaynste Jerusalem for manslaughter, & denyng due honour vnto thei fathers & mothers, & other wicked-neses. Of the wycked doctrine of the false prophetes & priests, & of thei vnscapable co-uerousnes. The tyrannye of rulers. The wickednes of the people.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, & sayd:
Thou sonne of man, wilt thou not reprove this bloudthyste cytie? Shewe them their abho-minacions, and tel them: Thus saith the Lord God: O thou cite, that shyddest bloude in the myddest of thee, that thy tyme maye come also: & makest the Idoles to despyle the withal. Thou hast made thy selfe gilty, in the bloude that thou hast shed: and despyled the in the Idols, which thou hast made. Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therefore wyll I make the to be confounded among the heathen, and to be despised in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they shall laugh thee to scorne, thou that hast gottē the so foule a name, and art full of myschiefe. Be-holde, þ rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shede bloude in the. * In the haue they despyled father & mother, in the haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they vexed the widdowe & the fatherlesse. Thou hast despyled my Sanctuary, and vn-halowed my sabbooth. Murtherers are there in the, that shede bloude, & eate vpon the hilles, and in the they vse vn-happynesse.

* In thee haue they dyscouered they fathers shame, in the haue they vexed women in their specknesse. Every man hath

hath dealt shamefully with his neygh-bours wyfe, and abhominablye despyled his doughter in lawe. In the hath eue-ry manne forced his owne syster, euen his fathers doughter: yea, * giftes haue bene receaued in thee, to shede bloude.

* Thou haste taken vsury and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbours by extorcion, and forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, I haue smytten

* my haundes vpon thy couetousnesse, & thou haste bled, and vpon the bloude whiche hath bene shed in thee. Is thy heart able to endure it, or may thy han-des defende them selues, in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon thee? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll bringe it also to passe. * I wyll scatere the among the heathen, and strow the about in the landes, and wyll cause thy fylthynesse to ceasse out of thee: yea, and I wil haue the in possession in the syght of the heathen, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, * the house of Israell is turned to drosse. All they that shoulde be brasse, tynne, yron, and leade, are in the fyre become drosse.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God:
for so muche as ye all are turned in to drosse, beholde: I wyll bringe you together vnto Ierusalem, lyke as syluer, brasse, yron tynne and leade are put together in the forname, and the fyre blowe there vnder to melte them: Euen so wyll I gather you, put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indygnacion. I wyll bringe you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruel displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also bee melted therein: that ye maye knowe, howe that I the Lorde haue poured my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou arte an vncleane lande, whiche is not rayned vpon in the daye of the cruell wrath: thy * prophetes that are in thee, are sworne together to denounce soules, lyke as a rotyng leuon, that lyueth by his praye. They receiue riches and good, and make many widdowes in the. Thy priestes breake my lawe, and desyle my Sanctuarye.

* They put no difference betwene the holye and vnholye, neyther discern be-twene the cleane and vncleane: they turne their eyes frome my sabbothes, and I am vnhalowed among them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauynryng wolues, to shede bloude, and to destroy sou-les, for their owne couetous lucre. * As for thy prophetes they dawbe with vntempered claye, they se vanytyes, and prophecy lyes vnto them, sayinge: the Lorde God sayth so, where as the Lorde hath not spoken. The people in the lande bseth wicked extorcion & robbery. They bere the poore and nedye and * opresse the straunger agaynste ryghte. And I soughte in the lande for a manne, that woulde make vp the hedge, and set himselfe in the gappe before me in the landes behalfe, that I shoulde not bitterly destroye it: but I coulde fynde none.

Therefore wyll I poure oute my cruell displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne way-es wyll I recompence vpon their heades sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The .xxiii. Chapter.

Of the fornicacion, that is to saye, of the Ido-latrye of Samaria and Ierusalem, vnder the names of Wholah and Wholibah. In comparicon of Samaria he sheweth that the fornicacion of Jerusalem is the fylthyer. The destruction of Ieru-salem is propheted. The aduoutreye of bothe the whores is founde oute. The destruction.

The worde of the Lorde came these (when they were yonge) beganne to play the harlottes * in Egypt. There costlye araye: saye younge men, lustye cyders of horses.

Thus thowowe her whordome, she cleued vnto al the yonge men of Assiria: yea, she was madde vpon them, and despyled herselfe with all their Idols. But she ceased she frome the fornicacion, that she vled with the Egyptians: for in her youthe they laye with her, they brosed the brestes of her maydenheade, and pouted their whordome vpon her. Wherfore, * I deliuered her in to the handes of her louers, euen the Assirians, whome she so loued. These discovered her shame, toke her sonnes and doughters, and slewe her with the swerde: An euell name gat she of al people, and they punished her.

* Her sister Oholibah sawe this, and destroyed her selfe with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceded her sister in whordome * she loued the Assirians (which also laye with her) namelye, the princes and greate lordes, that were clothed with all maner of gorgeous apparell, all lusty horsmē and saye yonge personnes. Chen I sawe, that they both were despyled a lyke. But she increased styll in whordome: for when she saw men paynted vpon the wall, the ymages of the Caldees sette forth with fresh colours, with saye girdles about them, and goodlye bonettes vpon theyr heades, lokynge all lyke princes (after the maner of the Babylonians and Caldees in their owne lande, where they be bozne) ymmediatlye, as soone as she saw them, she bzent in loue vpon them, and sent messangers for them into the lande of the Caldees.

Nowe when the Babylonians came to her, they laye with her, and despyled her with their whordome, & so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from * her whordome and shame was dyscouered and sene: then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my hearte was gone frome her sister also. Neuer thelesse she vled her whordome euer the longer the more, and remembred the dayes of her youthe, wherein she had played the harlot in the lande of Egypt:

* she bzente in luste vpon them, whose fleshe was lyke the fleshe of asses, and their sede lyke the sede of horses. Thus thou haste renued the fylthynesse of thy youthe, when thy louers bzed thy papys, and matted thy brestes in Egypt.

Therefore (O Oholibah) thus sayeth the Lord God. I wyll rayse by thy louers (with whome thou haste satysfied thy luste) againste the, and gather them together rounde aboute thee: namelye, the Babylonians, and all the Caldees: Decod, Schoa and Coa, with all the Assirians: al younge and saye louers: princes and lordes, knyghtes and gentlemen, whiche bee all good hoysmen: These shal come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a greate multitude of people: whiche shalbe harnessed aboute the on euery side, with brestplates, helmes and helmettes. I wyll punyche the before them, yea, they them selues shal punyche the, accordinge to theyr owne iudgemente. I wyll put my gelousye vpon the, so that they shal deall cruelly with the. They shal cut of thy nose and thine eares, and the remnaunt shal fall thowowe the swerde. They shal carry away thy sonnes and doughters, and the residue shalbe bzent in the fyre. They shal strype the out of thy clothes, and carpe thy costlye Jewelles away with them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and whordome, which thou haste broughte oute of the lande of Egypte: so that thou shalte turne thine eyes nomore after them, and caste thy mynde nomore vpon Egypt. For thus sayeth the Lord: beholde, I wyll deliuer the into the handes of them, whome thou hatest: yea, euen into the handes of them, with whome thou haste fulfilled thy luste, which shal deale cruellye with the: All thy labour shalt thou take with them, & leaue the naked and bare, thus the shame of thy fylthy whordome shal come to lpyghte. All these thynges shal happen vnto thee, because of thy whordome, whiche thou haste vled amonge the Gentiles, with whose Idols thou haste despyled thy selfe. Thou haste walcked in the waye of thy sister, therefore wyll I geue the her cuppe in thy hande.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Thou shalte dryncke of thy sisters cuppe, how depe and far so euer it be to the botome.

Thou

Thou shalt bee laughed to scorne, and had as greatye in derision, as is possible. Thou shalt bee full of dronckennes and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy syster Samaria is a cup of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou dryncke, and suppe it oute euen to the drygges, yea, thou shalt eate vp the broken peces of it, and so teare thyne owne breestes: for euen I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: for so much as thou hast forgotten me, and caste me asyde, so heare now thyne owne sylthynesse and whoredome. The Lorde sayde mozeouer vnto me: Thou sonne of man wilt thou not reprove Oholah and Oholibah? Shew them their abhomyracions: namelye, that they haue broken their wedlocke, and staped theyr handes with bloude: yea, euen with theyr ydoles haue they comypted aduoutry, and offred them their owne chyldren (to bee deuoured) whome they hadde borne vnto me. Yea, and this haue they done vnto me also: they haue despyled my Sanctuarie in that same daye, and haue unhalowed my Sabboth, for when they hadde slayne theyr chyldren for their Idols, they came the same daye into my Sanctuarie to defile it. Lo, this haue they done in my house. Beside al this, thou hast sent thy messengers for men out of far countrees: and when they came, thou hast bathed, trymmed and set forth the thy selfe of the best fashyon: thou sattet vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before thee: where vpon thou hast sette myne incense and myne oyle.

Then was there greate cheare with her, and the men that were sent from far countrees ouer the deserte, vnto these they gaue bracelettes vpon theyr handes, and set gloriuous crownes vpon theyr heades: then thought I in mynoute, these wil vse their harlotry also with ponder olde whoze. And they wente in to her, as vnto a comen harlot: euen so went they also to Oholah and Oholibah those filthy women.

Ope all that loue vertue and righteousness, iudge them, punish the: as aduouters and murderers ought to be iudged and punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, and the bloud is in their handes. wherfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: drynke a greate multitude of people vpon them, and make them be scatted and spoyled: these shall stone them, and gore them with theyr sweardes. They shall slaye their sonnes and daughters and burne vp their houses with fyre.

Thus will I destroye all suche sylthynes out of the lande: that all wenien maye learne, not to do after youre vncleynesse. And so they shall lape youre sylthynesse vpon your owne felues, and ye shall bee punished for the synnes, that ye haue comypted with youre Idols: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The. xliiii. Chapter.

The yoweth the springs of Jerusalem by a parable of a lethyng pot. The parable of Ezechiel's wyfe beinge dead, which he after expoundeth.

In the. ix. yere, in the. x. Moneth, the. x. daye of the Moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, wyte vp the name of this day, yea, euē the houre of this present daye: when the kynge of Babylon set him selfe agaynst Jerusalem. Shew that obstinate household a parable, and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Get the a pot, set it on, and poure water in to it: put all the peces together in it, all the good peces: the lopne and the shoulde, and fyll it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, and an heape of bones with all: let it boyle well, and let the bones sethe well therein.

With that sayde the Lorde God on this maner: Mo be vnto I bloody cite of the pot, where vpon the rustynesse hangeth, and is not yet scoured awaye. Take oute the peces that are in it, one after another: there nede not lottes be caste therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. vpon a playne drye stone hath she poured it, and not vpon the grounde, that it myghte be couered with duste. And therfore haue I letten her poure her bloude vpon a playne drye stony rocke, because it should not be hyd, and that I myght dryng my wythfull indignacion and vengeaunce vpon her.

Wherfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: C

Owo be vnto that bloud thursty ctye, for whome I wyll prepare a heape of wodde: beate thou the bones together, kyndle thou the fyre, seeth the fleische, let all be well sodden, that the bones maye be sucked out. Moreover, set the pot emptye vpon the coales, that it maye bee warme & the metall hote: that the fylthe and rustynesse may be consumed. But it wyll not go of there is so muche of it: the rustynesse must be bzent out. Thy filthynesse is abhomyneable, for I wolde haue clyensed thee, but thou wouldest not be clyensed. Thou canst not be purged from thyne vncleynesse, tyl I haue poured my wrothfull indignacyon vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue so deuised: Yea, it is come therto already, that I wyll do it. I wyll not go backe, I wil not spare, I wyll not be intreated: but accordyng to thy wayes and ymaginacions, thou shalt bee punished, sayeth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sone of man, beholde, I wyll take away the pleasure of thine eyes with a plague: yet shalt thou neyther mourne, nor wepe, nor water thy chekes therfore: for I mayest mourne by thy selfe alone, but vse no deadlye lamentacion. Holde on thy bonnet, and put on thy shues vpon thy fete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breade. So I spake vnto the people by tymes in the moornyng, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the next morow, I dyd as I was commaunded. And the people sayde vnto me wylte thou not tell vs, what that signifieth, whiche thou doest? I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I wyll suspende my sanctuary: euen the gloze of poure power, the pleasure of poure eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: poure sonnes and daughters whome ye haue left, shall fall thorowe the swerde.

Aske as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyd your faces, ye shall eate no mourners breade: pour bonnetes shall ye haue vpon your heades, and shues vpon your fete. Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in poure synnes ye shall bee sorowfull, and one repente with another. Thus Ezechiel is your shewtoken, for loke as he hath done, so when thys cometh ye shall do also: that ye maye letne to knowe that I am the Lorde God. But beholde, O thou sonne of manne: In the daye when I take from them their power, theyr fore and honoure, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr bodies: namely, theyr sonnes and daughters: Then shall theyr one escape, and come vnto thee, for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouth bee opened to hym, whiche is escaped, thou mayest speake, and bee no more domine. Yea, and thou shalt bee theyr shew token, that they may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The .xxv. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reioyced at the fall of Jerusalem. Against Moab and Seir. Against Iouma. Against the Philistines.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynst the Ammonites, prophesy vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonytes: heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: for so muche as thou speakest ouer my Sanctuary. I ha, I trow it be now suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel, I trow it be nowe desolate: yea, and ouer the house of Iuda, I trowe they be now led awaye prysoners: Beholde, I wyll deliuer the to the people of the east, that they maye haue the in possession: these shall sette their castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and dryncke by thy mylke. As for Rabath, I wyll make of it a stal for camels, and of Ammon a shepfold: for ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: In so muche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete, yea, reioysed in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despise: beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer the also, and deliuer thee, to bee spoyled of the heathen, and tote the out from amonge the people, & cause thee to be destroyed oute of al landes: yea, I wyll make the be layed waste, that thou maist knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: for so muche as Moab and Seir do saie: As for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentils be: Therfore beholde, I will make the cyties of Moab wea- penlesse, and take away their strength: their cyties and these coastes of their lande, whiche are the pleasures of the countre: As namely, Bethielimoth, Ba- almeon and Cariathaim: these wyl I open vnto them of the easte, that they may fall vpon the Ammonites: and wil geue it them in possession: so that the Ammonites shall no more be had in re- membzaunce among the heathen. Euen thus wyl I puny the Moab also, that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Because that * Edom hath auen- ged and ealed him selfe vpon the house of Juda, therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I wyl reach out myne hande vpon E- dom, and take awaye maينه and beast out of it. Frome Theman vnto Dedan wyl I make it desolate, they shall bee slayne with the swearde. * Thowoe my people of Israell wyl I auenge me a- gayne vpon Edome: they shall handle hym, accordyng to my wrathe and in- dygnacion, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce sayeth the Lorde God.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: for so muche as the * Philistines haue done thys: namely taken vengeaunce with despitfull stomackes, and of an olde e- uell wyl sette them selues to destroye: Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl stretch out myne hand ouer the Philistines, and destroye the destroyer, and cause all the remnaunt of the sea coaste to perishe. A greate ven- geaunce wyl I take vpon them, and puny the them cruellye: that they maye know, how that I am the Lorde, whiche haue auenged me of them.

The. xxi. Chapter.

The prophet yeth that Tyus shalbe ouerthrowen, be- cause it reioyced at the destruction of Jerusalem. The remembrance and astonishment of the marchauntes, for the desolacion of Tyus.

It happened, that in the. xi. yeate, the fyrst day of the Mo- neth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, because * that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: I ha, nowe

I trowe the portes of the people be bro- ken, and she turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my bely full. Yea, theretore sayth the Lorde God: Beholde I Tyre, I wyl vpon the, I wyl byrnye a great multitude of people agaynste the, lyke as whē the sea ariseth with his waues: These shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towres: I wyl scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: yea, as the dryinge place where the fyshers hange vp their nettes by the lea syde. Euen I haue spo- ken it, sayth the Lorde God. The Gen- tylls shall spoyle her: her doughters vpon the felde shall perishe with the swearde, that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

for thus sayeth the Lorde God: Be- holde, I wyl byrnye hyther Nabucho- donosor (whiche is the kyng of Baby- lon, a kyng of kinges) from the North vpon Tyre, with hores, charrettes, hors- men, and with a great multitud of peo- ple. Thy doughters that are in the land, shall he slaye with the swearde: but a- gaynste thee, he shal make bulworckes and graue vp dyches aboute thee, and lyfte vp hys shyld agaynste the. Hys synges and batelcammes shall he pre- pare for thy walles, and with his wea- pens breake downe thy towres. The dust of his hores shall couer the, they shalbe so many: thy walles shall make at the nypse of the hore men, charrettes and wheles: when he cometh to thy por- tes, as men do into an open cite. With the hofes of his hore fete, shal he tread downe al thy stretes.

He shall sleve thy people with the swearde, and breake downe the pylers of thy strength. They shal waste awaye thy ryches, and spoyle thy marchaun- dyle. Thy wals shal they breake downe, and destroy thy houses of pleasur. Thy stones, thy tymbre and foundacyons shal they caste in the water. * Thus wil I byrnye the melody of thy songes, and the voyce of thy mynstrelly to an ende, so that they shal nomore be herde. I wil make a bare stone of thee, yea, a drying place for nettes, and shalte neuer bee buylded agayne: for euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God: thus hath the Lorde God spoken concer- ninge

Now at the tyme of thy fall the inhabytours of the Isles, yea, and the Isles them selues, shall stande in feare at thyne ende. For thus sayth the Lorde God: when I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be, that no man dwelleth in) and when I byng the depe vpon the, that greates waters maye couer the: Then wyl I caste the downe vnto them, that descende into ppytte: vnto a people that hathe bene longe deade, and set the in a lande that is beneth, lyke the olde wyldernes, with them which go downe to theyr graues, so that no manne shall dwell moze in the. ## ¶ The xxvii. Chapter.

¶ The Prophet is moued to bewaile the desolacion of Tyre. He setteth out the prayse of Tyre for the hauntyng of marchauntes therto.

A The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: O thou sone of manne, make a lamentable complaynte vpon Tyre, and sape vpon Tyre, which is a porte of the sea, that occuppeth with muche people, and many Isles: thus speaketh the Lorde God: O Tyre, thou hast sayd: what, I am a noble cytie: thy borders are in the middest of p sea, and thy buylders haue made the maruelous goodlye. All thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mounte Sanir. From Libanus haue they taken Cedre trees, to make the mastes: and the Oakes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy boozdes haue they made of puerpe, and of costly wood out of the Ile of Cethim. Thy sayle was of whyte small nedle worke out of the lande of Egypt, to hange vpon thy mast: and thy hangynges of palow silcke & purple, out of the Isles of Cilicab. They of Sidon and Arnad were thy maryners, and the wyldest in Tyre were thy shippmasters. The eldest and wyldest at Geball were they, that menuded and stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the sea with theyr shipmen occupied their marchaundises in the. The Perses, Lydians and Lybians were in thyne hooste, and helped the to fyghte: these hanged by their shildes and helmets with the, these set forth thy bewty. They of Arnad were with thyne hooste rounde about thy walles, & were thy watch men vpon thy towres, these hanged by their shildes rounde about thy walles, and made the maruelous goodly. That is occupied with the in all maner of wares, in spluer, yron, tynne and leade, and made thy market greates. Iauan, Tubal and Mesech were thy marchauntes, which broughte the minne, and ornamentes of metall, for thy occuppyng. They of the house of Thogarina broughte vnto thee at the tyme of thy marre, horse, horsemen and mules. They of Dedan were thy marchauntes: and manye other Isles that occupied with the, broughte p wethers, Elephaunt bones and Paycockes for a presente. The Sirians occupped with the, because of thy diuerse worckes, and increased thy marchaundises with Sinatagdes, with scarlet, with nedle work, with whyte linnen clothe, with silcke and with Christall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupped with the, & brought vnto thy markets, wheate, balme, hony, oyle, and triacle. Damascus also bled marchaundises with the, in the best wyne and white wo: because thy occuppyng was so great and thy wares so manye. Dan, Iauan, and Meusall haue broughte vnto thy markettes, yron redy made, with Cassia and Calamus, accordynge to thyne occuppyng. Dedan occupped with the, in sayre tapestry worke and quillpens.

Arabia

Tyrus. Egipte. Of Ezechiel Fol. cxliiii

Arabia and all the princes of Cedar haue occupped with thee, in shepe, weasels and goates.

The marchauntes of Seba and Reuma haue occupped also with thee, in all costly spices, in all precious stones and golde, whiche they broughte vnto thy markettes. Haran, Chene and Coen, the marchauntes of Saba, Affrica and Chelmad, were all doers with thee and occupied with thee: In costly rayment, of palow spicke and noble worke (very precious, and therfore packt and bound together with roapes). Yea, and in Cedre woode, at the tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Thariss were the chiefe of thy occuppyng.

Thus thou arte full, and in greate wretchednesse, euen in the myddest of the sea. Thy maryners were euer bringing vnto the oute of many waters. But the easte wynde shall ouerbear the into the myddest of the sea: so that thy wares, thy marchandises, thy ryches, thy mariuers, thy shipmasters, thy helpers, thy occuppers (that broughte the thynges necessarie) the menue of warre that are in the yea, and all thy comens shall perishe in the myddest of the sea, in the daye of thy fall. The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of thy shypmen. All wherry menne, and al maryners by, on the sea, shall leape out of their boates and sette them selues vpon the lande. They shall lyfte by their voyce because of thee, and make a lamentable crye. They shall caste duste vpon theyr heaues, and lye downe in the ashes. They shall haue them selues, and putte sacke clothe vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for thee with hearte full sorowe, and heuie lamentation. Yea, theyr chyldren also shall wepe for thee. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in the sea, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchandises came frome the seas, thou gauest all people ynowgh. The kynges of the earth hast thou made ryche, thorow the myltitude of thy wares and occuppyng: But thou arte nowe caste downe into the depe of the sea, all thy resorte of people is perished with thee. All they that dwell in the Isles are abashed at thee, and all theyr kynges are afrayed, yea their faces haue chaunged colour. The marchauntes of the nations wondzeat the. In that thou art so cleane brought to nought, a comest nomore by.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: for so much as thou hast lyfte by thine hearte, as though thou were God: behold, I will bring enemyes vpon thee, euen the tyrauntes of the heathen: these shall drawe oute theyr swerdes vpon thy beuty and wysdome, and shall deile thy glory. I haue set the vpon the holy mounte of God, there haste thou bene, and walked amonge the fayre glossterynge stones. From the tyme of thy creacyon thou haste bene ryghte excellent, tyll wickednesse was found in the. * Because of thy greate marchaundysse, thy hearte is full of wyckednesse, and thou hast offended. Thus sayeth the LORD GOD: When I gather the housholde of Israell together agayne frome the nations amonge whome they bee scatered: then shal I be sanctified in them, in the sighte of the Gentylles, and they shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to my seruaunte Jacob. They shall dwell safely therein, buylde houses, and plant vyneyardes: yea, safely shall they dwell therein, when I haue punysshed all those, that despyte them rounde about: and then shall they knowe, that I am the LORD their God.

The .xxix. Chapter.

The prophecie agaynst Pharaon. The prophecie of the desolacion of Egipte, and the sparynge abroad of the Egiptians. The Lord promyseth that he wyll restore Egipte agayne after xl. yere. Egipte is the reward of kynge Nabuchodonosor for the labour which he toke agaynst Tyus.

In the .x. yere vpon the .xii. daye of the .x. Moneth, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: * Thou sonne of man, set now thy face agaynst Pharaon the kynge of Egipte, prophecie agaynst him and agaynst the whole lande of Egipte: Speake, and tell hym, thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, O Pharaon thou kynge of Egipte, I wyll vpon thee, thou greate dragon, that lvest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is myne. I haue made it my selfe. I wyll put an hoke in thy chawes, and hange al the fysh in thy waters vpon thy scales: after that I wyll drawe the oute of thy waters, yea, and all the fysh of thy waters that hange vpon thy scales. I wyll caste thee oute vpon the drye lande with the fysh of thy waters, so that thou shalt lye vpon the felde. Thou shalt not bee gathered nor taken vp: but shalt bee meate for the bestes of the felde, and for the foules of the ayre: that all they whiche dwell in Egipte, maye knowe, that I am the Lord: because thou haste bene a stake of rebe to the house of Israell. When they take holde of the with theyr hande thou brykest and pryckest them on euery syde: and yf they leane vpon the, thou brykest and hurtest the reynes of their backes. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I wyll byrnye a swerd vpon thee, and rote oute of the both man and beast. Yea, the lande of Egipte shalbee desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the LORD: Because he sayde: the water is myne, I my.

ypus. Egypte. Of Ezechiel. Fol. cxiij.

I my selfe haue made it. Beholde therfore, I wil vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I will make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate, from the towre of Syenes vnto the borders of the Morians lade: so that in .xl. yeaeres there shal no fote of man walcke there, nether fote of cattel go there, nether shal it be inhabited. I will make the lande of Egypte to be desolate, amonge other wast countrees, and her cyties to lye voyde
.xl. yeaeres, amonge other voyde cyties:
and I will scatere the Egyptians amonge the heathen and nations.

Agayne, thus sayeth the Lord God:
* When the .xl. yeaeres are crypted, I will gather the Egyptians together a-gayne, oute of the nations, amonge whome they were scatted, and wil bring the pysoners of Egypte agayne in to the lande of Pathures their owne na-tue countre, that they maye be there a lowlpe smal kyngedome: yea, they shal be the smalest amonge other kyngedomes, lest they exalte them selues aboue the heathen: for I wil so mony them that they shal no moze rule the heathen. They shal no moze be an hope vnto y house of Israel, nether prouoke them any moze to wyckednesse, to cause them turne backe, and to folowe them:
and they shal know that I am the Lord God.

In the .xxviii. yeaere, the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath made his hooft, with great trauayle and labour to come before Tyre: that euery heade maye be balde, and euery shoulder bare. Yet hath Tyre geuen nether hym nor hys hooft any rewarde, for the greates tra-uayle that he hath taken there. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I will geue the lande of Egypte vnto Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, that he may take awaye al her substaunce, robbe her robberyes, & spoyle her poples, to paye his hooft: they wages withall. I will geue hym the lande of Egypte for hys labour, that he toke for me before Tyre. At the same tyme will I cause the house of Israel to growe forth, and open thy mouthe agayne among them:

that they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord.

The Notes.

a. The propertye of dragons is to haunte where aboundaunce of watters are: Therefore is y kyng of Egypte here called a dragon, because of the a-boundaunce of watters that are in Egypte, where he ragged. So is Jerusalem called a steepe, because of her hauntyng of Idolatrye: as before in

The .xxx. Chapter.

The destruction of Egypte and of hys cyties is des-waped.

The worde of the Lord came mozeouer vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of
man, prophete & speake:
thus saith y Lord God: * Mourne, wo worthe
this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lord is come: the darcke daye of the heathen, the houre is at hande, the swearde cometh vpon Egypte. When the wounded men fall downe in Egypte, when her people are taken awaye, and when her foundations are destroyed, the Morians lande shal be afrayed, yea, the Morians lande, Libia and Libia, al theyr commen people, and Chub, and all that be confederate vnto them, shal fal with them thorow the swearde.

Thus sayeth the Lord: The mapn-teyners of the lande of Egypte shal fal, the pride of her power shal come downe: euē vnto the towre of Syenes shal they be slayne downe with the swearde, sayeth the Lord God: amonge other desolate countrees they shalbe made desolate, and amonge other wast cyties they shalbe wasted. And they shal knowe, that I am the Lord, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed. At that tyme, shal their messaungers go for the fro me in Syppes, to make the care-lesse Morians afrayed, and sorowe shal come vpon them in the daye of Egypte for doutlesse it shal come.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I will make an ende of the people of Egypte thorowe the hande of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon. He and hys people wyth hym, yea, and the cruell tyrauntes of the heathen shal be brought to destroy the lande. They shal drawe out their swerdes vpon Egypt and fill the lande full of slaying men. I wyl drye vp theyr foudes of water, and sell the lande in to the handes of wicked people. The lande and al that is therein, wyl I destroye thorow the enemyes. When I the Lord haue sayde it.

D And thus saith the Lord God: * I wyl destroye the Idols, and bringe the ymages of * A* Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a pryncce of Egypt, and a fearfulness wyl I sende in to the Egyptians lande. As for Pathures, I wyl make it desolate, and kindle a fyre in b * joan. Alexandria wyl I punyche, and poure my wrothfull indignaciō vpon c * Sin which is the strength of Egypte. All the substance of Alexandria wil I destroy, & kindle a fyre in Egypt.

E Sin shalbe in greate heynesse, Alexandria shalbe rote d oute, and Noph shall haue dayly sorowe. The best me of Heliopolis and Bubasto shalbe slayne with the swerde, and carped away captyue. At Taphnis þ daye shalbe darcke, when I breake there the scepter of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall haue an ende. A cloude shall couer her, and her doughters shalbe led awaye in to captiuytie. Thus wil I punyche Egypte, that they may know, how that I am the Lord.

F It happened in the .xi. yeare, vpon the seventh daye of the fyrste Moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharaο kyng of Egypte; and lo it shall not be bounde vp to be heale d, nether shal any playstre be laied vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so stronge, as to holde a swerde. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wyl vpon Pharaο þ kyng of Egypte, and bruse his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) & wil smyte the swerde out of his hande.

As for the Egyptians, I wyl scatte them amonge the heathen, and strowe them in the landes aboute. Agayne I wyl strength the arme of the kyng of Babilon, and geue hym my swerde in hys hande: but I wyl breake Pharaοs arme so that he shall holde it before him pteouslye, lyke a wounded man.

Yea, I wyl stablyshe the kyng of Babilons arme, and the armes of Pharaο shall fall downe: that it may be knowen, that I am the Lord, whiche geue the kyng of Babilon my swerde in his hande, that he maye drawe it oute vpon the lande of Egypte: and that when I scatte the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, and strowe them in the landes aboute, they maye knowe, that I am the Lord.

The .xxxi. Chapter.

A comparison of the prosperitie of Pharaο with the prosperitie of the Assyrians. The propheseth a lyke destruction vnto them both.

Moreouer, it happened in the .xi. yeare the fyrste daye of the thyrde Moneth that the word of the Lord came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharaο the kyng of Egypte, and to all hys people: Whome arte thou lyke in thy greatnesse? Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the mounte of Libanus with saye braunches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes and hot out very hie. His toppes reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him greatesse, & the depe set hym vp an hie. Rōnde aboute the rotes of hym ranne there foudes of water, he sent out hys lytle ryuers vnto al the trees of the felde. Therfore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thorowe the multitude of waters that he sent from hym, he optayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his braunches, vnder his bowes gendered all these beastes of the felde and vnder his shadowe dwelte all people. Saye & beutiful was he in his greatnesse and in the lēgth of hys braunches, for hys rote stode besyde greatesse waters, no Cedar tre myght hyde hym. In the pleasaunte garden of God, there was no fyre tree lyke hys braunches, the playne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym. All the trees in the garden of God myght not be compared vnto hym in his beutye so saye and goodly had I made him in the multitude of his braunches: In so much that al the trees in the pleasaunt garde of god, had enuy at him.

Therfore,

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Lord God.

for so muche as he hath lyfte hym selfe so hye, and stretched his toppes in to the cloudes, and seynge his herte is proude in his highnesse: I wil deliuer hym in to the handes of the mightiest amonge the heathen, which shall rote him oute.
Accordinge to his wickednes wil I cast him away, the enemyes shall destroy him, and the myghtie men of the heathen shall scatter him, that his braunches shall lye vpon al mountaynes and in al valleys: his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow oute the lade. The al the people of the lande shall go fro his shadowe, and forsake hym. When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon hym, and all wyld beasts of the felde shall go aboute amonge his braunches: so that from hence forth, no tre in the water shall attayne to his highnesse, nor reache his toppes vnto the cloudes, nether shall any tre of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be deliuered vnder þe earth, and go downe to the graue, lyke other
men.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue, I wil cause a lamentacion to be made, I wyll couer the depe vpon him, I wil stanche his floudes, and the great waters shall be restrayned. I shall cause Lathanus to be sorowfull for hys sake, & all þe trees of þe felde shall be smitten. I wyll make the heathen shake at the sounde of his fall, when I caste hym downe to hell, with them that descende in to the pytte. All the trees of Eden, with all the chosen and best trees of Li-banus, yea, and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shall mourne with him also in the lower habitacions: for they shall go downe to hell with hym, vnto the that be slayne with þe swerde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme amonge the heathen. To whome shalt thou be lyckened, that art so glorious & great, amonge the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the earth (amonge the trees of Eden) where thou must lye amonge vncircumcised, with them that be slayne with the swerde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all hys people, sayeth the

The. xxiii. Chapter.

The prophete is commaunded to bewaile Pharao the kynge of Egypte. & propheseth that destruction shall come vnto Egypt thorow the kynge of Babylon.

In the. xii. yere, the first daye of the. xii. moneth, the worde of the Lord
came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, take vp a lamentacion vpon * Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and saye vnto hym: Thou art reputed as a Lyon of the heathen, and as a whalfish in the sea. Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troublest the waters w thy sete, & stampst in their floudes. Thus saith the Lord God: * I wil sprede my net ouer the, namely, a greates multitude of people: these shall byrue the in to my parne, for I wyl caste the vpon þe lande, and let the lye vpon the felde, that al the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon the: I wil geue al þe beasts of þe felde inoughe of the. Thy fleshe wil I caste vpon the hylls, and fylle the valleyes with thy highnesse. I wil water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, and the valleyes shall be full of the. When thou art put out, I wyll couer the heauen, and make hys starres dymme. * I wyll sprede a cloude ouer the Sonne, and the Moone shall not geue her lyghte. All the lyghtes of heauen wyll I put out ouer the, & bring darknesse vpon thy lande, sayeth the Lord God. I wil trouble the hertes of many people, whē I byrnge thy destruction amonge the heathen and countrees, whome thou knowest not. Yea, I wyll make manye people with their kynges so afrayed thorow the, that they heere shall stande by, whē I shake my swerde at their faces. Sodenly shall they be as stonyed, euery man in him selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: the kynge of Babilons swerde shall come vpon the, with the swerdes of the worthies wil I smyte downe thy people. Al they that be myghtie amonge the Gentyles, shall waste the proude pompe of Egypte, and byrnge downe all her people. All the cattell also of Egypte wyll I destroye, that they shall come no more vpon the waters: so that nether mans fote nor beastes claws, shal styre them any more.

Then wil I make their waters cleare, and cause their floudes to runne lyke ople, sayeth the Lord God: whe I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countre with al that is therein, shal be layde waste: and when I smite al the whiche dwel in it, that they may know, that I am the Lorde.

D This is the mournynge, that the daughters of the Heathen shal make: Yea, a sorowe and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte & all her people, sayeth the Lorde God.

In the .xii. yeaere, the .xv. daye of the Moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypt, and caste them downe, yea, and the mightie people of the Heathen also, euen with them* that dwel beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (howe saye so euer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amonge those that be slayne with the swearde, shal they lye. The swearde is geuen all readye, he shal be drawen forth, and all hys people. The myghty wortheys and his helpers, that be gone downe and lie with the vncircumcised and with them that be slayne with the swearde: shal speake to him oute of the hell.

E But is there also with his companye, and their graues rounde about, whiche were slayne and fel all with the swearde, whose graues lye besyde hym in the lowe pytte. His commens are buryed rounde aboute his graine: all together wounded and slayne wyth the swearde, which men afore time broughte feare in to the lande of the lypunge.

There is * Clam also with all hys people, and their graues rounde about: which al beyng wounded & slayne with the swearde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder the earth, whiche neuertheles sometyme broughte feare in to the lande of the lypunge: for the whiche they beare their shame, with the other that be gone downe to the graue.

F Their burial is geuen them and all their people, amonge the that be slayne. Their graues are rounde aboute all them, whiche be vncircumcised, with them that be slayne thozow & swarde: for seynge that in tymes past they made the lande of the lypunge astrayed, they must now beare their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pytte, and lie amonge them, that be slayne.

There is Melech also and Tubal, and theyr people, & their graues rounde aboute. These al are amonge the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne with the swearde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lypunge astrayed.

Shoulde not they then lye also amonge the wortheys, and vncircumcised Gyautes: whiche with their weapons are gone downe to hel: whose swaordes are lated vnder their heades, whose wyckednesse is vpon their bones: because & as wortheys, they haue brought feare in to the lande of the lypunge: Yea, amonge the vncircumcised shalte thou be destroyed, and slepe with them, that perished thozowe the swearde.

There is the lande of * Edom with her kynges & princes also, whiche with their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swearde, yea, amonge the vncircumcised, and them which are gone downe in to the pytte. Moreover, there be al the princes of the north, with all the Sidonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare and strengthe they are come to the consulyon, and lye there vncircumcised, amonge those that be slayne with the swearde: and beare theyr owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pytte. Nowe whan Pharaos seeth this, he shal be comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne with the swearde: bothe Pharaos and all hys hooft, sayeth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the lypunge. But Pharaos and all his people shal lye amonge the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swearde sayeth the Lord God.

The .xxiii. Chapter.

I We setteth oute the office of a curate that preacheth the Gospell. He strengtheneth them that despayre, and boldeneth them with the promes of merce. As the former ryghtousnes helpeth not the ryghtous, yf he geue hym selfe agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wycked & amedeth. Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Speake to þe chyldren of thy people, and tell them: Whan I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lande take a man of their countre, and set hym to be their watchman: the same man (whan he seeth the swearde come vpon the lande) shall blowe þe trom-pet, and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse of the trompet and wil not be warned, and the swearde come and take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his owne heade:
for he hearde the sounde of the trompet, and woulde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon hym. But yf he wyll receaue warnynge, he shall saue his lyfe. Agayne, yf the watchman se the swearde come and shewe it not with the trompet, so that the people is not warned: yf the swearde come then, and take any man from amonge them: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hande.

* And now (O thou sonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: þe where as thou hearest any thyng oute of my mouthe, thou mayest warne them on my behalfe. If I saye vnto the wycked, thou wycked, thou shalt surely dye: and thou geuest him not warnynge, that he may beware of his vngodly waye: then shall þe wycked dye in his owne synne, but his bloude wil I requyre of thy hande. Ne-uerthelesse yf þe warne the wicked of his waye, to tourne from it, where as he yet wil not be turned fro it, then shall he dye because of his synne, but thou hast de-liuered thy soule.

¶ Therfore (O thou sonne of man) speake vnto the house of Israel. Ye saye thus: Oure offences and synnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how shoulde we then be restored vnto lyfe?
Tell them: * As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I haue no pleasure in the deathe of the wycked, but muche rather that the wycked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the house of Israel. Wherfore wil ye die?

Thou sonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: * The ryghteousnes of the righteous shall not saue him, whā so euer he turneth awaye vnfaithfully: Agayne, the wyckednesse of the wycked shall not hurte him, whan soeuer he conuerteth from his vngodlynesse.

And the righteousnesse of the righteous shall not saue his lyfe, whan soeuer he synneth. If I saye vnto the ryghte-ous, that he shall surely lyue, and so he truste to his owne ryghteousnesse, and do synne: then shall his ryghteousnesse be no more thought vpon, but in þe wyckednesse that he hath done he shall dye.

* Agayne, yf I saye vnto the wycked: thou shalt surely dye: and so he turne from his synnes, and do the thing that is lawfull and righte: In so muche that the same wycked man geueth þe pledge agayne, restoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walcketh in the commaundementes of lyfe, and dothe no wronge: Then shall he surely lyue, and not dye. Yea, the synnes that he hath done, shall neuer be thought vpon:

For in so muche as he dothe nowe the thyng that is lawfull and ryghte, he shall lyue. And yet the children of thy people saye: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not ryght, where as their owne waye is rather vnrighthe,

When the righteous turneth from his ryghteousnesse, and doeth the thing that is wycked, he shall dye therfore.
But yf the wycked turne from his wyckednesse, doynge the thyng þe is lawfull and right, he shall lyue therfore. Yet ye saye: the waye of þe Lorde is not equal.
O ye house of Israel, * I wil iudge eue-ry one of you after his wayes.

In the xij. yere, the v. daye of the x. moneth of oure captiuitie, it happened, that one whiche was fled oute of Jerusalem, came vnto me, and sayde: the cy-tie is destroyed. Nowe the hande of the Lorde had bene vpon me the euenynge afore this man (whiche was escaped) came vnto me, and had opened my mouth, but yll the mornynge that he came to me: yea, he opened my mouthe, so that I was no more domine. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, and sayde:

in the wasted lande of Israel, saye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in possession: nowe are we many, and the lande is geue vs to possesse also. And therfore tel them: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * In the bloude haue ye eaten, youre eyes haue ye lyfte vp to Idoles, * and haue shed bloude: shall ye then haue the lande in possession?

Ye leane vpon youre sweardes, ye worke abhominacions, euery one defileth his neyghbours wyfe: and shall ye then possesse the lande? Saye thou these wordes vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue all ye that dwell in this wyldernesse, shall be slayne with the swearde: what so euer is vpon the felde, wyll I geue vnto the beastes to be deuoured: those that be in stronge holdes and denues, shall dye of the pestilence. For I wyll make þe lande so desolate and waste, and the pompe of her strength shall come to an ende. The mountaynes in Israel shall be so waste that no man shall trauaile therby.

* Then shall they learne to knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I make the lande waste and desolate, because of all their abhominacions, that they haue wroughte. And thou sonne of man, the chyldre of thy people that talcke of the, by the walles and in the doores of theyr houses, sayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the Lorde: These come vnto the, after the maner of a great people: yea, my people syt downe before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not there after: * for in their mouthes they shewe them selues (as though they were feruente, but their hearte goeth after their owne couetous lucre. And as a balet þe hathe a swete tune, and is pleasaunte to synge, so shalt thou be vnto them: thy wordes shall they heare, but they wyll not do thereafter. When this cometh to passe (for lo, it cometh in dede) then shall they knowe, that there hath bene a prophet amonge them.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Againste Byshoppes and curates that despyse the flocke of Christ, and seake theyr owne. The Lorde sayeth that he wyll vsset his dysparyled flocke, and gather them together. He rejoyceth the malice of certayne of þe flocke. He promyseth the true shepherde Christe, and with hym peace.

And þe word of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of mā, propheticke against þe shepherdes of Israel, propheticke & speake vnto the: Thus saith the lord God: * Wo be vnto þe shepherdes of Israel, that fede them selues. Should not þe shepherdes fede þe flocke?

Ye haue eatē vp the fat, ye haue clothed you in the wol: þe best fedde haue ye slaine, but þe flocke haue ye not nourished. The weake haue ye not holden vp, * the sicke haue ye not healed: þe broken haue ye not bounde together, þe out castes haue ye not brought again: þe lost haue ye not sought, but * churlyshlye & cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scatered here and there without a shepherde: yea, all the beastes of the felde deuoure them, and they go astraye.

Why shepe go wādringe vpo al mountaynes & vpon euery hie hil. Yea, they be scatered abrode in al felde, & there is no mā, þe careth for the, or seketh after the. Therfore. O ye shepherdes, heare the word of þe lord. Thus saith the lord god: As truly as I lyue, for so muche as my shepe are robbed, & deuoured of all the wilde beastes of þe felde, hauinge no shepherde: & seynge þe my shepherdes take no regarde of my shepe, but fede the selues onely, & not my shepe: Therfore heare þe word of þe Lord. O ye shepherdes: Thus saith the Lord God: Beholde, I my selfe wil vpo the shepherdes, and requyre my shepe fro thei hādes, & make the ceasse fro fedynge of my shepe: yea, þe shepherdes shall fede the selues no moze: for I wil deliuer my shepe oute of thei mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: \* Beholde, I wyll loke to my shepe my selfe, & seke the. Lyke as a shepherde amonge the flocke seketh after þe shepe that are scatered abroade, euen so wyll I seke after my shepe, and gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene scatered in þe cloude & darcke day. I wil byrig the out fro all people, & gather the together out of all lādes. I wil byrynge the in to thei owne lande, & fede them vpon the mountaynes of Israel; by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countre, I wyll fede them in ryghte good pastures and vpon the hye mountaynes of Israel shall they folde euil beastes oute of the lande: so that they maye dwel safely in  $\text{p}$  wyldernesse, and slepe in the woddes. Good fortune and prosperite wyll I geue them, and vnto all that be rounde aboute my hyll.

* I prosperous shouer and rayne wyll I sende them in due season, that the trees in the wodde maye brynge forth the theyr

They shalbe safe in their lande, and shal knowe, that I am the Lord, whiche haue broken their yocke, and deliuered them oute of the handes of those, that helde them in subiection.

They shal no more be spoyled of the heathen, nor deuoured with the beastes of the lande: but safely shal they dwell, and no man shal feare them. I wyll sed vp an excellent plante for them, so that they shal suffre no more hunger in the lande, nether beate the reproche of  $\text{p}$  heathen any more. Thus shal they vnderstande, that I the Lord their God am with them, and that they (euen the

Yea, & thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lorde haue hearde al thy despyteful wordes, whiche thou hast spoken against þe mountaynes of Israel, saying: Lo, they are made waste, and geuen vs to deuoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your booste agaynst me, yea, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, whiche I haue hearde al together. Where vnto, thus sayeth the Lorde God: when the whole worlde is in wealth, then wil I make the wast. * And lyke as þe (O mounteyne Sepir) wast glade, because the heretage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyl I do vnto the also, that thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, & knowe, that I am the Lorde.

¶ The xxxvi. Chapter.

O He promyseth deliuerance from the Gentyles vnto Israel. The beneytes done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercede of God, not vnto their desertinges. God remueth our hertes that we maye walke in his commaundementes.

Thou sonne of man, prophesye vpon the mountaynes of Israel, & speake: * Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye mountaynes of Israel:

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Because your enemy hath said vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastyng places are now become ourg: prophesye therfore, & speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Seynge ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto þe resydue of the Gentyles, whiche haue broughte you in to mens mouthes and vnto an euil name amonge the people: Therfore, heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylls, valleys and dales, to the voyde wildernesses and desolate cities, which are spoyled, and habundant destruction on euery syde, among the resydue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deupce, agaynst the resydue of the Gentiles, and agaynst al * Edom: whiche haue taken in my lade vnto them selues for a possession: whiche also reioysed from theyr whole beate with a dyspyteful stomacke, to waste it, and to spoyl it.

Prophecye therfore vpon the landes of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylls, to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lorde God. Beholde, thus haue I deuyled in my gelousye and terrible wrathe: for so muche as ye haue suffered reprove of the Heathen, therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I haue sworn, that the Gentiles whiche lye aboute you, shall beate your confusyon them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall hute out your braunches, and bynge forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is harde by, that it wil come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyl I turne me, that ye maye be tyllid and sowed.

I wil sende you much people, which shalbe al of the house of Israel: the cyties shalbe inhabited, and the decayed places shalbe repayred agayne. I wyl prouyde you with muche people & catel, whiche shall increase and bynge frute. I wyl restore you also to your old estate and shewe you more kyndnes then euer ye had before: wherby ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Yea, people wyl I sede vnto you (O my folke of Israel) whiche shall haue the in possession, and thou shalt be theyr inheritaunce, so that thou shalt no more be withoute them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde God: for so muche as they saye vnto you: þat art an eater of my flesh, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no more men, nether destroy thy people any more, sayeth the Lorde God. And I wyl not suffer the, for to heare thyne owne confusyon amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beate the reprove of the nacjons, nor caste oute thyne owne people any more, sayeth the Lorde God.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came came vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their owne grounde they defyled them selues with their owne wayes & ymaginations: So that in my syghte their way was lyke the vncleynesse of a monstrous womā. Wherefore I poured my wraethfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shedde in the lande, and because of their Idolles, wherewith they had defyled them selues. I scatred them also amonge the heathen, so that they were strowed aboute in the landes. Accor- dyng to their wayes and after their owne Inuencyons, so dyd I punyssh them.

Nowe when they were gone vnto the heathen, and come in amonge them they <sup>dis</sup>honoured my holy name: So that it was sayde of them: Are these the people of God, and muste goe oute of their owne lande? Then spared I my holpe name, whiche the house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentyles, to whome they came. Therefore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I doe not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holpe names sake, whiche ye dishonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therefore I will halowe my great name agayne, which amonge the Gentyles is euell spoken of: for ye poure selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And Gentiles shal know that I am the Lorde, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayeth the Lorde God.

As for you, I will take you frome amonge the heathen, and gather you together oute of all countrees, and bypnye you agayne in to your owne lande. * Then will I powze cleare water vpon you, and ye shalbe cleane. Ye shal come frome all your vncleynesse and from al your Idolles shall I cleanse you. I will geue you also a newe hearte also, and a newe spirite will I putre in to you: As for that stony hearte I will take it out of your bodie, and geue you a fleshy hearte. I will geue my spirite among you, * and cause you to walcke in my commaundementes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them.

And so ye shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shalbe my people, and I will be your God. I will helpe you out of al your vncleynesse. I will call for the corne, and will increase it, and will lette you haue no honger. I will multiplye the fruytes of the trees and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall haue no more reproche of hongre amonge the heathen. Then shal ye remembre your owne wicked wayes, & your ymaginations, whiche were not good: So that ye shall take displeasure at your owne selues, by reason of your synnes, & ab- hominations.

But I will not doe this for your sakes (saith the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: What time as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then will I make the cities to be occupied agayne, and will repayre the places that be decayed: The desolate lande shalbe builded agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the sighte of al them that wente by. Then shall it be sayde: This waste lande is become like a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate & broken downe cities, are now stronge, and fenced agayne. Then the residue of the heathen that lye rounde aboute you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde, whiche repayre that was broken downe, and plante agayne, that was made wast. Euen I the Lord haue spoken it, and will doe it in dede.

Thus saith the Lorde God: I will yet once be founde agayne of the house of Israel, and doe this for them: * I shall increase them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holpe flocke and the flocke of Ierusalem are in the hye solempne feastes: So shall also the wyld waste cities be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and carryed me oute in the spirite of the Lorde, and let me down in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde aboute by them: And beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were betye manye, and maruelous dyde also. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou that these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O Lord God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecie thou vpon these bones, & speake vnto them: Ye dyde bones, heare the woorde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyl put breath into you, that ye may lyue: I wyl geue you synowes, and make fleshe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skinne: And so geue you breathe, that ye maye lyue, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Gene ii. d.

So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me. * And as I was prophecyinge, there came a noyse and a great mocion, so that the bones raine euery one to another. Nowe when I had looked, beholde, they had synowes, and fleshe grewe vpon them: And aboue they were couered wth skinne, but there was no breathe in them. Then sayde he vnto me: thou sonne of man, prophecie thou towarde the wynde: prophesy, and speake to the wynde: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Come (O thou ayze) frome the soure wyndes, and blow vpon these flayne, that they maye be restozed to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had commaunded me: Then came the breath into them, and they receaued lyfe, & stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greatesorte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israell. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones are dyed bp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cutte of. Therefore prophesy thou, and speake vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl open poure graues (O my people) and take you oute of poure sepulchres, and byynge you into the lande of Israell agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open poure graues, and byynge you oute of them. My spirite also wyl I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I wyl let you agayne in poure owne lande, and ye shall knowe, I am the Lorde, whiche haue sayde it, and fulfilled in dede.

The woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take a stycke and write vpon it: vnto Iuda and to the children of Israell his companions. Then take another stick and write vpon it: vnto Ioseph the stocke of Ephraim, and to all the house holde of Israell hys companions. And then, take bothe these two together in thy hande, so shall there be one stick thercof. Nowe yf the children of thy people saye vnto thee: Wylte thou not shewe vs what thou meanest by theser? Then geue them thys answer: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyl take the stocke of Ioseph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israell his felowes, and wyl putte them to the stocke of Iuda, and make them one stocke, and they shalbe one in my hande. And the two styckes where vpon thou writest, shalt thou haue in thyne hande, that they maye se, and shalt saye vnto them:

Thus saith the Lorde God: behold, I wyl take awaye the children of Israell frome amonge the heathen, vnto whō they be gone, & wyl gather the together on euery syde, & brig the agayne into their owne lande: Yea, I wil make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israell, and they al shall haue but one kynge. They shall no moore be two peoples frome hence forth, nether be deuided into two kingdomes: They shall also defile them selues no moze with the abominacions, Idolles, and al their wicked doynges. I wyl helpe them out of al they dwellynge places, wherein they haue sinned: and wyl so clense them, that they shalbe my people, and I their God.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The propheseth that Gog and Magog shall come with an appointed hoste in to the lande of promyse, their intent. He reherceth that the commynge of Gog was before prophesied of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

And the woorde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tourne thy face toward Gog in the lande of Magog, whyche is the chiefe prince at Meslech and Tubal: prophesye agaynste hym, & save: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * O Gog thou chiefe prince Meslech and Tubal: Beholde, I will vpon thee, and will turne the aboute, and putte a byt in thy chawes: I will byynge the for the and all thyne hoste, bothe horse and horse men, whiche be all weapened of the best fashion: A greate people, that handle altogether speares, shyldes, and swerdes: The Perses, Morians and wyth them the Lybyans, whiche all beare shyldes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hostes: The house of Thogorma oute of the North quarters, and all his hostes, yea, and muche people wth thee.

Therefore prepare the, set thy selfe in aray with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After manye dayes thou shalt be visited, and in þe latter yeaeres thou shalt come in to th<sup>e</sup> lande, that hath bene destroyed with the swerde, and nowe is replenished agayne wth diuerse people vpon þe mountaynes of Israell, which haue longe lye waste. Yea, they be broughte oute of the nacjons, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vp like a storme wether, to couer the lande, and as it were a darcke cloude: Thou with al thyne hostes, and a great multitude of people with the.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: At the same tyme shall manye thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn mischief, and say: I will bp to yonder playne lande, seeinge they lyt at ease, and dwell so safely (for they dwell all without any walles, they haue neither barres nor doores) to spole them, to robbe them, to laye hande vpon their so well inhabited wildernesses: Agaynste that people, that is gathered together fro among þe heathen, which haue gottē catel and good, and dwell in the midst of the lande. Then shal Saba, and Dedan, and the marchauntes of Charlis with all their worthyes, saye vnto thee: Arte thou come to robbe? Hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spole: to take syluer and golde: to carrie away catel and good: And to haue a great praye.

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, thou shalt prophesye, and saye vnto Gog: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: In that daye thou shalt knowe, that my people of Israell dwelleth safe: And shalt come from thy place oute of the North partes: Thou and muche people with the, whiche ryde vpon horses, whereof there is a greate multitude & an innumerable sorte. Yea, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israell, as a cloude to couer the lande. They shall come to passe in the latter dayes: I will byynge the bp into my lande, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honour vpon the O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Thou arte he, of whome I haue spoken afore tyme, by my seruantes the prophetes of Israell, whiche prophesied in those dayes and yeaeres, that I should bringe the vpon them. At the same tyme, when

The hylls also shall be tourned vpon the downe, the stappes of stone shall fall, and all walles shall syncke to the ground. I wyll call for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaynes, sayeth the Lorde God: So that euerye mans swearde shall be vpon another. wyth pestilence and bloude wyll I punyssh hym: Stormie rayne and hayle stones, fyre and byrmstone, wyll I cause to rayne vpon hym and al hys heape, yea, and vpon all that great people that is with him. The xxxix. Chapter.

The sheweth the destruction of Gog & Magog. The graue of Gog and of his host. He prophesyeth that Gog and his company shall be deuoured of byrdes & beastes. Wherefore the house of Israel is warned. Their byrds shal agayne from captiuite is promysed.

Ezech. 38.

Wherefore O thou sonne of man, prophesy agaynste Gog, & speake: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, * O Gog: thou chiefe prince at Mesech and Tuball, I wyll vpon the, and turne the aboute, and cary the forth, and leade the frome the Northe partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I wyll smite it out of thy lefte hande, and caste thyne arrowes oute of thy righte hande. Thou with al thyne heape, & all the people that is with thee, muste fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then wyll I geue thee vnto the foules and wyld beastes of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: For euerye I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayeth the Lorde God.

In to Magog, and amonge those that syt so carelesse in the fles: wyll I sende a fyre, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. I wyll make also the name of my holynesse to be knowen amonge my people of Israel: And I wyll not lette my holpe name be euell spoken of anye moze: But the verye heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it commeth, & shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lorde God. This is the day wherof I haue spokē: They that dwel in the cities of Israel, shall goe forth and sette fyre vpon the weapons, and burne them: Shylde and speares, bowes and arrowes, bylles and clubbes: Seuen yeaeres shall they be burnynge therof, so ythey shall els bryge no stiches from the felde, neither haue nede to hew downe anye out of the wodde. for they shall haue weapons ynowe to burne. They shall rob those y robbed the, and spoyle those that spoiled them sayeth y Lorde God.

At the same tyme wyll I geue vnto Gog a place to be buryed in, in Israel: euerye the valley, where thorow men goe from the East to the sea warde. Those that trauaile thereby, shall abhorre it. There shall Gog & al hys people be buryed: And it shall be called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be buryng of them that they maye cleanse the lande. Yea, all the people of the lande shall hurpe them. O it shall be a glorious daye, when I get me that honour, sayeth y Lorde God. They shall ordeyne me also to be deadburyers, euerye goyng thorowe the lande, and appoynte them certayne places to burye those in, whiche remaine vpon the felde, that the lande maye be cleansed. Frome ende to ende shall they seke, & y seuen monethes longe. Nowe those that goe thorowe the lande, where they see a mans bone, they shall sette vp a token by it, tyll the deadburyers haue buried it also, in the valley of the people of Gog. And the name of the Cytie shall be called * Magog: Thus shall they make the lande cleane.

And thou sonne of man: Thus saith the

the Lord God: Speake vnto all the foules and euery byrde, yea, & to al the wyld beasts of the felde: Heape you together and coine, gather you rounde about vpon my slaughter, that I haue sayne for you: Euen a greate slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israel: eate fleshe, and drinke bloude. Ye shall eate the fleshe of the worthyes, and dryncke the bloude of the Prynces of the lande: Of the Wethers, of the Lambes, of the Goates, and of the Oxen that be all sayne at Basan. Eate the fatte pourte helpe ful, and dryncke bloude, tyll ye be droncken of the slaughter, whyche I haue sayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table, with horses and ströge horsmen: with captaynes & all men of warre, sayeth the Lord God.

I wyll byynge my gloire also amonge the Gentiles, that all the heathen maye see my iudgemente, that I haue kept, and my hande which I haue layed vpon them: That the house of Israel maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord their God, frome that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israel were ledde in to captiuitie: It was for their wyckednesse sake, because they offended me.

For the whiche cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemyes, & they myght all be sayne wyth the swearde. Accordyng to their vnclemesse and vnfaythfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face fro them. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: Now wyll I byynge agayne the captiues of Jacob and haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israel, and be gelous for my holpe names sake. All their confusion and offence & they haue done agaynst me, shall be taken awaye: And so sallowe shall they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afrayed. And when I haue broughte them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered them together out of their enemyes landes, and am praysed in them before many heathen: Then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord their God, whiche suffered them to be led into captiuitie amonge the heathen, but nowe haue broughte them agayne into their owne lande, and not lefte one of them yonder.

After that, wyll I hyd my face no more from them, * but wyll poute oute my spirite vpon þ house of Israel, sayeth the Lord God. Eze. 36, 8

The .xl. Chapter.

The restoringe of the cytye and of the temple that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the .xxv. yere of our captiuite, in the begynnyng of the yere, the .x. daye of the moneth: That is the .xiii. yere, after that the citie was smitten downe: The same daye came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and carped me forth: Euen into the lande of Israel broughte he me in the visions of God: And set me downe vpon a marvelous hie mountayne, wher vpon there was a buildinge (as it had bene of a citie) towarde the north.

Thither he carped me, and beholde, there was a man, whose sympletyude was lyke brasse, whiche had a threde of flaxe in hys hande, and a meete rodde also. He stode in the doore, and sayde vnto me: Harke well with thyne eyes, herken to with thyne eares, and fasten it in thyne hearte, whatsoever I shall shewe thee, for to the entente that they myghte be shewed the, therfore art thou broughte hither. And whatsoever thou seyst, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the outside rounde about the house: The meet rodde that he hadde in his hande, was syxe cubytes longe and a spanne. So he measured the breadeth of the buyldeynge, which was a meet rodde, and the height also a meet rodde. Then came he vnto the East doore, and wente by the steares, and measured the postes of the doore: Whereof euerye one was a meete rodde thynke. Euerye chambze was a meet rodde longe and brode: Betwene þ chambzes were syxe cubytes. The post of the doore within the porche, was one meet rodde. He measured also þ porche of the inner doore, whiche conteyned a met rode. Then measured he the entree of the doore, that conteyned eyght cubytes bites, and his pylers two cubites: and this entre stode inwarde.

The chambers of the doze eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: A lyke brode and longe. The pylers also that stode of bothe the sydes, were of one measure. After thys, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, whiche was tenne cubites, and the heyghte of the dooze. xiii. cubytes. The edge befoze the chambers was one cubyte broade vpon bothe the sydes, & the chābers syre cubytes wyde of either syde. He measured the dooze frome the rydge of one chambze to another, whose wydenesse was. xxv. cubites, and one dooze stode agaynste another. He made pylers also. lx. cubytes hie, rounde aboute the courte dooze. Befoze the inwarde parte vnto the foze entre of the innermer doze, were. l. cubytes. The chambers and their pylers within, rounde aboute vnto the dooze, had syde wyndowes: So had the foze entres also, whose wyndowes wente rounde aboute within. And vpon the pillers there stode date trees.

Then broughte he me in to the foze courte, where as were chambzes and paued woorkes, made in the foze courte rounde aboute. xxx. chambers vpon one paued woorkke. Nowe the paued woorkke was a longe belyde the doozes, and that was the lower paued woorkke. After thys, he measured the breadeth frome the lower dooze, vnto the innermer courte of the outsyde, whiche had an hundred cubites vpon the East and the North parte. And the dooze in the uttermost courte towarde the North, measured he after the length and breadeth: Hys thre chambzes also on either syde, with hys pylers and foze entries: which had euen the measure of the first doze. Hys heyghte was fyfthe cubytes, the breadeth. xxv. cubytes: Hys wyndowes & porches w hys date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze towarde the east: There were. vii. steppes to goe vp vpon, and their porche befoze them. Nowe the dooze of the innermer courte stode streyghte ouer agaynste the doze, that was towarde þ north east. frome one doze to another, he measured hundred cubites.

After that, he broughte me to the southsyde, where there stode a doze toward þ south: whose pylers & porches he measured, these had þ first measure, and in their porches they had wyndowes rounde aboute, lyke the first wyndowes. The heyghte was. l. cubites, the breadeth. xxv. with steppes to goe vp vpon: his porche stode befoze him, with hys pylers & date trees on either syde. And the dooze of the innermer courte stode towarde the south, & he measured from one doze to another an. C. cubites, So he broughte me into the innermer courte, thowow þ doze of the south syde: which he measured, and it had the measure afoze sayde. In lyke maner, hys chambzes, pillers, and foze entries, had euen the foze sayde measure also. And he had with his porches rounde about, wyndowes of fyfthe cubytes heyghte, and. xxv. cubites brode. The porches rounde aboute were. xxv. cubites longe, and. v. cubites brode: And his porche reached vnto the vtermost courte: vpon hys pylers there were date trees, and. viii. steppes to goe vp vpon.

He broughte me also into the inmost court vpon the east syde, and measured the doze, accordinge to the measure afoze sayde. His chambzes, pylers, and porches had euen the same measure, as the firste had: and with hys porches he had wyndowes rounde about. The heyghte was. l. cubites, the breadeth. xxv. cubites: his porches reached vnto þ vtermost courte: his pillers also had date trees on ether side, &. viii. steppes to goe vp vpon. And he broughte me vnto the north dooze, & measured it, whiche also had the foresaid measure. His chābz, pylers and porches had wyndowes rounde aboute: whose heyghte was. l. cubites, and the breadeth. xxv. Hys pylers stode toward the vtermost court, and vpon them bothe were date trees, & viii. steps to goe vp vpon. There stode a chambze also, whose inraunce was at the doze pylers, and there þ burnt offerynge were washed.

In the doze porch, there stode on either syde two tables for þ slaughtinge: To slepe the burnt offerynge, synneofferynge and trespace offerynge there vpon. And on the out syde as men goe forth to the north doze, there stode two tables.

tables. foure tables stode on ether side of the dooze, & is. viii. tables, where by on they slaughted. foure tables were of hewen stone for the burnt offerings, of a cubite & a halfe longe and broade, and one cubite hye: where byon were layde the vesselles and ornamentes, whiche were vled to the burnt & slayne offerynges when they were slaughted. And within there were hokes foure fingers brode, fastened rounde aboute, to hang fleshe byon, and byon the tables was layde the offerynge fleathe. On the oute syde of the innermer dooze were there singers chambers in the inwarde court belyde the North dooze ouer agaynst & South. There stode one also, belyde the east dooze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chamber on the south syde belongeth to the priestes, that kepe the habitacion: And this towarde the North, is the priestes that wayte byon the altier: whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch, that doe seruyce befoze the Lorde in stede of the chyliden of Leui. So he measured the fore court, whiche had in lengthe an hundred cubites, and as muche in breadeth by the foure corners. Nowe & altier stode befoze the house: & he brought me to the foore entyre of the house, and measured the walles by & entyre doze: which were fyue cubites longe on ether syde. The thickenesse also of the dooze on ether syde, was thre cubites. The length of the porche was. xx. cubytes, & breadeth. xi. cubites, and byon steppes went men by to it: By the walles also were pylles, on ether syde one.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The disposicion and deuple of buyldynge agayne the temple, and of the other thynges therto belonnginge.

After this he brought me to the temple, & measured & postes: whiche were of both & sides. vi. cubites thicke, accordige to the wydenesse of the tabernable. The breadeth of the doze was ten cubytes and the walles of the doze on ether side fyue cubytes. He measured the lengthe therof, whiche conteyned. xl. cubites, and the breath. xx. Then went he in, and measured the dooze postes, which were two cubytes thicke: But the dooze it selfe was fyue cubites, and the brea-deth of the dooze was. vii. cubytes. He measured the length & breadeth therof, whiche were euerye one. xx. cubites, befoze the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holpest of al. He measured also the wal of the house, whiche was fyue cubites. The chambers that stode rounde about & house, were euerye one foure cubytes wide, and one stode hard byon another, whetof there were. xxxiii. And there stode poostes benethe by the walles rounde about the house, to beare them by: But in the wall of the house they were not fastened: The syde chambers were the hyer the wyder, & had steppes thowwe them rounde about the house. Thus was it wydet aboue, that frome the lowest men myght go to the hpest & mydde chambers. I sawe also that the house was very hie rounde about. The foundation of the syde chambers was a meet rod (that is fyue cubites) broade. The thychkenesse of the syde wall withoute, conteyned fyue cubytes, and so byd the out wall of the chambers in the house.

Betwene the chambers, was the wydenes. xx. cubites rounde about the house. The chamber doozes stode ouer agaynst the out wall, the one dooze was towarde the North, the other towarde the South: And & thychenes of the out wall was. v. cubytes rounde aboute. Nowe the buyldynge that was separated toward & west, was. lxx. cubites wide: & wal of & buylding was. v. cubytes thicke rounde aboute, and & length foure scoze cubytes and ten. So he measured the house whiche was an. C. cubites longe, and the separated buyldynge with the wall were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenes befoze the house and of it that was separated towarde the East, was an. C. cubites.

And he measured the length of the buyldynge befoze and behinde with the chambers byon both the sydes: And it conteyned an. C. cubites. The innermer temple, the porche of the fore court, the syde postes, these the had side wyndowes, and pylles rounde aboute ouer agaynst the postes, from & grounde by to the wyndowes: The wyndowes them selues were spled ouer wth bo-deg: And thus was it aboute the dooze, into the inmoste house, and withoute also: Yea, the whole wall on euerye syde bothe within & without was syled ouer with great bozdes. There were Cherubyns and Date trees made also, so that one Date tree stode euery betwixte two Cherubyns: One Cherub had two faces, the face of a man lokynge asyde toward the date tree, and a Lyons face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde aboute in all the house: Yea, the Cherubyns & date trees were made from the grounde vp aboute the doze, & so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

Ezech. 41.

The bypothes of the temple were foure squared, and the fashyon of the Sanctuarye was * euen as it appeared vnto me afore in the vision. * The table was of wod, thye cubytes hye and two cubites longe: hys corners, the length and the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: Thys is the table, that shal stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holpest of all had either of them two doozes and euerye doze had two lytle wyckettes which were folden in one vpon another, on euerye syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple there were made Cherubyns and date trees, like as vpon the walles: & a great thycke balcke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. Vpon bothe the sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, hauynge beames & balkes, lyke as the house had.

The .xlii. Chapter.

Of the chambers of the temple for th: priestes, and the holpe thynges.

Shen carped he me oute in to the fore courtte toward the North, and broughte me into the chamber & stode ouer against the backebuldyng Northwarde, whiche had the lengthe of an hundred cubytes whose doze turned toward & north. The widenes contepned .l. cubites: ouer agaynst the .xx. cubites of the innermer courtte, and agaynst the paued worke that was in the fore court. Besyde all these thye, there stode pylers, one ouer agaynst another: And before this chāber there was a walchynge place of ten cubytes wide, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their dozes toward the north. Thus the byest chambers were alway narrower then the lowest and the myddlemoste of the buyldynge: for they bare chamber vpon chamber, and stode thye together one vpon another not hauynge pylers lyke the fore courtte: there fore were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest, to taken frome the grounde vpwarde.

The wall withoute that stode by the chambers toward the vttemost court vpon the fore side of the chambers, was fiftie cubites longe: for the length of & vttemost chābers in & fore court, was fiftie cubites also: But the length thereof before the temple was an hundred cubites. These chambers had vnder the an inraunce of the East syde, wher by a man might go into them out of the fore courtte, thozowe the thycke wall of the fore courtte toward the East, ryght ouer against the separated buyldinge. Before the same buyldynge vpon thys syde, there were chambers also which had a way vnto them, like as & chābers on & north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

Their inraunce, fashon and dozes were also of the same maner. Yea, euen lyke as the other chamber dozes were, so were those also of the Southe syde. And before the way toward the singers steppes on the East side, there stode a doze to go in at. Then said he vnto me: The chambers toward the north & the southe whiche stande before the backebuldyng: Those be holpe habitacions, wherin the priestes that do seruyce before the Lorde, muste eate the most holpe offerynge: And there must they lay the most holy offerynge: meate offerynge, sinne offerynge and trespass offerynge, for it is an holy place. whē the priestes come therin, they shal not out into & fore court: but (seyng they be holpe) they shal leaue & clothes of their ministracion, & put on other garments, when they haue any thyng to do wpyth the people.

Now when he had measured al the innermer house, he brought me forth thozow the East porche, and measured the same rounde aboute. He measuto the east syde with the meetrodde, whiche rounde aboute conteyned fyue C. meetrodde. And the northside measured he, whiche conteyned rounde aboute euen so muche. The other two sydes also towarde the south and the west (whiche he measured) conteyned ether of them. v. C. meetrodde. So he measured al the. liii. sydes where there went a wall rounde aboute. v. C. meetrodde longe, and as brode also which separated the holy from the unholy.

The. xlii. Chapter.

He seeth the glory of God goyng into the tēple, from whence it had before departed. He mencyneth the Idolatry of the chyldren of Israel, for which they were consumed & brought to nought. He is commaunded to call theym agayne to repentance.

S He brought me to þe doze, that turneth towarde þe east. Beholde, then came the glory of the God of Israel from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a great noise of waters, and þe earth was lychtēd with his glory. His syghte to lōke vpon, was lyke the first, that I saw, when I went in, what tyme as the cytē should haue bene destroyed, * and lyke the vision that I saw by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lord came in to the house thozow the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp, and broughte me into the pinnermer courte: and beholde, the house was full of the gloze of the Lord.

I heard one speakyng vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that said vnto me: O thou sonne of mā, * this towne is my scate, and the place of my footestepes: where as I wll dwell amonge the chyldren of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shall no moze despyle my holpe name: nether they, nor their kynges, thozowe their whozedome, thozowe their hye places, and thozowe the dead bodies of their kynges: which haue builded their thresholdes in maner harde vpon my thresholdes, and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a bare wal betwyxte me and them.

Thus haue they despyled my holpe name with their abhomyacions, that they haue committed. Wherefore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shall put away their whozedome and the deed bodies of their kynges out of my syght, that I may dwell among them for euermore. * Therefore (O thou sonne of man) shewe thou the household of Israel a temple, that they may be ashamed of their wyckednesse, and measure theym selues an example therat.

And when they be ashamed of all theyr woorkes, then shewe theym the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the comynge in, the goynge oute, all the maner and descripcyon thereof, yea, all the vles and ordynauces of it, þe they maye kepe and fulfyll all the fashyons and customes therof.

This is the descripcyon of þe house: Aboue vpon the mount round about al the corners, it shall be the holiest of al. Beholde, that is the descripcyon and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the aulter (after the true cubite: which is a spanne longer then another cubite) his botome in the middelt was a cubyte long and wyde, and the ledge that went round about it, was a spāne brode. This is the hepyht of the aulter: from the ground to the lower stepes, the length is two cubytes, and the bredth one cubite: and from the lower stepes to þe higher are foure cubytes, and the bredth but one cubyte.

* The aulter was four cubites hie, and from þe aulter vward stode foure hornes, and it was. xii. cubytes long & xii. cubytes brode, vpon the foure corners: the courtynge of the aulter was xlii. cubytes longe and brode vpon the four corners, and the ledge that wente rounde aboute, had halfe a cubite: and the botome thereof rounde aboute one cubyte: hys stepes stode towarde the East. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus saith the Lord God: these are the ordynauces and lawes of the aulter, & in the day whē it is made to offre burnt offrynges, and to sprenckle bloud therupon. To the prestes, to the Leuites that be of the sede of * Sadoch, and treade before me to me seruice, sayeth the LORD GOD: vnto these geue thou a ponge bullocke for a synofferyng: and take the bloud of hym and spynckle his foure hornes withal, and the foure corners of the aulter couering, with the ledge that goeth rounde aboute: here with shalt thou cleanse it, & reconple it. * Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the synofferyng, & burne hym in a seuerall place wythoute the Sanctuary.

The nexte daye, take a goatbuck wythout blemish for a synofferyng, to reconple the aulter withal: lyke as it was reconciled with the bullocke. Now when thou haste made it cleane, then offre a yong bullock without blemish, and a ram oute of the flocke without blemish also: Offre the ym before the Lorde, and let the priest cast salt therupon, and geue them so vnto the Lorde for a burnt offerynge. Seuen dayes shalt thou bynge, euerye daye a goatbuck. A yong bullocke and a ramme of the flock (both without blemish) shall they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconple and cleanse the aulter, & offre by on it. When these dayes are expired, the ypon the viii. day and so forth, the priestes shall offre their burnt offerynges and health offerynges vpon the aulter: so will I be mercyfull vnto you, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xliiii. Chapter.

Be shewed what doze of the temple is shut. Be is commaunded to vphrayde & people with their offence. The vncircumcised in hert, & in the flesh. Who are to be admitted to the seruice of temple, & who to be refused. Be shewed what priestes he would haue admitted into the holy place, and also their office.

After this, he broughte me agayne to the outward doze of the Sanctuary on the East syde, and that was shut. The sayd the Lorde vnto me: This doze shall be styll shut, and not opened for any man to go thowhe it, but onely for the LORDE GOD of Israel: yea, he shall go thowhe it, els shall it be styll. The prince himselfe shall come thowhe it, that he maye eate bread before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, & there shall he go oute agayne. Then brought he me to the doze, vpon the Northsyde of the house. And as I looked about me, beholde, the glory of the LORDE filled the house: and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lorde spake vnto me: Thou sonne of man, fasten this to thyne hert, beholde, and take diligent hede to al that I wil say vnto the, concernyng all the ordynaunces of the Lorde and all his lawes: pondre wel with thyne hert the commynge in of the house, & the goyng forth of the Sanctuary: and tell that obstinate household of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: O house of Israel, ye haue nowe done ynoughe with all youre abhomyncys, saynge that ye haue broughte in to my Sanctuary straungers, haupnge vncircumcised hertes and flesh, where thowhe my Sanctuary is defiled, whye ye offre me bread, fat, and bloude.

Thus with all youre abhomyncys, ye haue broken my couenaunt, and not kepte the holpe ordynaunces of my Sanctuary: but set keepers of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne mynde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Of al the straungers that dwell among the chyldren of Israel, no straunger (whose hert and flesh is not circumcised) shall come within my Sanctuary: No, nor the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue dysceaued the people of Israel with all errours, goyng after their ydoles: therefore shall they beare their owne wickednesse.

Should they be set and ordened to minister vnder the dozes of the house of my Sanctuary? And to do seruice in the house: to slaye burnt offerynges and sacrifices for the people: to stand before the, & to serue them: sayng the seruice that they do them, is before their ydoles, and cause the house of Israel to stonble thowhe the wyckednes: * for which cause I haue pluckt out mine hande ouer them (sayeth the Lorde) so that now they must beare their own iniquite, and not to come nye me, to serue me with their priesthode, in my Sanctuary, & most holpest of all: & they maye beare their own shame and abhomyncys, which they haue done. Should I vse them to be porters of the house, & to all the seruice that is done therein? But the priestes the Leuites the sonnes of * Sadoch, that kepte the holpe ordynaunces of my Sanctuary, when the the chyldren of Iſraell were gone from me: ſhall come to me, to do me ſeruyce, to ſtande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloud, ſayeth the LORD GOD.

E They ſhall go into my Sanctuary, and treade before my table, to do me ſeruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordinaunces. Now when they go in at the doores of the pynnermet court: they ſhal put on linnen clothes, ſo that no wolle come vpon them: while they do ſeruyce vnder the doores of the pynnermet court, and within. They ſhall haue ſayre linnen bonettes vpon their heades, and linnen breeches vpon theyr loynes, whiche in their labour they ſhall not put aboute them: And when they go forth to the people into the outward court, they ſhal put off the clothes, wherein they haue mynſtred, and lay them in the habytation of the Sanctuary, and put on other apparel, leſt they vnhallow the people with their clothes.

f * They ſhal not haue theyr heades, nor noz: ſhe the buſhe of their heere, but rounde their heades onely. All the prieſtes that go into the pynmoſt court, ſhall dyncke no wyne. * They ſhal marry no wydow, nether one that is put fro her huſband: but a mayde of the ſede of the houſe of Iſraell, or a wydow, that hath had a prieſt before.

71. * They ſhall ſhewe my people the difference betwene the holy and vnholye, betwixte the cleane and vncleane. If any diſcorde ariſe, they ſhal diſcerne it, and geue ſentence after my iudgements.

72. * My ſolemne feaſtes, my lawes and ordynaunces ſhall they kepe, and halow my Sabbathes. * They ſhall come at no deade perſon, to deſyle them ſelues (excepte it be father or mother, ſonne or daughter, brother or ſiſter that hath had yet no huſbande) in ſuch they may be deſyled.

And when he is clenſed, there ſhall be rekened vnto him. vii. dayes: and yf he go into the Sanctuary agayne to do ſeruyce, he ſhall bring a ſynofferynge ſayeth the LORD GOD. * They ſhall haue an heritage, yea, I my ſelfe wil be their heritage: els ſhall ye geue them no poſſeſſion in Iſraell, for I am their poſſeſſion. The meatofferynge, ſynof-ſerynge and treſpaceofferyng ſhall they eate, and euery dedycate thyng in Iſrael, ſhalbe theirs. The fyrſtlynges of all the fyrſt frutes, and all fre wyl offerynges ſhalbe the prieſtes.

Ye ſhall geue vnto the prieſtes alſo the fyrſtlynges of your dowe, that God maye proſpere the reſydue. * But no deade caryon ſhall the prieſt eate, nor ſuche as is deuoured of wylde beaſtes, foules or catell.

The .xlv. Chapter.

Oute of all the lande of promes are there ſeparate iiii. porcyons, of which the fyrſt is geuen to the prieſtes and to the temple, the ſeconde to the Leuytes, the thyrde to the cytie, the fourth to the prince. An exhortacyon to the heades of Iſraell. Of iuſt weighres and meaſures. Of fyrſt frutes.

The .xlii. Chapter.

The Sacrifices of the Sabbath & of the new moones. Whosome which the doores they make go in, or come out of the temple &c.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: the doore of the pinnermet court, that is toward the East, shall be shut the .vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabbath and in the daye of the newe Moone, it shall be opened. The shall the prince come vnder the doore porch, and stande styll without by the doore cheke. So the priestes shall offre vpon his burnt and healthofferynges. And he shall worshyp at the doore poste, and go his waye forth agayne: but the doore shall no more be shut tyl the eueryng.

On the same manner shall the people of the lande also do their worshipp before the Lord, without this doore vpon the Sabbathes and newe Moones. This is now the burntofferyng, that the prince shall byngge vnto the Lord vpon the Sabbath: syx lambes without blemyshe, and a ram without blemyshe, and an Ephah for a meatofferyng, with the ram. As for the lambes, he may geue as many meatofferynges to them, as he wyll, and an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. In the day of the newe moneth, it shall be a ponge bullocke wout blemish, syre lambes & a ram also without blemish. With the bullocke he shal geue an Ephah, and with a ram an Ephah also for a meatofferyng: but to the lambes, what he may come by: And euer an Hin of oyle to an Ephah. Whe the prynce cometh, he shall go vnder the doze porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lorde in the hye solempne feast, as manye as come in by the north doze, to do worshyp, shal go out agayne at the south doze. And they that come in at the south doze, shal go forth agayne at the north doze.

There shall none go ouer at the dooze where he came in, but shall go forth ryghte ouer on the other syde, and the prynces shall go in and out amonge them.

Upon the solempne and hye feast dayes, this shalbe the meatofferyng: An Epha to a bullock and an Epha to a ram, and to the lambes: as manye as he wyl, but euer an Hin of oyle to an E-pha. Nowe when the prynce byngeth a burnt offeryng or an health offeryng wth a frewyl vnto the LORDE, the East dooze shall be opened vnto hym, that he maye do wth hys burnt and health offerynges, as he doeth vpon the Sabboth, and when he goeth forth, the dooze shall be shutte after hym agayne.
He shall daylye bynge vnto the Lorde a lambe of a yere olde wthoute blemmythe for a burnt offeryng: this shal he do euer mozynyng. And for a meat offering he shall geue the syxt part of an Epha, and the thyrde part of an Hin of oyle (to myngle with the cakes) euer ye mournynge. Yea, thys shall be a daylye meatofferyng vnto the Lord, for an euerlastyng ordynasce: and thus shal p lambe be the meatofferyng and oyle be geuen euer ye mozynyng, for a daylye burnt offeryng.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: If the prynce geue a gyst vnto any of hys sonnes, then shall it be hys sonnes heritage perpetual, that he may posseesse it. But if he wyl geue one of hys struantes some of his herptage, it shal be hys to the * free yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto p prynce: f for his heritage shalbe his sonnes only. * The prynce shall take none of p peoples enheritaunce, nor put theym from their possession; but to his owne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that in p people be not scatred abrode, but that eue-ry man may haue his owne.

And he brought me thowde the cir-traunce at the syde of the doze to p ha-bitacion of the Sanctuary, that belongeth to the p prestes, and stode toward the north, & beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the ptestes shall dight the trespase and synof-ferynges, and bake the meatofferynges:
that they nede not beare theym into the outwarde courte, and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtemost court, round about al the.iiii. corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the fore courte, there was yet a lytle courte. Yea, in all the four corners of the court, there was made a lytle court of fourty cubytes long, and thyrty cu-bites brode: these four lytle courttes were of one lyke measure, and there wēt a wygge wall rounde aboute theym all four, vnder the which there were hear-thes made rounde aboute. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the kechin, where the mynisters of the house shall dyght the dayne offerynges of the people.

ferently vnto one as vnto another: * of the whiche land I swore vnto your fathers, that it shoulde fall to your enhe-

This is the border of the lande bp-as men go to Sadada: namely Hemath, Berotha, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus & Hemath vnto Hazar

The east syde shall ye measure from Haueran and Damascus, from Gilead and the lande of Israel by Iordane & so forth, from the sea coast, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east part.

The southsyde is, fro Thamar forth to the * waters of styfe vnto Cades, the ryuer, to the mayne sea: and that is the south part.

The west part: namely the great sea

M. meetroddes longe and broade (lyke as another porcyon from the east syde vnto the west) wherein the Sanctuarie shall stande.

* As for the porcyon, that ye shall separate out for the Lorde, it shall be .xxv. M. long. and ten. M. brode. which separated holy porcyon shall belonge vnto these: namely to the priestes, toward the north. .xxv. M. and toward the west ten thousande brode, toward the east .x. M. brode also, and toward the south .xxv. M. longe, wherein the Sanctuarie of the Lorde shall stande.

¶ Yea, thys same place shall be the priestes, that are of the children of * Sadoch, and haue kepte my holy ordynaunce: which went not astraye in the erreure of the childre of Israel, lyke as the Leuites are gone astraye (and this separated pece that they haue of the lande shall be the most holy, harde vpon the borders of the Leuites. And next vnto the priestes, shall the Leuites haue .xxv. M. longe, and ten. M. brode. This shall be on euerye syde .xxv. M. long, and .x. M. brode. Of this porcyon they shall sell nothyng, nor make any permutacyon therof, lest the chiefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lorde.

The other .v. M. after the bredth of lyeth by the .xxv. M. shall be commensurate: it shall belong to the cytye and to the suburbs for habytacyons, and the cytye shall stande in the myddest therof. Let this be the measure: toward the north part. .v. C. and .iiii. M. toward the south part. .v. C. and .iiii. M. toward the east parte. .v. C. and .iiii. M. toward the west part. .v. C. and .iiii. M.

The suburbs harde vpon the citie, shall haue toward the north .L. and .ii. C. toward the south .L. and two C. toward the east. .L. and .ii. C. toward the west also. .L. and two. C. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth hard vpon the separated holy ground: namely ten thousande toward the east, and ten thousande toward the west, nexte vnto the holy porcyon: it is the increase therof shall serue for theyr meate, that labour in the cytye. They that labour for the welth of the cytye shall mainteyne this also, out of what trybe soeuer they be in Israel.

All that is separated of the .xxv. M. longe and .xxv. M. brode on the fourte partes, that shall ye put asyde for the separated porcyon of the sanctuarie, and for the possession of the cytye. The residue vpon both the sydes of the Sanctuarie and possession of the cytye, * shall belonge to the prynces, before the place of the .xxv. M. vnto the east ende, and before the place of the .xxv. M. thousande westwarde, vnto the borders of the cytye: this shall be the prynces porcyon. This shall be the holy place, and the house of the Sanctuarie shall stande in the myddest. Moreover from the Leuites and the cyties possession, that lyeth in the myddest of the prynces part: loke what remaineth betwixte the border of Iuda and the border of Ben Iamin, it shall be the prynces.

¶ Nowe of the other trybes.

From the east parte vnto the west, shall Ben Iamin haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Ben Iamin from the east syde vnto the west, shall Symeon haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Symeon from the east part vnto the west, shall Izakar haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Izakar from the east syde vnto the west, shall Sabulon haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Sabulon from the east parte vnto the west, shall Gad haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Gad southward, the coastes shall reach from Chamar forth vnto the waters of strife to Cades, and to the floude, euen vnto the mayne sea.

This is the lande with his porcyons, which ye shall distribute vnto the tribes of Israel, sayeth the Lord God. Thus wyde shall the cytye reach: vpon the north parte. .v. C. and .iiii. M. measures. The portes of the citie, shall haue the names of the tribes of Israel. Three portes of the north syde: one Ruben, another Iuda, the thyrde Leui.

beseged it: and the Lord deliuered Jehoachim the kyng of Iuda into his hande, with certayne orname-tes of his house of God, whiche he caried away vnto the lande of Sennar, to the house of his god, and there he brought the into his gods treasury. And the kyng spake vnto Asphanaz the chiefe chāber-worse lykynge then the other springaldes of your age, and so ye shall make me lose my head vnto the kyng.

Then Daniel answered Balthasar, whom the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael and Azarias, & sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruautes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to dryncke:
then loke vpon our faces, and theys eate of the kynges meate. And as thou seest, so deale with thy seruautes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them. x. daies. And after the ten dayes, their faces were better lykynge and fatter, then all the yonge springaldes, which ate of the kynges meate.

Thus Balthasar toke awaye their meate and wyne, and gaue the potage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure springaldes connyng and lernynge in all scripture and wysdome: but vnto Daniel speciallpe, he gaue vnderstandyng of all visions and dreames.

Nowe when the time was expyryd, that the kyng had appoynted to drynke in these yonge springaldes vnto hym: the chiefe chamberlayne brought them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kyng communed with them. But amonge theym all were founde none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias.
Therefore stode they before the kyng, whiche in all wysdome and matters of vnderstandynge, that he enquired of them, found them ten tymes better, the all the soothsayers and charmers, that were in all hys realme. And Daniel a hode styll, vnto the fyrste yere of king Cyrus.

¶ The. ii. Chapter.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor. He calleth vnto him soothsayers, and requireth of them both the dreame and the interpretacion thereof. They aunswere that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniell requireth tyme to solute the question. The Lorde openeth the mysterie vnto Daniel. Daniel is broughte vnto the kynge, and sheweth him his dreame and the interpretacion thereof. Of the euerlastyng kyngdome of Christe. The stone Christe. Danpell is exalted and promoted of the kynge.

In the seconde yere of the reigne of Nabuchodonosor, hadde Nabuchodonosor a dreame, where thow his spirite was vexed, and hys slepe brake frome him. Then the kynge commaunded to cal together al the soothsayers, charmers, witches and Caldees, for to shewe the kynge hys dreame. So they came, and stod before the kyng. And the kyng sayde vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therewith, that I haue clene forgotten, what I dreamed. vpon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syrians speache: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Shew thy seruantes the dreame, and we shall shewe the, what it meaneth. The kyng gaue the Caldees theyr aunswere, and sayde: It is gone frome me: yf ye wyll not make me vnderstande the dreame with the interpretacion thereof, ye shall dye, and poure houses shalbe pyyled. But if ye tell me the dreame and the meanyng thereof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes and great honoure: on lyf, shew me the dreame and the signyfycacion of it. They answered agayne, and sayde: the kynge must shew his seruantes the dreame, and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceaue of a truth, that ye do but prolong the time: for so muche as ye se, that the thyng is gone frome me. Therfore yf ye wyll not tell me the dreame, ye shall al haue one iudgemente. But ye saye and dyssemble with vayne wordes, whiche ye speake before me, to put of the tyme. Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shall I know, yf ye canne shewe me, what it meaneth. vpon this, the Caldees gaue aunswere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth, that can tel the thing, which the kynge speaketh of: yea, there is nether kynge, prince nor Lord, that euer asked such thinges at a soothsayer, charmer or Caldeer: for it is a verpe harde matter that the kynge requyrez. Nether is there any, that can certyfy the kynge thereof, excepte the goddes: whose dwelling is not among the creatures.

For the whiche cause the kynge was wrothe with greate indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon: and the proclamation wente forth, that the wyse men shoulde be slayne. They sought also to slay Daniell with his companions. Then Daniell enquired Artioch the kynges steward, of the iudgemente and sentence, & was gone forth the alredeye to kyl such as were wise at Babilon. He answered and sayde vnto Artioch beinge then the kynges debite: why hath the kynge proclaimed so cruell a sentence? So Artioch tolde Danpell the matter. vpon this, went Daniel by, and despyed the king, that he myghte haue leysoure, to shewe the kynge the interpretacion: and then came he home agayne and shewed the thing vnto Ananias, Misael and Azarias as his companions: that they shoulde beseeche the God of heauen for grace in this secrete, that Daniel & his felowes with other suche as were wise in Babilon, perished not. Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vision by nyghte. And Daniel praysed the God of heauen. Daniel also cryed loude, and sayde: O that the name of God myghte be praised for euer & euer, for wisdom and strengthe are his owne: he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges, he setteth vp kynges: he geueth wisdom vnto the wyse, and vnderstandyng to those that vnderstande, he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thinge that lyeth in darcknesse, & for the lyght dwelleth with him. I thanke the, and praysethee (O thou God of my fathers) that thou haste lent me wysdome and strengthe, and haste shewed me the thyng, that we despyed of the, for thou hast opened the kynges matter vnto me.

Upon this wente Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kinge had ordeyned to destroye the wise at Babilon: he went vnto him, and sayde: destroye not suche as are wise in Babilon, but bringe me in vnto the kyng, and I shall shewe the kyng the interpretacion. Then Arioch brought Daniel in to the kyng in all the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amonge the prisoners of Iuda, that shall shewe the kyng the interpretacion. Then answered the kyng, and sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he, that canst shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, and the interpretacion therof? Daniel answered the kyng to his face, and sayd: As for this secreete, for the whiche the kyng maketh inquisition: it is nether the wise, the sozcerer, the charmer nor the deuell conuiter, that can certifie the kinge of it: * Onely God in heauen can open secrettes, and he it is, that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

The dreame, and that which thou hast sene in thynne heade vpon thy bed, is this: O kyng, thou dydest caste in thy mynde, what shoulde come hereafter: So he that is the opener of mysteryes, telleth thee, what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me, for any wisdom that I haue, more then anye other luyng: but onely that I myghte shewe the kyng the interpretacion, and that he myghte knowe the thoughtes of his owne hearte. Thou kyng sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a great Image, whose fygure was maruelous greate, and his visage grymine. The Image head was of fine golde, his brest and armes of siluer, his body and loynes wer of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron, and parte of earthe.

This thou sawest, till the tyme that (without anye handes) there was hewen of a stone whiche smote the Image vpon the fete, that were bothe of yron and earth, and brake them to poulder: then was the yron the earthe, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the somer flookes, that they can no moze be founde. But the stone that smote the Image, became a great mountayne, which fulfilleth the whole earthe: This is the dreame. And now weyl we shewe before the kyng, what it meaneth.

* O kyng, thou arte a kyng of kynges: for the God of heauen hath geuen the a kyngdome, ryches, strengthe and maiestie: and hath deliuered thee all thynges, that are amonge the chyldren of men: the bestes of the felde, and the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominyon ouer them all. Thou art that golden head. After that there shall arise another kyngdome, which shall be lesse then thynne. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, and haue dominacion in all landes. The fourthe kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron broseth and breaketh all thynges: Yea, euē as yron beateth euery thinge doune so shall it beate doune and destroy.

Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earthe and parte of yron: that is a deuoyd kyngdome, which neuertheles shall haue some of the yron grounde myxt with it, for so muche as thou hast sene the yron myxt with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, signifyeth: that it shall be a kyngdome partly strong and partly weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxt with claye: they shall myngle them selues with the sebe of symple people, and yet not contynue one with another, lyke as yron wyl not be souldered with a potsherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heauen sette vp an euertlasting kyngdome which shall not perishe, and his kyngdome shall not bee geuen ouer to another people: yea, the same shall breake & destroy all these kyngdomes but it shall endure for euer.

And where as thou sawest, that without anye handes there was cut oute of the mounte a stone, whiche brake the yron, the copper, the earthe, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kyng, what wyl come after this. This is a true dreame dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure.

Then the kynge Rabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him selfe vnto Danel, and commaunded that they shoulde offre meate offryn-ges and swete odoures vnto hym. The kynge answered Danel, and sayde: yea, of a trueth poure God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secrettes: seyng thou canste discouer this mysterpe. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym manye and greate giftes.

* He made him ruler of all the coun-trees of Babylon, and lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated the kynge for Sydrach, Misach and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the offycers in the lande of Babylon: But Daniell hymselfe remayned styl in the courte by the kynge.

C The. iiii. Chapter.

The kynge setteth vp a golden Image, which he commaunded to be worshipped. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they dispyed the kynges commaundement. They are broughte vnto the kynge & commaunded to worshype the Image. They refuse to do it and are put into a burnynge ouen. By helpe in God they are deliuered from the fyre. Rabuchodonosor feleth the power of God after the syghte of the myracle.

Rabuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden Image to be made, which was .lx. cubytes hight, and .lx. cubytes thicke.

This he made to be set vp in the feld of Dura in the land of Babylon and sent oute to gather together the dukes, lor-des and nobles, the iudges and offycers the debytes and shreues, with all the rulers of the lande: that they myght come to the dedicatyon of the Image whiche Rabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.
So the dukes, lordes and nobles, the iudges and offycers, debytes and shry-ues with all the rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycatynge of the Image, that Rabuchodonosor the kynge had sette vp.

Nowe when they stode before the Image, whiche Rabuchodonosor set vp:
the bedel cried oute with al hys mighte,

O ye people, kynnedes and tungenes, to you bee it sayde: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, whiche shal bee blowen, wth the harpes, shawmes, psal-tertes, Symphonies and all maner of Musick: ye fall downe and worshipe the golden Image, that Rabuchodonosor the king hath set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and boweth hym selfe, shal euen the same houre, be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when all the folcke herde the noyse of the trompet-tes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, Symphonies & al kinde of Melody: then all the people, kynnedes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden Image, that Rabuchodonosor the kinge had set vp.

Nowe were there certayne menne of the Caldces, that wente euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto the kynge Rabuchodonosor: O king, God saue thy life for ever. Thou beyng king hast geuen a commaundement, that all men when they heare noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and al the other melodies:
shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golden Image: who so the fel not downe and worshipped not, that he shoulde bee caste into an hote burnyng ouen. Nowe are there certayne Jewes* whome thou hast set ouer the offices of the lande of Babylon: name-lye, Sydrach, Misach and Abednago.
These men (O kynge) regarde not thy comaundement, yea, they wil not serue thy goddes, nor bowe them selues to the golden Image, that thou hast set vp.

Then Rabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded, & Sydrach, Misach & Abednago shoulde be brought vnto hym. So these menne were broughte before the kynge. Then Rabuchodonosor spake vnto them, and sayde: what? O Sydrach Misach and Abednago, wyl not ye serue my God:
des: nor bowe poure selues to the golden Image, that I haue set vp: well, be redye hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the har-pes, shawmes, psalteries, Symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshype the Image which

which I haue made. But yf ye worſhipp it not, ye ſhall be caſte immediatlye in to an hote burninge ouen. Let ſe, what God is there, that may deliuer you out of my handes. Sydrach, Miſach and Abednago aunſwered the kynge, and ſayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we oughte not to conſent vnto the in this matter, for why: our God whome we ſerue, *is able to kepe vs from the hote burninge ouen (O kinge) and can right well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And thoughe he wyl not, yet ſhalte thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyl not ſerue thy gods, nor do reuerence to þy Image, which thou haſte ſet vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, ſo that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sydrach, Miſach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen ſhould be made ſeuene tymes, hotter, then it was wont to be: and ſpake vnto the ſtrongest worſhipers that were in his hoſte for to binde Sydrach, Miſach and Abednago, and to caſte them in to the hote burnynge ouen.

So theſe men were bounde in their coſtes, boſen, ſhues, wyth their other garments, and caſte into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynge's commaundement was ſo ſtraye, and the ouen was excedinge hote. As for the men that put in Sydrach, Miſach and Abednago, the flame of the fyre deſtroyed them. And theſe thre men Sydrach, Miſach and Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beinge faſte bounde. Then Nabuchodonosor, the kynge marueled, and ſtoode vp in all haſte: he ſpake vnto hys counsell and ſayde: vyd not ye caſte theſe thre men bounde into þy fyre? They aunſwered, and ſayde vnto the kynge: Yea, O kinge. He aunſwered and ſayde: lo for all that, yet do I ſe fourte men goynge lowſe in the myddelt of the fyre, and nothyng corrupte: and the fourth is lyke an angell to loke vpon. Upon thys wente Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen: he ſpake alſo, and ſayde: O Sydrach, Miſach and Abednago, ye ſeruauntes of the hye God: go forth, and come hither. And ſo Sydrach, Miſach, and Abednago wente out of the fyre. Then the dukes lordes and nobles, and the kynge's counsell came together to ſe theſe men, vpon whome the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodies: In ſo much that the very hearte of their heade was not burnt, and their clothes vchaunged: Yea, there was no ſmell of fyre felt vpon them.

Then ſpake Nabuchodonosor, and ſayde: Bleſſed bee the God of Sydrach, Miſach and Abednago: whiche hath ſente hys aungell, and defended his ſeruauntes, that put theyr truſte in hym: that haue altered the kynge's commaundemente: and reuered theyr bodies ther vpon: rather then they woulde ſerue or worſhypp anye other God, excepte theyr owne God only. Therfore I wyl and commaunde, that all people, kynredes and tungen, whiche ſpeake anye blaſphemy agaynſte the God of Sydrach, Miſach, and Abednago, ſhall die, and theyr houſes ſhall be wyſted: Becauſe ther *is no God that may ſaue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sydrach, Miſach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

The .liii. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor dreameth againe. Daniell interpreteth it Nabuchodonosor is put out of his realme and eateth wyrd beaſtes. He conſidereth the power of God, and is reſtored into his kingdom.

Nabuchodonosor kynge vnto I all people, kyndredes and tungen that dwell vpon the whole earth: peace be multiplyed among you. I thought it good to ſhewe the tokens and maruelous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. *O howe greates are his tokens, and howe myghtye are hys wonders. *Hys kyngdome is an euerlaſtinge kyngdome, and his power laſteth for euer and euer.

I Nabuchodonosor beinge at reſt in myne houſe, and ſlorypynge in my palace, ſawe a dreame, whiche made me aſtraied: and the thoughtes that I hadde vpon my bed, with the byſions of mine heade, troubled me. *Then ſent I oute a commyſſyon, that all they which were of wyſedome at Babylon ſhoulde be broughte before me, to tell me the interpretation of the dreame. So there came the ſothſayers, charmers Caldees and conſurers of deuils to whome I tolde the the dreame, but what it betokened, they coude not shewe me: tyl at the last, ther came one Daniel (otherwise called Balthasar, accordynge to the name of my God) whiche hath the spirite of the holy goddes, in him: to whome I tolde the dreame, sayinge: O Balthasar, p prince of Southesayers: for so muche as I knowe that thou haste the spirite of the holy Gods & no secret is hyd from the: tell me therfore, what the vylion of my dreame (that I haue sene) may signifye. I sawe a vylion in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre vpon the ground, which was very hye, greate and myghtye: the height reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to al the endes of the earth: his leaues wer sayre, he had very muche frute, so that euerie manne hadde pnowge to eate therein.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heade a vylion vpon my bedde: and beholde, a watchet came downe from heauen, & cryed myghtely, sayinge. Hewe downe the tre, bryake of his bzaunches, make of his leaues, & scatere his fruite abroad: that all the beastes maye gette them awayne frome vnder him, and the foules fro his bzaunches. Neuertheles leaue the grounde of his roote styll in the earth, and bynde hym vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. Wyth the dew of heauen shal he be wet, and he shal haue his parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

That mans hearte of his shalbe taken from him, and a beastes hearte shal be geuen him, tyl seuen yeares be come and gone vpon hym. This erande of the watchet, is a comaundement grounded and soughte oute in the counsell of him, that is most holpe: to learne menne for to vnderstande, that the hyest hath the power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and geueth them, to whome it lyketh hym, and bringeth the very oute castes of me ouer them. Thys is the dreame, that I kynge Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthasar, tell thou me, what it signifieth: for so muche as al the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canste do it, for the spirite of the holpe Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peace by the space of an houre and his thoughtes troubled hym. So the kynge spake, and sayde: O Balthasar, let nether the dreame nor the interpretacion therof feare the. Balthasar answered, sayinge: O my lord, this dreame happen to thyne enemyes, and the interpretacion to thyne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so greate and myghtye, whose heygthe reached vnto the heauen, and hys breadthe into all the worlde: whose leaues were sayre, and the frute muche: vnder the whiche the beastes of the felde had theyr habytacion, and vpon whose bzaunches the foules of the ayre byd lyt.

Euen thou (O king) art p tre, great and stronge. Thy greatnesse increaseth, and reacheth vnto the heauen, so dothe thy power to the endes of the earth. But where as the kynge saw a watchet euen an holy aungell, that came downe from heauen, and sayde: hewe downe the tre, and destrope it: yet leaue the ground of the roote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron and stele: He shal bee wete wyth the dew of heauen, and his parte shal be with the beastes of the felde, tyl seuen yeares be come and gone vpon him: Thys (O kynge) is the interpretacion, yea, it is the verpe deuyce of him, that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my lord the kynge.

Thou shalte be caste out fro men, and thy dwelling shalbe with the beastes of the felde: with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with the dew of the heauen: yea, seuen yeares shal come, and goo vpon the, tyl thou knowe, that the hyest hath the power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and geueth them to whome he lyst. Moreover, wher as it was sayde, that the roote of the tre shoulde bee lefte styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, that thy kyngdome shal remaine whole vnto the, after thou hast lerned to know, that the power cometh from heauen. Wherefore, O kynge, be content with my counsel, that thou mayest lowse thy synnes wth ryghtuousnesse, *and thine offences with mercy to poore people: for soch thynges shal prolonge thy peace. All these thynges touche the kyng Nabuchodonosor.

I So after. xii. Monethes, the kyng walked by and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde:
This is þe great cty of Babilon, which I my selfe (with my power & strengthe) haue made a kynges courte, for the honour of my mayestye. While these wodes were yet in the kynges mouth, there fel a voide from heauen, saying: O king Nabuchodonosor, to thee be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shal departe from the,
thou shalt be caste oute of mens com-panye: thy dwellynge shalbe with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, till seven peres be come and gone ouer the: euen vntill thou knowest, that the hyst hathe power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he maye geue them, vnto whome it pleaseth hym. The very same hour was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so that he was cast out of men-nes company, and ate grasse like an oxe.
his body was wet with the dew of heauen, till his heeres were as greates as Eagles fethers, and his nailes like byr-des clawes.

E When this tyme was past, I Nabu-chodonosor lyfte up myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restoyred vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thanckes vnto the hyghest. I magnyfied and prayled hym that lyueth for ever more, * whose power endureth alwaye, and his kyngdome from one generacyon to an other: in comparison of whome al they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng.

* He handleth accordynge to his wil, among the powers of heauen and among the inhabitours of the earth: and there is none that maye resiste hys hande, or say: what doest thou? * At the same tyme was myne vnderstandynge geuen me agayne, and I was restoyred to the ho-noure of my kyngdome, to my dygnite, and to myne owne shappe agayne. My greate estates and princes sought vnto me, and I was sette in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater

dome agayne, so that I had yet greater worthynesse.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnyspe and prayse the kyng of heauen: for all his workes are true, and hys wayes ryghte. As for those that go on proude, he is able to bynne them downe.

The .v. Chapter.

Balthazar kyng of Babylon, abusing the wylde of the temple, seyth an honore wyrtynge on the wall. The forayers called of the kyng, can not expounde þe wyrt-ynge Daniel is called, whiche readeth it, and interpre-teth it also. Balthazar bringe dayne, Darius succeedeth in hys rowme.

Kynge Balthazar made a greate banckete to hys thousande Lordes: with al these thousand he made greate chere, and when he was droncke in wine, he commaunded to bynne him the golden and siluer vessels, * which his father Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the king and hys lordes with his quene and concu-bynes myght drynke thereout.

So they broughte the golden vessel, that was taken out of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kyng and his lordes with his quene & concupynges droncke out of them. They droncke wyne, and prayled theyr idols of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wood and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared fingers, as it had bene of a mans hande wyrtynge, right ouer agaynst the candelstykke vpon the playne wal in the kynges palace: and the kyng sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then chaunged the kyng his countenance, and hys thoughtes troubled hym, so that the foyntes of hys body shoke, and hys knees smote one agaynst the other.
* Wherefore the kyng cryed myghtily, that they shoulde bynne hym the charmers, Caldees and conturers of deuels. The kyng spake also to the wyse men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can reade this wyrtynge, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shalbe clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the cheyre parte of my kyngdome.

Upon this, came al the kynges wyse men: but they coude neyther reade the wyrtynge wyrtynge nor shewe the kynge what it signified. Then was the kynge sore a-frayed in so muche, that hys coloure chaunged, and his lordes wer sore vexed. So by reason of thys matter, that C had happened to the kyng & his lordes, the quene wente by herselfe into þe ban-ket house and spake vnto the kynge, sayinge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for e-uer: Let not the thoughtes trouble the,

and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a manne in thy kyngdome, that hath the spirit of þe holy goddes within him, as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandyng and wysdome lyke the gods. Yea, the kynge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees & deuell counters:
because that suche an aboundaunt spi-rite, knowledge and wysdome (to expounde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowres) was founde in him: yea, euen in Daniel, whome the king named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tel, what it meaneth.

Then was Daniel broughte before þe king. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: Arte thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whome my father the kynge broughte out of Jewry?
I haue hearde speake of thee, that thou haste the spirite of the holpe god-des, experience and vnderstandyng, and that there hath bene greute wysdome founde in the. Nowe haue thete bene D broughte me, wise and connyng charmers, to reade this wyrtynge, and to shewe me the meanyng therof: But they coude not tell me, what thys matter signified. Then heard I saie, that thou canste expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde doutes. Well than, if thou canste reade this wyrtynge, and shewe me the meanyng therof: thou shalt be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of gold about thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kyngdome.

E Daniel answered, and sayde before the kynge: * As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy self, or geue thy ryght gyftes to another: yet not the lesse, I will rede the wyrtynge vnto the kynge, and shew him the interpretacio therof. * O king,

God the hyst gaue vnto Nabuchodo-nosor thy father, the dignite of a king, with worshyppe and honour: so that all people, kynnedes and tungen stode in awe and feare of hym, by reason of the hie estate, that he had leut hi. For why, he slewe whome he woulde: he smote, whom it pleased hym. Agayne: whome he woulde, he set vp: and whome he lyst, he put downe. * But because his herte was so proude, & his stomack set so fast vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed from his kyngly trone, and his maiesty was taken from hym. He was shot oute from amonge men, his heart was lyke a beastes herte, and hys dwelling was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse lyke an oxe, and hys body was wet with the dew of the heauen: tyll he knew, that the hiest had power vpon the kyngdomes of menne, and setteth ouer them, whom he lyst.

And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for all thys, haste not submytted thyn hearte, though thou knewest all these thynges: but hast magnified thy selfe aboue the Lorde of heauen, so that the vessels of hys house were broughte before the: that thou, and thy lordes, wyth thy quene & concubines, myght drinke wyne thereout: And hast prayed, the Idoles of syluer and golde, copper and y-ron, of wode and stone: As for the god * in whose hande consyseth thy brythe and all thy wayes: thou haste not loued hym.

Therefore is the palme of thys hand G sente hyther from hym, to token by thys wyrtynge. And thys is the scripture, that is wyrtten by: Mene, Chetel, Phares.
Nowe the interpretacio of the thyng is thys: Mene, God hath nombred the kyngdome, and brought it to an ende: Chetel, thou arte weped in the balaunce, and art founde to lyghte: Phares, thy kyngdome is delt in partes, and geuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to cloth Daniel with purple, to hange a cheyne of golde aboute hys necke, and to make a proclamacio concernyng hym: that he shoulde be the ruler of the thyrde parte of hys kyngedome. * The very same nyghte was Balthazar the kyng of the Caldees slayne, and Da-

Balthazar. Darius. The Prophecie.

Dani. ix. rarius oute of Medea toke in the kynges dome, beinge. *lxiij. yere of age.

The. vi. Chapter.

Daniell is made ruler ouer the lordes. The imaginacyon of an acte against Daniell. The proclamacyon of the acte, wherof Daniell is accused vnto the kyng as a traungressour. He is put in to a den of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is deliuered by fapth in god. Daniels accusars are put vnto the Lyons to be torn in sonder. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

A T pleased Darius to sette ouer hys kyngdome an. C. x. xx. Lordes, whiche shoulde be in all his kyngdome aboute. Aboue these he sette thre Princes ( of whome Daniell was one ) that the lordes myghte geue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vndisealed.

But Daniel exceded all these Princes and lordes, for the spirite of God was plenteous in hym: so that the kyng was myuded to set him ouer the whole realme. Wherefore the Princes and Lordes soughte, to pycke out in Daniel some quarel againste the kyngdome, yet could they fynde none occasyon nor faute vpon hym. For why? he was so fapthfull, that there was no blame nor dishonesty founde in him.

B Then sayde these men: we wyl get no quarel agaynst thys Daniel, except it bee in the lawe of hys God. Upon this, wente the princes and lordes together vnto the kyng, and sayde thus vnto him: kinge Darius God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the great estates of the realme: as the Princes, Dukes, Sena: courts and Judges, are determined to put out a commaundement of the kyng, and to make a sure statute: namely, that who so despyeth any petition, eyther of anye god or man ( within this. xxx. dayes ) excepte it be only of the, O king: the same person may be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherefore, O kyng, confyrme thou this statute, and make a wytyng: that the thyng whiche the Medes and Perses haue ordered be not altered nor broken.

C So Darius made the wytyng, and confirmed it. Now whē Daniel vnderstode that the wytyng was made, he wente into his house: and the windowes of hys hall towarde Jerusalem stode open. There kneeled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made his petition, and prayled his God, as his maner was to do afore tyme.

Then these menne made search, and founde Daniel making his petecyon, & prayinge vnto his God. So they came to the kyng, and spake before him concerning his commaundement, saying: O kyng, haste thou not subscribed the statute, that within. xxx. dayes who so requirerth his petition of anye god or man but only of thy selfe, O kyng: he shalbe cast into the den of Lyons. The kyng answered, and sayde: yea, it is true. It muste be as a lawe of the Medes and Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the pylsoners of Iuda O kyng, regardeth neither the nor thy statute, that thou haste made, but maketh his petition thre tymes a daye. When the king heard these wordes, he was sore greued, and would haue excused Daniel, to deliuer hym, & put of the matter, vnto the Sunne wente downe, to the intent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceauynge the kinges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this ( O kyng ) that the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that the commaundement & statute which the king maketh, may not be altered. * Then the kyng had them byynge Daniel, and they caste him in to the Lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whome thou alway seruelt, euen he shall defende the. And there was broughte a stone, and laped vpon the hole of the denne: thys the kyng sealed with hys owne rynge, and with the sygnet of hys prynces: that the kinges commaundement concernynge Daniel, should not be broken.

So the kyng wente into his palace, and kept him sober al night, so that there was no table spred before hym, neither coulde he take any slepe. But by tymes in the moorning at the breake of the daye, the kyng arose, and wente in all hast vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a pteous voyce vnto Daniel: yea, the kyng spake, and sayde unto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyuing God, is not thy God (whō thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayd vnto the kynge: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer. * My God hath sent his angel, * whiche hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. for wher myne vngyltynesse is founde out before him. And as for the, O king, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceddyng glade, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was broughte out of the denne, and no manner of hurte was founde vpon him. for he put his truste in his God. And as for those men whiche had accused Daniel, the kynge commaunded to bring them, and to caste them in the Lyons denne: them, their chyldren and theyr wyues. * So the Lyons had the mastery of the, and brake all their bones asunder, or euer they came at the grounde.

* After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto al people kynneddes, and tungen, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multiplied with you: My commaundement is, in all my dominyon and kyngdome, that men feare & stande in awe of Daniels God.

* for he is the lyving God, whiche abydeth euer: his kyngdome shall not faile, and his power is euerlastyng.

* It is he that delpyereth, and saueth: he doth wōders and maruelous workes, in heauē and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of 4 Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reygne of Darius & Cyrus of Persia.

The. vii. Chapter.

¶ This of. iiii. beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The vision is interpreted of. iiii. kyngdomes of the worlde. Of the power and increase of Antychrist. Of the euerlastyng kyngdome of Christ.

In the fyrst yere of Balthazar kynge of Babylon, sawe Daniel a dreame, and a byspon was in his heade vpon his bedde. which dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is this: Daniel spake, and sayd: I sawe in my vision by nyght, and beholde: 4 foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the sea, and foure great beastes came vp from the sea, one onlyke another.

The fyrste was a * Lyon, and yet had he * Eagles wynges. I sawe, that his wynges were plucked from him, and he taken awaye from the earth: * that he stode vpon his fete as a man, and that there was geuen him a mans hearte.

Beholde, the seconde beast was lyke a * Beer, and stode vpon the one syde. Amonge his teeth in his mouth he had. iiii. greate longe teeth, and it was sayde vnto hym: Arise, eate vp mouches fleshe. Then I looked, and beholde, there was another like vnto a Leopard: this had wynges as a foule, euen 4 foure vpon the backe. This beast had foure heades, and there was power geuen hym. After this I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and maruelous stronge. It had greate yron teeth, it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the reynoue vnder his fete. It was fatte onlyke the other beastes that were before it: for it had 4 ten hornes, whereof I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge them, another lyke horne, before whome there were thre of 4 first hornes plucked awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes lyke a mā, and a mouth speakyng presumpuous thynges. * I looked til the seates were prepared, and tyll the olde aged sat him downe. His clothynge was as whyte as snowe, and 4 heeres of his heade lyke the pure woll. His throne was lyke the fyrre flame, and his wheles as the burnyng fyrre. There dreyue forth a fyrre streame, and wente out from hym. * A thousande tymes a thousande serued him. 10. tymes ten thousande stode before hym. The iudgement was set, and the booke opened. Then toke I hede there vnto, because of the voyce of 4 proude wordes, which that horne spake. I behelde, tyll the beast was slayne, and his bodye destroyed, * and geuen ouer to be brente in the fyrre.

As for the power of the other beastes also it was taken awaye, but theyr lyues were prolonged for a tyme & season. I sawe in a vision by nyght, and beholde, * there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the sonne of a man, whiche wente vnto the olde aged, before whome they brought him. Then gaue he him * power & dignitie regall, that all people, trybes & tungen shoulde serue him. * His power is an euerlastyng power, whiche shall neuer be put downe: * and his kyngdome endureth vncorrupte. So he tolde me, and made me vnderstande the interpretation of these thynges.

C These foure greates beastes, are foure kynges whiche shall aryse oute of the earth. These shall take in the kyngdome of the saintes of the moste hest, and possesse it styll more and more for a longe season. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the trueth, concernyng the fourthe beaste, which was so farre vnlke the other beastes, & so horrible: whose teeth were of yron, and hys nayles of brasse: whiche deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the resydue vnder hys fete. I desyred also to knowe the trueth, as touchyng the * ten hornes that he had vpon his heade, and this other whiche came bp afterwarde, before whose face there fell downe thre: whiche horne had eyes and a mouthe that spake presumptuous thynges, and looked with a grimmer bysage then his felowes. I behelde, and the same horne made battayle agaynst the saintes, yea, and gat the victorie of them: vntyll p tyme that the olde aged came, that the iudgemente was geuen to the chiefeest sapntes: and tyll the tyme, that the sapntes had the kyngdome in possession. He gaue me this answer: That fourthe beaste shall be the fourthe kyngdome vpon earth: it shall be more then al other kyngdomes, it shall deuoure, treade downe, and destroye all other landes.

The viii. Chapter.

C A bysion of a strepe betwene a ramme & an he goate. The vnderstandyng of the vison is of the baryl betwene the kyng of Persia and p kyng of the Greciens. Of the same laste kyng Antychriste.

In the thyrde yeaere of the raigne of kyng Balthazar, there appeared a visio vnto me Daniel, after that I had sene the * first, I sawe in a vison (and when I sawe it, I was at Susis in the chiefe cytie, whiche lyeth in the lande of Elam) and in the vison, me thoughte I was by the ryuer of Ulai.

Then I looked bp, and sawe: and beholde, there stode before the ryuer, a ramme, whiche had hornes: and these hornes were hys, but one was hys then another, and the hest came bp laste. I sawe that this ramme pushed with hys hornes, agaynst the west, agaynst the north, and agaynst the southe: so that no beastes myghte stande before hym, nor defende the from his power: but he dyd as him lysted, & waxed greatly. I toke hede vnto this, and then came there an he goate from the west ouer the whole earth, and touched not the grounde.

This goate had a marvelous goodly horne betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the rāme, & had the two hornes (whome I had sene afore by p ryuer side) & ranne fearcelly vpon him w his myght. I saw him drawe nye vnto p rāme, being very scarce vpon him: yea, he gaue him such a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: Nether had the ramme so much strength as to stande before hym: but he cast him downe, trodde hym vnder his fete: and may was able to deliuer the ramme oute of his power.

The goate waxed excreadyng great, and when he was at the strongest, hys greate horne was broken also. Then grewe there other foure such like in the steade, towarde the. iiii. wyndes of the heauen. * Yea, oute of one of the lesse of these hornes, there came vp yet another horne, which waxed maruelous greates: towarde the southe, towarde the east, and towarde the sayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hooſte of heauen, wherof it dyd caste some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, & trode them vnder fete.

Yea, it grewe vp vnto the pynte of the hooſte, from whence the dayly offeringe was taken, and the place of his Sanctuarie casten downe. And a certayne season was geue vnto it, against the dayly offeringe (because of wyckednesse) that it myght cast downe the veryte to the groude, and so to prosper in all thynges, that it wente aboute.

Upon this I herde one of þe sayntes speakyng, whiche saynte sayde vnto one that asked this question: Howe longe shall this vision of the dayly sacrifice and of the wastynge abhominacion endure: that the Sanctuarie and the power shal so be troden vnder fete. And he answered him: Vnto the eueninge and the moonyng, euē two thousande and thre hundred daves: then shall the Sanctuarie be clenſed againe.

Now when I Daniel had ſene this vision, and soughte for the vnderſtandynge of it: beholde, there ſtoode before me a thyng lyke vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulai, which cryed, and sayde: O Gabriel, make this man vnderſtande the vision. So he came, and ſtoode by me. But I was afrayed at his commynge, and fel downe vpon my face.

Then sayde he vnto me: O thou ſonne of man, marcke well, for in þe laste tyme shall thys byſyon be fulfilled.

Now as he was speakyng vnto me, I waxed ſaynte, ſo that I ſuncke downe to the grounde. But he toke holde vpon me, and ſet me vp agayne, ſayinge: Beholde, I wyll ſhewe the, what shall happen in the laſte wyathe: for in the tyme appoynted it ſhalbe fulfilled.

The ramme whiche thou ſawest with the two hornes, is the kinge of the Medes and Perſes: but the goate is the kinge of Greke lande: the greates horne that ſtoode betwyxte his eyes, that is the principall kinge. But where as it brake, and foure other roſe vp in the steade: it ſignifieth, þ out of this people shall ſtande vp foure kyngdomes, but not ſo mightie as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle þe bygoblineſſe is a growynge) there shall arys a kinge of an vnhamefast face, whiche shall be wyſe in darcke ſpeakinges.

He shall be myghtye and ſtrong, but not in his owne ſtrength. He shall deſtroye aboute meaſure, and all that he goeth about shall proſpere: he shall ſlaye the ſtrong and holy people. And though his craftynes, falſhed shall proſpere in his hande, hys hearte shall be proude, and manye one shall be put to death in his welchynesse. He shall ſtande vp agaynſt þe Prince of Princes, * but he shall be deſtroyed without hande. And this byſyon that is ſhewed vnto the, is as ſure as the eueninge and the moonyng. * Therefore wyte thou vp thys ſpyghte, for it wylbe longe or it come to paſſe.

Upon this was I Daniel verie ſaynte, ſo that I laye ſpycke certen daves: but when I roſe vp, I went aboute the kynges byſyneſſe, and marueled at the byſion, neuertheleſſe no man knewe of it.

that Jerusalem shoulde lye waste. lxx. peares: and I turned me vnto GOD the Lorde, for to praye and make myne intercession, with fastynge, sacke clothe and ashes, I prayed before the Lord my God, and knowledged, sayinge:

* O Lorde, thou greate and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunte and mercye with them, whiche loue the, and do thy commaundementes: * We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue bene dysobedient and gone backe: yea, we haue departed from all thy preceptes and iudgementes.

B We woulde neuer folowe thy seruantes the Prophetes, that spake in thy name to oure kynges and prynces, to oure forefathers, and to all the people of the lande. * O Lorde, ryghteousnesse belongeth vnto the, vnto vs pertayneth nothyng but open shame: as it is come to passe this daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwel at Jerusalem: Yea, vnto all Israell, whether they be fatte or nye: thozowe out all laundes: wherin thou hast strowed them, because of the offences that they had done agaynst the.

Yea, O Lorde, vnto vs, to oure kynges and prynces, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all, * that haue offended the, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde oure God, pertayneth mercye and forgeuenesse. Wherfore the curse and othe, * that is wyrtten in the lawe of Moses the seruant of God (agaynst whome we haue offended) is poured vpon vs. * And he hath perfourmed his wordes, which he spake agaynst vs, and agaynst oure iudges that iudged vs: to bynge vpon vs suche a greate plage, as neuer was vnder heauen, lyke as it is now come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea all this plage, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before the Lorde oure God, that we myghte turne agayne from our wickednesse, and to be lerned in thy verities.

Therfore hath the Lorde made haste, to bynge this plage vpon vs: for the Lorde oure god is righteous, in al his workes whiche he doth: for why, we woulde not herken vnto his voyce.

* And now, O Lorde oure God, thou that with a myghtye hande haste brought thy people oute of Egypte, to get thy selfe a name, whiche remayneth this daye: we haue synned, O Lord, and done wyckedlye agaynst all thy righteousness: yet let thy wrothful displeasure be turned awaye (I beseeche the) from thy cite Jerusalem thy holy hill. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wyckednesse of oure forefathers is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are aboute vs. Now therfore, O oure God, heare the prayer of thy seruante, and his intercession. O let thy face shine ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeeth waste.

O my God, enclyne thine eare, and herken (at the leest for thine owne sake) open thine eyes: beholde how we be desolated, yea, and the cytie also, which is called after thy name: for we do not cast oure prayers before the in oure owne ryghteousnes, no: but onely in thy great mercyes. O Lorde, heare: O forgeue Lorde: O Lord coulde, tarpe not ouer longe: but for thine owne sake do it. O my God: for thy cite and thy people is called after thy name.

As I was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowledgyng myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercession before the Lord my God, for the holy hills sake of my God: yea, whyle I was yet speakynge in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabriel (* who I had sene afore in the vision) came flynge to me, and touched me aboute the offerynge tyne in the euenynge. He infortuned me, & spake vnto me: O Daniel sayde he, I am now come to make the vnderstande it: for as soone as thou begannest to make thy prayer, it was so deuysed, & therfore am I come to shewe the. And why? * for thou arte a man greatly beloued.

Wherfore, ponde the matter well, that thou mayest learne, to vnderstande the byspon, lxx. * weakes are determed determined ouer thy people, and ouer the

Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne, lxii. wekes, but with harde troublous tyme. After these, lxii. wekes, shall Christ be slayne, and they shal haue no pleasure in him. Then shal there come a people with the pynce, and destroye the cite and the Sanctuary: and his ende shal come as the water flood. But the desolacion shal continue till the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde with many, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shal put downe the slayne and meate offerynge. * And in the temple there shalbe an abhomy-nable desolacion, till it haue destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shal contynue vnto the ende.

¶ The .x. Chapter.

¶ There appereth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynn, whiche sheweth hym wherfore he is sente.

In the thyrde yere of kyng Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar) a matter, yea, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well, and percea-ued what the byspon was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no luste to eate breade: as for fleche and wyne there came none within my mouth: No, I did not ones anoynte my selfe, til the whole thre wekes were oute.

¶ Upon the. xliiii. daye of the fyrste moneth, I was by the greate floude, called * Tigris: I lyfte vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynn, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyrre golde of Araby: hys body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, his face (to loke vp-on) was lyke lychtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, his armes & fete were lyke sayre gyltynge metal, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude. * I Daniel alone sawe this vision, the men that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfullnesse fel vpon them, so that they fled awaye, and hyde them selues. I was lefte there my selfe alone, and sawe this greate by-spon, so longe tyll there remayned no more strengthe within me: yea, I losse my coloure clene, I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone. Yet hearde I the voyce of hys wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, sayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, whiche set me vp vpon my knees and vpon the palmes of my han-des, sayinge vnto me: * O Daniel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto thee, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I now sente.

¶ And when he had sayde these wor-des, I stode vp tremblynge. Then said he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for whysence the fyrste daye that thou set thyne hearte to vnderstande, and dydest chaste thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene hearde. And I had come vnto the, when thou begannest to speake had not the pynce ouer the kyngdom of the Perses withstande me, xxi. dayes.

But lo, * Michael one of the chefe pynces, came to helpe me, hym haue I lefte by the kyng of Persia, and am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes: for it wylbe longe yet or the bysion be fulfyllled.

¶ Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast downe my heade to the grounde and helde my tunge.
Beholde, there touched my lippes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto hym, & stode before me: O my Lorde, my loyntes are lowed in the bysion, & there is no more strengthe within me: Nowe maye my Lordes seruante then talke with my Lorde: seynge there is no strengthe in me, so that I cannot take my breath. Upon this there touched me agayne, one much lyke a man, and * comforted me, that is faste noted in þ scripture of tru-is none that helpeth me in thē, but Michael your prynce.

The .xi. Chapter.

A prophete of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypte, and of the bondes therof, and of the battell with the kyngdome of Siria. Of the Jewes that spe vnto the kyng of Egypte, whome Antiochus the kyng of Siria persecuteth, whiche figureth vnto vs Antichriste. The pryde of Antiochus.

And in the fyrste yere of Darius of Medea, I
stode by him, to comforte him, and to strenght him, and nowe wyl I shewe thee the trueth. Behold, there shal stande by yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourthe shalbe fatte ry-cher then they all. And when he is in the chefeest power of his riches, he shal provoke euery man agaynste the realme of Grekelande. * Then shal there arys yet a myghtie kyng, that shal rule with greate dominion, and do what him list.
* And as soone as hys kyngdome commeth by, it shalbe destroyed, and deuyded towarde the fourte wyndes of the heauen. They that come after him, shal not haue suche power and dominion as he: but his kyngdom shalbe scattered, yea, euen amonge other then those. And the kyng of the southe shalbe myghtyer, then hys other prynces. Against hym there shal one make hym selfe stronge, and shal rule hys dominion with great power.

But after certayne yeres they shalbe ioyned together, and þ kynges dought-er of the southe shal come to the kyng of the North, for to make frendshipp, but she shal not optayne the power of that arme, nether shal she be able to endure thorowe hys myghte: but she, and such as broughte her, yea, and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme, shal be deliuered by. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shal one stande by in hys steade: which with power of armes shal go thorowe the kynges lande of the northe, and handle hym accordyng to his strength. As for their Idols & princes, with their costlye Jewels of golde and syluer, he shal carie them away cap-ties into Egypte, and he shal preuayle agaynste the kyng of the north certayne yeres. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the southe, he shalbe fayne to turne agayne in to hys owne lande. Wherfore his sonnes shalbe dys-pleased, & shal gather together a myghtye greate hooste of people: and one of them shal come, and go thorowe lyke a water flowed: then shal he retorne, and go forth with despyng and boastyng vnto his owne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shal be angrie, and shal come forth to fight against the kyng of the northe: yea, he shal byng a greate multitude of people together, and a greate heape shalbe geuen in to his hande: these shal he carie awaye with great pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheles he shal not preuayle, for the kyng of the northe shal gather (of the new) a greater heape of people then afore, & come forth (after a certayne time and yeres) with a myghtie hooste and exceedyng greate good.

At the same tyme there shal many stande by agaynste the kyng of þ south, so that the wycked chyldren of thy people also shal exalte them selues (to ful-fyll the bysion) and then fall. So the kyng of the northe shal come to laye sege, and to take the stronge fenced cities: And the power of them of the southe shal not be able to abyde hym, and the best mē of þ people shal not be so strōge, as to resist hym. Shortely, when he commeth, he shal handle hym as he list, and no man shalbe so hardye as to stāde agaynste him. He shal stande in the pleas-saunte countre, which thorow him shal-be destroyed. He shal set his face with al hys power to optayne his kyngedome, and to be lyke it: Yea, that shal he do, and geue hym vnto the daughters as monge women, to destroye him. But he shal

shall faile, nether shall he optayne his purpose. After this shall he set his face vnto the Isles, and take many of them. A pynce shall stoppe hym, to do hym a shame, belyde the confusion that els shall come vnto him. Thus shall he tourne agayne to his owne lande, stonemble, and fall, and be no moze founde: so he that came vpon hym and did hym violence, shall stande in his place, & haue a pleasaunte kyngedome: and after few dayes he shall be destroyed, & that nether in wrath, nor in battell. In his steade there shall arise a vyle person, not holden worthy of a kynges dygnytie: this shall come in craftely, and optayne the kyngdome with fayze wordes: he shall fyght against the armes of the mightie (and destroye them) yea, and against the pynce of the couenaunte.

So after that he hath taken truce with him, he shall handle dysceatfullye, that he may get vp, and ouercome him with a smal flocke: & so with craftynesse to get him to the fattest place of his lande, and to deale otherwys, then ether his fathers or graundfathers dyd. For he shall destroye the thyng, that they had robbed and spoyled, yea, and all theyr substance: ymagynynge thoughtes agaynst the stronge holdes, and that for a tyme. His power and herte shall be stirred vp with a greate armye against the kyng of the south: where thorow the kyng of the southe shall be moued then vnto battell, with a great and myghtye host also. Neuerthelesse, he shall not be able to stande, for they shall conspyre agaynst him. Yea, they that eate of his meate, shall hurte him: so that his host shall fall, and manye be slayne downe.

These two kynges shall be mynded to do myschefe, and talke of dysceate at one table: but they shall not prosper: for why, the ende shall not come yet, vnto the tyme apoynted. * Then shall he go home agayne into his owne lande with great good, and set his heart agaynst the holy couenaunte, he shall be busy agaynst it, and then retorne home. At the tyme apoynted he shall come agayne, and go towarde the southe: So shall it happen otherwys then at the fyrste, yet ones agayne. And why, * the sheppes of Cythin shall come vpon hym, that he maye be smytten and turne agayne: that he maye take indignacion agaynst the couenaunte of holynesse, to medle agaynst it. Yea, he shall turne hym, and drawe suche vnto hym, as leaue the holy couenaunte.

He shall set myghtye men to inhabytw the Sanctuary of strength, to put downe the daily offeringe, and to set vp the abhominable desolacion. And suche as breake the couenaunt shall he flatter with fayze wordes. But the people that wil know their God, shall haue the ouerhande and prospere. Those also that haue vnderstandynge among the people shall enfourme the multitude: and for a longe season, they shall be persecuted with swearde, with fyre, with captiuite and with the takynge away of theyr goodes. Nowe when they fall, they shall be set vp with a lytle helpe: but many shall cleue vnto them faynedlye.

Yea, some of those whiche haue vnderstandynge shall be persecuted also: that they maye be tryed, purifyed and censed, tyl the tyme be oute: for there is yet another tyme appoynted. The kyng shall do what hym lyst, * he shall exalte and magnifye him selfe agaynst al, that is God. Yea, he shall speake maruelous thynges agaynst the God of al goddes; wherein he shall prospere, so longe tyl * the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is deuyled alreadye. He shall not regard the God of his fathers, but his luste shall be vpon women: Yea, he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye hym selfe aboue all. In his place shall he worshippe the myghtye Idols: and the God whome his fathers knewe not, shall he honoure with golde and siluer, with precious stones and pleasaunte Jewels.

This shall he do, sekynge helpe and succoure at his myghtye Idols a straunge Goddes. Suche as wyl receaue hym, and take him for God, he shall geue them greate worshippe and power: yea, and make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kyng of the southe stryue with him: and the kyng of the northe in lyke maner shall come agaynst hym with charettes, horsemen and with a greate nauy of sheppes.

The resurreccion. The Prophecie

He shall come in to the landes, destroye and go thorow: he shall entre also in to the fayre pleasaunte lande. Many cittyes and countrees shall decaye, * excepte Edoom, Moab and the best of the chyl dren of Ammon, whiche shall escape from hys hande. He shall stretch forth hys handes vpon the countrees, and the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym.
For thorow his goynge in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, & ouer all the precious Jeswels of Egypte, Libia and Ethiopia.
* Neuerthelesse the rynges out of the East, and the northe shall trouble hym, for the whiche cause he shall goe forth to destroye and curle a great multitude.
The tetes of his palace shall be pitched betwixte the two seas, vpon the hyl of the noble Sanctuaty, for he shall come to the ende of it, * and then shall no man helpe hym.

The .xii. Chapter.

The propheceth the resurreccion of the dead. The darknesse of the prophecye of Daniel.

The tyme wyll come also, that the greates prince * Michael, whiche standeth on thy peoples syde, shall aryse vpon, for there shall come a tyme of trouble, suche as neuer was, sence there beganne to be any people, vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be deliuered, yea, all those that be founde wyrtten in þe boke, * Many of them that slepe in the duste of the earth, shall awake: some to the euerlastyng lyfe, some to perpetuall shame and reproche. * The wyse (suche as haue taught other) shall glyster, as the shynnyng of heauen: and those that haue instructed the multitude vnto gods lynnesse, shall be as the starrs, worlde without ende.

And thou O Daniel, shut vp these wordes, and seale the boke tyll the laste tyme. Many shall go aboute here and there, & then shall knowledge increase.
So I Daniel looked, and beholde, there stode other two: one vpon this shore of the water, the other vpon yonder side.
And one of them sayde vnto him, which was clothed in linnen, & stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: Howe long shall it be to the ende of these wonderous workes.

* Then herde I the man with the nen clothes, whiche stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: when he helde by his ryght and lefte hande vnto heauen, and swaie by hym whiche lyueth for euer: that it shall tarpe for a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme: and when the power of the holy people is cleane scattered abroad, then shall all these thyn-ges be fulfilled.

I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not. Then sayde I: O my lord, what shall happen after that? He answered: Go thy way Daniel, for these wordes shall be closed vp and sealed, tyll the last tyme: and many shall be purifyed, clea-sed and tryed. But the vngodly shall lyue wyckedly, * and those wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderstandynge. As for suche as haue vnderstandynge, they shall regarde it.
And from the tyme forth that the daylie offeryng shall be put downe and the abominable desolacion set vp, there shall be a thousande two hundred and
xx. dayes. O well is hym, that wayterh, and commeth to the thousande. iii. C.
and. xxxv. daies. So thou thy way now, tyll it be ended: take thy rest, and abyde in thy lot, til the dayes haue an ende.

The ende of the Prophecye of Daniel.

The boke of the prophet Oseas.

The fyrste Chapter.

The tyme wherein Oseas propheceth. Oseas byhenge an harlot to his wyfe, signyfeth the idolatry of the people. The destruction of the offsprynge of Iherusalem of the Israelites, is prophesied.

This is the wordes of the Lorde, & came vnto Oseas þe sonne of Beery, * in þe dayes of Oseas, Ios-thā, Achas & Iezekiah kynges of Juda: & in the tyme of Jeroboā & some of Iosias kyng of Israel.
Fyrste, when the Lorde spake vnto Oseas he sayde vnto him: * Go thy way, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyl dren by her: for the lande hath committed

committed greates whordome agaynste the Lorde. So he went, and toke a Gomer the doughter of Debaiam: which conceaued, and brought forth a sonne. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym: call hys name Iesraell, for I wyll hozte lye: auenge the bloude of Iesrael vpon the house of Jehu, & wyl bynge the kynge of y house of Israel to an ende. Then wyl I breake the bowe of Israel in the valley of Iesraell.

She conceaued yet agayne, and bare a doughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name Lozubahmah (that is, not optaynyng mercy) for I wyll haue no pitie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them; and put them cleane out of remembraunce. Nevertheless, I wyll haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and wyl saue them, euen thow the Lord their God. But I wyl not deliuer them thow any bowe, swerde, batell, horses or horsmen.

Nowe when she had weaned Lozubahmah, she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne. Then sayde he: Call hys name Loamy. For why? Ye are not my people, therfore wyl not I be your res. And though the numbze of the children of Israel be as the saide of the sea, which can netther be measured nor tolde: Yet in the place where as it is sayde vnto them, * ye be not my people: Euen there shall it be thus reposed of them: * They be the chyldren of the lypunge God. * Then shall the children of Iuda and the children of Israel be gathered together agayne, and chose the selues one head, & then depart out of the lande: for great shalbe y day of Israel.

The Notes.

- a. That is, consumacion: because the kynge of Israel and Iuda shoulde haue bene consumed.
- b. That is, feaple of sygges: because of the great delypousnesse and voluptuousnesse, that Iuda and Israel were in.
- c. That is, the seade of god.
- d. That is, hauinge no mercy.
- e. That is, not my people.

The .ii. Chapter.

The people is called vnto repentance.

Sell youre brethzen, that they are my people: And youre sistre, that they haue optayned mercy.

As for youre mother, ye shall chyde with her, and reprove her. * For she is not my wyfe, neither am I her husband, vnlesse she put away her whordome oute of my syghte, and her adoultre from her breastes. If no I shall strippe her naked, and sette her, * euen as she came into the worlde: Yea, I shall laye her waste, and make her lyke a wylder nesse, and slaye her for thyrste. I shall haue no pytye also vpon her chyldren, for they be the chyldren of fornicacion.

Their mother hath broken her wedlocke; and she that bare them, is come to confusio. For she sayde: I wyll goe after my louers, that geue me my waiter and my breade, my woll and my flaxe, my oyle and my dryncke. But I wyll hedge her awaye wth thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her fote steppes: And though she tume after her louers, yet shall she not gette them. She shall seke them, but not find them. Then shall she say: well, I wyll go turne agayne to my first husbnde, for at that tyme was I better at ease, then now. But this woulde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer, & golde, * whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

Wherefore nowe wyl I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and set agayne my woll and my flaxe, whych I gaue her, to couer her shame. * And nowe wyl I discouer her foolyshnesse, euen in the syghte of her louers, and no man shall delpue her out of my handes. Moreover, I wil take away al her * myrrh, her holpe dayes, her newe moones, her Sabbothes and all her solempne feastes: I wyll destroye her vineyardes and sygge trees, though she sayeth: Lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue geuen me. I wyll make it a wodde, and the wyld beasts shall eate it vp: I wyll punyche her also for the dayes of Baal, * wherin she deuoted hym, deckyng hym with her eares, rynges and cheynes: When she folowed her louers, and forgaue me (sayeth the Lorde).

Wherefore beholde, I wyll call her agayne, bynge her into a wylder nesse, and speake frendely vnto her: There

Ex. v. wyl

will I geue her her vineyardes agayn, yea, and * the valley of Achor also to her: and I will geue her hope and comforte.
Then shall she synge there * as in the tyme of her youth, and * lyke as in the daye when she came oute of the lande of Egypte.
Then (sayeth the Lorde) she shall saye vnto me: O my husbnde, and shall call me no more Baall: for I will take awaye those names of Baall frome her mouthe, yea, she shall neuer remembre their names anye more. * Then will I make a couenante wyth them, wyth the wilde beastes, with the foules of the ayre, & with euerye thinge that cre-peth vpon the earth.

* As for bove, swerde and battell,
I will destroye suche out of the lande, and will make the to slepe safely. * Thus will I marie thee vnto myne owne selfe for euer more: Yea, euen vnto myne owne selfe will I marie the, in righte-ousnesse, in equite, in lounge kyndnes and mercye. In saythe also will I marie the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme will I geue my selfe frendelye and gracyous vnto the heauens sayeth the Lorde: And the heauens shall helpe the earth, and the earth shall helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, and they shall helpe Israell. * I will come them vpo earth, for a sede to myne owne selfe, * and will haue mercye vpon her, that was without mercy. And to them whiche were not my people, I will say: thou art my people. And he shall saye: Thou art my God.

The.iii. Chapter.

Of the loue of God towards the people.

Then sayde the Lorde to me: * Goe yet thy waye and wowe an aduoute-rous woman, whom thy neighbour loueth, as the Lorde doeth the chylde of Israell: Howe be it they haue respecte to straunge gods, * & loue the wyne kannes. So I gat her for. xv. silverlinges, and for an homer and an halfe of barley, and sayd vnto her: thou shalt abide with me a longe season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and loke thou medle with none other man, & then will I kepe my selfe for the.

* Thus the chylde of Israell shall sytt a great while without kynge and prync, withoute offerynge and aulter, withoute prieste and reuelacion. But afterwarde shall the chylde of Israell conuerter, and seke the Lorde their God, and * Dauid their kynge: And in the latter dayes they shall wurchypp the Lorde, and bys lounge kyndnesse.

The.iiii. Chapter.

A complayne agaynst the people and the priests of Israell.

Hear the woordes of the Lorde, O ye chylde of Israell: for the Lorde must punishe them, that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no faith-fulnesse, there is no mercye, there is no knowledge of God in the lande: But swearynge, lyng, manslaughter, theft, and aduoutye haue gotten the ouerhande, and one bloude gyltynesse foloweth another. Therefore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therein, shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fyshes in the sea shall dye.
Yet is there none, that will chasten nor reproue another. The * priestes whiche should resourme other men, are become lyke the people.

Therefore stomblest thou in the daye tyme, and the prophete with the in the nyghte. I will byynge thy mother to silence, and why? * my people perishe, because they haue no knowledge. Seynge then that thou hast refused vnderstandynge, therefore will I refuse the also: so y thou shalt no more be my priest. And for so muche as y haste forgotten the lawe of thy God, I will also forget thy chylde. The more they increased in the multitude, the moore they synned agaynst me, therefore will I chaunge their honoure into shame.
* They eate by the synnes of my prople, and corage them in their wyckednesse. * Thus the priest is become lyke the people. Wherefore I will punishe them for their wycked wayes, and re-warde

warde them accordinge to their owne ymaginacions. * They shall eate, and not haue ynoughe: They haue a bled whoredome, therefore shall they not prosper: and why? They haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded hym.

Whoredome, wyne and dronkenesse, take the hearte awaye. * My people aske counsell at their stockes, their staffe muste tell them, for an whoreshe mynde hath disceaued them, so that they comyette fornicacion agaynst their God. * They make sacrifices vpon the hye mountaynes, and burne their incense vpon the hylles, yea, amouge the okes, groues and bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore your daughters are become harlottes, and your spouses haue broken their wed-locke, I will not punyssh your dou-ghters for beynge despyled, and your wydes that became whores. * Seynge the fathers their selues haue medled wyth harlottes, and offered with vnthyfftes. But the people that will not vnderstande must be punished.

Though thou, O Israell, arte disposed to play the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: Thou shouldest not haue runne to Galgala, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, nor haue sworn by the Lordelyoth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe.
 The Lorde therefore shall make her fede, as the lambe that goeth astraye.
 And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idolles, well, lette hym goe.
 Their dronkenesse hath putte them backe, and brought them to whoredome.
 Their ruelars loue rewardes, byynge (saye they) to their owne shame. A wynde shall take holde of their fethers, and they shall be confounded in their offerynge.

The Pottes.

A false whoredome or fornicacion thoroowe oute of prophetes, is, to take another God then the true God, and to serue ymagines or to belene in them.

Israell and Ephraim, for the most part in the prophetes are spoken for their trybes. Isalme. xxxiii. b. Ye reade in the. iii. of the kynges. cii. c. wheremercybes followed Jeroboam, where as onelye Juda and Benjamin abode by Rehoboam. Those ten trybes are commonlye called Israell in the prophetes: And Benjamin is reckened with Juda.

The. v. Chapter.

Agaynst the priestes & ruelars of Israell. The helpe of man can do nothinge agaynst God.

O ye Priestes: Heare this, take hede, O thou housholde of Israell: Cease eate,
 O thou kyngelye house: for thys punyshment will come
 vpon you, that are become a snare vnto whorshipp, and a spredde net vnto the mounte of Chabor. They kyll sacrifici-ces by heapes, * to begyle the people therewith: Therefore will I punyssh them all. * I knowe Ephraim well y-noughe, and Israell is not hyd fro me: for Ephraim is become an harlot: and Israell is defiled. They are not mynded to turne to their God, for they haue an whoreshe heart, so y they can not knowe
 the Lorde.

* But the pryde of Israell will be rewarded hym in his face, yea, both Israel and Ephraim shall fall for theyr wickednesse, and Juda wyth them also.
 * They shall come with their shepe and bullockes, to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde hym, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue refused hym, and brought vp bastarde children. A moneth therefore shall deuoure them with their porcions. Blowe with the shawmes at Gibeon, and with the trompet at Ramah, crye out at Betha-uen vpon the yowlyde of Benjamin. In the tyme of y plague shall Ephraim be layde waste, therefore dyd I saythfullye warne the trybes of Israell. Yet are the prynces of Juda become like them, that remoue the landmarckes, therefore will I powre out my wrathe vpon the lyke water: Ephraim is oppressed, and can haue no right of the lawe: for why?
 They folowe the doctrynes of men.
 Therefore wil I be vnto Ephraim as a Mothe, and to the house of Juda as a Caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe hys synne-nesse, and Juda his disease: * Ephraim wente vnto Assur, and sent vnto kyng Tareb: Yet coude not he helpe you, nor ease you of your payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a Lyon, and as a Lyons whelp to the house of Juda. Cuen I,

I will spoyle them, and go my waye. I will take the with me, & no man shall rescue them. I will goe, and returne to my place, tyll they were fapnte, and seke me.

The. vi. Chapter.

Affliction causeth a man to returne to God. The wickednes of the priestes.

In their aduersite they shall seke me, and saye: come, lette vs tourne againe to the Lord: * for he hath smitten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs by a gayne: <sup>a</sup> After two dayes shall he quicken vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rayse vs, so that we shall lyue in hys syghte. Then shall we haue vnderstandynge and endeouore them selues to knowe the Lord. He shall go forth as a spyng of the daye, and come vnto vs * as the euenynge and morning rayne vpon the earth.

Ephraim, what shall I doe vnto the? Juda, howe shall I intreate thee? Sepinge poure loue is like a morninge cloude, and lyke a dewe that gatherth earlye awake. Therfore haue I cut downe the prophetes, and let them be slayne for my wordes sake: So that thy punishment shall come to lyghte. * for I haue pleasure in lounge kyndenes, and * not in offering: Yea, in the knowledge of God, moore then in burnt sacrifice. But euen lyke as * Adam dyd, so haue they broken my couenaunte, and set me at noughte. Gilead is a citty of wycked doers, of malicious people and bloudesthedders. The multitude of the priestes is lyke an heape of theues, murtherers and bloudthrusty: for they haue wroughte abhominacions. * Horrible thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israel is defyled: But Juda shall haue an haruelt for hym selfe, when I returne the captiuite of my people.

The Notes.

a. After two dayes shall he quicken vs, and in the thirde daye shall rayse vs vp. &c. That is, for a certayne space wyl be afflicted and trouble vs, but he wyl heale vs agayne, and restore vs to soundnes. The thirde daye, that is without longe delaye or longe tarryaunce.

The. vii. Chapter.

Of the byres and wantonnes of the people.

When I undertake to make Israel whole, the the vngrectounesse of Ephraim and the wickednesse of Samaria commeth to lyght: then goe they aboute with lyes. At home, they be theues: And withoute they fall to robbinge. They consider not in their heartes that I remembre all their wickednesse. They goe aboute with their owne inuencions, but I see them well ynoughe. * They make the kynge and the Prynces, to haue pleasure in their wyckednesse and lyes. All these burne in aduoutye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hath leste knedynge, tyll the doue be leuened. <sup>b</sup> Then so goeth it thys daye with our kynges and prynces, for they begynne to be woode droncken thorothe wyne: they vse familiarite with suche as disceauie them. They with the ymaginacions of their hearte are like an ouen, their slepe is all a nyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the morninge is he as hote as the flame of fyre: They are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne iudges, all their knyges are fallen: yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore muste Ephraim be myte amonge the heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man turneth: <sup>c</sup> Strangers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not: He wareth full of graye heetes, yet wyl he not knowe it: * And the pryde of Israel is caste downe before their face, yet wyl they not turne to a Lord their God, nor seke him for al this.

Ephraim is lyke a doue, that is begyled, and hath no hearte. * Nowe call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe goe they to the Assirians: But whyle they be gorynge here and there, I shall sprede my nette ouer them, and drawe them downe as the foules of the ayre: And accordynge as they haue ben warned, so wyl I punishe them. * Woe be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me. They muste be destroyed, for they haue sette me at noughte. * I am he that haue renamed

denied them, and yet they dissemble to me. * They call not vpon me with their heartes, but lye houlynge vpon theyr beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate and dryncke, and me wylly they not obey. I haue taughte them, and defended their acine, yet doe they imagine mischief agaynst me. They tourne them selues, but not a ryghte, and are become as a broken bowe. Their Prynces shall be slayne with the swerde, for the malice of their tongues, suche blasphemies haue they learned in the lande of Egypt.

The. viii. Chapter.

The destruction of Iuda and Israel, because of their idolatrye.

Sette the horne to thy mouth, and blowe: get the swyrtle (as an Angel) vnto the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my couenaunte, and transgressed my lawe. Israel can saye vnto me: Thou arte my God, we knowe the: But he hath refused the thyng that is good, therefore shall the enemye folowe vpon hym. * They haue ordeyned kynges, but not thoroowe me: They haue made prynces, and I muste not knowe of it. * Of their syluer and golde haue they made them images, to bypunge them selues to destruction. * Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye for my wrathfull indignacion is gone forth agaynst the. How longe wyl it be, or they can be clesed: for the calfe came frome Israel, the workeman made it, therefore can it be no God, but euen to a spyders web shall the calfe of Samaria be turned. * They haue sowe wynde, therefore shall they reape a storme.

Theyr sede shall beare no corne, there shall no meell be made of their increase: Though they reape, yet shall strangers deuoure it by. Israel shall perishe, the Gentyles shall increase hym as a foule beest. Sence they wente by to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wyld Ass in the desert.

* Ephraim geueth rewardes to get louers, therefore are they scattered amonge the heathen, there wyl I gather them by. They shall soone be werpe of the burthen of kynges and prynces. Ephraim hath made manye aulters to doe wickednesse, therefore shall the aulters tourne to hye synne. Though I shewe them my lawe neuer so muche, they counte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they doe sacrifice, offerynge the fleshe and eatynge it: The Lorde wylly haue no pleasure therein: But wylly remembre their wyckednesse, and punishe theyr synnes. * Israel tourneith agayne into Egypt, they haue forgotten hym that made them, they buylde churches, and Iuda maketh manye stronge cities: * therefore wyl I sende a fyre into their cities, & it shall consume their places.

The Notes.

a. That is: they haue geuen them selues to bayne and trauynge thynge, therefore shall they fall into great trouble and icopardie: To save wynde is as muche to save amonge the hebrewes, as to labour in vayne, and to lese the labour.

The. ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

Do not thou triumphe, O Israel, make no boaste: I styrge moore then the heathen, for thou hast committed aduoutrye agaynst thy God: strange rewardes haste thou loued, moore then al the cornellores. * Therefore shall they no moore enioy the cornellores and wynepresses, and their swete wyne shall fayle them. They wylly not dwell in the Lordes lande, * but Ephraim tourneith agayne into Egypt, & eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure out no wyne for a dryncke offerynge vnto the Lorde, neither geue they hym their slayne offerings: but they be vnto them as mourners meates, wherein all they that eate them, are defyled. for the breade that they haue suche luste vnto, shall not come into the house of the Lorde. What wylly ye doe then in the solempne dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? No, they shall get them awaye for the destruction: Egypt shall receaue them, and Noph shall burye them.

The Nettles shall ouergrowe theyr pleasaunte goodes, and bures shall be in their tabernacles. Be ye sure (O Israel)

The .x. Chapter.

Against Israell and his Idolles.

ISRAELL was a goodly byne, but he hath broughte forthe vnprofitable frut: yea, þe more frute he had, þe moe aulters he made: þe more good I did to their lade, the more frendshipp shewed they to their Images. Their hearte is deuided, therefore wyl they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their Images, he shall destroye their aulters. Then shall they say: we haue no king, for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shall then the kynge doe to vs? They comen together, and sweare bayne othes: they be confederate together, therefore groweth their punishment, as the wedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samarya haue wutshipped the calfe of Bethauē: therefore shall the people mourne ouer them, yea, and the priestes also, that in their welthynesse reioysed with them: And why? I shall passe awaye from them. It shall be broughte to the Afflictiō, for a present vnto kinge Iareb. Ephraim shal receaue full punishment: Israell shall be confounded for his owne magnacions, Samaria wth his kynge shall banyshe awaye, as þe scōme in the water. The hye places of Auen where Israell doe synne, shall be caste downe: thysles and thornes shall grow vpo their aulters: *Then shal they say to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylles: sal vpon vs.

O Israell, thou hast synned, as *Gibeā dyd a fore tyme, where they reymayned: should not the batel ther come vpon the wicked chyldezen, as wel as vpon the Gibeonites? I wyl chasten the, euen after myne owne desyre, the people shall be gathered together ouer them, when I punish them for their greate wickednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cōwe that is bled to goe to plowe, therefore I loued him, and fell vpon his fayre necke. I drōue Ephraim, Iuda plowed, & Jacob played the husbāde man: þe they mighte sowe vnto ryghteousnes, & reape the frutes of welldoing: that that they myghte plowe by their freshe lande, and seke the Lorde, tyll he came, and learned them righteousnes.

But nowe <sup>a</sup> they haue plowed them wylkednesse, therefore shall they reape synne, and eate the fruite of lyes. Seing thou puttest thy cōfidence in thine owne wayes, and leaneest to the multitude of thy worthyes: There shall growe a sedition amonge thy people. Al thy strōge cities shall be layed wast, euen as <sup>a</sup> Samaria was destroyed with hys familiers, thozowe hym that was auenged of Irbell, in the daye of batell, where the mother perished with her chyldren. Euen so shall it goe with you (<sup>a</sup> Bethel) because of youre malicious wickednes. Like as the mornyng goeth away, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

The. xi. Chapter.

Agaynst the unkindnes of Israel.

When Israel was pounge, I loued hym: And <sup>a</sup> called hym my sonne oute of the lande of Egypte. But the moore they were called, the moze they went backe, <sup>a</sup> offeringe vnto Idols, <sup>a</sup> censyng ymagis. I lerned Ephraim to goe, <sup>a</sup> bare the in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue helped them. I led them in coardes of frendshyppe, <sup>a</sup> with bandes of loue, I was euen he, that laid the yocke vpon their neckes. <sup>a</sup> I gaue them their fodder my selfe, that they shulde not goe agayne into Egypt. And nowe is Assur their kynge: for they wolde not turne vnto me. Therefore shall the swearde beginne in their cities, the floare <sup>a</sup> they haue layed vp, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that because of their owne ymagynacions. My people hath no luste to tourne vnto me, <sup>a</sup> they prophetes laye the yocke vpon them, but they ease them not of their burthe.

What great thinges haue I geuen the, <sup>a</sup> Ephraim: howe saythfully haue I defended thee, <sup>a</sup> Israel: haue I deale with the as with <sup>a</sup> Adama: <sup>a</sup> I haue I intreated the like Seboim: no, my hearte is otherwyle mynded. Yea, my mercy is to feruent: Therefore haue I not turned me to destroy Ephraim in my wrothfull displeasure. for I am God and no man, I am euen that holpe oue in the myddest of thee, though I came not within the cite.

The Lorde roareth lyke a Lyon, that they maye folowe hym: Yea, <sup>a</sup> as a Lion roareth he, <sup>a</sup> they maye be afrayed like <sup>a</sup> chyldren of <sup>a</sup> sea: that they maye be scatred away fro Egypt, as men scatred byrdes: <sup>a</sup> frayed away (as doues vse to be) fro the Assyrians lande: And that because I woulde haue them tarpe at home, sayeth the Lorde. But Ephraim goth about me with lyes, and the house of Israel dissembleth. Onelye Iuda holdeth him with God, <sup>a</sup> with the true holy thinges.

The. xii. Chapter.

Agaynst the wayne trust of the people.

They be confederate with the Assyrians, <sup>a</sup> their oyle is carped into Egypte. The Lorde hathe a courtte to holde wyth Iuda, and wyl punyssh Jacob: After their owne wayes and accordynge to their owne inuencions, shall he recompense them. <sup>a</sup> He toke hys brother by the hele, when he was in his mothers wombe: And in hys strength he wrestled w God. <sup>a</sup> He stroue with the Angel, and gate the victorye: so that he prayed and desired hym. He foude him, <sup>a</sup> at Bethel, and there talked with vs.

Yea, the Lorde God of hostes euen the Lorde him selfe remembred hym: Then turne to thy God, kepe mercye and equite, and hope still in thy God. But the marchaūte hath a false weighe in hys hande, he hathe a pleasure to occuppe extortion. Ephraim thinketh thus: <sup>a</sup> Tushe, I am ryche, I haue good ynoughe: In all my woozkes shall not one faute be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as when I brought the out of the land of Egypt, and set the in thy tentes, <sup>a</sup> as in the hye feast dayes.

I haue spoken thozowe the prophetes, and shewed diuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the ministracion of the prophetes. But at Gilead is the abhominacion, they are fallen to banishe. of Oseas.

The booke of the prophete Joel.

¶ The first Chapter.

¶ A prophesye agaynst the Iewes. Deceyved the prestes to praye and fastinge for the mystry that was commynge at hande.

This is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phae-ruel: Heare O ye elders: poude this well, all ye that dwell in the lande:
ye euer there happened suche a thing in yours dapes, or in the dapes of your fathers. Tell youre chyldren of it, and let them shewe it vnto theyr chyldren, and so they to certifie theyr posterite therof.
Loke what the caterpyller hath lefte, that hath the grethopper eaten vp: what the grethopper lefte, that hath the locuste eaten vp: and what the locuste hath lefte, that hath the blasting consumed. Wake ye ye dronchardes, and wepe: mourne all ye winesuppers, because of youre spete wyne, for it shall be taken awaye frome your mouth. Yea, a myghty and an innumerable people shall come vp in to my lande: * these haue teeth lyke the teeth of Lyons, and chaste bones like the honeses. They shall make my vyne-yard waste, they shall pill of the barches of my figgetrees, strype them bare, caste them awaye, and make the bryanches wyte.

Wake thy mone as a byrgyn doth wylth herselfe with lacke, because of her hyde grome. For the meate and drinke offynge shalbe taken awaye from the house of the Lorde: and the prestes the Lordes ministers shal mourne. The felde shalbe wasted, þ land shalbee in a myserable case: for þ corne shal be destroyed, þ swete wyne shal come to confusion, & the oyle vnterly desolate. The housband men and the wine gardeners shal loke pteously and make lamentacion, for the wheate, wyne and batelpe, & because þ hartest vpon the feld is so clene destroyed. The grape gatherers shal make great mone, when þ vineyard and figtrees be so vnterly wasted. Yea, al the pomgarnettes, palmietrees, apietrees, & the other trees of the felde shal wither away. Thus the mery cheate of the chyldren of men, shal come to confusyon.

Gyde pou, and make poute mone, O ye prestes: mourne ye ministres of the auter: goo youre waye in, and slepe in sacke clothe, O ye officers of my God: for the meat and drynke offering shal bee taken awaye frome the house of your God. * Proclaime a fasting, cal the congregation, gather the elders and all the inhabytters of the lande together in to the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lorde: alas, alas for this dape. And whyr the dape of the Lorde is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the Almighty. Shal not þ meates bee taken awaye before oure eyes, the mythe also and loye from the house of oure God. The sede shal perishe in the grounde, the garners shal lye waste, þ flores shalbe broke downe, for the corne shalbe destroyed. * What a syghinge make þ cattell: the bullockes are verye uel liking, because they haue no pastur:
and the shepe are famished a waye.

¶ O Lorde, to the wyl I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wilderness, and the flame hath brent vp al the trees of the felde. Yea, the wylde beastes cry also vnto the: for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wildernesse.

Blow

Blow out the trumpet in Sion, and cry vpon my holy hyl, that all suche as dwell in the lande, maye tremble at it: * for the daye of the Lorde cometh, it is hard at hand: a darcke day, a gloomyng daye, a cloudy daye, yea a a foz-myng daye like as the moynge spredeth out vpon the hylls: Namely, a greate and myghty people: suche as haue not bene sens the beginnyng, nether shal be after them for euermore. Before him shal be a consumynge fyre, and behynde him a burnynge flame. The lande shal be as a garden of pleasure before hym, but behynde hym shal it be a very wast wyldeynes, and there is no man, that shal escape hym. They are to loke vpon lyke barded horses, and runne lyke horse menne. They shyppe vpon the hylls, as it were the sounde of charret-tes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the straw, and as a myghty people redy to the batell.

The folke shal be afrayed of hym, al faces shal be as blacke as a pot. They shal runne lyke gyautes, and leape ouer the walles like men of warre. Every man in his going shal kepe his araye, and not goo oute of his pathe. There shal not one dye another, but eche shal kepe his owne waye. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurte: They shal come into the city and runne vpon the walles: They shal clyme vpon the howles, and syppe in at the wyndowes lyke a thele. The earthe shal quake before hym, yea, the heauens shal be moued: The sunne and moone shal be darkened, and the starres shal withdrawe theyr myne. The Lorde shal deme his hoysse before his hoste, for his hoste is grete, stronge and myghty to fulfill his commaundemente.
This is that grete and marvelous fearfull daye of the Lorde: And who is able to abyde it.

Some therefore sayeth the Lorde * Turne you vnto me with all your her-tes, with fastynge, weppynge and moun-nyng, rente your hertes, and not youre clothes. Turne you vnto the Lord your God, * for he is gracious and merciful, longe sufferynge and of greate compassion: and redye to pardone wickednes.

Then (no doute) he also shal turne, and forgiue: and after his chastenynge, he shal let your increase remaine, for meat and drinck offeringes vnto the Lorde your God: * Blowe out with the trom-pet in Syon, proclame a fastynge, cal the congregacion, and gather the people together: warne the congregacion, gather the elders, bying the chyldren and sucklynges together. Let the byrd come go forth of his chambze, and the byrde out of her closet. Let the prestes serue the Lorde betwixt the porche and the aylter, weping and saying: be sauourable. O Lorde, be sauourable vnto thy people: let not thine heritage be brought to suche confusyon, lest the heathen be lordes therof. Wherefore shoulde they saye amonge the heathen: * where is nowe theyr God?

Then shal the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare his people: yea, the Lorde shal answer, and saye vnto his people: Behold, I will sende you corne, wine, and oyle, so that ye shal haue plenty of them: and I will no more geue you ouer to be a reprove amonge the heathen.
Agayne, as for hym of the North, I shal dyue him farre from you: I shute him oute into a drye and waste land, his face toward the East sea, and his hindes betwixt toward the Westmost sea. The spynke of him shal goo vpon, and his fyl-thy corruption shal fall vpon himselfe, because he hath deale so proudly, feare not (O lande) but bee glad and reioyse, for the Lorde will do greates thynges.
Be not ye afrayed nether O ye beastes of the felde) for I pastures shal be grene, and the trees shal beare their fruite:
the figgetrees and byneparbes shal geue theyr increase.

We glad then O ye chyldren of Sion) and reioyce in the Lord your God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of righ-teousnes: and he it is that shal sende you downe humers of rayne, early and late in the fyrst moneth: so that the gardens shal be full of corne, and the prestes plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeates that the gresshopper, locuste, blasting and caterpillar (my great host, whiche I sente amongest you) haue eaten vpon, I shal restore them to you as garment: so that ye shal haue prouynge to eate

cate, and bee satisfied: and prayse the name of  $\text{p}$  Lord your God, that so maruelously hath dealete with you.

And my people shall neuer bee confounded any more. Ye shall wel knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am your God: yea, and that there is none other, and my people shall no more be broughte to confusion.

* After this, wil I poure out my spirite vpon al fleshe: and your sonnes and your daughters shall prophesye: your olde men shall dreame dreames, & your yonge men shall se visions, yea, in those dayes I wil poure out my spirite vpon seruantes and maydens. ### The. iii. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemies of his people.

Take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne againe  $\text{p}$  captiuite of Iuda and Jerusalem: I shall gather al people together and bringe them in the valley of Josaphat: and there wil I reason with the: because of my people and herptage of Israel: whome they haue scatted aboute in the nations, and parted my lande: yea, they haue caste lottes for my people, the yonge men haue they sette in the bordel house, and sold the Damsels for wyne,  $\text{p}$  they myght haue to drinke. Thou Tyrus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? Wil ye despye me? well, yf ye wil nedes despye me, I shall recompence you, euen vpon youre head, and that right shortly: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my saye and goodly Jewels, and brought them into youre gods houses. The children also of Iuda and Jerusalem haue ye sold vnto the Grekes, that ye might bringe them farre from the borders of their owne countrees.

Beholde therefore, I wil raise the out of the place, wher ye haue solde the, \* and wil rewarde you euen vpon your heade. Your sonnes and your daughters wil I sell thorow the handes of the chyldren of Iuda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto them of Saba, a people of a farre countre: for the Lord himselfe hath sayde it. Crie out these thynges amonge the Gentyles, proclarme warre, wake vp the gyantes, let them drawe nye, let the come vp al  $\text{p}$  lusty warrours of the. \* Make you sweardes of your plowshares, and speares of your spyces and sythes. Let the weake man say: I am stronge. Mustre you, and come, all ye heathen rounde aboute: gather you together, there shall the Lord laye all thy grauntes to the ground. Let the people aryse, and get the to the balley of Josaphat: for there wil I spt, and iudge al heathen round aboute. \* Laye to your sythes, for the harvest is ripe: come, get you downe: the wyne presse is full, yea, the winepresses runne ouer, for theyr wickednesse is waxen greate.

In the valley appoynted, there shall be many, many people: for the day of the Lord is nye in the valley appoynted. * The sunne and moone shall be darckened, and the starres shall withdraw their lyghte. * The Lord shall roare out of Sion, and crye out of Jerusalem, that the heauens and the earthe shall quake withall. But the Lord shall be a defence vnto his owne people, and a refuge for the chyldren of Israel. Thus shall ye know, that I the Lord your God dwel vpon my holpe mounte of Syon. Then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no straungers go thorow her any more. * Then shall the mountaynes drop swete wyne, and the hylles shall flowe wyth mylke. All the ryuers of Iuda shall haue water ynoughe, and oute of the Lordes house there shall flow a spring, to water the broke of Sitim: * but Egypte shall be layed waste, and * Edom shall be desolate: because they haue dealt cruelly with the chyldren of Iuda, and shed innocent bloude in theyr lande. Agayne, Iuda shalbe inhabyted for euer more, and Ierusalem from generacyon to generacion: for I wyl not leaue their bloude vnauenged. And the Lorde shall dwell in Syon.

The ende of the prophecy of Joel.

The booke of the prophet Amos.

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme of the prophecy of Amos. The word of the Lord against Azah, against Tyre, agaynst Edom, and against the sonnes of Ammon.

These are the Sermons that were shewed vnto Amos (whiche was one of the shepherdes at Thecua) vpon Israel, in the tyme of Osiab kyng of Iuda, and in the tyme of Zeroboam the sonne of Ioah kyng of Israel, two yere before the earthe quake. And he sayde: The Lorde shall roare oute of Sion, and shewe his voyce from Ierusalem: so that the pastures of the shepherdes shalbe in a miferable case, & the tope of Charnel dyed vp. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of Damascus, I wyl not spare her: because they haue throsed Gilead with yron stales: But I wyl sende a fire into the house of Hazael, the same shall consume the palaces of Benadab. Thus wil I breake the barres of Damascus, and rote out the inhabiter from thefeld of Auen, and him that holdeth the scepter, out of the pleasaunte house: so that the people shalbe dryuen oute of sayre Syria, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of Gaza, I will not spare her: because they make the prisoners yet more captiue, & haue dryuen them in to the land of Edom. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre in to the walles of Gaza, whiche shall deuoure her houses. I wyl rote oute them that dwel at Aldod, and hym that holdeth the sceptre of Ascalon, and stretch oute myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunte of the Philistines shal perishe sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of the city of Tyre, I wyl not spare her: because they haue increased the captiuitie of the Edomites, and haue not remembred the sterly couenaunt. Therfore wil I sende a fyre into the walles of Tyre: that shal consume her palaces. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of Edom, I wil not spare him, because he persecuted his brother in the sword, destroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred very longe, and so kept indignacy on alway by hym. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre in to Theman, which shal deuoure the palaces of Bostra.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of the chyldren of Ammon I wil not spare them: because they cryte vp the women greate with child in Gilead, to make the borders of theyr landes the wider. Therfore I wil kindle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that shal consume her palaces: with a great crye, in the day of batel, in tempest and in the daye of storme: so that theyr king shal go into captiuitie he and his princes together, sayth the Lorde.

The .ii. Chapter.

Agaynst Moab, Iuda, and Israel

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of Moab, I will not spare him: because he brent the bones of the king of Edom to ashes. Therfore wil I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Carioth: so that Moab shall perishe with a noise and the sounde of a shawme. I wyl rote out the iudge from amonge them, and slaye al his princes with him, sayth the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of Iuda, I wil not spare him: because he hath cast a syde playe of the Lorde, and not kept his commandementes: for why, they woulde nedes bee disceaued with the lyes, that their forefathers solowed. Therfore wyl I sende a fyre into Iuda, whiche shal consume the palaces of Ierusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wickedneses of Israel, I wil not spare him: because he hath sold the the ryghtuous for money, and the poore for shewes. They tread vpon poore mens heades, in the duste of the earthe, and crooke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dysprounour my holy name, they a lye beside euery aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of theyr gods they drinke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the Amozites * before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the okes: notwithstanding I destroyed his frute fro aboue and his rote from vnder.

* Agayne: I brought you out of the lande of Egypte, and led you. xl. yeres thorow the wilderness, that ye myght haue the Amozites lande in possession. I rayled by prophetes amonge your chyldren, and absteyners amonge your yonge men. Is it not so, O ye chyldren of Israell, sayeth the Lorde: * But ye gaue y absteyners wyne to drinke, * yea, ye commaunded the prophetes, saying: prophesy not. Beholde, I will craше you in sonder, lyke as a wayne craшeth, that is full of sheaues: so that the swifte shall not escape, nether the stronge be able to do any thyng: no, the giaunt shall not saue his owne life. The archer shall not abyde, and the swifte of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomacke as a gyaunte, shall in that daye be fayne to rúne his waye naked, sayth the Lorde.

The notes.

a. To lye besyde euery hylauter vpon clothes taken to pledge, is, to serue their Idolles of goodes taken by error: yon from the poore.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The reprobeth y house of Israell of wyckednes.

Hear, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chyldren of Israell) namely, vnto al the tribes, whom I broughte out of Egypte, and sayde: * you only haue I accepted from all the generacyons of the earth: therfore will I byset you in all your wickednesses. Hape twaine walcke together excepte they bee agreed amonge them selues. * Doth a lion roare in the wodde, except he haue a pray: Or crieth a lions whelp out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten somthinge: Doth a byrd fall in a snare vpon the earth where no fouler is: Taketh a man his snare by fro the ground, afore he cathe somwhat: Crye they out Alarum with the trompet in the cytie, and the people not afrayed: Commeth there any plage in a cytie without it be the Lordes doyng: * Nowe dothe the Lorde God no maner of thyng, but he telleth hys secrete before vnto hys seruantes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyl not be afrayed: Seynge then that the Lorde God hymselfe speaketh, who wyl not * prophesy:

or receane
prophesy.

Preach in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the land of Egypt, and say: gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shal ye se great murther and vyolent oppression among them, for why, they regarde not the thyng that is righte sayeth the Lorde: they gather together euell gotten goodes, and lay by robbery in theyr houses.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: This lande shalbe troubled and beseged rounde aboute, thy strengthe shalbe plucte from thee, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayth the Lorde, lyke as an heardeman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lyons mouth: Euen so the chyldren of Israell (y dwell in Samaria, haunge theyr couches in the corner, and theyr beddes at Damascus) shalbe plucte awaye. * Heare, and beate record in the house of Jacob (sayeth the Lorde God of hostes) that when I begynne to byset the wyckednesse of Israell, I will byset the aulter at Bethell also: so that the hornes of the aulter shalbe broken of, and fall to the grounde.

nesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shalbe lyft vp vpon speares, and your posterite caried awaye in fythers panpers. Ye shall get you oute at the gappes one after another, and in Armon shall ye be cast away, sayth  $\text{p}$  Lord.

Ye came to * Bethell for to worcke vnglaciousnes, & haue increased youre synnes at * Gilgal: ye brought youre sacrifices in the moynynge, and youre tythes vnto the thyrde daye. Ye made

B a thanckofferynge of leuen, ye promised frewillofferynge, and proclaimed them. Suche luste had ye, O ye chyldren of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. Therfore haue I geuen you ydle teeth in al youre cyties, and scarfenesse of breade in all youre places: yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. When there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest, I wythelde the rayne frome you: yea, I rayned vpon one cytie, and not vpon another, one pece of grounde was mofstured wyth rayne, and the ground that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Wherefore two, yea, thre cyties came vnto one, to dryncke water: but they were not satisfied, yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde.

I haue smytten you with dzothe and blastinge: and loke how manye orchardes, vineyardes, figetrees & olyue trees ye had: the caterpyller hath eaten the vp. But yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Pestylence haue I sent amonge you \* as I dyd in Egypt: your yong men haue I slaine with the sword, and caused youre hozses bee taken captiue: I made the synckinge sauoure of youre tentes to come vp into youre nostrils: Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen, \* as I ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorres: so that ye were as a brande plucked out of the fyre. Yet wil ye not turne vnto me, saith  $\text{p}$  Lorde. Therefore thus wyll I handle thee agayne, O Israel: yea, euē thus wyll I handle thee, Make the readye then to mete thy God, O Israel. for so, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeneth the wynde, he sheweth manne what he is aboute to do: he maketh the moynynge and the darcknesse, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the Lorde God of hostes is his name.

The. v. Chapter.

A complaynte of the captiuitie of Israel.

Make thys word, O ye house of Israel, and why? I muste make this mone for you: The byrgin Israel shall fail, and neuer ryse vp agayne: she shalbe caste downe vpon her owne grounde, and no man shall helpe her vp. for thus sayeth the Lorde God: Where as there dwelte a  $\text{p}$  in one cytie there shalbe left scarce an hundzeth therein: and where there dwelte an  $\text{c}$  there shalbe left scarce tenne be left for the house of Israel. Neuer thelesse, thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethell. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Bersaba: for Gilgall shalbe carped awaye captiue, & Bethel shal come to nought. Seke the Lorde, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Ioseph be bzient wyth fyre and consumed, and lest there be none to quench Bethell.

Ye turne the lawe to wormwode, and caste downe ryghtuousnes vnto the ground: * The Lorde maketh the. vii. starres and the Dyons, he turneth the nyght into daye, and of the daye he maketh darcknesse. * He calleth the waters of the sea, and poureth them oute vpon the playne grounde: the Lorde is hys name. He rayseth destruccyon vpon the myghty people, and bringeth downe the stronge holde, but they owe him euell wyll, that reprocueth them openly: and who so telleth them the playne truth, they abhorre him. for so much then as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe him of his beste sustenance: * therefore, where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in them. Maruelous pleasaunte byneyardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not dryncke: and why? as for the multitude of your wyckednesse & your stout synnes, I knowe them right well. Enemyes are ye of the ryghtuous, * ye take rewarde, ye oppresse the poore in iudgement. Therefore the wyse muste now be fayne to holde his tunge, so wycked a tyme is it.

Seke after the thyng that is good, & not euell, so shall ye lyue: yea,  $\text{p}$  Lorde God

God of hostes shall be with you, according to your owne desyre. * Hate the euell, and loue the good: set vp right a gayne in the porte: (and no doute) the Lord God of hostes shall be mercifull vnto the remnaunte of Joseph. If no (sayeth the Lord God, the god of hostes) there shall be mourning in all stretes, yea, they shall saie in euery strete: alas, alas. They shall call the husband mā to lamentacyō, and such as can mourne to mourning. In all byneyarches there shall bee heynesse, for I wyl come amonge you, sayeth the Lord. Wo bee vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lord: wherefore woulde ye haue it? As for that daye of the Lord, it shall be darcke and not cleare: Yea, like as when a manne runneth from a Lyon, and a Beere meteth with him: or when he cometh into the house, and leaneth hye hande vpon the wall, a serpente byteth hym. * Shall not the daye of the Lord be darcke, and not cleare? shall it not be cloude, and no shynne in it?

* I hate and abhorre your holy dayes, and where as ye cense me when ye come together I wyl not accepte it. And though ye offere me bzentofferynges & meatofferynges, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for youre fatte thankofferynges, I wyl not loke vpon them. I awaye with that noyse of thy songes, I wyl not heare thy playes of musicke: but se that equyte flowe as the water, & ryghtuousnesse as a myghty streame. O ye house of Israel, * gaue ye me offerynges and sacrifices those xl. yeares longe in the wyldernes: yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to your * Moloch, and Images of youre Idoles, yea, and the starre of youre god Rempha, figures whiche ye made to worshyppe them. Therefore wyl I cause you be carped awaye beyonde Damascus, sayeth the Lord, whose name is the God of hostes.

Ye are take out for the euell daye, euen ye that syt in the stole of wylfulnesse: Ye that lye vpon beddes of Iuery, and vse your wantonnesse vpon your couches: ye that eate the beste lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calves of the droaue: * ye that synge to the lute, and in playinge of instrumentes compare your selues vnto * Dauid: ye that drinke wyne out of goblettes, and anoynte your selues with the beste oyle, but no manne is sorow for Josephs hurt. Therefore now shall ye be the fyrste of them, that shall bee led awaye captiue, and the lusty chere of the wylfull shall come to an ende.

* The Lord God hath sworne euen by himselfe (sayeth the Lord God of hostes) I hate the pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I wyl geue ouer the cytye, with all that is therein: so that though there remayne ten men in one house, they shall dye. So they nexte kynfolkes and the deed butiers shall take them, and carpe awaye they bones, and saue vnto hym, that is in the ynnnermost house: is there yet any mo by the? And he shall answer: they are all gone, holde thy tunge (shall he saie) * for they woulde not remembre y<sup>e</sup> name of the Lord.

Beholde, the Lord is mynded to smyte the great houses, so that they shall decaye: and the lytle houses, that they shall cleue a sunder. Who can runne wth horses, or plow with oxen vpon the hard rockes of stone? for why, ye haue * turned true iudgemente into bytternesse, and the frute of ryghtuousnesse in to wormwode: Yea, euen ye that reioyce in bayne thynges, ye that saie: haue not we optayned hoznes in our owne strength? Wel, take hede, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lord God of hostes: I wyl bringe a people vpon you, which shall trouble you, from the waye that goeth toward Hemath, vnto the broke in the meadow..

In the Lorde God shewed suche a vision: beholde, there stood one that made gresshoppers, euen whē the corne was shutynge forth, after þe kinge had clynge his shepe. Now whē they vndertoke to eate vp all the grene thynges in the land, I sayd: O Lorde God, be mercyful, I beseech the: who shoulde els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: wel, it shal not be. Againe, the Lorde shewed me thys vjspon: be-holde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punyshe wythall, and it deuoured the Moreouer, he shewed me thys visi-people of Israel, and wpll nomore ou-saac muste be lated waste, and the chur-thys sente Amasiah the preeste to Bethel vnto Jeroboam the kynge of the there thy liuing, and prophesy there:

and prophesy no more at Bethel, for it

D Amos answered, and sayde to Ama-Lorde: Thy wyfe shalbe despyled in the

be sayne with the swearde, and thy land shalbe measured out with þe line. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vncleane land, * and Israel shalbe dyspue out of hys owne countre.

¶ The viii. Chapter.

Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lord swa-reth that he wpll fulfyll the thinges which he hath determined agaynst Israel.

In the Lord God shewed me this vision: and beholde, ther was a maunde with sommer frut, and he sayd: Amos, what seist thou? I answered: a maund with sommer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I wpll nomore ouerbide them.
In that daye shal the songes of the temple, be turned into sorow, sayeth the Lord God. Many dead bodies shal lye in euery place, and be cast forth secretlye. * Heare this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroy the nedye in the lande, sayinge: when wpll the new moneth be gone, that we may sell bytyle, and the Sabboth, that we may haue scarcenesse wayghtes, that we maye get the poore vnder vs, with theyr money, and the nedye also for shues: yea, let vs sell the chaffe for corne.

* The Lorde hathe sworne agaynst wpll I neuer forget. Shal not the land tremble, and all they that dwell therein, mourne for thys? Shall not their destruction come vpon them lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer them, as the floude of Egypte? * At the same tyme (sayeth the Lorde God) I shal cause the sunne to goo downe at none, and the lande to be darcke in the cleare day.

bes, and baldnesse vpon euery heade: yea, suche a mournynge wyl I sende theym,* as is made vpon an onely begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord God) that I shall send an hunger into the earth: not the hunger of bread, nor the thirst of water: but an hunger to heare the word of the Lord: so that they shall go from the one sea to the other, yea, from the north vnto the east, runnyng about to seeke the word of the Lord, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme, shall the fayre virgins and the yonge men perishe for thirst, yea, euen they that sweare in the offence of Samaria, and saye: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truly as thy God lyueth at Bersaba. These shall fall, and neuer rise by agayne.

C The. ix. Chapter.

Threatynnges agaynst Israell. No man can escape the hand of God.

I Sawe the Lord standing vpon the aulter, & he sayde: smyte the dore cheke, that the postes maye shake with all. For their couetousnesse shall fall vpon al their heades, and their postes shall be slayne with the sword.

* They shall not flye awaye, there shall not one of them escape; nor be deliuered. Though they were hurped in the hell, my hande shall fetch theym from thence: though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shall I caste theym downe: * though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet shall I seke them out, and bringe them fro thence: Though they crepe downe fro my sight into y<sup>e</sup> depe of the sea, I shall commande the serpente, euen there to bite theym. If they go away before their enemyes into captiuite, then shall I comaunde the sword, there to slaye them.

Thus wyl I set myne eyes vpon the, for their harme & not for their wealth. For when the Lord GOD of hostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwell therein, must needs mourne: And why? theyr destruction shall arysse as euery streame and run ouer them, as the flood in Egypte. * He that hath his dwellyng in heauen, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earth:

* He that calleth the waters of the sea, and powreth them out vpon the plaine ground: his name is the Lord. O ye chyldren of Israell, are ye not vnto me, euen as the Mozyans, sayeth y<sup>e</sup> Lord: haue not I brought Israell out of the lande of Egypt, * the Philistines from Capthor, and the Sycians from Cyprus? Beholde, the eyes of the Lord are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it cleane out of the erth: neuer theles, * I wyl not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the Lord.

For lo, this I promyse & thoughte I spte the house of Israell among al nations (like as they be to spt in a spue) yet shall not the smallest grauell stone fall vpon the earth: But al the wycked doers of my people, that saye: Cusch, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastely vpon vs: those shall perishe with the sword. * At that tyme wyl I buylde agayne the tabernacle of Dauid, that is fallen down, and hedge vp by his gap: pes: and loke what is broken, I shall repayre it: Yea, I shall buylde it agayne, as it was a foretyme, that they maye possesse the remnaut of Edom, yea, and all such people as cal vpon my name wth them, sayeth the Lord, whiche doeth these thynges.

Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth y<sup>e</sup> Lord) that the plowman shall ouertake the mower, and the treader of grapes, him that soweth seede. * The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and y<sup>e</sup> hilles shall be fruitful and I wyl turne the captiuite of my people Israell: they shall repayre the waste cyties, and haue them in possession: they shall plante vineyardes, and dryncke the wyne thereof: they shall make gardens, and entoye the frutes of them. And I wyl plant them vpon theyr owne grounde, so that

I wyl neuer rote them oute as agayne fro theyr land whiche

I haue giuen the saith

The booke of the prophete Abdi.

Agaynst Edom, and the trust that they had in tyches.

This is the vision that was shewed vnto Abdi: Thus hath y<sup>e</sup> Lorde God spoken vpon * Edo: We haue herd of the Lorde that there is an embassage sent amonge the heathen: Up, let vs arise, and fight agaynst them. We holde, * I will make the small among the heathen, so that thou shalt be bitterly despyled. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyfte the vp, thou that dwellest in the stronge holdes of stone, and haste made thee an hye seate: Thou sayest in thyne hert: who shall cast me downe to the grounder? But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Aegle, and madest thy nest aboue among the starrs: yet woulde I plucke the downe fro thence.

¶ If the theues and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takynge thy rest: should they not steale, tyll they had ynough?
¶ If the grape gatherers came vpon the,
would they not leaue the some grapes?
But how shall they rype Esau, and seke out his treasures?

¶ Yea, the men that were sworn vnto the, shall dryue the out of the borders of thyne owne lande. They that be now at one with the, shall disceauce thee, and o-uercome thee: Euen they that eate thy breade, shall betraye thee, or euer thou perceauce it. * Shall not I at the same tyme destroye the wyse men of Edom, & those that haue vnderstandyng, fro the mount of Esau? Thy graues, O The-man, shall be afraied, for thou shalt be all ouerthrowen vpon the mount of Esau. Shame shall come vpon the, for the malice * y<sup>e</sup> thou shewedest to thy brother Jacob: yea, for euermore shalt thou perishe, & that because of the tyme, when thou dydest set thy selfe agaynst him, euen when the enemyes caried awaye his hooke, and when the aleauntes came in at his portes, and cast lottes vpon Ierusalem, & thou thy selfe wast as one of them.

Thou shalt nomore se the day of thy brother, thou shalt no more beholde the tyme of his captiuite: thou shalt no more reioyce ouer y<sup>e</sup> chyldren of Iuda, in the daye of their destruction, y<sup>e</sup> shalt trumphe no more in the tyme of their trouble. Thou shalt no more come in at the gates of my people, in the tyme of their decaye: thou shalt not se their mysery in the day of their fall.

Thou shalt sende out no man agaynst their host, in the daye of their aduersy-te: nether shalt thou stande waytynge any more at the corners of the stretes, to murther suche as are fled, or to take them prisoners, that remayne in y<sup>e</sup> day of their trouble. For the daye of y<sup>e</sup> Lorde is hard by vpon al the heathen. * Like as thou hast done, so shalt thou be dealt withall, yea, thou shalt be rewarded euen vpon thyne head. For lyke wyse as ye haue dryncken vpon myne holy hil, so shall all heathen dryncke contyn-ually: yea, dryncke shall they, and swallow vp, so that ye shall be, as though ye had neuer bene.

But vpon the mount Syon, there shall a remnant escape: these shall be ho-lye, * and the house of Jacob shall pos-seesse euen those, that had theym selues aforein possession. Moreover, * y<sup>e</sup> house of Jacob shall be a fyre, y<sup>e</sup> house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau shall be the strawe: which they shall kyndle & consume, so that nothinge shall be left of the house of Esau, for the Lorde himselfe hath sayde it. They of the southe shall haue the mount of Esau in possession: and loke what lieth vpon y<sup>e</sup> ground, that shall the philistines haue: y<sup>e</sup> plaine feldes shall Ephraim & Samaria pos-seesse: & the mountaynes of Gilead shall Beniamin haue. And this host shall be the chyldren of Israels prisoners: how what so lyeth from a Canaan vnto Jereptah, and in Sepharad, that shall be vnder the subiection of Ierusalem: and the cyties of the South shall inherite it.
Thus they that escape vpon the hill of Syon, shall go vp to punish y<sup>e</sup> mount of Esau, & the kyngdome shall be y<sup>e</sup> Lordy.

¶ C. into the Christian reader.

As the envious whilkenes stopped the welles of Abrahā and filled them vp with erth, to put the memorie out of mynd, to the intent that they might challenge the grounde:
euen so the selfe mynded hypocrites stoppe by the baines of lyfe whiche are in the scripture, with the erth of their traditions, false symilitudes and lying allegories, and that of lyke yele, to make the scripture theiꝝ owne possession and marchaundise: so to shutte vp the kyngdome of heauen, whiche is Gods worde, vnder the enterynge in theiꝝ selues not sufferinge them that woulde.

The scripture hath a bodie withoute, and with in a soule, spirite and lyfe. It hath without a barche, a shel, and as it were an hard bone for the fleshy mynded to knawe vpon. And with in it hath a pith, cornell, marrow, and all sweetnes for Goddes electe which he hath chosē to geue them his spirite, and to write his lawe and the fayth of his sonne in their hertes.

The scripture conteineth the thynges in it, first the lawe to condemne all fleshe: secondarily the gospel, that is to say, promyses of mercy for all that repente and knowlege of their synnes at the preaching of the law, and consent in their hertes that the lawe is good and submit theiꝝ selues to be scollers, to learne to kepe the lawe and to learne to beleue the mercie that is promised them: and thirdly the stories and lyes of those scollars bothe what chaunces fortun-ed them, and also by what meanes their scollers taught them, and made them perfect, and howe he tried the true from the false.

When the hypocrites come to the lawe, they putte gloses to, and make no more of it then of a worldely lawe whiche is sarified with the out-warde worke, and which a Turke may also ful-fyl. When yet Gods lawe ceaseth not to rebuke a man vntill it be written in his herte, and vntill he kepe it naturally without compulsion, and all other respecte, saue onely of pure loue to God, and his neyghbour, as he naturallie ea-teth when he is an hongred, without compulsion, and all other respecte saue to slake his hon-gre onely.

And when they come to the gospel, there they myngle their leuen and saye: God nothe receaueth vs no more to merce, but of merce recepueth vs to penaunce, that is to myrr, holpe deces that make them fatte belies, and vs their captiues, both in soule and bodie. And yet they saye theiꝝ whole the hope to mercifull that yf they make a lytle monye glyster in his Balams eyes, there is nether penaunce nor purgatorie, nor anye fastinge at all but to spe to heauen as fowle as a thought, and at the twpuckelynge of an eye.

And the lyes, stories and gyftes of meime, which are coueyned in the Wyble, they reade as thynges no more perteyning vnto the, then a tale of Robyn hode, and as thynges they wote not where to they serue, saue to saye false discant, & iugling allegories, to stablysh their kyngdom with all. And one the cheefest and fleshyest study they haue, is to magnifie sayntes about measure and aboute tructh, and with their poetrie to make them greater then euer god made them.

And yf they fynde any infirmite or synne ascribed vnto the sayntes, that they excuse with all dyligence, by minispyng the glorie of the mercy of God, and robbynge wretched synners of all their comfort, and thusche thereby to flatter the sayntes, and to obayne theiꝝ fauoure, and to make speciall aduocates of theiꝝ, euen as a man woulde obayne the fauoure of worldely ri-chautes as they also saye the sayntes more cruell then euer was any Iherseyman, and more wrethfull and vengeable then the poeres sayne theiꝝ goddes, or their furies that torment the sou-les in hell, if theiꝝ euens be not fasted, and their ymages bysyt and saluted with a water no-ster (which praye onely oure lyppes be accounted with oure hertes vnderstandynge none at all and worshipped with a candle, and the offering of oure deuotion, in the place whiche they haue chosē to heare the supplicacions, and make petitions of their clientes therin.)

But thou reader, thinke of the lawe of God, howe that it is all together spirituall, and so spirituall that it is neuer fulfilled with dedes or workes, vntill they flowe oute of thyne herte with as great loue toward theiꝝ neyghbour, for no deseruynge of his, yet though he be thyne enemye, as Christ loued the, and dyed for the, for no deseruynge of thyne, but euen when thou wast his. And in þe meane tyme, thou wote all our infancie and childe hode in Christ, till we be growwen vp into perfecte men in the full knowlege of Christe and full loue of Christe agayne, and of our neyghbours for his sake, after the ensample of his loue to vs, remember that the fulfyl-lynge of þe lawe is, a fast fayth in Christes bloud, coupled with our profession, and submytynge our selues to learne to do better.

And of the Gospel or promyses whiche thou merest in the scripture, beleue fast that God wil fulfyl them vnto the, and that vnto the vttermost ior, at the repentaunce of thyne hert, when thou turnest to hym, and forsakest euell, euen of hys goodnesse and fatherly merce vnto the, and not for thy flatterynge hym with hypocritish wor-kes of thyne owne saynyng. So that a fast fayth onely without respecte of all workes, is the forgeueneesse bothe of the synne, whiche we dyd in tyme of ignorance with lust & consent to synne, and also of all the synne which we do by chauce & of frauple, after þe we are come to knowlege and haue professed the lawe oute of oure hertes.
And al dedes serue onely for to helpe our neygh-bours, and to tame oure fleshe that we fall not to synne agayne, and to exercise oure soules in vertue, & not to make sarification to Godward for the synne that is ones past.

And all other stories of the Wyble, withoute exception, are the practisynge of the lawe and of the Gospel, and are true and faythful ensamples and sure earnest that God wyl euen so deale with vs, as he dyd with them, in al infirmities, in all temptacions, and in lyke cases and chaunces. Wher in yete on the one syde, howe fatherly and tenderly and with all compassion God entreateth his cleer which submytte theiꝝ sel-ues

The Prologue.

ues as scoles, to learne to walke in the wayes of hys lawes, and to kepe them of loue. If they forgatte theym selues at a tyme, and wente agayne with all mercye. If they fell and hurte theym selues, he healed theym agayne with all compassion and tenderesse of hert. He hath oft brought great tribulacion and aduersite vpon his electe: but all of fatherly loue onely, to teach theym and to make them se their owne herres, and þ synne that there laye hyd, that they might afterwarde scale hys mercye. For hys mercye wayted vpon them, to rydde them oute agayne, as soon as they were leaured, & come to þ knowledge of their owne herres, so that he neuer cast man awaye, howe depe so euer he hadde synned saue them onely whiche had fyrt cast the yoke of hys lawes from their neckes, with vtter dysfraunce and malice of herte. Whiche ensamples howe comfortable are they for vs, when we be fallen into synne, and God is come vpon vs with a scourge, that we dyspeare not, but repent with full hope of mercye, after the ensamples of mercye that are gone before. And therefore they were wyttten for oure lernynge, as testyfyeth Dauid. Romanorum. xv. to comfort vs, that we myght the better put our hope and trust in God, when we se, howe mercyfull he hath bene in tymes past vnto our weak bretheren that are gone before, in all their aduersities, neede, temptacions, yea, and horrible synnes, into whiche they nowe and then fell.

And on the other syde, yf se howe they that hardened their heartes, and synned of malice, and refused mercye that was offered theym, and had no power to repent, perished at the latter ende with all confusyon and shame mercylessly. Whiche ensamples are verie good and necessary, to kepe vs in awe and drede in tyme of prosperite, as thou mayest se by Dauid. i. Cor. x. that we abyde in the feare of God, and ware not wylde, and fall to vanities, and so synne, and prouoke God, and byrnye his wrath vpon vs.

And thysdely yf se, in the practyse, howe as God is mercyfull and longe sufferynge, euen so here al hys true prophetes & preachers, bearyng þ infirmities of their weak bretheren, and their own wronges & iniuries with al pacyence & long sufferynge, neuer castynge any of theym of their backs, vntill they synned agaynst the holpe of hope, malyciously persecutynge the open and manifest trouthe: contrarie vnto the ensample of the hope, whiche in synnyng agaynst God, and to quenche the trueth of hys holpe spirit, is euer chiefe captayne and tromper bloker, to set other a worke, and seketh onely hys owne freedom, lyberte, pryuelledge, wealth, prosperite, pleasure, pastyme, honour and glorie, with the bondage, thraldome, captiuitie, miserie, wretchednesse and vyle subiection of hys bretheren: and in his owne cause is so feruent, so styffe and cruell, that he wyll not suffer one worde spoken agaynst hys false magesty wply inuencions and suglynge pproctyse to be vnduneged, though he all churche dome shoulde be sette together by the eares, and shoulde cost he cared not howe manye hundred thousande they lyues.

Nowe that thou mayest reade Jonas testyfyll, and not as a poetesfable, but as an obligacion betwene God and thy soule, as an earnest penne geuen the of God, that he wyll helpe the intyme of neede, yf thou tourne to hym, & as the worde of God the onely fode and lyfe of thy soule, this marke and note. Fyrt counte Jonas the frende of God, and a man chosen of God to testyfy his name vnto the world: but yet a yong scholer, weak and rude after the fashion of the apostles, whyle Christ was yet with them bodily, whiche thoughte Christ taught them euer to be meke, and to vmbles theym selues yet ofte stroue amonge them selues who shoulde be greatest. The sonnes of sebede woulde syt, the one on the ryght hande of Christ, and the other on the lefte. They woulde praye, that fyrt in pght descende from heauen, and consume the Samaritans.

When CHRIST ayled who sape men that I am, Peter answered: thou arte the sonne of the lyuing God, as thoughte Peter hadde bene as perfect as an Angel: But immediatly after, whē CHRIST preached vnto them of hys deathe and passyon. Peter was angrey and rebuked CHRIST, and thoughte earnestly that he had raued, and not wylde what he sayde, as at another tyme, when CHRIST was so feruently busyed in healynge the people, that he hadde no leyser to eate, they went oute to holde him, supposynge that he had bene besyde him selfe. And one that caste oute deuils in CHRISTES name, they forbadde, because he wayted not on them, so glorious were they yet.

And though CHRIST taughte all waye to forgyue, yet Peter after longe goynge to scole, ayled whether men shoulde forgyue. vii. tymes, thynckynge that eight times had bene to much. And at the laste supper, Peter woulde haue dyed with CHRIST, but yet within felwe howies after, he denyed him, both cowardly and shamefully. And after the same maner, though he had so longe hearde that no man myght auenge him selfe, but rather tourne the other cheker, then to smyte agayne, yet when CHRIST was in takynge, Peter ayled whether it were lawefull to smyte with the swearde, and tarped none answer, but layed on rashly. So that though he when we come fyrst vnto the knowledge of the trueth, and the peace is made betwene God and vs, and we loue hys lawes, and beleue and trust in him, as in our father, and haue good herres vnto him, and be borne a newe in the spirit, yet we are but children and yong scoles, weak and feble, and must haue lapyse to growe in the spirit, in knowledge, loue and in the dedes thereof, as yong children must haue tyme to growe in their bodies.

And God our father and scole master feedeth vs, and teacheth vs, accordynge vnto the capacite of our stomaches, and maketh vs to growe and ware perfecte, and syneth vs, and tryeth vs, as golde in the fyre of temptacions and tribulacions. As Moses wytnesseth Deuteronom. viii. saying: Remember all the waye by whiche the LORD thy God caried the thys fourtie yeares in the wyldernesse, to vmbles thee, and to tempte or prouoke the, that it myght be knowen what were in thyne hearte. He brought the into aduersite, and made the an hongred, and then fedde the with manna, whiche neyther thou, nor yet thy fathers euer knewe of, to teache that a man lyueth not by bread onely, but by al that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. For the promyses of God are lyfe vnto all that cleane vnto them, muche more then is brede and bodi-he sustenance, as the iourney of the chyl dren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte into the land promysed them, ministereth the notable ensamples, and that aboundauntlye, as doeth all the rest of the Bible also. Howe be it, it is impossible for the to beleue and to truste in the truerth of GODS promyses, vntyll he haue learned it in muche tribulacion, after that GOD hath deliuered him out thereof agayne.

GOD therfore to teach Jonas, and to shew hym hys owne heretie, and to make him perfecte, and to instructe vs also by hys ensample, sente hym out of the lande of Israell, to where he was a prophete, to go amonge the Heathen people, and to the greatest and myghtyest cytye of the worlde then, called Ninue: to preach that with in fourtye dayes they should all perishe for their synnes, and that the cytye should be ouerthrowen. Whiche message the freewyll of Jonas had as moche power to do, as the weakest heretie wo man in the worlde hath power, yf he were commaunded, to leape into a topp of Iyunge snakes, and adders: as happelye yf GOD had commaunded S ara to haue sacrificed her sonne Isaac, as he dyd Abraham, he would haue disputed with him, yet he had done it, or though he were stronge enough, yet many an holpe saynet coulde not haue founde in their heretie, but woulde haue dysobeyed, and haue runne away from the presence of the commaundement of GOD with Jonas, yf they had bene so strongly tempted.

For Jonas thoughte of this maner: loe, I am here a prophete vnto GODS people the Israelites. Whych though they haue GODS worde testified vnto them daylye, yet dyspise it, and worshyppe GOD vnder the lyknesse of calues, and after all maner fashyons, saue after hys owne worde, and therefore are of al nacions the worst and most worthy of punishment. And yet GOD for loue of fewe that are among them and for his names sake spareth them, and defendeth them. Howe then shoulde GOD take so cruell vengeance on so great a multitude of the, to whome his name was neuer preached to, and therefore are not the tenth parte so euill as these: If I shall therefore go preache, so shall I lyve, and shame my selfe and GOD thereto, and make them the more to dyspise GOD, and sette the lesse by hym, and to be the more cruell vnto hys people.

And vpon that ymaginacyon he fledde from the face or presence of GOD: that is, out of the countrey where GOD was worshipped in, and fro the prosecutyng of GODS commaundement, and thought, I wyl gette me another waye amonge the Heathen people, and be no more a prophete, but lyue at rest, and out of all combrance. Neuerthelesse that GOD of al mercye which careth for his eldere children, and turneth all vnto good to them, and smytheth the, to heale them agayne, and killeth them, to make them asyue agayne, and playeth with them (as a father doeth sometyme with hys yonge ignorant children) and tempereth them, and prouerth them, to make them see theyr owne heautes, prouided for Jonas, howe all thynges shoulde be.

When Jonas was entred in to the wyppye, he layed him downe to slepe and to take his rest: that is, hys conscience was tolled betwene the commaundement of GOD whych charged hym to Ninue, and hys despayre wyppye dome that dyswadeth, and counsaileth hym the contrarie, and at the laste preuailed against the commaundement, and carped hym another waye, as a wyppye caught betwene two trees, and as poetes sayne the mother of Agellager to be betwene dyuerse affections, while to aduenge her brothers death, she sought to sle her owne sonne. Where vpon for verpe payne and tedpousnesse, he laye downe to slepe, for to putte the commaundement which so gnewe & feared his conscience, out of mynde, as the nature of al weakened is, when they haue spynned a good, to seke all meanes with riot, reuell and pastyme, to dyspue the remembraunce of synne out of their thoughtes: or as Adam dyd, to cover their nakednes with apouns of pope holy workes. But GOD awoke him out of his dreame, and set his synnes before his face.

For when that lot had caughte Jonas, the be sure that his synnes came to remembraunce agayne, and that hys conscience ragged no lesse then the waues of the sea. And then he thoughte that he onely, was a synner, and the Heathen that were in the wyppye none in respecte of him, and thoughte also, as verelye as he was fledde from GOD, that as verelye GOD had cast him awaye: for the syghte of the rodde maketh the naturall chylde not onely to se and to know ledge his faulte, but also to forget al his fathers olde mercye and kyndnesse. And then he confessed his synne openly, and had yet leuce perishe alone, then that the other woulde haue perished with him for his sake: and so of very desperacion to haue lyued any longer, had cast him into the sea betwene, excepte they woulde be lost also.

To speake of lottes, howe forth they are latwefull is a lyght question: firste to vse them for the breaking of strepe, as when partenars, theyr goodes as equallye deuided as they can, take euery man his part by lotte, to auoide all suspencion of disceyfulnesse: and as the Apostels in the first of the Actes, when they sought another to succede Judas the traytour and two persons were presented, then to breake strife, and to sayrlye all parties, dyd caste lottes whether shoulde be admitted, desyringe GOD to temper them, and to take whome he kene mooste mete, seyng: they wyl not whether to preferre, or haplye coulde not all agree, on eyther is lawefull and in all lyke cases. But to abuse them, vnto the tempringe of GOD, and to compell hym thereto wyllyng to breke thynges where of we stonde in doubte, when we haue no commaundement of him so to do, as these Heathen here dyd: though GOD turned it vnto his glory, can not be but euill.

The Heathen wyppmen astonied at the sight of the myracle, feared GOD, prayed to him, offered sacrifice and bowed downes. And I doubt not, but that some of them or haplye all came there by vnto the true knowledge, and true worshypinge of GOD, and were wonne to GOD in their soules. And thus GOD whiche is infinite mercifull in all his wayes wrought their soules healtie out of the infirmite of Jonas, euen of his good wyl and purpose & lone, where with he loued them before the worlde was made, and not of chaunce, as it appeareth vnto eyes of the ygnorant.

And that Jonas was three dayes and three nyghtes in the belye of his fyssh: we can not thereby proue vnto the Jewes and infydels or vnto

unto any man, that CHRIST muste therefore dye, and be buried, and rise agayne. But we vse the ensample and lykenes to strengthe the saythe of the weak. For he that beleueth the one canue not doubte in the other: in as muche as the hand of GOD was no lesse myghtye in preseruinge Jonas alpyc agaynst all naturall possybylprye, and in deliueringe hym safe oute of hys fyfthe, then in resynging vpon CHRIST agayne oute of hys sepulchre. And we maye describe the power and vertue of the resurrection therby, as Christe him selfe dothoweth the simplicitie thereto. Mattheu. xii. sayinge vnto the Jewes that came aboute him: and desyred a sygne or a wonder from heuyn, to certifie them that he was CHRIST: this cruel and wedlocke breaking nation (which breaketh the wedlocke of fapth, wherewith they be maryed vnto GOD, and beleue in their false worches) seke a sygne, but there shall no sygne be geuen theym, save the sygne of the prophete Jonas. For as Jonas was thre dayes and thre nyghtes in the bely of the whale, euen so shall the sonne of man be thre dayes and thre nyghtes in the hearte of the earth. Whiche was a watch worde, as we saie, and a sharpe threatenyng vnto the Jewes, and as muche to saie, as thus: ye haue heretofore seke a sygne: lo, this shalbe your sygne, as Jonas was raysted oute of the sepulchre of hys fyfthe, and then sente vnto the Ninuities to preache that they should perishe, euen so shall I rise agayne oute of my sepulchre, and come and preache repentance vnto you. Se therefore when ye se the signe, that ye repent or elles ye shall surely perishe and not escape. For though the infirmities, whiche ye nowe see in my fleshe, be a lette vnto your fathers, ye shall yet then be without excuse, when ye se so greate a miracle and so greate power of GOD shewed out vpon you. And so CHRIST came agayne after the resurrection in his spirite, and preacht repentance vnto them, by the mouth of his Apostles and disciples, and with miracles of the holy ghost. And al that repented not, perished shortly after, and the rest carped away captiue into all quarters of the worlde for an ensample, as ye se vnto this day.

And in lyke maner sence the worlde began, wherofore repentance was offered and not receyued, there GOD toke cruell vengeance immediatly, as ye se in the floude of Noe, in the ouerthrowing of Sodome and Gomor, and all the countrey aboute, and as ye see of Egypte, of the Amorites, Cananites, and afterwarde of the very Israelites, and then at the laste of the Jewes to, and of the Assyrians and Babylonians, and so thorow out al the emperies of the worlde.

Sidas preached repentance vnto the olde Britayne that inhabited Englande: they repented not, and therefore GOD sent in their enemies vpon them on euery syde, and destroyed them byp, and gaue the lande vnto other nacpons. And greate vengeance hath bene taken in that lande for synne sence that tyme.

Whye I preached repentance vnto our fathers not long sence: they repented not, for their heartes were indurate, and theyr eyes blinded with their owne hope holie ryghtwysenesse, wherby they had made theyr soules gaye agaynst the receyving agayne of the wycked spirite that byngeth seuen worse then himselfe, wherby he maketh a latter ende worse then the begynnyng: for in open synnes there is hope of repentance, but in holpe pproctyspe none at all. But what folowed (they sette their true and ryght kyng and set byr the wronge kynges atowe, vnder whiche all the noble bloude was slayne byp, and halfe the commens thereto, what in Fraunce, and what with their owne swearde, in syghing among theym selues for the crowne, and the cyties and townes decayed, and the lande brought halfe into a wylderneesse, in respecte of that it was before.

And now CHRIST to preache repentance, is risen yet once agayne oute of his sepulchre, in whiche the hope hadde buried him and kepte him downe with hys pylars and poles, and all dyspynges of pproctyspe, with oyle, wyles and falshede, and with the swearde of al princes, whiche he had blinded with his false machaundise. And as I doubte not of the ensamples that are past, so am I sure that great wrath wyll folowe, except repentance turne it backe agayne and cease it.

When Jonas had bene in the fyfthe bely a space and the rage of his conscience was somewhat quieted and swaged, and he come to hym selfe agayne, and had receyued a lyric hope, the qualmes and pangues of desperation which went ouer his herte, halfe ouer come, he prayed, as he maketh mencion in the terte, sayinge: Jonas prayed vnto the LORDE hys GOD oute of the bely of the fyfthe. But the wordes of that prayer are not here set. The prayer that here standeth in the terte, is the prayer of praise and thanksgyving, which he prayed and wrote when he was escaped and past all leopardeye.

In the ende of whiche prayer he sayeth, I wyll sacrifice with the hope of thanksgyuing, and paye that I haue vowed, that sayyng cometh of the LORDE. For verely to confesse oute of the hert, that all benefytes come of GOD, euen oute of the goodnesse of hys mercy, and not despyng of oure dedes, is the onely sacrifice that pleaseth GOD. And to beleue that all the Jewes vowed in theyr circumcision, as we in oure baptysme. Whye the volue Jonas now taughte with experience, promyseth to paye. For those outward sacrifices of beastes, vnto whiche Jonas had haplye ascribed to muche before, were but feble and chyldishe thynges, and not ordeyned, that the worches of them selues shoulde be a seruite vnto the people, to put them in remembrance of this inward sacrifice of thankes, and of sayth to trust and beleue in GOD the onely sauer. Whye the significacion when it was awaye, they were abhominable and dyuellishe ydolatre and image seruite: as our ceremonies and sacramentes are become now to all that trust and beleue in the worke of theym, and are not taughte the synnyng capens, to chyspe their soules with knoweledge and the doctrine of GOD.

When Jonas was cast vpon land agayne, then his wyll was free, and had power to go whither GOD sente him, and to do what GOD bad, his owne imaginacions layed a part. For he had bene at a newefoule, yea, and in a fornace where he was purged of muche refuse and molte of fleshy wyldome, whiche resyted the wyldome of GOD, and led Jonas wyll contrary vnto the wyll of GOD. For as farre as we be blinded in Adam, we can not but seke and wyll oure owne profyte, pleasure and glory. And as farre as we be taught in the spirite, we can not but seke and wyll by the pleasure and glory of God only.

And as the threedayes tauerney of Jonas, whereby it were in length to go round about it, as thowout all the streets, I committe vnto the discretioun of other men. But I thinke that it was then the greatest cite of the world.

And that Jonas went a dayes tauerney in the cite, I suppose he did it not in one day: but with saynt and easye preachinge here a sermon, and there another: rebuked the synne of the people for whiche they must perishe.

And when thou arte come vnto the repentance of the Minuites, there wast thou sure to see, that howe so euer angere God be, yet he comendeth mercy vnto all that truly repent and beleue in mercy. Whiche ensample our saynt Paul also carthly in the tere of the indurate Pharisees, saying: the Minuites shall crite in iudgement vnto thes nacion and condemn them, for they repented at the preachinge of Jonas, and beholde a greater then Jonas, here meauynge of him selfe. At whose preachinge yet, though it were neuer so myghty to perse the herte, and for all his myracles hereto, the hardenid Pharisees coulde not repent: when the Pharisees Minuites repented at the bare preachinge of Jonas, rebuking their synnes with oute anye myracle at all.

Why for the Pharisees had leuened the spiritual law of God, and to the glorie of God had made it altogether carthy and fleshy, and so had set a baile in couerunge on Gods face, to shadowe and darken the glorious brightnes of his countenance. It was a synne to steale: but to robbe widowes houses vnder a colour of longe prayeng, and to passe in the name of offeringes, and to snare the people with intolerable coucturions agaynst all loue, to ketch their monney out of their purses, was no synne at all.

To synne father and mother was synne. But to withdraue helpe from them at their nede, for blynd zeile of offereng, vnto the prospe of the holp pharises was then as mercynous as it is now to lette all thy kynne chose whether they will synne or shynne, whyle thou buydest and makest godly solidacons for holy people, which thou hast chose to be thy churche, for to soule thy soule with oyle of thep's sinne blesynges, & to be thy Jesus, for to saue thy soule from the purgatory of the bloude that onely purgeth synne, with their watchinge, fastyng, & towardes goyng, and cryng at mydnyght. &c. wherewith yet they purge not theym selues from their coucturionnes, pryde, lechery, or any vyce that thou seist amonge the lase people.

It was great synne for Christe to heale the people on the Sabbath daye vnto the glorie of God his father, but none at all for the to helpe their carrell vnto their owne prayre. It was synne to eate with vniuersen habes, or on an vniuersen table, or out of an vniuersen dysh, but to eate out of that purified dysh, that whiche came of bypberpe, therre and cōfession, was no synne at all.

It was excreabyng mercurious to make many disciples. But to teachy them to feare God in his countenances, had they no care at all.

The Pharisees so defended the ryght of holy church, and so feared the people with the crite of God and terribil paynes of hell, that no man durst leaue the vylest herbe in his garden vnpryde. And the offerenge and thynges dedicate vnto God for the prospe of his holy bytars wherein was such estrination & reuerence, that it was much greater syn to swece cruelly by them, then to forswece thy selfe by God, what vengeance then of God, and howe terrible and cruell damnycon thynke yemached they to fall on them that had stouen to the holy thynges? And yet sayeth Christ, that ryghtwysnes and sayth, in keepinge promysse, in mercy and in iudgement were vnto thes nation vnderfoure, and cleane dyspyed of those blessed fathers, which so myghtely magnifyed Gods partyng, and had made it to prosperous and enurtoned it, and wasted it aboute on euery syde with the feare of God, that no man durst touch it.

It was great holynes to hatynge the sepulchres of the prophetes, and to condemn thes owne fathers for sleynge of them, and yet were they them selues, for blynd zeile of their owne constitution, as readye as their fathers to slea whoso euer resisted vnto them, the same cruelty which the prophetes resisted vnto their fathers. So that Christ comparith all the ryghtwysnes of those holy patriarches, vnto the outward beuetye of a paynted sepulchre full of stynche and all vnclennes within. And finally to begyle a man's neyghbour in subtle bargayning and to withhede and compasse him in word cannyes of the lawe, was then as it is now in the kynghome of the Pope. By the reason wherof they excluded the laue of loue out of their heres, and consequently all true repentance: for howe coulde they repent of that they coulde not se to be synne.

And on the other syde they had set by a rightwysnes of holpe waches, to cleane thre soules withall, as the Pope sanctifyeth vs with holpe oyle, holpe breade, holpe saltre, holpe candels, holpe dome cere monies, holpe dome blesynges, & with whatforer holynes thou wilt saue with the holynes of Gods worde, whiche onely speaketh vnto the herte, and thretheth the soule his synnes, and vnto the synnes of synne, and leadeh her by the waye repentance vnto the fountain of Christes bloud to washe it awaye thowout sayth. By the reason of whiche false ryghtwysnes they were disobedient vnto the ryghtwysnes of God, which is the forgiveness of syn in Christ's bloud, and coulde not beleue it. And so thowme they helpe interpretynge the lawe and false imagined rightwysnes, their heartes were hardenid, and made as stoupe as claye in an hote furnace of fyre, that they coulde receaue nether repitance nor sayth of any maner of grace at all.

But the Pharisees Minuites, though they were blynded with lutes a good, yet were in thos. in. poyntes vncorrupte and vnhardened, and therefore with the onely preachinge of Jonas came vnto the knowledge of their synnes, and confessed them, and repented truly, and couened euery man fed his euell dedes, and declared their sorow of herte, and true repentance, with their dedes, whiche they dyd out of sayth and hope of forgiveness, chastysing their bodies with prayer and fastyng, and with sayng all pleasures from the fleshe trustyng, as God was angere for thep's wickednesse, euen so should he forgueue them of his mercy if they repented and forsoke their myse lusing.

And in the laste ende of a ll, thou hast yet a godly ensample of letynge, to se howe cruelly Jonas is spyl for all his strengthe in the whales belye. He was so sore dyspleased, because the Minuites

its perished not, that he was werye of his lyfe, & wrythed after death for verye sorowe, that he hath lost the gloire of hys propheteinge, in that hys prophesye came not to passe. But GOD rebuked him with a lykenes, saying: it greweth thine hearte for the losse of a byle wodde or spraye wheron thou bestoweddest no laboure or coste, nether was it thine hande worche. How much more then wouldest it greve myne heert the losse of so great a myltitude of innocentes as art in Hell, whiche are all myne handes worche. Saye Ionas. I am GOD ouer all, and father as wel vnto the heathen as vnto the Jewes, and merciful to all, and warne yet I smyte, nether thurt I so cruelly by any prophet, but that I wyl forgive yf they repent, and are meteynded on the other syde, what so euer, I promise, wyl I fulfill it, saue for they take onely which trust in me, and submit thein selues to kepe my lawes of verye loue, as natur all children.

On this maner to rede the scripture is the waye vnto theol, and wby the holy ghost caused it to be wrytten. That is, that thou first seke out the lawe, that GOD wyl haue the to do, interpretinge it spirituallie without glose or conceytinge the byghyns of Moyses face, so that thou seest in thine heert, how that it is damnable synne before GOD, not to loue thine neyghbour that is thine enemy, as purely as CHRIST loved thee, and that not to loue thine neyghbour in thine heert, is to haue committed alreadye all synne agaynst hym. And therefore vntill that thou be come, thou must knowledg vnfaynely that there is synne in the best dede thou doest. And it muste earnestlye greue thine hearte, and thou muste make al thy good dedes in CHRISTES bloude yf they can be pure and an acceptable sacrifice vnto GOD, and muste desyre GOD the father for his sake, to take thy dedes a worthe, and to pardone the imperfectenes of them, and to geue thee power to do them better, and with more feruent loue.

And on the other side thou muste seache diligentlye for the promysse of mercye, wby the GOD hath promysed the agayne. Wby the two poyntes, that is to wete, the lawe spirituallie interpreted, howe that all is damnable synne, that is not vnfayned loue out of the grounde and botome of the heert, after the ensample of CHRISTES loue to vs, because we be all equallye created and formed of one GOD our father, and indifferentlye boughte and redeemed with one blod of our sauour JESUS CHRIST: and that the promysse be geuen vnto a repentynge soule, that thyselfe and lougeth after them of the pure and fatherlye mercye of GOD, thou shalt our saye the onely withoute all deservynge of our dedes or merites of our workes, but for CHRISTES sake alone, and for the merites and deservynge of hys workes, death and passyons that he suffered altogether for vs, and not for him selfe: whiche two poyntes I say, if they be wrytten in thine heert are the eyes whiche so open all the scripture vnto the, that no creature can looke the oute, and with whiche thou shalt go in and out, and fynde pasture and fode euer where. And yf these lessons be wrytten in thine hearte, then is all the scripture thine byp, as a corne in the field, so that thou mayest read it and commen of it, and reuerse all the stories of it, and dispute so clype and be a profounde sophister, and yet understande not one nor therof.

And thirdly that thou take the stories and lyues whiche are coneyned in the byble, for sure and vndoubted ensamples that GOD so wyl deale with vs vnto the worldes ende.

Herewith shaldest thou be comend vnto GOD, and vnto the grace of hys spirite. And fynde se thou stoppe not thine eares vnto the callinge of GOD, and thou shaldest not thine heert begiled with fleschelye interpretinge of the lawe, and false ymagined and ypoctishe rightnesnes, and so the Rynuttes fyte with thee at the daye of Judgement and condempne thee.

And secondarilye, yf thou fynde oughte amysse, when thou seest thy selfe in the glasse of GODS worde, thynke it compendious wyse, to amende the same betymes, monefynd and warned by the ensample of other men, rather then to tary vntill thou be hearen also.

And thirdly yf it shall so chaunce, that the world lodes of thy synne shall blind the, and carye the cleue awaye with them for a tyme: yet at the latter ende, when the GOD of all mercye shall haue compassed the in on euery syde with temptacions, tribulation, aduersities and comballice, to bringe the home agayne vnto thine ome heert, and to set thy synnes whiche thou wouldest so faste couer and put out of mynde with delictacion of voluptuous pastimes, before the eyes of thy conscience, then call the sayfull ensample of Ionas, and all the stories vnto thy remembrance, and with Ionas turne vnto the father that smote the not to cast the awaye, but to laye a corolpe, and a frearyng place: with the poete that laye byd and fret inwarde, to make the disease out, and to make it appeare, that thou mightest seale thy synnes and the daunger thereof, and to come and receyue the healyng playster of mercye.

And forgerre not that whatsoeuer ensample of mercye GOD hath shewed since the begynnyng of the world, the same is promysed the, yf thou wylt in lyke maner tounce agayne, and receyue it as they dyd. And with Ionas be acknowledged of thy synne and confesse it and knowledg it vnto thy father.

And as the lawe whiche seareth thy conscience, is in thine hearte, and is none outwarde thynge, euen to seke with in thine heert, the playster of mercye, the promysse of forgiveness in our sauour JESUS CHRIST, accordyng vnto all the ensamples of mercye, that are gone before.

And with Ionas let them that wayte on banities, and seke GOD here and there and in euerye temple saue in the heertes, goe, and seke thou the testament of GOD in thine heert. For in thine heert, is the worde of the lawe, and in thine heert is the worde of sayth in the promysse of mercye in JESUS CHRIST. So that yf thou confesse with a repentynge hearte and knowledg, and surelye beleue that JESUS is LOUDED ouer all synne, thou art safe.

And synallye when the rage of thy conscience is ceased and quyeted with faste saythe in the promysse of mercye, then offer with Ionas the offeringe of praye and thankes geuyng, & paye the bowe of thy baptisme, that GOD onelye saueh of his onelye mercye and goodnes: that is, beleue resolutelye and preache constantlye, that it is GOD onely that smyteth, and GOD onely only that healeth: a fterþynge the cause of thy redemption vnto thynne owne synne, and þ cause of thy deliuerance vnto the mercye of God.

And beware of the lecher that saythe we haue power in oure fee wyll before the preachinge of the gospel, to deserue grace, to kepe the lawe of congruete, or God to be buryghteous. And saye with John in the fyrste, that as the law was geuen by Moyses, euen so grace to fulfill it, is geuen by Christus. And when they saye oure dedes with grace deserue heauē: saye thou with Paul. Rom.
vi. that euerylastinge lyfe is the gifte of God throuowe Iesus Christus oure Lorde, & that we be made sonnes by fapth. John. i. and therefore hepyes of God with Christus. Rom. viii. And say that we receyue all of God throughe fapthe that soloweth repentaunce, and that we do not oure woordes vnto God, but ether vnto oure selues, to slepe the sin that remaineth in the flesh and to waite perfecte, ether vnto oure neyghbours whiche do as muche for vs agayne in order thynge. And when a man exceadeth in gyftes of grace, let hym vnderstande that they be geuen hym, as well for his weakhe brethren, as for hym selfe: as though he all the breade be chympred vnto the paunter, yet for his felowes hyn deseruyet in theyr offices. And when they saye that Christus hath made no satisfaccion for the synne we do after oure baptyme: saye þ with the doctrine of Paul, that in oure baptyme we receyue the merities of Christes deathe thoro-we repentaunce and fapth of whiche two; baptyme is the sygne. And though he when we synne of frastyte after oure baptyme we receyue that sygne no more, yet we be renewed agayne thoro-we repentaunce and fapthe in Christes bloude, whiche remaineth, the sygne of baptyme euer continued amonge vs in baptispyng oure yonge chylidren doeth euer kepe in mynde and call vs backe agayne vnto oure profession yf we be gonne astray, and promyseth vs forgiveness. Nether can actuall synne be washed awaye with oure woordes, but with Christes bloude: nether can there be any other sacrifice or satisfaccion to Godwarde for them saue Christes bloude. For as muche as we can do no woordes vnto God, but receyue onely of his mercye with oure repentyng fapth, thoro-

made bothe the sea & drye lande. Then were the men exceedingly afrayed, and said vnto him: why dydest thou so: (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had tolde them) and sayde moreouer vnto hym: What shall we do vnto the, that the sea maye cease fro troublinge vs: (for the sea wroughte and was troublous) he answered the: Take me, and caste me in to the sea, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that thys greate tempest is come vpon you.

Neuerthelesse, the men assayed with rowynge, to bynge the shyppe to lade: but it woulde not be, because the sea wroughte so, and was so troublous agaynste them. Wherefore they cried vnto the Lorde, and sayde: * O Lorde, let vs not perishe for this mans death, neither laye thou innocente bloude vnto our charge: for þ, O Lorde, hast done, euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas, and caste him in to the sea, and the sea leste ragynge. And the men feared þ Lorde exceedingly, doyng sacrifices and makynge vowes vnto the Lorde.

But the Lorde prepared a great fythe, to swallow vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the bely of þ fish, thre dayes & thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God, out of the fisshes bely, and sayde: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the bely of þ hel I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest caste me downe depe in the myddest of þ sea, and the floude compassed me aboute: yea, all * thy waues & roules of water wente ouer me, I thoughte that I had bene caste awaye out of thy sight: but I wyl yet againe loke towarde thy holy temple.

The waters compassed me, euen to the very soule: the depe lay about me, and the wedes were wrapte aboute myne heade. I wente downe to the bottom of the hylles, and was bared in with earthe for euer. But þ, O Lorde my God, haste broughte vp my soule agayne out of corruption. Whē my soule saynted within me, I thoughte vnto the Lorde: and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanities, wyl forsake hys mercye. But I wyl do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgeyng, and wyl paye that I haue vowed: for whysaluacion commeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fysh, and it caste out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The.iii. Chapter.

Jonas is sende againe to Ninue. The repentance of the kynge of Ninue.

When came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: * vp, and get the to Ninue that great cite, and preache vnto the the preachynge which I bade the. So Jonas arose, and went to Ninue at the Lordes commaundement. Ninue was a great cite vnto God, namely, of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas wente to, and entred in to the cite: eue a daies iourney, and cryed, sayinge: There are yet .xl. dayes and then shall Ninue be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninue beleued God, and proclaimed fastynge, & arayed them selues in * sacke clothe, as well the greate as the small of them. And the rydnges came vnto the kynge of Ninue, whiche arose out of hys seate, and dyd his apparell of, and put on sacke clothe, and sate hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed and commaunded in Ninue, by the auctorite of the kynge and his lordes, sayinge: * se that nether mā oz beest, ore oz shepe taste ought at al: & that they nether fede nor dryncke water: but put on sacke clothe both mā and beest, and crie mightely vnto God: * yea, se that euery man turne from hys euell waye, and from the wyckednesse, that he hath in hande.

Who can tell: God maye turne, and repente, and cease fro his searce wrath, that we perishe not. And when God sawe thei woekes, howe they turned from thei wicked wayes: he repented on the euell, whiche he sayde he woulde do vnto them, and dyd it not.

Jonas

The. iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproved of God.

Wherfore Jonas was soze discontent and angrie. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde, was not this my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countrey: Therfore I halted rather to flee vnto Tharsis, * for I knewe well ynoughe that thou arte a mercifull God, full of compassion, longe sufferinge, and of great kindnesse, and repentest when thou shouldest take punishment. And nowe * O Lorde, take my lpe fro me (I beseeche the) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde: art thou so angrie? And Jonas gat him oute of the cite, and sat downe on the east side therof: and there made him a booth, and sat vnder it in þe shadowe, till he myghte se, what shoulde chaunce vnto the cite.

And the Lorde God prepared a wyldc byne, whiche sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his heade, to deliuer him oute of his payne. And Jonas was exceedinge glade of the wyldc byne. But vpon the nexte morow against the sprynge of the daye. The Lorde ordered a worme, whiche smote the wyldc byne, so that it withered away. And when the Sunne was vp, God prepared a feruente easte winde: a the Sunne bet ouer þe heade of Jonas, þe he fainted agayne, a wylshed vnto hys soule, þe he might dye, a sayde:
It is better for me to dye, the to lyue.
And God sayde vnto Jonas: Arise þe so angrie for the wyldc byne. And he said: yea, herpe angrie am I, euen vnto the death. And the Lorde sayde: thou haste compassion vpon a wyldc byne, wher-as thou bestowdest no laboure, nor madest it growe: whiche sprange vp in one nyghte, and perished in another.
And shouldest not I then haue compas-

Prophet Michas.

The fyrste Chapter.

Of the destruction of Samaria because of their Idolatrye.

This is the word of the Lorde, þe came vnto Michas the Mozabite, in the dayes of * Iothan, * Ahaz and * Iehoizekiah kynges of Juda: whiche was shewed him vpon Samaria and Jerusalem. * Heare all the people, marcke this wel O earth, and al that therin is:
Yea, the Lorde God him selfe be wyt-nesse amonge you, euen the Lorde from his holy temple. For why * beholde, the Lord shal go oute of hys place, and come downe, and treade vpon the hye thynges of the earth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder him, and the balleyes shal cleue a sunder: lyke as wake consumeth at the fyre, and as the waters runne downewarde. And all this shal be for þe wickednesse of Jacob, and the synnes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wickednesse of Ja-the hye places of Juda: Is not * Jeru-
